Index to Reviews, Comments, and Stories of the Films

Appended is a list of subjects covered by our reviews and comments and the synopses furnished by the manufacturers released for the three months ending September 30, 1916. This list of releases with dates is as accurate as it is possible to make it with the information that we have received from the companies whose productions are included. Should any of our readers detect errors, we shall be pleased to have our attention called to them so that we may correct our card index. The letter before the folio indicates the page where the review, comment, or synopsis can be found. "R" stands for review; "C" for comment; and "S" for synopsis. Where reference letter is omitted to either review or comment it signifies that none was published, and the omission of reference letter "S" indicates that synopsis was not furnished by the manufacturer. Of the later releases where any or all reference letters are omitted it may be said that the missing information, or part of it, will probably be published in the next volume.

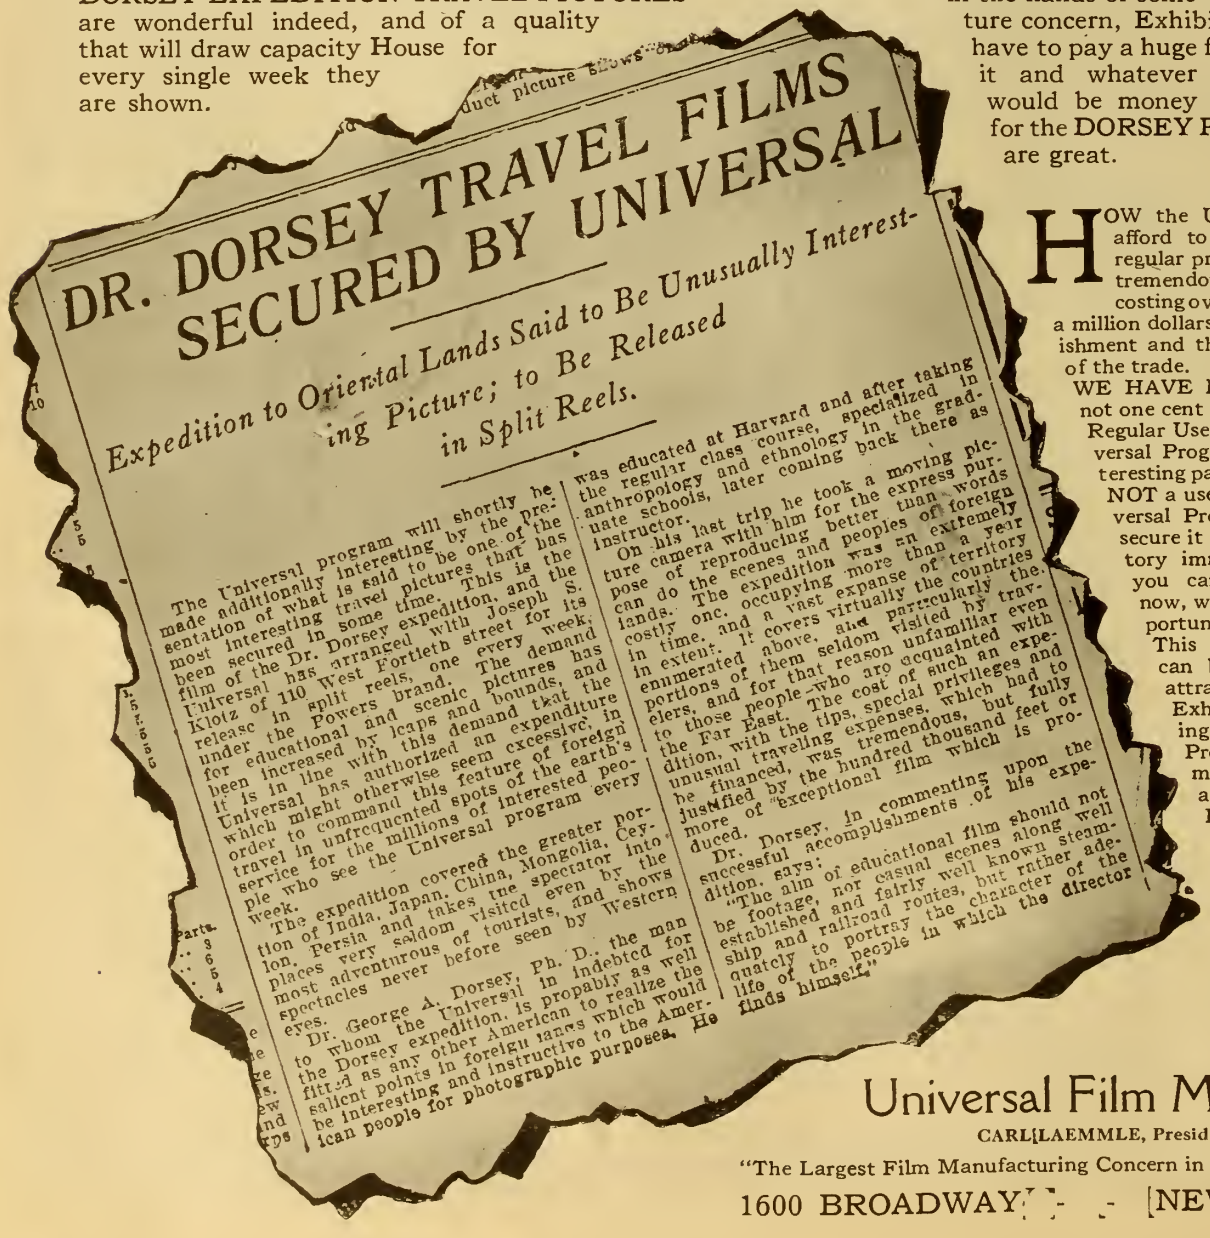
The World Renowned DORSEY EXPEDITION PICTURES ON THE REGULAR UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

An unparalleled achievement for Universal Exhibitors

THE achievement of putting the costly and famous DORSEY EXPEDITION TRAVEL PICTURES on the regular Universal Program establishes a precedent that has never been equalled in the entire history of Program pictures. Here's a series of Travel pictures that are as distinctly different from the ordinary so-called Travel pictures as day is from night. The famous DORSEY EXPEDITION TRAVEL PICTURES are wonderful indeed, and of a quality that will draw capacity House for every single week they are shown.

ONLY the Mighty Universal with its vast financial resources, able to handle ANY moving picture proposition, would think of such a wonderful move as to put a tremendous quarter of a million dollar feature ON THE REGULAR UNIVERSAL PROGRAM without one single solitary cent extra to regular Universal Program Exhibitors. Were this colossal Feature in the hands of some special feature concern, Exhibitors would have to pay a huge fee to secure it and whatever they paid, would be money well spent, for the DORSEY PICTURES are great.



DR. DORSEY TRAVEL FILMS SECURED BY UNIVERSAL

Expedition to Oriental Lands Said to Be Unusually Interesting Picture; to Be Released in Split Reels.

The Universal program will shortly be made additionally interesting by the presentation of what is said to be one of the most interesting travel pictures that has been secured in some time. This is the film of the Dr. Dorsey expedition, and the Universal has arranged with Joseph S. Klotz of 110 West Fortieth street for its release in split reels, one every week, under the Powers brand. The demand for educational and scenic pictures has been increased by leaps and bounds, and it is in line with this demand that the Universal has authorized an expenditure which might otherwise seem excessive, in order to command this feature of foreign travel in unfrequented spots of the earth's service for the millions of interested people who see the Universal program every week.

The expedition covered the greater portion of India, Japan, China, Mongolia, Ceylon, Persia and takes the spectator into places very seldom visited even by the most adventurous of tourists, and shows spectacles never before seen by Western eyes.

Dr. George A. Dorsey, Ph. D., the man to whom the Universal is indebted for the Dorsey expedition, is propably as well fitted as any other American to realize the salient points in foreign lands which would be interesting and instructive to the American people for photographic purposes. He was educated at Harvard and after taking the regular class course, specialized in anthropology and ethnology in the graduate schools, later coming back there as instructor.

On his last trip he took a moving picture camera with him for the express purpose of reproducing better than words can do the scenes and peoples of foreign lands. The expedition was an extremely costly one, occupying more than a year in time, and a vast expanse of territory in extent. It covers virtually the countries enumerated above, and for that reason unfamiliar portions of them seldom visited by travelers, and for those people who are acquainted with the Far East. The cost of such an expedition, with the tips, special privileges and unusual traveling expenses, which had to be financed, was tremendous, but fully justified by the hundred thousand feet or more of "exceptional film which is produced.

Dr. Dorsey, in commenting upon the successful accomplishments of his expedition, says:

"The aim of educational film should not be footage, nor casual scenes along well established and fairly well known steamship and railroad routes, but rather adequately to portray the character of the life of the people in which the director finds himself."

HOW the Universal can afford to put on the regular program such a tremendous feature costing over a quarter of a million dollars is the astonishment and the speculation of the trade. The fact that WE HAVE DONE IT at not one cent extra cost to Regular Users of the Universal Program is the interesting part. If you are NOT a user of the Universal Program, try to secure it for your territory immediately. If you can't secure it now, watch your opportunity and get it. This huge feature can be booked at attractive rates to Exhibitors not using the Universal Program. Get more facts from any Universal Exchange today.

Something new, startlingly original and clean. Minus, the vulgar slap-stick, the cheap and suggestive — just clean. A series that will delight fans and pack the Exhibitors' houses.

Carter De Haven, the King of modern comedy brings to this remarkable series a freshness, and exuberance that is captivating and fascinating. Everything from cast to direction will be unusual and attractive.

The series, names and details soon to be announced, will be directed by Wallace Beery, who is staking a well earned reputation on achieving something different from anything in the comedy line from anything ever attempted. Your nearest Universal Exchange can give you more facts. Investigate now.

FIRST! AGAIN!

Again the Universal Animated Weekly scoops all other news Weeklies. Now the Universal presents to the American public the first moving picture in news form of Charles E. Hughes, Republican Candidate for President. The first picture was taken in Washington on Sunday morning, June 11th, 1916, showing the Justice going to Church with his family. Next, we scooped them all by securing and showing first the very first specially posed picture of him at the Hotel Astor on Monday morning, June 12th. Secured exclusively by the

UNIVERSAL ANIMATED WEEKLY

This Photograph Exclusively and Specially Posed for the Universal Animated Weekly

We've scooped all other so-called News Weeklies so often that there's simply nothing to it. Rather than shoot the bull in the Trade Papers, the Universal Animated Weekly accomplishes first—then mentions it afterwards. You will never read a statement made by the Animated that isn't true. That's why the biggest Moving Pictures on Broadway, New York City, use the Universal Animated.

The U. Animated huge and original staff of correspondents and official Cameramen in the War Zone are still on the job sending in absorbing news of action from everywhere. Every week in the U. Animated you will see FIRST, the most interesting news in pictures of the world's events. The novelty and variety of the U. Animated has made it FIRST CHOICE in Theatres throughout the land. Book it and play it up right and you'll find it a whale of a drawing card and Box Office attraction. Write your U. Exchange or the Universal Animated Weekly—1600 Broadway, New York City.

The Demon of Fear

A powerful, visionary photoplay based on the theme that "no man, who admits he is a coward for a principle, is one." Anna Little, Frank Borzage and Jack Richardson are the principles in this virile story of land and sea—a two-reel "Mustang." Directed by Frank Borzage. Released June 30th.

The Sign of The Spade

Helene Rosson and Alan Forest in a five-part masterpicture of society and underworld intrigue. Directed by Murdock J. MacQuarrie. Released June 26th.

The Fate of The Dolphin

A strong two-part "Flying A" story of the sea, featuring Edward Coxen, George Field and Lizette Thorne—and a ship wrecked during one of the most violent electric storms ever filmed. Directed by Thos. Ricketts. Released June 29th.

Tangeled Skeins

A three-part "Flying A" domestic drama, with Vivian Rich, Beverly Juneau, Alfred Vosburgh and George Periolat in the important parts. Directed by E. Mason Hopper. Released June 29th.

When Adam Had 'Em

One-part "Beauty" comedy with John Sheehan and Carol Halloway. Directed by Archer McMackin. Released June 28th.

The Gink From Kankikee

Orral Humphrey is "the Gink" in this one-reel "Beauty" comedy. Released July 2nd.

Crowds Blockade Streets!

Exhibitors send glowing reports of success! Read this letter—

Richmond, Ind., May 29, 1916

Today was our opening day for "THE SECRET OF THE SUBMARINE." We had "a regular jam." Before opening time (1:15 in the afternoon) our side of Main street was blocked, and those wishing to pass were compelled to take the other side. Regardless of inclement weather and six other high class features being shown at other houses today, we enjoyed a capacity business until 11:00 o'clock tonight. Considering that our audience changed on an average of once every forty minutes (as we were running but three reels today) will show you what "THE SECRET OF THE SUBMARINE" can do for box-office receipts. Any exhibitor who neglects this opportunity is overlooking a mighty good chance. THEATORIUM,

C. E. HOFFMAN, Manager.

Gentlemen:

I have been using the V.L.S.E. for about four months, and can't help writing you how pleased I am that I booked with you.

I like the open booking plan very much as I find the patrons of my house like pictures that are clean and free from the blood and thunder kind, and under the open booking plan I can pick out just what they like. Always before I have been bound to a contract and had to take just what they wanted to give me.

These failed to measure up to the class of pictures that the people in this small Western town, forty miles from a railroad, like.

Yours very truly,

Will she see it through to the finish?

When rich old Samuel Dent felt that his end had come, remorse made him confess to his lawyer and physician that years before he had abandoned a little daughter. If they could only find her for him his last hours would be easier. To comfort him they induce a vaudeville dancer to impersonate the daughter. So cleverly does she deceive the old man that he recovers his health and the dancer, continuing the deception, lives on with him in luxury as his daughter.

But suddenly the old man's fortune is wiped out. Everything is swept away in the crash, and Letitia knows that she has nothing more to gain from Dent.

Will she give up the game, or will she see it through to the finish—for the old man's sake?

Don't overlook the good stuff released every week by the Selig Company through Regular Service of the General Film Company

William N. Selig's policy of releasing his best stories, exploiting his foremost stars, and employing his most versatile Directors in regular program, has borne fruit.

The motion picture exhibitors have appreciated this policy; they have been urging other film manufacturers to go and do likewise.

But it will be some time before others can specialize in shorter length material, for the Selig Company has been quietly going ahead for months now, preparing gilt-edged picture plays to please the most exacting of photoplay critics.

"The Return," produced by T. N. Heffron, from the story written by William E. Wing, is numbered among the unusual motion picture productions, being released by the Selig Company through General Film Service. It is the kind of picture play that has caused Selig business to be trebled within the past six months. Kathlyn Williams enacts the most versatile of character roles, and she is ably supported by Guy Oliver, Wellington Playter, Vivian Reed, Sidney Smith and Harry Lonsdale.

"Some Duel" is the first of the Tom Mix Western comedies, to be released through General Film Service. Every Saturday a Mix Western funmaker, in one or more reels, will be released. Each and every one will be crowded with funnythrills.

The Selig-Tribune, the World's Greatest News Film, is released every Monday and Thursday through General Film Service. If it happens you see it first in The Selig-Tribune.

DON'T MISS THIS ONE!

Mrs. J. C. Murray, manager, Hippodrome Theatre, Springfield, Ohio, writes as follows: "We ran 'The Man Within' about two weeks ago and it was great—just fine. Selig pictures are all drawing cards and we take all that we can get. The ———— have been anxious for my account to prove to me that their pictures were better than those in General Film, and sent me one week's service gratis, but I ran my General Film Program even that week. Please don't think that I spend my time writing the manufacturers. You are the only people I have written to and that is because I feel you turn out the best Westerns and Wild Animal pictures of any, and we need them badly."

Are You Running TRIANGLE PLAYS?

The richest man, the biggest store, the most successful merchant has from the dark ages been the one with sufficient foresight to pick out the leader in the manufacture of the articles sold over his counter, and to then tie up with this concern as its authorized representative, thereby cashing in on the value of the manufacturers' good will and trade-mark.

And this same rule applies to the business of exhibiting motion pictures. The most successful and prosperous theaters are the ones that tie up with the recognized leader in the production of photoplays—with the concern whose pictures have by their merit alone won a reputation for the highest quality.

This is the reason the number of Triangle theaters throughout the country has been constantly increasing. Seven months ago the exhibitor was not positive just how the public would receive Triangle productions. Now experience has proved not only that the public wants Triangle Plays, but that it is willing to pay real money to see them.

And so if you are an exhibitor and are not already running Triangle Plays, why don't you too make an effort to arrange for their presentation at your theater. A line for information regarding their presentation would be the first step in the inauguration of a good business policy which has been tried for years and never failed.

For the exhibitor who is running TRIANGLE PICTURES the two dramas released for the week of June 25th are of more than passing importance. W. S. Hart, whose following is probably larger than any other male star, appears in "The Apostle of Vengeance," while Mae Marsh and Robert Harron may be seen in "A Wild Girl of the Sierras."

"The Apostle of Vengeance" is a story much different than any other in which

Triangle Film Corporation

New York City

W. S. Hart has yet appeared. The son of Kentucky parents, but brought up in Vermont as a minister, he is brought face to face with the problem of choosing between avenging the death of his father, killed in a feud battle, and abiding by the Scriptural teaching that "To Me Belongeth Vengeance and Recompense." His decision forms the big scene of the story. His efforts to follow his life's teachings and then the final vow to have revenge for the assault on his little sister are only a few of the vital parts of this gripping story.

Then the Fine-Arts picture, Mae Marsh in "A Wild Girl of the Sierras" is a picture that is bound to appeal to every motion picture enthusiast. Fifteen years ago a child's mother was shot and killed by the Indians, and the little girl escaped to the mountains to grow up with only the beasts of the woods as her companions. The picture is so unusual, so picturesque and pleasing in its presentation that it cannot fail to make a lasting impression.

Then, of course, there are the usual Keystone Comedies, veritable hailstorms of hilarity, unequalled in their ability to make the most serious laugh, bound to send any audience home with the feeling that they have had more than their money's worth.

Don't fail to carefully consider the advantage to yourself in tying up with TRIANGLE PICTURES. A note to the home office will incur no obligation.

THE JOCKEY of DEATH

The thrill that made you like the circus when you were a boy---and makes you like it still; the genuine interest which is aroused in every red-blooded human being when feats of real daring are shown; the sympathetic feeling that comes from the unfolding of a sweetly simple love tale--all of these elements have been bound up together in this five-part master melodrama of the screen to give it a tremendous appeal for every type of audience. It is the "People's Picture" of the year because of its unusual play upon the emotions that are mostly simply aroused.

It is the Ideal Hot-Weather Picture

—because it's full of lively action that completely tells its story. There are no worrisome problems to solve—no complicated plots to unravel.

WE ARE SELLING STATE RIGHTS

on a plan which must appeal to every fair-minded buyer

We feel that we know conditions as they exist throughout the country. We are confident that there is a genuine demand for "thrillers" of the red-blooded type—the kind of pictures which formed the foundation for the success of the Motion Picture Industry. "The Jockey of Death" is just such a picture. It is our aim to make money with "The Jockey"—but we don't want to make all the money in the world and have splendid reasons of our own for desiring that every purchaser of territory make more money with this picture than with any he has ever bought before. This means that our prices are right —we'll treat with you and we'll both make money.

"The Jockey" is complete with flashy posters, heralds, slides, newspaper cuts, etc.

UNICORN FILM SERVICE CORPORATION
434 9th St. N. W.
Washington, D. C.

Gentlemen;

It is with pleasure that I express my appreciation for the drawing-power demonstrated in my Plaza Theatre where the whole of your program has been showing now several weeks. We have found a substantial increase in business since installing your service -- and furthermore the great variety of subjects seem to please the patrons of that house.

Since using your service to filling in around our features at the Garden and Strand (or picking subjects that appropriately can be used as "fillers" on a BIG program,) we are really delighted with our program -- especially since the Unicorn Service includes so many of the famous stars of today, such as Mary Pickford, Blanch Sweet, Henry Walthall, Florence Lawrence, Owen Moore, Wilfred Lucas and many others -- These pictures all being produced by D.W.Griffith are indeed a "find" for the purposes which they serve us.

We are glad to add our recommendation to the many others you have probably received for the Unicorn Service.

With thanks for the many past courtesies and with best wishes for your future success, beg to remain,

Very truly yours,

Tom Moore

Make up your mind now to investigate Unicorn Film Service, it will make money for you and please your audience.

Facts and Comments

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD urges the fullest possible attendance of delegates to the National Convention of the Exhibitors' League to open at Chicago on July 11. At present the exhibiting branch in the industry is the only one with a considerable organization. The industry will soon be confronted with struggles and problems of many kinds and there will be need for a strong organization within the ranks of the industry. In the impending battles against censorship in Washington and in various states the aid of the exhibitor is indispensable. This aid can best be given by the organized exhibitor. The whole industry looks forward to the Chicago convention with great expectations. We look for much valuable constructive work.

SOME of the most interesting film news concerning America comes to us by way of France and Italy. A French contemporary informs us that "every theater in the United States whether in the big cities or in the small towns changes its program every day." An Italian contemporary records a startling discovery. It says: "Let a live Italian editor come over here (meaning the United States) and put up a sort of international journal with a schedule of advertising prices of not over Dls (sic) 25 per page with sufficient financial backing to stand a strain during the building up period and there is not much doubt as to the result." We heartily concur in the prophecy as to the result. The editor would soon be without any Dls.

IT has been suggested that the producers get together on the question of using the nude in pictures. It's not as puzzling as it may appear. The test is simple enough. When the nude is introduced merely for its own sake and in the hope that it will sell the picture in spite of its defects it is wholly objectionable. Nudity in itself is not objectionable. If the introduction of the nude is or seems a natural development of a logical and clean plot it is entirely justifiable. We have seen examples of this kind and then again there have been examples of the other kind where the nude was fairly dragged in and had no logical place. The nude on the screen is as far as we can see not much different from the nude in statuary or on canvas. The same rules apply, but we would like to see them enforced in the first instance in the studios themselves. This would lighten the work of the National Board of Review and would rob the Breitingers and the Maude Murray Millers of some of their stock in trade.

THE healthy rivalry among candidates for the presidency of the National League is a splendid sign of the vitality of the organization. It is in pleasing contrast with last year's conditions, when interest in the cause of organization was at its lowest ebb. Half a dozen candidates are in the field and all are making an active canvass and all have loyal and ardent friends. We earnestly hope that the successful candidate will have the unanimous support of all of his rivals in the administration of his office. The Exhibitors' League being at present the only organization within the ranks of the industry has a grave responsibility. In the coming state and national fights against state and national censorship and hostile legislation the League is bound to be the rallying center for all the fighting forces in the industry. Harmony therefore is the first necessity.

THERE are unmistakable signs that New York rather than Europe will in the days to come be the point of film export to Latin-America. One of the biggest buyers of film for the South American market is coming to New York from London to establish his future headquarters in this country. Within the last few weeks we have had an extraordinarily large number of Latin-Americans visiting the offices of Cine-Mundial, the Spanish edition of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, all in search of either information or material. Latin-American capital is looking into the feasibility of establishing a special plant for the production of film with a special appeal to Latin-American taste. The American producer's golden opportunity is here.

Social Criticism

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

AMERICAN scorn of the pretentious and hypocritical first found adequate expression through Mark Twain. His keen social criticism was so kindly that we laughed at our own crudities, where Dickens, probably the most severe of social critics, gave offense through ridicule and sarcasm. We laughed first and became thoughtful afterward. The rapid advances our civilization registered were partially due to a sense of humor almost national and a strong desire to improve mingled with a generous tendency toward fellow service —we were determined that our friends should develop along with us.

Out in the common forums of daily contact we guyed one another out of many a futile fad or pernicious faith, applying the caustic with kindly intention, pruning error that truth might grow, showing up brutality that kindness might prevail, destroying the repulsive that beauty might thrive. Many a man who could not have been led out of some stupid old ancestral theory handed down from generation to generation has been stung out of it, or laughed out of it by critics, clear-eyed and unafraid, who could effectively say what they meant.

The results of what men have said to one another in plain terms, far more than newspaper evasiveness and compromise, are those we most admire in present civilization, but our ideals are far from being complete—they are just beginning to take shape. Besides, it is no longer a question of man to man, but of man to men, to women, to children. Only by reaching the whole social mind, the national conscience, can the results of careful thought and sound judgment be made effective, can careless impulses be replaced by the guidance of reason.

From the time that Ibsen used the drama to assail the inequity of law in his own country, not in a provincial way, but sounding universal notes in his indictments of divorce, race suicide and political corruption, dramatists of the more spirited kind have gone beyond mere entertainment in attempts to render social service. The modern molder of progress does not openly abandon retrospect, but he secretly does so. Playwrights and authors even invest historical fiction with modern motive. Nearly all of them who use English as a medium, whether their scenes be laid in past, present or future, strongly appeal to public opinion by holding up to public scrutiny the politically dishonest and the socially unfair.

The drift of literature, like that of superior drama, is toward making the race physically normal and mentally sane, and there is a trend of the same kind visible in superior screen portrayals. The direct individual effort of those who help all within the immediate sphere of personal influence is splendid in a small way, but it is necessarily limited. Attempts at improvement through political measures often antagonize where they should convince. But the author who can impress through this or that form of entertainment whatever tends to the preservation and perpetuation of what is good in human nature addresses a very large and receptive audience through moving pictures.

We have always known that an individual of disordered mind is a menace to the right conduct of a community, but it is just beginning to dawn on us that a government of disordered mind, especially one capable of inaugurating bloody destruction of life, property and happiness, is a menace to progressive nations and should be put away where it can do no more harm.

Therein lies enough material for hundreds of forceful screen stories, with a line of themes in full accord with our own progressive ideals. We are all perfectly aware of the ridiculousness of the autocratic claim; we have all long ago repudiated the idea that a few self-elected officers of government have some god-given superiority in their fibre not possessed by the rest of us. The claim is so rankly absurd that it scarcely seems worthy of attention, yet it is that which is setting the world on fire today.

Is it not stupidity, rather than neutrality, that contents us with stories of the lover-unfaithful-wife-deceived-husband wornout variety when we might help to laugh absolute monarchies off the face of the earth by holding up their vain pretensions to ridicule and scorn? Is it not cowardice that makes us so careful about assailing laws and methods of their administration which have ceased to serve and survive to injure? Is it not theatricalism, rather than art, which limits the output of moving pictures to reflections of what has gone stale on the stage when we might turn from the weariness of retrospect to the enthusiasm of outlook?

The more fearless of producers, those bound to win on merit rather than on political scheming and doubtful business methods, are already feeling their way into social criticism. Keeping in mind that the first and foremost requirement of a visualized story is that it shall interest mixed audiences, it is no easy matter to incorporate what shall benefit those audiences, set them into ways of right thinking and right doing, but it can be accomplished. Instead of scraping over the barren fields of the past, it might not be a bad idea to consider the future.

The future is very near in an art of rapid development. Great changes take place in a single year. It is already foreseen by men long in the business that present methods of imitation and repetition are self-destructive. Concerns of well-established reputation seem unable to cope with those new in the field because they adhere to past methods rather than readjust themselves to growing requirements. The art must keep pace with the people who support it, must follow the lines of thought and feeling manifested by those people.

The people of this country are most deeply interested in whatever makes for social improvement, not in the old skins they have cast off. Only a short time ago people were so tame that they merely existed, most of them in a condition of semi-serfdom. Today we are taking a hand in our own evolution. Throughout the length and breadth of our fair land, wherever intelligence is established and nourished, the dominant issue of the day is the maintenance of a high race standard.

Look at the moving pictures passing before our very eyes. The country itself is fertile and beautiful. Yet little children are slaving out pitiful lives in factories and mines. Our women are not given the support and protection they deserve in carrying out the mission imposed upon them by their maker. They are drawn, thousands of them, into humiliating poverty by man's greed, into sordid misery, even into criminality from no lack of kind hearts among the more fortunate, but from a lack of efficient social organization. There is rubbish to be cleared away by social criticism before we can rebuild and honor the whole world in honoring ourselves.

Constructive Exhibitors

By W. Stephen Bush.

THERE is talk of organizing a new representative film parliament to succeed the Board of Trade, which is about to pass into history as an honest but entirely unsuccessful attempt. It augurs well for the new attempt that the men back of it are unanimous in their belief that a recognition of the exhibitor on a basis of absolute equality is imperative. We confess to considerable surprise that any intelligent observer of conditions in the industry can fail to recognize the power of the exhibitor.

When we speak of the power of the exhibitor we mean not only the influence he is now able to wield within the industry, but we likewise refer to his power with people outside of the industry. Within the next three months we must be prepared to fight the common enemies of the motion picture. Better than attack and denunciation is the constructive work of arousing public sentiment in favor of the screen and enlisting it against all forms of censorship and all forms of hostile legislation. We know from experience that such work cannot be done effectively without the constant aid of the exhibitor.

While dwelling on this subject let us again call attention to the splendid constructive work being done by the organized exhibitors of Ohio under the leadership of Charles A. Megown of Cleveland.

Through intelligent co-operation between the organized exhibitors and the women of Ohio the high social and civic value of the screen has been wonderfully demonstrated. Through their work the follies of legalized censorship have been pilloried in the sight of the whole people of Ohio. Thousands of women who knew little about motion pictures and through ignorance were often led into prejudice have been converted into ardent friends of the screen and into equally ardent foes of legalized consorship. To give the readers of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD an idea of the nature and the extent of the work to which we are referring we print an excerpt from the Cleveland Plain Dealer of June 8:

"Cleveland threw away a million dollars in baby lives last year" said Miss Harriet Leete, superintendent of the Babies' Dispensary and Hospital, yesterday. "With 1,916 babies dying out of 16,144 born, Cleveland's death rate was 110 per 1,000. At least half of these deaths could have been prevented by proper food and care. At the low valuation of $1,000 per life, in future worth to the community, these baby deaths cost Cleveland $1,000,000.

"That Cleveland's infant death rate could be lowered is shown by the rates of other cities. New York City last year had 141,256 babies born, but lost only 98 to each thousand. Boston's rate was 104, Philadelphia 105, Indianapolis 89, Rochester 84, St. Louis 82, Los Angeles 67, and Seattle 53.

"We hope the film, 'The Fight for Babies' Lives,' now being shown in Cleveland, will help cut Cleveland's infant death rate. In the first place, the film should show many people how to use the facilities offered by the Babies' Dispensary and Hospital and the City Division of Child Hygiene. In the second place, it should supply funds for supplying many more nurses, hospital beds and pure milk with which to prosecute our fight against the causes of infant death."

In addition to the $574 collected in thirteen downtown theaters Monday, an incomplete count yesterday indicated $300 collections from St. Clair and other Superior avenue N. E. theaters Tuesday. Large returns are expected from last night's collections in Superior, Wade Park, Hough and Euclid avenue theaters. Collection plates are passed by Camp Fire Girls after each showing of the film. All goes to the Babies' Dispensary and Hospital, as expenses are being paid by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

Please note the last words: . . . "expenses are being paid by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League." It seems to us that the value of this work redounds to the benefit of the entire industry, and that therefore as a matter of plain equity the expenses ought to be borne in proportion of every branch of the industry. We believe in a new film parliament if it indorses and supports work of this character.

In a letter to the MOVING PICTURE WORLD Mr. Megown says:

"It is hard to estimate just what this campaign will get from a purely dollar and cent proposition, but a conservative one will be that it will reach $2,500. . . . You know that heretofore the moving picture men have always been on the defensive and when they were assailed even their best friend had nothing tangible to introduce in rebuttal, but we certainly have given Mr. Public Opinion a very severe jolt and methinks I hear the referee calling 'Ten! You are out.' The very best business men of our city have been stopping us on the street, patting us on the back and shaking our hands, saying: 'This is the best thing that we have ever seen done for humanity.' While I have not covered the ground in its entirety, I believe you will see that we are still on the constructive lines and are building our fortifications on a solid foundation. When I was in New York I could not get the powers that be to give an attentive ear to the message that I had from Ohio."

We congratulate the organized exhibitors of Ohio. They are entitled to the gratitude of every friend of the motion picture; they are entitled to more: Every branch of the industry ought to give them the most substantial support.

"Slang" in Titles

THE intimate speech of the man of the street is by no means without its wit and savor. Only prudishness would condemn such speech as uniformly vulgar. Much of it is objected to by the purists merely by reason of its novelty, and in due course of time it is received into the polite society of words.

Undoubtedly many of these phrases of the speech of the street are vulgar. There is no place whatever for vulgarity on the screen. It is indefensible under any and all circumstances. Lately I regret to say I have seen plain vulgarity of language soil the screen. Some of our best producers labor under the sad delusion that all "slang" is witty. I cannot in the columns of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD mention specific instances of this vulgarity, but these instances have been noted by others as well as by myself. If the reputable newspaper bars vulgar speech from its columns as a matter of good breeding and out of respect for its readers why cannot the producer of motion pictures keep the literature of the gutter out of the titles on his films? The supposed Western and Southern and other dialects are enough of an affliction for the patrons of the motion picture theater.

The language of our titles ought to be clean and decently grammatical.

RICHARDSON'S PROJECTION TALKS IN GREAT DEMAND.

Frank H. Richardson, the projection editor of the Moving Picture World, has been invited to address the state convention of Pennsylvania Exhibitors, which will open in Pittsburg on June 26 on "Projection."

The recent addresses delivered by Mr. Richardson in various parts of the country have aroused the keenest interest of all operators and likewise of all exhibitors who realize what an important part projection plays in the proper presentation of motion pictures. His address in Madison Square Garden caused widespread favorable comment. At the recent gathering of Hudson County (N. J.) operators Mr. Richardson's audience gave him a special vote of thanks and paid him the extraordinary compliment of listening with the utmost attention from 2 a. m. to 3.30 a. m.

The exhibitors of one of the states in the middle west have invited Mr. Richardson to address them on "Projection" in the early part of the fall. Further details will be given out later.

General Film Company in No Danger of Receiver

So Declares Albert E. Smith, Who Claims Waters and Clark Represent Only Themselves in Suit Against Company—Says Preferred Stockholders Have No Interest in Matters in Question Because Their Dividends Have Been Paid—Also Says that for Most of the Time in Which Mismanagement Was Alleged Waters Was General Manager of Distributing Concern.

ALBERT E. SMITH, a director of the General Film Company, when asked about the article published exclusively in the Moving Picture World referring to the suit recently instituted by Percival L. Waters and James B. Clark against the common stockholders of the General Film Company said:

"The publication in question, while purporting to set out certain features of the bill of equity filed by Percival L. Waters and James B. Clark, is so misleading as to convey an entirely false impression to motion picture exhibitors and others as to the real facts in the case.

"In the first place, the bill is not brought by Messrs. Waters and Clark as a protective committee representing the other preferred stockholders of the General Film Company, but is brought by them as individuals and as record holders of substantially less than 800 shares of the capital stock of this company out of a total capitalization of 11,000 shares.

"This contest is the outgrowth of a contention on the part of the preferred stockholders of the General Film Company that certain large earnings of this company for the years 1910 to 1914 inclusive, over and above what was necessary to pay the dividends on the preferred stock of the company and a 12 per cent dividend upon the common stock of the company, was improperly distributed among the common stockholders because by their consent it was paid to them as the purchase price of film instead of being paid in the form of an increased dividend.

"The contention of the General Film Company and its common stockholders is that it is no concern of the preferred stockholders how it was distributed inasmuch as it belonged absolutely to the common stockholders and the preferred stockholders had no interest therein because their dividends had been fully paid.

"For these reasons the General Film Company, acting under the advice of counsel, refused to bring suit against its common stockholders to recover the earnings so distributed and hence Waters and Clark bring this suit in their own names for this purpose.

"This is the whole question at issue and all other matters contained in the bill are merely incidental thereto.

"Certain significant facts respecting this controversy are entirely overlooked in this article.

"In 1913 Richard A. Rowland, president of the Metro Pictures Corporation, an active rival of the General Film Company and a former partner of one of the plaintiffs and joint-owner with him in the preferred stock of the General Film Company, brought suit in the same court to accomplish substantially this same purpose, and upon the filing of an answer thereto by the General Film Company, setting forth the above cited facts, the bill was withdrawn and the case discontinued.

"That during most of the time covered by these payments and during which the bill of complaint alleges the company was mismanaged, Percival L. Waters, one of the plaintiffs herein, was the general manager of the General Film Company and was active in controlling its business policy and carrying into effect the very transactions of which he now complains.

"In 1915, upon a change of management, Mr. Waters resigned as general manager and at the same time was elected as a director of the company to represent the interests of one of the common stockholders against whom he is now bringing suit.

"That in the suit instituted by the United States Government against the General Film Company et al., both Waters and Clark, the present plaintiffs, were witnesses for the General Film Company and testified to the legal and proper manner in which the business of the company was conducted during the very periods covered by their present complaint.

"These facts speak for themselves and the exhibitors and the public generally may draw their own inferences therefrom.

"The motive of the publication in selecting my name from the entire group of common stockholders and directors of the General Film Company and placing it in the forefront of the article clearly indicates that the article in question is intended to do something more than convey to the motion picture industry information respecting a pending law suit.

"The business of the General Film Company is being conducted as heretofore. It still maintains its numerous branches, covering the entire United States and Canada, and supplies over 6,000 customers regularly and promptly with the product of many of the leading film manufacturers of the country and is constantly improving its facilities and its service and will continue to do so.

"When these facts are understood I am sure that the publication of the article referred to will not cause any dismay or lack of confidence in the minds of the customers of the General Film Company."

In so far as the above statement refers to the suit which has been brought by P. L. Waters and James B. Clark against the General Film Company, it is not the province of The Moving Picture World to discuss or to invite discussion of the merits of the case at this time. The salient points in the complaint were printed as a matter of news and the legal answer to that complaint or any statement that any of the defendants to the action may care to make will be printed in the regular course of events.

Regarding the inference contained in the above statement that the story printed in The Moving Picture World was misleading and not in keeping with the facts, or that it was inspired by interests unfriendly to the defendants, we wish to say that the information regarding this action upon which our story was based came into our possession from a source not unfriendly to the General Film Company or to any parties to the action, and without comment or suggestion; that a digest thereof was made dispassionately by a competent newspaperman; that neither the plaintiffs nor anyone immediately or remotely connected with them had any knowledge that the information regarding the suit was in the possession of The Moving Picture World or any of its representatives, and that no one other than the party who gave us the information and the members of the World staff had any knowledge regarding it prior to publication. Particularly does this apply to the plaintiffs and all others related to them in any capacity. Also that nothing was published in the article which appeared in The Moving Picture World which was not recited in the complaint.

The "certain significant facts" which the writer of the above statement refers to as having been overlooked in the World article do not appear in the complaint and consequently could not have been included in an unbiased statement such as the World published. Coming in a statement from Mr. Smith, they are now submitted for publication and we do not hesitate to print them, at the same time drawing attention to their significance.

Finally, the inference that the use of the name of Mr. Smith in the article in question, to wit: "Albert E. Smith and others, constituting the directors and owners of the common stock of the General Film Company," was "intended to do something more than convey to the motion picture industry information respecting a pending lawsuit," is unfair to this publication. The use was legitimate and such as is common with all newspapers under similar circumstances. Coming from The Moving Picture World, it could have no sinister significance, and we assure Mr. Smith that the name of any other of his confreres would have been so used had it appeared at the head of the list of defendants nominated in the complaint.

AUTOMATIC TICKET OPENS CHICAGO OFFICE.

The Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Company has opened a suite of offices at 1432 Lytton Building, State street and Jackson boulevard, Chicago.

Assistant Secretary E. S. Bowman is temporarily in Chicago looking after the Company's interests. Arthur M. Klein will have charge of the western territory.

COHEN OPENS THEATER IN OLYPHANT.

Louis Cohen opened the Belle theater in Olyphant, on Decoration Day. The size of the house is 25 by 150, and it has a seating capacity of 500. Fireproof material has been used in its construction, and the front is faced with marble and white stucco. The lobby is finished in white and gold; the floor is of tile. The front is illuminated with a large number of incandescent and arc lights. Music is furnished by an American Photoplayer, and the operating room is equipped with two of the latest models of Power's machines. The structure conforms in every way with the law. The Belle played to 5,000 on the opening day. Thomas M. Gibbons is managing the house for Mr. Cohen.

CHICAGO CONVENTION AND EXPOSITION.

Interest Continues to Grow in Big Event—Many Novel Attractions are Promised at Exposition for Visitors and Public Generally.

ALL indications at the present time point to a large attendance of exhibitors at the Sixth National Convention and Exposition of the M. P. E. L. of America, to be held in Chicago from July 10 to 18. In view of this fact it should immediately appear of prime importance to manufacturers of machines and supplies and to the owners of supply houses that they should be liberally represented in their displays at the Coliseum.

It is a well known fact that during the National Exposition and Convention held in Chicago in 1912 more equipment and supplies for moving picture theaters were sold than in any three months of that year. The coming exposition and convention already give promise of being a greater success many times over than any other previously held.

During the past week twenty-three contracts for space in the Coliseum were closed and applications still keep pouring in. All firms connected with the moving picture supply business should see to it that their contracts are made as soon as possible. Owing to the plan of arrangements every position selected for displays will have a good value, although, of course, there are preferential locations.

One of the sights of the exposition will be a modern moving picture plant, which will be erected on the floor of the Coliseum, in which the public will be shown how negatives of moving pictures are taken, then the positives and their printing, development, etc., throughout the entire process. Directors, cameramen and prominent photoplayers from all the leading companies will take part in these productions, it is promised.

It has been arranged that all delegates to the convention and their visiting friends and the public will be taken in moving pictures, which will be presented to them by a prominent manufacturing concern with international reputation.

Exhibitors throughout the country, from what can be learned, are taking unusual interest in the coming exposition and convention, far greater than ever before in any event of the kind. These exhibitors have evidently learned that it is eminently necessary for them to cast aside all business cares for at least one week in the year and join in the National Convention to exchange their views, settle petty differences and to enlarge the organization; also to join with their brother exhibitors in a round of entertainments that will remain in memory for some considerable time to come.

It is understood that the various producers are all laying out their plans so as to arrange the work of their leading artists so that they may be able to be on hand during the week of the exposition and convention.

The Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company is preparing to build a complete studio on the floor of the Coliseum, which promises to be one of the chief attractions at the exposition. Watterson R. Rothacker, the president of the company, has announced his intention of taking moving pictures of the people in attendance each day at the exposition, and having them ready for exhibition the following day at one of the large modern moving picture theaters in the city.

A prominent Western manufacturer has also agreed to enter into a publicity contest with one of the leading Chicago dailies in producing a picture that will be universally commended by every mother and father who sees it. The subject has been carefully guarded, but when announced at the exposition this manufacturer's booth promises to be one of the most popular at the big show.

The lithographs advertising the Sxith National Exposition and Convention will be ready for distribution on Wednesday, June 21. The contract was let to the American Show Print Co. of Milwaukee. Many beautiful designs were submitted by the different lithographing firms, and it was a difficult task for the committee in charge to award the contract fairly.

MICHIGAN HOLDS STATE CONVENTION.

Elect Officers for Ensuing Year and Re-establish Semi-Annual Meetings.

MICHIGAN State Branch No. 4, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, held its annual convention at the Hotel Wenonah, Bay City, Tuesday and Wednesday, June 13 and 14. The attendance was about fifteen exhibitors, less than ten per cent. of the membership—rather disappointing for an annual convention. However, the business sessions were interesting, and no doubt the work accomplished was well worth the time spent. One of the important things was to re-establish the semi-annual meetings; the next one takes place the second Tuesday in December, and Detroit has been selected for the convention. It was also decided to hold the annual convention in Detroit.

The following are some of the things that must be combated by the exhibitors at an early date: The $500 state tax, similar to the one defeated in Pennsylvania some time ago, taxing every exhibitor whether large or small $500 per annum.

A bill has already been drafted seeking to close every amusement place in the State of Michigan on Sunday. Only the exhibitor who runs on Sunday can realize what this bill means.

Most of the delegates arrived Tuesday morning and immediately registered with Secretary A. J. Moeller. The business session started Tuesday afternoon, with President August Kleist of Mount Clemens in the chair. Various convention committees were appointed and reports of the officers were read. These showed the organization to be in good financial standing. Tuesday evening the visitors were taken for an automobile ride about the city.

Wednesday morning officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, August Kleist, Mount Clemens; vice-presidents, J. M. Neal, Lansing; S. A. Moran, Ann Arbor, and H. L. Rahn, Bay City; secretary, A. J. Moeller, Howell, and treasurer, George Thatcher, Bay City; National vice president, L. R. Simpson, Bay City. Grievance committee, Mr. Brenan of Detroit, Mr. Kleist of Mt. Clemens, Mr. Thatcher of Bay City.

A legislative committee was appointed with J. M. Neal of Lansing as chairman.

One of the important subjects discussed was a letter from Mrs. A. Victor Seydel, regent of the Sophie De Moran Chapter, D. A. R., asking the picture theater managers to discontinue playing "The Star Spangled Banner" in a medley in their theaters, and in place thereof to have played once during each performance a single stanza of the piece, and to display on their screens at the same time an American flag with the words "Where Every American Stands." The members expressed their appreciation of the suggestion and their desire to co-operate with the D. A. R., but took no action because of the limited attendance.

The afternoon session was an open one, and the feature of it was an address delivered by President Fred Herrington of the National Association. He reviewed the work of the national organization, what it had done in the past and some of the things it was trying to develop and accomplish. He spoke in opposition to censorship in any form and urged greater co-operation between the exhibitors and the exchanges as well as among the exhibitors themselves. He emphasized the fact that exhibitors must first be soundly organized before they can expect results.

Peter Jeup spoke in behalf of the state organization. He said he was in hearty accord with the utterances of President Herrington—and particularly that phase of his remarks which referred to the "opposing of censorship in any form." Mr. Jeup also called attention to what the state organization had done in preventing unfavorable legislation both at the state capitol and at Detroit.

Among those from Detroit who attended the Bay City convention were Peter Jeup, John Brennan, Jacob Wenzel and Mrs. Wenzel, August Kleist and George Hoffman, exhibitors. George Weeks, M. S. Bailey and Elton Bloom represented film exchanges.

CLEVELAND MEN FORM SCREEN CLUB.

Preliminary Organization Effected So Quietly Many Exhibitors Were Unaware of Intended Action.

QUIETLY, indeed so quietly that only a score of exhibitors, exchange men and newspaper writers were aware of it, the Cleveland Screen Club came into being on June 13. The event occurred at a luncheon, when a temporary organization modeled after similar bodies in other cities was effected. The activities of the new club are to be partly social, it is announced, but the members also plan to study problems relating to the moving picture industry and to promote closer relations between exhibitors, exchange men and manufacturers.

C. E. Shurtleff of the Cleveland V-L-S-E. Exchange, Miss Gertrude K. Smith and G. A. Gray of the Plain Dealer are credited with bringing the members of the club together for the first meeting. It is declared, however, the club is not fostered by any one manufacturer, exchange or exhibitor but is for the benefit of the entire industry in Cleveland. For the present the club will hold meetings twice a month. Permanent officers are to be elected and a regular business program outlined.

Exchange men who are charter members of the club are Paul C. Mooney and Joseph Williams of the Fox Film Corporation; J. R. Johnson, Pathe; H. A. Bandy, Triangle; C. E. Shurtleff and A. M. Holah, V-L-S-E; W. W. Culp, Bluebird; Max Milder, General Film Company; P. A. Bloch and Irwin H. Hirsch, World Film, and W. E. Lusk, Mutual.

Exhibitors who are listed as charter members are Benjamin J. Sawyer, president of the Northeastern Ohio Exhibitors' League; Mark Greenbaum and Jack Greenbaum, of the Alhambra theater; Joe Grossman of the Standard; David Adler, Strand theater; F. P. Woda, Orpheum; W. J. Freedman, Metropolitan; E. N. Downs and M. Printz, Knickerbocker; Harry J. Bailey, Doan theater, and W. C. Kasper, Fairyland. Mr. Sawyer and other officers of the Exhibitors' League were not present at the birth of the club, however, and Mr. Sawyer declared he had no knowledge of the purposes of the organization.

Film manufacturing companies represented were the Reserve Photoplay Company, Johnny Ray and Robert H. McLaughlin; Sunbeam Film Corporation, J. D. Raridan; Midland Film Manufacturing Company, James A. Fitzgerald. Newspaper writers present were John DeKoven, the Cleveland Leader; M. A. Malaney, Ohio Motion Picture Bulletin; George R. Davis, Cleveland Press, and Gertrude K. Smith and G. A. Gray, the Plain Dealer.

Mr. Shurtleff was chosen as temporary president, with Miss Smith as temporary secretary. A temporary executive committee was named, composed of Messrs. Mooney, Shurtleff, Downs, Lusk, Malaney, DeKoven and Miss Smith.

SPEDON ORGANIZING SPECIAL TRAIN.

Vitagraph General Representative Outlines Plans for Comfort of New Yorkers Attending Exposition.

FOR the accommodation and greater comfort of those New York State exhibitors who will attend the Sixth National Exposition and Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America at Chicago, a special train will be provided over the New York Central Railroad, announces Samuel Spedon, in charge of transportation. On Saturday, July 8, the train will leave New York (Grand Central Terminal) at 1 P. M., Albany 4.25, Schenectady 4.57, Utica 6.47, Syracuse 8.15, Rochester 10.04, Buffalo (Sunday) 12.02 A. M., arriving at Chicago 11.50 A. M.

In a circular letter Mr. Spedon announces:

"This train will have club and dining cars, and the schedule will enable up-state members to avail themselves of this train and join the convention party. The round trip railroad fare is: From New York, $40.30; Albany, $32.20; Schenectady, $31.50; Utica, $28.40; Syracuse, $26.30; Rochester, $23; Buffalo, $21.

"Railroad tickets at fare quoted are good on any train returning excepting the Twentieth Century Limited. They are limited for return to reach original starting point not later than July 19. We must have one hundred in the party to secure a special train; otherwise, special cars will be attached to New York Central train No. 41 leaving at the same time.

"The advantages of special arrangements above outlined must be apparent to all, principal among which are the pleasure of traveling together and the opportunity to discuss matters of mutual interest en route. To co-operate, send your request for reservation together with check covering railroad and pullman charges to W. V. Lifsey, A. G. P. A., New York Central Railroad, 1216 Broadway, New York City, who will also be glad to give any further information desired."

PENNSYLVANIA EXHIBITORS' CONVENTION.

In a Leter to the World President Ben Zerr Appeals for Co-operation of Theater Men.

To the Moving Picture World:

Lest you forget! It is for the many benefits, too numerous to mention at this time, the reason why you should be a member of the M. P. E. L. The only way to get these benefits is to be a member. The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America has done one thing for the exhibitor which perhaps you have forgotten, the "graduated war tax." This tax, if you remember, was to be $100 to large and small theaters alike.

The M. P. E. L. thought this an injustice to the small theater and asked for a graduated tax and obtained it, thereby saving about 75 per cent. of the exhibitors in America enough in only one year to pay a life membership in the league.

This tax is again due, and may refresh your memory to the fact that the M. P. E. L. has been and will continue to be a friend and help to the exhibitor.

I hope I will have the pleasure of meeting you at Pittsburgh June 26, 27 and 28.

If it is impossible to come, send your check for $5 (admission dues) thereby affiliating yourself with the league.

There will be something doing at this, our fifth annual convention. Every exhibitor will be welcomed, it makes no difference what state he is from. Come and help make this great state gathering greater with your presence.

Sincerely yours, BEN H. ZERR,
President M. P. E. L. of Pa.

Reading, June 16, 1916.

BROOKLYN EXHIBITORS MEET.

Seelye of Pathe Makes a Stirring Speech on the Importance of the Organized Exhibitor.

THE Exhibitors' Association of Brooklyn held a well attended meeting on the night of Thursday, June 15, in their usual meeting place, the Triangle theater. President John Manheimer was in the chair. It was one of the open meetings to which not only exhibitors, but also exchange men and manufacturers and, indeed, all friends of the motion picture are invited. These open meetings have been productive of much good and have resulted in a large growth of membership.

At the meeting Thursday there were present, beside a full attendance of exhibitors, C. R. Seelye, of Pathe; Richard MacFarland, Arthur S. Abells, John A. Hammel, also of Pathe; George Schaefer, of World Film; S. B. Kramer, S. Zeller and H. Guinsburg, of the Universal, and Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the V-L-S-E.

The speech of the night was made by Mr. Seelye, who expatiated on the policy of Pathe, which he said had uniformly been friendly to the exhibitor. He spoke of the growing power of the exhibitor and emphasized his growing responsibility. He expressed the hope that the organized exhibitor would always have the proper leadership which is essential to the success of any organization. His remarks were followed with great interest, and when he sat down the audience broke into prolonged applause. The other speaker of the evening was Mr. Irwin, who is the chairman of the committee appointed at the Delmonico Conference at which Mr. Irwin presided. He spoke of the need of union, harmony and co-operation between manufacturer and exhibitor and expressed the hope that the new organization, which is to succeed the expiring Board of Trade, will accomplish the ends for which the Board of Trade had been incorporated.

OHIOANS DISCUSSING STATE CONVENTION.

Cleveland exhibitors and other members of the Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League are discussing plans for a state convention, which it is proposed to hold before the national convention opens in Chicago.

Mansfield, Canton, Cincinnati and Cleveland are mentioned as seeking the state meeting, but there is as yet no indication of where it will be held. LaMotte Smith, president of the Ohio League, is expected to issue the call in the near future.

Exhibitors are also talking of tentative slates for the state and local organization elections.

BAY CITY MEN VISIT U CITY.

C. W. Midgley, owner of the Franklin theater, Oakland, and James Beatty, owner of the Liberty theater, San Jose, were recent visitors at Universal City and spent an afternoon on the big stages familiarizing themselves with the production of features.

McClure Interests Sue Paramount Stockholders.

Statement of Frederick L. Collins, President of Publishing Concern, Claims Owners of Distributing Company Now Repudiate Agreement to Sell Their Holdings—Declaration by Paramount.

FOLLOWING closely upon the heels of the displacement of W. W. Hodkinson as president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation and the election of Hiram Abrams to succeed him, comes the announcement, emanating from the office of Frederick L. Collins, president of the McClure Publications, Inc., to the effect that the McClure interests had purchased or were about to purchase the Paramount Corporation. It was intimated in the statement of Mr. Collins that a suit was about to be brought to enforce a contract of sale entered into between McClure's and certain Paramount stockholders.

Inquiry made by the Moving Picture World brought to light the fact that the action referred to had been started and that the papers in the case were served upon the attorney for the defendants, Eldon Bisbee, on Tuesday, June 20, who accepted service for the defendants.

At the office of the attorneys for the plaintiffs, Duell, Warfield & Duell, it was learned that the action, which had been instituted in the Supreme Court, New York county, named as defendants the Paramount Pictures Corporation, Walter E. Green, Frank J. Marion, Alice M. Long as administratrix of the estate of Samuel Long, deceased; William W. Hodkinson, Hiram Abrams, James Steele, William L. Sherry and Raymond Pawley, individually and as trustees for themselves.

It is alleged that these defendants had agreed to sell and deliver their stock to Mr. Collins and that now they sought to repudiate that agreement, which was the basis of the suit. These holdings constituted a majority of the Paramount stock. It has also been intimated that the minority stockholders have signified a willingness to sell their stock, but this has not been confirmed.

The statement issued on June 20 and emanating from Mr. Collins' office is as follows:

McCLURE'S BUYS PARAMOUNT.

At last there is something doing in the moving picture merger situation. The Paramount Pictures Corporation, the big distributing organization that handles the product of the Famous Players, Lasky, Morosco, Pallas and other companies, has been sold, or is about to be sold, to Frederick L. Collins, publisher of McClure's Magazine and The Ladies' World, who is said to be acting for important financial and publishing interests. The purchase price involves several million dollars in cash and securities in a corporation to be formed by the buyer for the purpose of taking over Paramount and other film companies. This is, in a general way, the plan that has formerly been credited to Benjamin B. Hampton, vice president of the American Tobacco Company. It can be stated definitely, however, that Mr. Hampton has nothing to do with the present plans.

The purchase of Paramount stock is disclosed in a suit, instituted yesterday in the Supreme Court, New York county, against certain stockholders in the Paramount Company, asking the court to enforce the specific performance of a contract of sale, alleged to have been signed by these parties but now disputed by them. The action also involves injunction proceedings to prevent the sale of these blocks of stock to anyone else pending the court's decision.

This suit, together with the sudden resignation of W. W. Hodkinson, founder, and until Tuesday last, president of the Paramount company, is taken to indicate that interests outside of Paramount are attempting to block the proposed sale. In this connection it is recalled that the proposed merger of Triangle interests with the Famous Players and Lasky companies has been held up by the existence of twenty-five year contracts between the latter companies and the Paramount Corporation. The result is awaited with much interest by moving picture men.

Mr. Collins, who is president of the McClure Publications, Inc., and of the McClure Book Company, was unwilling to discuss this situation in detail. He confined himself to this statement: "We know nothing of moving picture politics and have no interest in them. We are publishers of magazines, books, and, of late years, moving pictures. We needed a distributing agency for our McClure Pictures, so we arranged to buy the best we could find. I expect all the Paramount stockholders to stand by their signatures on our contract."

The McClure company's connection with motion pictures extends over a period of five years. They invented and produced, in connection with Thomas A. Edison, Incorporated, the first motion picture serial, "What Happened to Mary." This was the first time that one moving picture had ever been connected in title and theme with another, and the first time that publishers of magazines and newspapers co-operated in production work. The custom is now general. The McClure company's more recent affiliations have been with the Essanay Company of Chicago. McClure's and Essanay are now engaged on a big serial, "The Strange Case of Mary Page."

After learning of the institution of the suit, inquiry was made by Mr. Abrams, president of the Paramount Company, and one of the controlling stockholders, who referred the inquirer to Messrs. Rushmore, Bisbee & Stern, of 61 Broadway, the attorneys for the majority stockholders. Mr. Bisbee, of that firm, stated that the stock control of the Paramount Pictures Corporation is held by four gentlemen, who are clients of his firm; that they have not parted with their stock, and that they have no intention of so doing; that the majority stock interests had lately assumed the executive management of the company and propose to continue in control of such management.

Mr. Bisbee further stated that he had no desire to discuss the details or merits of any suit which Mr. Collins had brought or intended to bring, as he preferred to say in court anything which was necessary in that connection.

When Mr. Collins' statement was called to the attention of Mr. Zukor, president of the Famous Players, he confined his remarks to the opinion that he could not recognize any reason for referring to the Famous Players Film Company in the McClure statement other than as one of the producing companies releasing through Paramount.

FREULER FAVORS FILM ORGANIZATION.

Mutual's President Says All Interests Should Make Common Cause.

PRESIDENT JOHN R. FREULER of the Mutual Film Corporation is distinctly in favor of an organization or association of the motion picture interests including every ramification of the business, from the manufacturer to the exhibitor. Discussing the movement which began with the recent meeting of motion picture men at Delmonico's in New York Mr. Freuler remarked:

"That such an association is necessary, vitally necessary, to the continued success and prosperity of the industry ought to be self-evident. Never has the history of American business seen so great an industry as the motion picture development with so little organization, so little co-operation of the interests which should be allied in a common cause.

"There are certain conditions and problems which are identical and equally important to manufacturer, distributor and exhibitor. There is no reason whatever save inefficiency within ourselves which can keep us from working on the common problems for the common good. We have only to evolve a way in which it gives adequate and equitable shares in representation and responsibility to each branch of the business.

"The exhibitor should recognize the bigness of his interest in this movement. He should recognize, too, his important position as the man who controls the screen, which is the most powerful medium of addressing the public that the arts of expression have ever devised. The motion picture is made for the motion picture theater and its patrons. Every problem of the business is in a very definite sense an exhibitor's problem."

EXHIBITORS DIFFER ON SUMMER CLOSING.

Cleveland Men to Hold Referendum to Decide the Whole Question.

The sentiment of Cleveland picture theater owners on the summer closing proposal fathered by Sam Bullock is to be taken in a referendum to be conducted from the office of the Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. A resolution introduced by Mr. Bullock at a recent meeting of the league and adopted after some sharp tilts on the floor provides that three plans for closing all picture theaters in the city for a certain period in July shall be submitted to the theater owners. The plans are identical except as to the length of the closed period and the dates.

Members of the league differ as to the advisibility of closing, some declaring such a plan will stimulate the patronage and others asserting that they would be the losers in the long run if their houses closed for even a short period during the summer. It is not believed the downtown exhibitors will consent to close.

A debate on the closing plan which was to have been held at the league headquarters was called off.

PLAN FOR NEW FILM ORGANIZATION.

A meeting of the Committee of Twelve appointed in pursuance of the action of the recent Delmonico conference was held on Thursday, June 15, in the office of Walter W. Irwin, the general manager of the V-L-S-E. The meeting was attended by Jesse L. Lasky, Arthur Friend, W. W. Irwin, Lee A. Ochs, L. A. Levine, John J. Wittman, William M. Seabury, J. H. Hallberg, William A. Johnston, Tracy Lewis and W. Stephen Bush. Sub-committees on by-laws and on budget were appointed as follows: Budget, William A. Johnston, Lee A. Ochs, J. H. Hallberg and W. W. Irwin; by-laws, Arthur Friend, L. A. Levine, William M. Seabury and W. Stephen Bush.

Richardson Visits New Bedford

Projection Man Finds the Olympia a Whale of a Theater in the Old Seaport—Hearty Reception in Providence.

By F. H. Richardson.

AFTER a strenuous ride of 126 miles along the shore road from New Haven, part of the way doing a bump-the-bump stunt and totally "busting" all known speed regulations, I arrived in the beautiful city of New Bedford (population 110,000) at about 4 P. M. Entering Purchase street a warm glow or radiance was in evidence in front of the Parker House. This unusual illumination had me puzzled for the moment, until discovery was made that it emanated from the smiling countenances of Walter O. Smith, secretary, and E. J. Sims, president of Local Union No. 334, the same constituting the committee of "Here's-the-keys, welcome to our city."

Being duly installed in the Parker House, and having removed six or seven of the eight or ten layers of Connecticut-Rhode Island-Massachusetts dust, I was escorted to the sidewalk, my attention directed across the street, and the committee proudly exclaimed "lucket that," and I did, too, for the "that" was the really beautiful and imposing front of the Olympia theater, New Bedford's latest addition to its list of playhouses; and right in the beginning I want to say the Olympia is the best planned, best equipped theater it has ever been my pleasure to inspect, bar none. I don't know of anything in New York as complete and well designed and the curious part of it is that the Olympia was designed by Architect W. L. Mowll of Boston, who never before in all his more or less unsophisticated young life designed a theater. More power to him, he is some designer, even though he did commit the usual error, not to say blunder, in operating room location.

To begin with, the front of the Olympia, while severe and imposing, is still most pleasing to the eye. The house is managed by William E. Spragg, who is, of course, very proud both of the theater and its installation. You could see that sticking out all over as he showed me through the premises, and by golly, I don't blame him one bit. I wouldn't give a wormy apple for a man who didn't get chesty over a plant of that kind.

The theater seats twenty-eight hundred. It runs a combination bill of vaudeville and feature pictures, and the moving picture end of it, strange to say, is by no means slighted. Barring the location of the operating room at the top of the gallery, the one and only unfortunate circumstance in the whole plant, the projection installation is absolutely, taking everything into consideration, the most complete I have ever seen. The operating room is 24 feet long, 9 feet deep and has a 9-foot ceiling. The walls are painted a dark color. The observation ports are perhaps a trifle narrower than I would have liked them, but not sufficiently so to be very much criticised.

The air comes into the operating room through the front wall of the theater, at the floor line, and is exhausted through an 18-inch vent flue by a Sturtevant exhaust fan. The projection equipment consists of two Power's Six Bs, a Power's dissolver and a spotlight. The machines are motor-driven and the arcs are handled by two arc controllers.

As will be seen from the view, the angle of projection is steep, and that, of course, means distortion; also, I may say the distortion is considerable, though the keystone effect has been entirely eliminated by the filling in of the apertures. The distance of projection is 131 feet, with an 18-foot picture. The illumination is excellent, current being supplied by a Westinghouse 90-ampere motor generator set, located in the basement, with a "remote control."

In addition to the motor generator there are five Fort Wayne compensarcs, one for each propector lamp, one for each dissolver lamp, one for the spotlight lamp, for use in case anything should happen to the motor generator set. I would like to have a bird's eye view of the countenance of some managers I know if asked to install that kind of an emergency equipment. It would be one well worth looking at. The operating room switchboard by means of which the motor generator and emergency compensarcs are interconnected is the most complete thing of the kind I have even seen in an operating room; it represents a cost more than equal to the entire cost of some operating room emergency installations that are looked upon as being quite complete.

Just to the right of the spotlight lamphouse is secn the ballast resistance, which is for the purpose of breaking down the 75 volts, which the generator delivers, to arc voltage, that being approximately 60—a high voltage arc indicating the use of a covered lower carbon.

The plant is in charge of Brother Denault, and he is not only very proud of it, but is delivering the goods on the screen. However, lest Brother Denault become unduly puffed up, I will hand him a little jolt. He ought to cut out the cored lower carbon and use a carefully selected solid However, Brother Denault is by no means alone in committing this error. About four operators out of five, yes, nine out of ten, use cored lower carbons for D. C., which is an extremely inefficient set. It has but one thing to commend it, viz., it is easier to handle. It is a lazy man's way of doing it, though that is not meant for a slam at Denault. A core in the lower carbon makes the arc easier to handle because the core produces lots of gas and therefore creates a heavy gas stream, which is a very good conductor, hence stabilizes the arc, but that mass of gas forms a curtain right square in front of the crater, and that curtain not only absorbs a portion of the light but injures the quality of that which passes through. The cored upper, solid lower for D. C., is harder to handle, but is very much more efficient.

But to get back to our subject. There is a very complete switchboard goes with the motor generator set. It includes a voltmeter and ammeter, so arranged that by changing a plug Brother Denault can take readings across the arc of either machine, or of the voltage of the line. The ammeter is arranged so that it takes a reading of all current passing to the arc, and it can be cut in or out at will.

In the basement installation, with the "remote control," is the switchboard and the motor generator set. This board is also supplied with a hand starter, so that the motor generator set may be handled either from the operating room or in the basement.

A visitor will notice how everything is marked. The generator is marked "D. C. 70 volts." The bus bars on the board are all marked with their voltage, which is 600 and 220. The motor of the motor generator set is a 600 volt-motor. This same scheme has been carried out all through the house. Everything electrical is marked plainly, either white letters on black, or black letters on copper. The ventilation plant is very, very complete. The intake is through an airshaft. The fan pulls the air in through heat coils and an air washer, and forces it into the auditorium through approximately 1,000 mushroom ventilators located under the seats.

It was not only the completeness of the plant which struck me but also its extreme accessibility. You don't have to crawl through a rathole or get yourself all torn to pieces as you inspect this plant. It is, as I said in the beginning, the very best piece of theater planning it has ever been my good fortune to view.

The basement is taken up with fifteen commodious, well lighted dressing rooms, not cubby holes, but real dressing rooms. In addition to this there is a musicians' room, an organist's room, the manager's office, the stage hands' room, etc. Each one of these rooms is so arranged that the turning of the key in the doorlock automatically extinguishes all lights in the room. And so I could go on at great length describing the excellence of the plant, and would be glad to do it, too, did space permit.

I would strongly recommend to New England managers who contemplate the erection of a high class theater a visit to and careful inspection of the Olympia in New Bedford. Mr. Spragg, I am sure, will be glad to display his plant to visiting managers or theater owners, and you can take it from me who have examined a great many installations of all kinds and descriptions, it is well worth looking at, particularly to him who contemplates building a high class house.

The Olympia, I am sorry to say, was the only New Bedford theater visited. After riding 126 miles between 10.15 A. M. and 4 P. M., negotiating two run-once-an-hour ferries with a two-hour speech at midnight yet to be pulled off, I did not feel able to get around and look at any more of the New Bedford houses.

After 11 P. M. the managers and operators gathered at the Parker house, the best hotel in the city, when a banquet was staged by Local Union No. 334, I. A., in honor of the guest. The affair was very nice indeed and we all regretted our inability to get a photograph of it because the management would not let us muss up the decorations with flashlight smoke. After the eats had gone the way all good eats go, President Sims introduced the writer, and for two hours the audience was attentive. Afterward a number of operators and managers expressed themselves not only surprised but exceedingly well pleased with the whole thing, and that, too, in view of the fact that I handed them what must have been in some spots a pretty warm bundle.

It cost the operators of the New Bedford local approximately $4 each, but after it was done I was told by members of the union they were thoroughly satisfied; it was worth even more than that to them, they said, and I am, of course, pleased to know they were satisfied.

Later.—I am in receipt of a letter from the local requesting that I return to New Bedford as soon as time can be spared, and deliver a second lecture. The union offers to defray expenses of the second trip. I fear, however, it cannot be done before next fall. The summer is pretty well and thoroughly taken up.

Providence, Rhode Island.

From New Bedford to Providence, via Fall River, is thirty-three miles, and, barring the Fall River cobble stones (some cobbles, my boy, some cobbles), Nancy Hanks No. 3, the Go-Devil, negotiated it in record time, only to run into a terrific jam in Providence, where a "preparedness parade" was in full swing, with the main streets of the city sealed up tight as a drum. At last, with temper within .002 of a degree of exploding point, I hunted up a sergeant of police and literally bullied him into letting me through.

At the Crown Hotel Brother P. Sugarman, chairman of the committee appointed by Local Union 223 to arrange the details of our visit, and S. Taylor, a member of the committee, were waiting. Others had waited until 1 o'clock and then been compelled to retire into the depths of their respective fireproof rooms and shoot snapshot photographs at the screen.

Being duly installed in most comfortable quarters at the Crown I insisted on resting until evening. At 7 o'clock Brother Sugarman came, as per arrangement, also Brother C. J. Duffy, accompanied by his Buick gasoline destroyer, and we, together with Brother John Ford, visited theaters in Pawtucket and Providence. In the first named city calls were made at the Imperial, W. G. Hartford, manager, and E. W. Keley and M. Catalozzi, operators; the Bijou, Walter Davis, manager, and J. Hainey and C. Chalk, operators; the Music Hall, Owen Reddy, manager, and Ed. Hamilton and Jack Butler, operators, and the Scenic theater, C. L. McNally, manager, and A. Alex, operator.

The pictures in the Imperial, Bijou and Music Hall were good and in the Imperial was remarkably so, considering the fact that the auditorium was, for a moving picture house, very brightly lighted and the operators are hampered by certain inavoidable structural defects, the building being the old Union railway station remodeled into a theater. The Scenic theater has an unusual plant for generating current. There is a generator pulled by a water wheel, power for which boils through under the building, another generator run by a steam engine fed by a 100 horsepower boiler, and a third generator pulled by a kerosene engine. The latter is for emergency use only, but the steam plant helps out the water power, it not being powerful enough to carry the whole load. In entering the building in which the power plant is located you pass over a bridge (in the basement of the building) under which pours the power-supplying stream, and at night it is a rather weird and decidedly uncomfortable looking place. One can but feel goose-pimpley as one watches the black water rush past just under his feet and wonder if that bridge is really strong enough.

In Providence we visited the Strand, a very large, beautiful theater managed by Charles H. Williams, a thoroughly up-to-date man who is "on the job" with both feet. A Mirror screen is in use, set well back on the stage, and, barring a rather steep angle of projection with the consequent inevitable distortion, the picture is distinctly high class. Mr. Williams is himself a student of projection. He uses high-grade projection lenses and spares no effort to improve results on his screen. He is a firm believer in the use of high-grade lenses; also he claims that by their use the picture on a Mirror screen is rendered sharp, both at close-up and side angle. Brothers Ed. Anthony and Willard Sholes man the operating room, with Harold Lees as assistant. I did not have time to inspect the projection plant. The Strand runs a local weekly, which is immensely popular; also what I saw of it was distinctly good. Mr. Williams showed the preparedness parade in the evening of the day of the parade. The rain, which came down in a persistent drizzle, prevented us visiting more of the Providence-Pawtucket houses.

The Providence union had insisted on my remaining in that city for two days, so next morning (Sunday) the committee came, and, accompanied by the Buick, gasolined the editor around the city and then out to Rocky Point, ten miles, where we thoroughly enjoyed the famous Rhode Island shore dinner. The Providence men certainly proved themselves to be princes in the matter of entertainment and thoughtful courtesy to the guest of the local. I shall not soon forget it.

In the evening at 8 o'clock (shows are closed in Providence on Sunday) the operators of Providence and Pawtucket (Local Union No. 223) foregathered in the banquet hall of the Crown, one of Providence's finest, where a sure enough and really very fine banquet was served, after which the men listened with close attention for two full hours while we expounded the doctrine of better projection.

Among the guests of the local were William Franke, business agent, and Fred Seabrooke, member of Executive Board of Boston Local Union No. 182. The secretary of the Rhode Island State Board of Health, Dr. Schwartz, also was there, listened attentively, made voluminous notes, and was kind enough to pay us a compliment afterward.

BERT ADLER WITH BLACHE.

Bert Adler has been engaged as assistant to Herbert Blache. In about two weeks the new Greater Blache Studios will be formally opened with a dinner to the press. Madame and Herbert Blache will direct all the pictures to be taken in the new studio, with James Johnson, as formerly, their general aid.

Banquet Local Union 223 Tendered F. H. Richardson, Editor Projection Department, Sunday, June 4.

Record Offer for Scripts

Famous Players Announces $100,000 for 100 Photoplay Ideas in Thousand-Word Lengths.

ANOTHER record has been established by the Famous Players Film Company in its announcement that it will pay $1,000 each for 100 photoplay ideas—a total investment of $100,000. The scripts are to be submitted in the form of thousand-word synopses, thus offering the successful authors compensation at the rate of a dollar a word—a rate hitherto confined to only a very few of the greatest writers of our time.

The announcement, which is being made through several of the leading magazines of the highest literary standards and through the book review departments of some of the leading newspapers, has been directed through these channels because the producers are anxious only to receive scripts from authors of recognized merit. The offer is in no sense a prize contest.

"We have scrupulously avoided the 'prize contest' in making this announcement," declared Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players organization, "because we consider the contest to be very unfair to the authors who submit scripts on that basis. Lured by the bait of some fair stipend offered as the first prize, they are forced to compete on a 'heads-I-win-and-tails-you-lose' plan, because if they fail to win the prize they receive very negligible offers for their work if it proves acceptable at all.

"In this case, however, we are making a flat proposition that we have appropriated $100,000 for the purpose of acquiring 100 original scenarios which we consider to be worth $2,000 each to us. It is a matter of no importance to us whether one writer earns the entire $100,000 or whether it is divided among 100 writers. We want the best ideas that money can buy and we want nothing but the best. Therefore we have definitely committed ourselves to pay $1,000 each for acceptable scripts and we will reject everything that does not measure up to our standards. There is no middle ground—it is the best or nothing.

"But since this is not a prize contest, there is no time limit on the submission of the ideas—we are always open to the receipt of scripts until the $100,000 has been exhausted. Therefore, there is no reason for an author submitting a half-baked idea to us as writers have ample time in which to work out the polishing up of their ideas.

"Furthermore, the authors can submit their scripts without the fear that they will be accepted or rejected according to their relative merits as compared with the works of thousands of 'contestants.' There will be no spectacular photographs of stacks of manuscripts almost completely filling an entire suite of offices while one of the judges bears aloft the prize winning script. We have purposely directed our announcement at trained writers only because we do not want anything but thousand-dollar ideas.

"As each script is submitted to our photoplay department it will be read and judged on its intrinsic merits without reference to any other preferred idea. There will be no placing the script aside to wait for the final comparison with hundreds of others which have passed the first reading. Nor will there be any special judges engaged for the work of passing on the merits of the ideas. Scripts will be judged solely on the standards best suited to prescribe for the needs of the company.

"Our step is simply devised as the most effective means of establishing direct communication with the best imaginative brains of the country with a view to ultimately entering into permanent relations with many of the foremost writers of the period.

"It will not be easy for even the cleverest authors to earn the remarkable rate of a dollar a word which we have offered, for the scripts must meet certain well-defined restrictions. We are anxious to avoid lurid dramas of the objectionable sex variety and we do not want political, religious or other controversial subjects. We also prefer ideas which are especially suitable for Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick, Hazel Dawn, Ann Pennington and our other stars. Any really greater or unusual plot will be accepted no matter whether for men or woman stars, provided it embodies an idea which is intrinsically worth a thousand dollars to the company.

"We are excluding the general public because it is our experience that less than 1 per cent. of the so-called scripts submitted by amateur writers are worth reading. Rather than wade through thousands of samples of that sort of material, we are anxious to confine ourselves exclusively to the works of trained authors."

Patents Company Loses Loop Suit

United States Circuit Court Affirms Lower Court Decision Dismissing Case Against Universal.

THE United States Circuit Court of Appeals has affirmed the decision of the lower court dismissing the suit instituted by the Motion Picture Patents Company against the Universal Film Manufacturig Company, the Universal Film Exchange and the Prague Amusement Company, involving the patent rights to motion picture projection machines and films.

The suit involved license agreements executed in June, 1912, under the terms of which the plaintiff company authorized the Precision Machine Company and others to manufacture and sell projecting machines at $150 each on a royalty of $5 subject to a certain restriction.

Subsequently the reissue patent expired and the Universal Film Manufacturing Company continued to manufacture films for exhibition by exhibitors using the plaintiff's machines. The company contended it was contrary to public policy in view of the growth and development of the motion picture industy to restrict the use of patent rights in the manner employed by the plaintiff company.

The decision does not affect the patents rights of the plaintiff company covering the projecting machines, but prevents the company from imposing restrictions upon lessees of the machines which, in effect, preclude them from exhibiting any films which are not manufactured under license agreements with the Motion Picture Patents Company.

The decision in part reads as follows:

Inasmuch as the contract with the Precision Machine Company involved and restrained interstate commerce, it makes no difference that the particular act of infringement occurred within the State of New York, and the prohibitions of the Clayton Act apply.

Marienella v. United Booking Offices, 227 Fed. 170; Nash v. United States, 229 U. S. 373.

It is urged that the defendant, Prague Amusement Company, cannot rely upon the license and repudiate its terms. It does not rely upon the license but obtained a lease of the machine from the owner, the Seventy-second Street Amusement Company, which acquired it after having paid the purchase price, and thus freed the machine from the unlawful restrictions. The remarks of this Court upon the motion for a stay pending the decision of the appeal from Judge Dickinson's decree in the criminal prosecution for violation of the Sherman Act, 225 Fed. 800, would be applicable to the case if the restrictions we have held illegal had been held valid. Then it would have been true that the defendant who was using the patented article under a license could not question the validity of the patent, or claim it lacked invention. These remarks are not applicable when the restrictions are held invalid and the article having been thus freed from all restrictions may be used at the will of the licensee.

In view of the foregoing considerations it is unnecessary to discuss the other defenses raised by the defendants and the decree dismissing the bill is affirmed.

The attorneys for the complainant were Melville Church and George F. Scull, while Edmund Wetmore, John B. Stanchfield and Oscar W. Jeffery acted as counsel for the defendants.

TERRISS GETS OPTION ON WHITESIDE PLAYS.

Tom Terriss, who produced the Unity success "My Country First," which has received endorsements from the most noted men of the country from President Wilson down, announces that he has secured an option on all the famous plays in which Walker Whiteside has appeared, and also an option on the personal appearance upon the screen of Mr. Whiteside himself. Mr. Terriss will direct the Whiteside pictures and is negotiating for a studio of sufficient scope for his plans.

Among the Whiteside triumphs in which the actor is to appear under the Terris direction are "The Ragged Messenger," and "The Beloved Traitor," the latter by Frank Packard. Mr. Terriss anounces that these photodramas will be released through the Unity Sales Corporation.

MARIN SAIS TO FORM POLO TEAM.

Marin Sais has set on foot a plan to organize a woman's polo team among the screen players in the Los Angeles colony. The movement has met with enthusiastic support. The Los Angeles newspapers have also aided by approving comment, the most conservative of them running a feature account of the team in the sporting section, illustrated by a three-column photograph of Miss Sais playing polo at Coronado Beach.

Though her love of the sport has had much to do with the determination of Miss Sais to organize the team, she has been impelled to the present move by the opportunity to aid the Actors' Fund of America. The plans contemplate a widely advertised game between the screen stars and either the Coronado or Burlingame masculine aggregations.

Varges Is Official Photographer

Thrills in the Experience of a Hearst Camera Man with British at Saloniki.

THE story of how Ariel Varges, a Yankee boy with a "movie" camera, gained the confidence of the British enough to receive the appointment as official photographer, is an interesting one. Mr. Varges is a representative of the Hearst International News Pictorial and is now with the British Expeditionary forces at Saloniki, Greece. Besides being official photographer of the British forces he has the distinction of being the only representative of an American film concern in the Balkans.

Before the allied forces of English and French soldiery landed at Saloniki, Varges was with the Serbian armies.

Ariel Varges Lifting Unexploded Bomb from Debris of Wrecked Zeppelin.

His introduction into Serbia was obtained through Sir Thomas Lipton, wealthy tea merchant and master of racing yachts, whom Varges had met and photographed in New York. In fact Varges accompanied Sir Thomas and the Lipton Red Cross unit when it sailed from England on the Lipton yacht. Landing in Greece the expedition made the remainder of the trip overland into Serbia.

Because of the splendid work being done in the little country by American Red Cross societies and independent physicians in stamping out the typhus plague and on account of the Lipton introduction into Belgrade, Varges was received with open arms by the Serbian officials.

He was given every facility for carrying on his work. Escorted about the battle front by a staff officer of the Prince Regent of Serbia, he personally met Crown Prince Alexander and photographed him, together with Sir Thomas Lipton. Throughout their trials Varges stuck to the Serbs and narrowly escaped the contraction of typhus.

At the time of the great Teuton offensive against Serbia, Varges shared all of the agonies of the desperate Serbian retreat. With the Serbian soldiers, dirty, ragged, hungry and exhausted, he joined the British. After a bath, new clothes in place of his tattered rags, a square meal and a rest, Varges found there was very little he need tell the British about himself. The Serbian officers had been ahead of him and the Yankee boy found a warm welcome among the English soldiers.

Hence Varges moves about within the British and even the French lines, with as much freedom as if he were an officer of one of the allied armies instead of a neutral civilian. Thus by a peculiar combination of luck and circumstances, Mr. Varges has been able to secure some most interesting and unique photographs showing the activity of the allied forces in and about Saloniki.

What he has done with his camera will be shown in the current releases of the new Hearst International News Pictorial. This semi-weekly news reel will show some of the most thrilling scenes of the great war—at first hand. Mr. Varges is the only representative of a film concern now in Saloniki and undoubtedly his lens recorded some vivid pictures of the great German drive, the desperate Serbian retreat; and the activities of the allied armies at Saloniki.

The life of a camera man on the battle front is full of adventure at every turn, and if Mr. Varges' films are as interesting as his "stills," we have several thrills ahead of us when these pictures are shown by the Hearst International News Pictorial.

National Board Suggests Juvenile Programs

General Film Company Specializing in Subjects Suitable for Showing to Children.

THE National Juvenile Motion Picture Board when compiling a month's programs as a suggested guide for exhibitors and others interested in special films for juveniles selected fifty-eight subjects. Of these thirty-four were General Film Company pictures. These figures are significant, especialy in view of the fact that the National Board of Review has designated 165 General Film Company pictures of its list "Selected Motion Pictures for Young People Under Sixteen Years."

This list was compiled by skilled, disinterested critics and was made up from films inspected from time to time beginning less than a year ago, classified under the captions, "Comedy," "Humor," "Cartoons," "Vaudeville," "Stories," "Scenic" and "Miscellaneous." Each manufacturer releasing through General Film Service is represented on this list. The General Film Company has placed this list in the hands of each of its branch managers.

As a result of the convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in New York City recently, there has been decided stimulation in interest in this branch of the moving picture industry.

Essanay Establishes Summer Camp

During Warm Season Chicago Players Will Work in Rural Surroundings.

ESSANAY already has established three summer camps where outdoor scenes more representative of the picture involved can be taken. This is in accordance with the system inaugurated last year by President George K. Spoor, when several summer camps were established for the hot season. The camps are in Chattanooga, Tenn.; Starved Rock, Ill., and Camp Logan, the artillery and rifle range of the Illinois National Guard.

Director J. Charles Hayden with Henry B. Walthall and a supporting cast have left for Camp Logan, where they will take scenes for Mr. Walthall's next feature play, "The Little Musketeer." Director Fred E. Wright established the camp at Starved Rock, where he took many of the scenes in the three-act photoplay "Power." Other Essanay directors will make use of this point from time to time. Mr. Wright, in his picture "Power," also visited Arizona, where he made use of the Roosevelt Dam, the great power plants and irrigation systems near Phoenix. These are all shown in this picture.

The camp near Chattanooga was utilized by Director E. H. Calvert, who took a large part of the scenes in "According to the Code," Essanay's five-act feature released in July through the V-L-S-E.

NEW COMPANY FOR MINNEAPOLIS.

The success enjoyed by William A. Lochren in releasing the Northwest Weekly has led to the formation of the Lochren Film Corporation. William A. Lochren is president, Edward F. Seavoit vice president, W. Payton Mason treasurer, and Stanley E. Houck secretary. The stockholders are largely representatives of Western film manufacturing concerns. The company is to cover every department of the motion picture business.

In addition to a pictorial news service, industrial and commercial work will be done, and a large studio equipped for producing photoplays, will be maintained. The entire seventh floor of the Film Exchange Building has been leased and in addition to the motion picture plant they wish to announce that through negotiations conducted between the Lochren Film Corporation and the Unity Sales Corporation they have purchased the entire Northwest territory for "The Yellow Menace," a sixteen episode serial. The states covered by the Lochren Film Corporation's franchise include Minnesota, North and South Dakota, two-thirds of Wisconsin and the entire state of Iowa.

BIG CIRCUITS BOOK IVAN SUBJECT.

The Loew and Fox houses have booked "Her Husband's Wife," to play the circuit of their houses. The New York, the principal Loew picture houses will run this feature on the same day Fox's Riverside will show it.

Gaumonts for First Week in July.

Three-Act Feature, "The Hidden Face," and the One-Reel Subjects are Underlined as Mutual Pictures.

THE Gaumont three-reel release of the first week in July is a melodramatic feature called "The Hidden Face." It will be shown as a Mutual picture July 6. The leading players are Alexander Gaden and Miss Iva Shepard. The photoplay has its scenes laid at an old New England tavern, although no effort has been made to localize the story too closely. Miss Shepard has a strong part, that of a woman who confronts the man who had deserted her when he returns after many years to forbid his niece to marry a foundling, not knowing that the young man is his own son. Mr. Gaden is the son. Others in the cast are Miss Lucille Taft, Miss Mabel E. Trinneer, Henry W. Pemberton, John Reinhart, Myles McCarthy, Charles W. Travis, Albert Macklin, James Levering, Fritz Orlamond and James Davis. July 2 is marked for the release of the ninth number of "Reel Life," the Mutual magazine in film. As usual, this one-reeler has three subjects. One of these pictures is the spinning of wool and its home manufacture into cloth by women in the mountains of Georgia. A second section shows remarkable motion pictures of temples, tombs and palaces of Ancient Egypt. The third section features Bird Life, being pictures in the series of Gaumont Animal Studies.

The "See America First" city for July 5 is New Orleans. All the old-world charm that permeates this Spanish-French metropolis of the South has been preserved by the Gaumont cameraman. On the same reel Cartoonist Harry Palmer has one of his ludicrous Kartoon Komics. He has given his impressions of government military camps the title of "Mr. Peaceful Prepares for War."

The third single-reel released weekly by Gaumont is the Mutual Weekly.

Kalemites Go Atraveling

Three Coast Studios Simultaneously Deserted as Directors Go Far Afield for Locations.

KALEM found itself in the unique position last week of having its three coast studios entirely idle—though, as a matter of fact, the quartet of companies making these plants their headquarters were all busily at work in fields afar. The four companies returned to the studio on the same day, and had a grand reunion and exchange of experiences.

"Ham" and "Bud" had the most thrilling time, for they journeyed with a company of twenty to Catalina Island, for a comedy built on a story of Ham's experiences on a cannibal island. Ham, in a makeup which has him closely resemble a famous Oyster Bay explorer, meets with some terrifying experiences in the land of wild men and pretty maidens in this subject, which will be entitled "Ham the Explorer."

Helen Gibson headed a company of "Hazards of Helen" players under the direction of James Davis, who packed a carload of props aboard their studio train and journeyed to the hills in order to secure locations for a railroad story requiring a mountainous background. Special facilities were also needed to take along Black Beauty, the former circus steed, which Helen Gibson rides in the "Hazards."

The seashore at Venice, California, was the refuge sought by Director Harry Millarde and the Ethel Teare company. Victor Rottman and Gus Leonard were others who enjoyed the balmy ocean breezes while working on a comedy.

A company headed by Marin Sais, True Boardman, Ollie Kirkby and E. Forrest Taylor journeyed to the Mojave Desert, where a week was spent in securing scenes for a story of the outdoors which will present Miss Sais in an unusual role. Edward Clisbee and Frank Jonasson were other stars in the party journeying to the Mojave.

SWEENEY PUTS ONE OVER ON HOGAN.

At the Metro-Quality studio a score of stage hands were busy setting the scene for the obsequies in Juliet's home for the big screen production of "Romeo and Juliet," in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are starred. A row of candles was placed in the center of the room and Edward J. Schulter, the technical director, summoned Daniel ("Kid") Hogan, the head property man.

"Have the boys in the property room bring in the bier now, Hogan," said Schulter.

Hogan huried back to the property room.

"What do you want Danny?" asked one of the boys.

"Juliet's bier," said Hogan.

"Draw one!" shouted "Kid" Sweeney, the studio cut-up.

More Boosters for "Civilization"

Thomas H. Ince Enlarges Publicity and Executive Staffs—New Offices in Times Building.

OWING to the success of Thomas H. Ince's "Civilization" at the Criterion theater, it has been found necessary to take larger offices and to increase his executive and publicity staffs. At present the booking end of "Civilization" is being handled in the suite of offices in the Longacre building while the advertising department is in the Eltinge theater building and the publicity department in the Brokaw building, but a deal has just been closed with H. H. Frazee which makes it possible for the executive, advertising and publicity staffs to move into the Times Building, at Broadway and Forty-second street, on June 22, in the suite until now occupied by H. H. Frazee, who will move back into his former offices in the Longacre theater building, on West Forty-eighth street.

A number of new persons have been added to Mr. Ince's staff of "Civilization" promoters whose headquarters will be at the new offices, but J. Parker Read, Jr., will continue, as heretofore, to be Mr. Ince's general and personal representative in all business matters. Robert Grau will be general manager for both the national and international publicity campaigns about to be spread broadcast on behalf of "Civilization." James Shesgrin, formerly with Henry W. Savage and more recently with Margaret Anglin, has been appointed house manager by Mr. Ince for the Criterion theater, and later will enter the road campaign publicity department with Robert Grau. Four of the best known publicity men now engaged in New York whose names will be announced later will be sent on tour ahead of "Civilization" companies in the early fall.

In charge of the New York publicity department will be Beulah Livingstone. The Chicago showing is now being boosted by J. L. Barnard, who will act as general executive and promoter in many of the large cities where the production is soon to be presented.

No Injunction Against "Aloha Oe"

Attorneys for R. W. Tully Ask Leave to Withdraw Suit Aimed at Triangle Film.

RICHARD WALTON TULLY, the playwright, unsuccessfully attempted to convince the Supreme Court that the Triangle Film Corporation had interfered with his copyrighted rights to his play "The Bird of Paradise," in its feature film "Aloha Oe." In his application for an injunction against the Triangle Corporation Mr. Tully cited as a point of striking resemblance between the spoken drama and the picture play scenes in and about a burning volcano.

The application for a temporary injunction was made in December. Final arguments on the merits of the case were never heard, however. After innumerable delays a special performance of "The Bird of Paradise" was given by a road company at the Hudson theater on April 21 before Supreme Court Justice Mayer and the attorneys for the Triangle Corporation and Mr. Tully. Following the presentation of the spoken drama Justice Mayer and the attorneys went to the projection room of the Triangle Film Corporation, where they witnessed "Aloha Oe."

A date late in May was set by Justice Mayer on which he would hear final arguments, but before that time Mr. Tully's attorneys asked leave to discontinue and permission was given them upon payment of costs. Mr. Tully's check has just been received and the order of discontinuance has finally been issued.

PROTECTING CHAPLINS AGAINST "DUPING."

Burglar insurance in sums that would make a press agent blush has been taken out by the Mutual Film Corporation for the protection of its Chaplin reels against theft by the "film pirates." The twelve releases in which Chaplin is to appear this year will cost the total sum of $1,530,000 including the comedian's salary of $670,000. A vast investment in film stock is required for the printing of the many copies of the Chaplin pictures issued for distribution in the United States and abroad. Every phase of the business involved which is insurable has been insured by the Mutual.

An elaborate tracing and accounting system installed for the handling of these reels makes it possible for the Mutual to tell at any hour of the day or night just where each of the several thousand reels of Chaplin pictures is to be found, whether it is in the film exchange, at a theater or in transit on an "express circuit" or a dog train circuit in Alaska.

OBSERVATIONS
BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

ONE of the most gratifying news items for the moving picture people is that received from Minneapolis on the progress of the canvass in that city to get the pulse of the people on the Federal censorship bill now pending at Washington, D. C. The entire staff of municipal officials in Minneapolis is strongly opposed to the Federal measure. In order that there should be no doubt as to where he stood in the matter the Mayor of the city headed the protest against the proposed law and the Chief of Police led his entire force in subscribing their names to the protest. Assurances are also given that the entire State of Minnesota is being canvassed and when the protest is forwarded to Washington it will show that the State is overwhelmingly opposed to Federal censorship of moving pictures.

The accomplishment of work of this character is of incalculable benefit to the moving picture industry. The reasons assigned by the Minneapolis officials for the stand they have taken are equally weighty. They declare that the moving picture theaters have been the means of greatly decreasing the number of arrests in that city, because in many quarters they have supplanted the saloons; and the police are opposed to any measure that may tend to interfere with the drawing powers of the pictures. This is real good press stuff for the moving picture people and no opportunity should be lost to make full use of it wherever and whenever the censorship pest shows his head. It is timely for use by the exhibitors of Washington, D. C., who repudiate the work of the Maryland censorship board and do not wish to have films that have been hacked by that board sent to them for exhibition. This has presented an unlooked-for problem to the exchange men, but the Washington exhibitors have made a suggestion which in all probability will help to adjust the situation. The plan suggested is to supply subjects first to Washington and other places before giving the Maryland mutilators a chance to use the "cutter." The Washington exhibitors declare that the people of Maryland will ultimately repeal the censorship law. They say that the people of Baltimore and other cities of that state will be aroused to that line of action when they learn the difference between films that go to the censor board and their condition when they are sent out with the "O. K." The Washington exhibitors also claim that the sentiment of the people of that city is decidedly against censorship and more antagonistic to any censorship exercised in Maryland. The latter feeling is based to some extent upon local pride, a conviction for home rule and confidence in ability to do their own censoring in their own way, and not be saddled with a series of mutilated and disconnected stories. All this is going to have some weight when the Federal censorship battle comes off.

Meanwhile let the people of Minnesota keep up their good work, and let all branches of the motion picture industry throughout the country give all the aid possible to the recently inaugurated movement in New York to have all interests brought into an organization of unity that will be able to counteract movements unnecessarily and unjustly antagonistic tothe welfarc of the industry. The prospects for attainment of this end are more encouraging than they have been at any other time in the history of the business. Manufacturers, exhibitors and exchange men are nearer to a realization of what such a co-operative movement can accomplish than they have at any other period. The withdrawal of the National Board of Trade has been an important factor in the work of paving for harmonious organization of all interests. The cardinal principles of the movement are apparently well understood and there appears now only the arrangement and outlining of details to be accomplished. Advices from the sub-committees are that this will require only time; that everything else looks bright.

Recent criticisms by two of the most prominant newspapers in this city make an argument that is squarely on all fours with the claims so frequently made by the motion picture interests. One of the newspapers condemned a private detective agency for violating individual rights by tapping telephone wires and intimated that all private detective agencies should be abolished. The other paper condemns such advocacy on the ground that all agencies should not be condemned for the action of one. That plea is in strict accordance with that of the motion picture people, who claim that because a very small percentage of producers have put undesirable subjects on the market the entire industry should be branded as an offender. Like private detective agencies, moving picture houses are licensed; the manufacturers and exchanges are indirectly licensed by a system of Internal Revenue, State and local taxation. All branches of the industry have privileges under and are regulated by well defined laws and, in spite of the refusal of censor agitators to concede it, there are in force today ample regulations to cover any violations. There is no manufacturer or exhibitor who cannot be reached through legal process if he produces or exhibits an improper picture; but, to show that they are willing to meet the agitators half way in safe-guarding the public against improper exhibitions, the motion picture people have repeatedly offered to have their business specifically incorporated in an amendment to the existing Federal criminal code, which makes the shipping or transporting of improper and prohibited pictures through inter-state avenues a felony.

A case in point to show that moving picture offenders can be reached by law whenever those offended wish to act is provided by the action of the District Attorney of Kings County. Through some source which has not been disclosed complaint was made to the District Attorney that the film "Where Are My Children," which was produced at a Brooklyn photoplay house for a week, was unfit for exhibition. A Magistrate issued summonses for the president of the film exchange that leased the film and the manager of the theater in which the film was exhibited. The case is still pending. The merits will not be discussed here except so far as to show the great loss to which producers and exhibitors might be put to by pre-censorship. "Where Are My Children" had a long run at the Globe theater in Manhattan. Nobody tried to stop it or enter prosecution. The same picture ran for three days in one of the Keith houses in Brooklyn during the same week it was at the other Brooklyn house. The Keith manager was before another Magistrate, who decided he could see nothing in the picture requiring suppression and he dismissed the complaint.

The moving picture people (that is, at least ninety per cent. of them) do not seek to violate or evade the law; what they do seek is an opportunity to meet their accusers in court, or any place else, where they will not be first penalized and tried after, which is the routine of official censorship. If there had been a Christman-Wheeler censorship law in effect in this state it is almost a certainty that the people who were responsible for the complaints made in Brooklyn would have succeeded in having the picture in question condemned with no redress for the maker, because the bill permitted no appeal to the courts from the decision of the censors and Board of Regents. It was one of the most iniquitous bills ever passed at Albany and only the moral courage of Governor Whitman saved the statutes from being disgraced by it; yet the self-appointed guardians of public morals fought for the bill for weeks and at the eleventh hour used every means to have the Governor affix his signature.

While the names of the real complainants against the "Where Are My Children" film are kept under cover, there is a strong suspicion that the charges came from the same staff of agitators who have been at the bottom of moving picture troubles in Brooklyn for years. It is significant that no attempt was made to interfere with the picture during its long run in Manhattan, but two cases were instituted as soon as it got to Brooklyn. In many moving picture circles there is a spirit of satisfaction that one of the Magistrates entertained the complaint, as it will give an opportunity to have a court ruling as to how far such complaints can carry, especially when the managements of the two houses took pains to see that none under sixteen years of age were sold tickets or admitted to the houses during the runs of the picture.

WILLIAM JEFFERSON INJURED.

William W. Jefferson, the Morosco player, found that the mountains were not as considerate with him as they were with his illustrious father in his famous portrayal of Rip Van Winkle. In a rough fight between the mountaineers in Oliver Morosco's new photoplay, "Nell of Thunder Mountain," Jefferson had a bad accident, severely wrenching his already injured knee. Director Lloyd had to jump into the breach, the players being in a rather inaccessible part of the mountains.

BRITISH NOTES

THE provincial exhibitors of "The Birth of a Nation," have this week opened in the south of England, at Plymouth.

The many recent increases in the cost of paper is finding another reflex in the motion picture industry. The majority of renting exchanges have informed exhibitors of an advance in the price of posters equal to an additional cent per sheet. The old rate was three-pence per sheet.

The recent spell of brilliant weather has furnished the house producing studios with a rare opportunity of working ahead upon the season's subjects. Brilliant mid-summer sunshine in early May is not an annual occurrence in England, even on the south coast. The London Film Co. in face of handicap through many of its best men being called to the colors, has materially progressed upon new picturizations from the higher reaches of the stage and literature. The Hepworth Co. are at work on a new Arnold Bennett picture, and its associated offspring, Turner Films, Ltd., will have two companies working during the summer, one directed by Larry Trimble and the other by Henry Edwards. The Clarendon, Samuelson, British Empire Films, and Ideal companies have each two or three new dramatic productions, in each case stage-play adaptations, practically ready for releasing, featuring amongst other stars several celebrities of the footlights. In addition to these there are twenty-four smaller producing organizations operating independently, in and around London, whose individual output may be anything between one and four subjects between now and October.

Apropos the above, there is considerable talk in the trade regarding a proposed combination of British film manufacturers for the particular, amongst the general purposes, of marketing their products in foreign countries and the colonies. Two of the above named firms are prominently identified with the movement which, I am reliably informed, has special designs on the United States.

Miss Ivy Close, a photoplayer with considerable experience in English studio work, sailed last week for New York to take up her engagement with the Kalem Co. Miss Close is the wife of Mr. Elwin Neame, a photographer, or I should say, a camera artist, with a studio in London.

A Wardow street renter has evolved a seemingly practicable scheme for the obviation of petty legislation over film damage between exhibitor and renter. It often occurs that when a new print is sent out and returned, through careless treatment, damaged, that the renter, through fear of losing a customer, withholds the claim for compensation which constitutes a clause in every hiring contract. And in cases taken to Court it is noticeable that the mass of "expert" evidence called on both sides tends only to confuse rather than enlighten the presiding judge. The reference of specified disputes to settlement by arbitration is a procedure that has saved thousands of pounds in litigation in other spheres of industry and Mr. Smith's solution is a simple variation of this principle. In every film-hiring contract could be embraced a clause mutually agreeing to the settlement of any claim for damage or detention in accordance with the decision of a committee of trade experts, that is to say recognized trade experts, who would consider each case so assigned, unaware of the identity of the contesting parties.

Next Wednesday the Fox Film Co., Ltd., will formally take possession of its London premises just off Wardour street, at 76 Old Compton street. It is a five-story brick built building not so large and imposing as some of its immediate neighbors 'round the corner, but with ample accommodation for the company's requirements.

A case of Chaplinitis in excelsis comes from the Tyneside district. I don't vouch for the facts which have been given extensive newspaper space, but here they are. An Italian was charged with wife-beating. His wife told the magistrates that her husband amused their little boy on Sundays by imitating Charlie Chaplin. In this he became so excited that he would knock his wife off the chair, chase her with the coal hammer, throw her about the room and beat her violently with his fists. On one occasion he stuck her up the chimney. The magistrates bound over the man to cease his impersonations. J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

PROTECTION FOR SCENARIO WRITERS.

There is relief in sight for scenario writers who think they have lost or are likely to lose their ideas at the hands of unscrupulous readers or scenario department heads if the plans of the Dramatic Authors Copyright Bureau, Inc., are successful. The bureau has offices in the Longacre Building, in this city, and proposes to print, sell and protect scenarios by a new method, which insures safety to the author at comparatively small expense. That the company feels sure of its ground it evidenced by the fact that they are prepared to defend any infringement of a copyright obtained for a client at no expense for counsel fees. The venture seems to fill a long-felt want and to obviate the necessity of writers being afraid that they will not reap the full benefit of their labors, as the plan, which has been approved by careful counsellors, will put a permanent check on those who have been in the habit of pilfering ideas for use after it is likely the authors have become tired of keeping track of them.

CUMBERLAND CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY.

The Cumberland theater of Brooklyn celebrated the second anniversary of its opening during the week of June 18-24. This house, which is situated at Cumberland street and Green avenue, is one of the finest community houses in the Borough of Churches. Francis A. Mangan, who opened the theater in 1914, but who for less than a year since that time was in charge of a New York house, is again the manager, having returned in January. Mr. Mangan picks his program. Judging from his entertainment for the opening of anniversary week he has a keen eye. For the first two days of the week he showed Famous Players "The Innocent Lie," Chaplin in "The Fireman," Beacon's "Monte Carlo" and "Offering of Pansies," in colors, and Pathe Weekly. The usual singer was for the week augmented by the addition of another. In the orchestra are eight musicians, which includes the organist, who presides at a two-manual Austen instrument. It is a matter for no surprise that the Cumberland is popular in its neighborhood, which in character is one of the best. The other features shown during the week were Pavlowa's "The Dumb Girl of Portici" and Farrar's "Maria Rosa."

The usual program of three changes weekly will be altered to four changes during the hot weather, for the mitigation of which eight swinging wall fans have been installed.

NATIONAL BOARD ISSUES IMPORTANT CATALOG.

The National Board of Review has just issued a catalog which it calls "A Garden of American Motion Pictures," The catalogue includes the finest pictures that have been released during the last fifteen months. The plan of the National Board is to get this catalog into the hands of exhibitors throughout the country in furtherance of the Better Films Movement as the most powerful antidote against censorship. The catalog was printed in a small quantity for the General Federation of Women's Clubs. The National Board cannot go to any great expense in this matter and suggests that all exhibitors who need the catalog send ten cents to the board to cover the cost of printing and postage. The catalogue is 9x6 in size and contains 34 pages.

MISS MICHELENA TO PLAY MARGUERITE.

With the final scenes of "The Woman Who Dared" completed, announcement is made by the California Motion Picture Corporation that it now has in preparation a pretentions adaptation from the opera "Faust" and that Beatriz Michelena is to play the role of Marguerite.

It has frequently been intimated that Miss Michelena contemplated this characterization for the screen, for it was known that when she came to pictures from the opera she brought with her a decided longing to see Faust adequately done in film. The idea has stayed with her and grown in its details until the forthcoming production is to be the result.

TRANSCONTINENTAL MOTORIST HERE SOON.

Leo Stanley Harding and Andrew C. Edison, who left Los Angeles May 12 in a side car to make a transcontinental motorcycle trip from Los Angeles to Portland, Me., for the purpose of spreading the propaganda of "Civilization," are expected to arrive in New York shortly. They were last heard from in St. Louis.

Vitagraph's V-L-S-E for June 26

Vitagraph's releases for next week through V-L-S-E will consist of "The Shop Girl," a five-part Blue Ribbon feature, in which Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno take the leading roles, and a one-part comedy of the "Kernel Nutt" series, in which Frank Daniels is seen as his usual funny self.

"The Shop Girl" tells the story of Winifred, a clothing model. It was picturized from the novel of the same name by C. N. and A. M. Williamson. The direction was by George D. Baker with a cast including Lillian Burns, Thomas R. Mills, Josephine Earle, Harold Foshay, Templer Saxe and Edward Dunn.

In "Kernel Nutt in Mexico," Frank Daniels as the famed "Kernel Nutt" takes up the congenial occupation of "banditting" in Mexico. Alice Washburn and Adele De Garde furnish many hearty laughs. Frank Koch, Jr., wrote the story, and C. Jay Williams directed the picture.

Capellani Busy on "The Common Law"

Prominent Artists Also at Work on Elaborate Posters and Advertising Matter.

THE Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation has begun the actual work of producing its first feature picture. Director General Albert Capellani, the producer of "Les Miserables," is now engaged in preparing the scenic plots for "The Common Law" and arranging the details of the production. When not at the studio he may be found at the general offices of the corporation in the Godfrey Building, receiving the applicants for studio positions and casting parts for the picture. For the benefit of players seeking an interview with him his office hours are from 3 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

The temporary New Jersey studio in which Miss Young will work pending the completion of her own plant on Long Island has been selected. Miss Young will remain at Poland Springs until July 15. Meanwhile M. Capellani and his assistant directors will have the production well under way. The second picture has been selected and the work of preparing the scenario has begun.

Half a dozen illustrators and portrait painters in New York, including Harrison Fisher, Malcolm Straus and James Montgomery Flagg, are at work on sketches in color from which the lithographs are to be made, and such leading exponents of modern decorative art as Flato and Fritz Winold Reiss are engaged in preparing advertising designs and posters.

The advertising campaign will include the use of 24-sheet stands throughout the country this summer and the expenditure of many thousands of dollars in magazines. Arrangements have been made with a publishing firm for a special Clara Kimball Young edition of "The Common Law" this summer, illustrated with "stills" from the picture and portrait studies of Miss Young. This edition will be sold at 50 cents on all newsstands and will be used by exhibitors in connection with their showings of the feature.

BROWN TO BUILD THEATER.

C. W. Brown will soon begin the erection of a motion picture theater in Frostproof, Fla. It will be constructed of fireproof material, and all the latest equipment will be installed.

Several Bluebirds to Make a Summer

List of Releases for July and August Already Completed—The Play's the Thing.

BLUEBIRD Photoplays seem to be well fortified for their campaign of national publicity in the interest of their trade mark and productions, as was indicated in our issue of last week. While it is all right to operate before the public in a general way without specializing on stars or personalities, the exhibitor must be kept informed on the details that make possible a full exploitation of his attraction. But the adoption of "the play" as its slogan seems to be a point well taken by Bluebird, if present announcement of future plans may be accepted as a criterion. The July and August releases have all been selected, but the actual release dates have not been as yet determined with definiteness, albeit the midsummer program looks promising from the exhibitors' point of view.

Violet Mersereau, in "Broken Fetters;" Ella Hall in "The Love Girl," and Louise Lovely in "The Grasp of Greed," have been previously referred to in detail as the early July releases, to be followed July 24 by J. Warren Kerrigan in "The Silent Battle," and Myrtle Gonzalez in "The Secret of the Swamp" July 31. These two last mentioned subjects promise exceptional entertainment, and have large opportunities for exploitation.

The temperance question enters largely into "The Silent Battle," as it is the fight of a brilliant young lawyer against a hereditary enemy that gives the piece its title. J. Warren Kerrigan with have Lois Wilson, the Alabama beauty, as his leading woman; Maud George will play her customary role as "the heavy lady;" and Harry Carter, Ray Hanford and F. J. Connolly will also be among the players.

"The Secret of the Swamp" will introduce Myrtle Gonzalez and Val Paul to followers of Bluebirds. Their supporting players will include Fred Church, George Hernandez, Lule Warrenton, Jack Curtis and Nannie Wright.

Later on the Bluebird series will bring to its patrons another new leading woman in Dorothy Phillips, who will star in Stuart Paton's five-reeler, "By Fate's Decree," directed by Joseph De Grasse; Herbert Rawlinson and Ella Hall, in "Little Eva Edgerton," based on a story by Eleanor H. Abbott, published recently in Everybody's, and directed by Robert Leonard; J. Warren Kerrigan, in "The Beckoning Trail," written by F. McGrew Willis and directed by Jack Conway; Mary MacLaren, the star of "Shoes," in another Lois Weber production, "Wanted, a Home;" and Rupert Julian and Francelia Billington, in "L'Abbe Constantin," adapted from Ludovic Halevy's story of the same title by E. J. Clauson.

Nordisk Seeks to Enjoin Beacon

Plaintiff Claims Some Scenes in "German Battles at Verdun" Were Taken from Its Dramatics.

The exhibition of the moving picture entitled "German Battles at Verdun" depicting the battle scenes during the long siege of the French fortress has precipitated a legal fight in the United States District Court over the rights to the photoplay.

The Nordisk Film Company is seeking to enjoin Beacon Films, Inc., from producing or distributing the subject on the ground that some of the battle scenes shown in the film are alleged to have been taken from "The Spy" and "Love and War," film productions released by the plaintiff company in 1915.

As a result of the alleged infringement of the rights of the plaintiff company, it is charged, motion picture exhibitors and managers of photoplay houses are refusing to book the photoplays produced by the company. The plaintiff claims to have suffered damages exceeding $10,000 and demands an accounting of the profits which it is alleged have accrued to the defendant from the production of the alleged infringing films.

Arthur Butler Graham, counsel for the plaintiff, obtained an order from the court directing the defendant company to show cause why a temporary injunction shall not be issued, pending the determination of the issues. If the injunction is granted it will not interfere with the exhibition of the films, however.

ELM TO OPEN AUGUST 1.

The Elm theater now being erected on Elm street, Portland, Me., will be completed about August 1. The house is fireproof and is one of the most beautiful east of Boston. It has an elaborate front, and will have one of the best ventilating systems. The seating capacity is about 1,000. The Elm will have a balcony.

Every Picture Has Its Star

General Film Draws on Over 200 Popular Players for Subjects of All Lengths and Kinds.

"YOU may sit on a cake of ice jingling sleigh bells, but you are not sleighing, neither are you getting everything due you out of your theater unless you are using this service," is a paragraph from General Film Service advertisement in the Moving Picture World calling attention to its policy of featuring stars in short subjects and quoting two score names of stars who are represented in one, two and three-reel pictures released through General Film Service.

There is considerable interest in a statement emanating from General Film Company's publicity department that in pictures released through General Film Service there are two hundred and four performers classed as stars by the manufacturers employing them. This great number, the General Film Company says, enables it to present one or more stars in every picture released during more than six weeks without duplication of stars. That, certainly is a strong claim and General Film Company is making the most of it.

Selig's "The Sacrifice," a three-reel drama, heads the program for the week. In this Eugenie Besserer and Harry Mestayer share titular honors. This picture will be followed by "The Foxy Trotters,' a Vitagraph one-part comedy, which precedes a chapter of the famous Selig-Tribune telling pictorially all the big news of the day. "The Unwelcome Guest," a Biograph reissue in one part, featuring Mary Pickford, Charles H. Mailes and Jack Pickford, follows. "No Place Like Jail," a one-part comedy from the Lubin studio, will close the day.

Essanay's "The Voice in the Wilderness," a reissue of a very successful drama in two parts, featuring Francis X. Bushman and Gerda Holmes, will be shown first on the screen Tuesday. "The Explorer," a Kalem comedy, will add spice to the program of that day, which is also bulwarked by Lubin's "Out of the Flotsam," a two-part drama in which L. C. Shumway and Dorothy Barrett are seen in the principle roles. This will be followed by Edison's "The Southerners" in three parts. This picture is spoken highly of and probably deserves all the good things said about it when it is considered that Mabel Trunnelle and Richard Tucker have the chief parts.

Wednesday's releases appear exceptionally strong, led by Kalem's comedy, "When Opportunity Knocks." Vernon Howe Bailey's Sketch Book of St. Louis will furnish additional entertainment. "A Fair Rebel," released by Biograph in three parts will follow, featuring Dorothy Gish and Charles West. Then will come Kalem's first five-reel feature released through General Film Service, under the new policy. This is entitled "The Lotus Woman." Alice Hollister has the stellar role assisted by Harry Mailarde and a company of exceptional merit.

"The Return of John Boston," a Lubin three-part drama, is first on Thursday's program. Golden Madden and George Routh have the important roles in this production. Selig-Tribune, portraying pictorially all the big news of the hour, and "Better Halves," a Vim comedy, will conclude the day's releases.

Friday will bring "The Head of the House," a strong three-part drama by Knickerbocker Star Features with Frank Mayo and Lillian West in the titular roles. This will be followed by "Setting the Fashion," one of Kalem's Sis Hopkins Series, afer which will be shown Vitagraph's "Losing Weight" and Vim's "For Value Received," comedies in one-reel each.

Two Essanay stars, Warda Howard and Ernest Maupain, will be greeted in the first picture shown Saturday, "The Regeneration of Margaret," a three-part drama. "Edison Bugg's Invention," a Lubin comedy in one part, and "Under the Barrel," from the same studio, will supply humor for the day. "Letitia," a Vitagraph drama in three parts, with an all star cast, will precede "The Engineer's Honor," an episode of the "Hazards of Helen Series," by Kalem. The program for the first day in July will be closed with Selig's "The Girl of Gold Gulch," featuring Tom Mix the cowboy star, and Victoria Forde.

RIALTO CEREMONY INTERESTS CROWD.

Military methods as applied to the operation of the Rialto theater are responsible for a ceremony that arouses the curiosity of thousands in Longacre Square nightly when "retreat" is sounded and the colors lowered. Three flags fly from the roof of the theater, the American flag at the peak, the Rialto ensign at the right, and the city ensign at the left. At "retreat" a bugler sounds three ruffles, the colors are lowered, and the Rialto flag run up to the peak. The ceremonial is in accordance with naval regulations.

Pathe's New Serial Starts July 17

Big Producing Company to Give Unusual Publicity to Fourteen-Chapter "The Grip of Evil."

IMMEDIATELY following upon Vice President and General Manager J. A. Berst's announcement of a five-million-dollar serial program for Pathe comes the statement that on the close of Pathe's great money-maker, "The Iron Claw," a powerful, new continued photoplay will be released on July 17. It is called "The Grip of Evil." The basic idea was conceived by Le Monte Waldron, a New York newspaper man. The picturization was made by Douglass Brunston, who was largely responsible for the "Neal of the Navy" scenario. The novelization has been intrusted to Louis Tracy, the author of "Wings of the Morning."

"The Grip of Evil" is neither a serial nor a series, in the accepted sense of the terms. It has been called "A master plot in fourteen chapters showing the real side of humanity." America's greatest men have expressed their opinions on the question which it asks every man and woman. Their thoughts will be presented on the screen for the benefit of the millions who will crowd the theaters to see the pictures in the course of which will be portrayed the ideas conceived by men whom they know personally or by both national and local reputation.

Pathe has spent in the advertising of serials in newspapers, billboards, etc., a total of very nearly a million and a half dollars, and the value of the publicity obtained in this connection is impossible to determine. Five hundred thousand dollars will be spent in advertising the serials now planned or in course of production, which will reach about sixty-five million persons.

The campaign on "The Grip of Evil" will be one of the most extensive of any yet instituted. Many of the most prominent papers in the country have agreed to run the stories. The advertisements to which the exhibitors can tie up have been prepared by experts with a view to directing and holding the interest not only of the present motion picture theatergoing public but of those who have not yet become film fans. This will mean that an exhibitor by extensive advertising according to the suggestions of the Pathe Company may bring not only all his old patrons to see that new picture but may see unfamiliar faces in his audiences.

"The Grip of Evil" has been produced by the Balboa Amusement Producing Company, with Jackie Saunders, heroine of a hundred photoplays, and Roland Bottomley, the famous young English actor, whose success on the screen has been so immediate. The story deals with John Burton, born a poor man, who later inherits millions. With his money comes unhappiness, and he sets out to solve the question: "Is humanity in the grip of evil?" His quest for the answer takes him into every walk of life, society, politics, the underworld and what lies between. He bares the sins of mankind as seen in the places of the rich and the hovels of the poor in such a manner as to give to the photoplay in which his experiences are picturized every element that leads to popularity and success.

EQUITABLES SELLING ON OPEN PLAN.

Since the discontinuance of active production, the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, releasing through the branches and exchanges of the World Film, has placed all the features of that concern on an open booking plan which, according to General Sales Manager Felix F. Feist of World-Equitable, has met with a response, not even anticipated by the most optimistic of the sales force.

The entire output of the Equitable is now, and has been for the past two months, available to exhibitors on the open booking plan. The productions included in this policy includes Clara Kimball Young and Wilton Lackaye in "Trilby," Helen Ware in "The Price," Katherine Osterman in "Divorced," Thomas A. Wise in "Blue Grass," Muriel Ostriche in "A Daughter of the Sea," and "A Circus Romance," William Courtenay in "Sealed Lips," Frank Sheridan and Arthur Ashley in "The Struggle," Bruce McRae and Gerda Holmes in "The Chain Invisible," and Katharine Kaelred in "Idols." In addition to these are twenty others which were made from August, 1915, until May of this year.

PATHE SCENIC INTERESTS COMMERCE CHAMBER.

Manager Quimby of the Pathe Seattle office gave a private showing of "The Ascent of Mount Rainier," a Pathe scenic, before the Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Club of Tacoma, recently, and these two bodies were so much interested in the picture that they are sending circular letters to all the Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Clubs throughout the United States, calling their attention to the scenic.

Mutuals for Week of June 26

Frances Nelson Is Featured in "The Decoy," a Five-Part Drama.

FRANCES NELSON, ranked among the foremost of the young dramatic stars now appearing before the picture going public, who, in recent months has starred in several notable productions, is presented by the Mutual Film Corporation as the chief player of "The Decoy," a five-act human interest drama, to be released as a Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe Edition. This production, a picturization of Herbert Hall Winslow's story, "The Country Girl," which will be released June 29, tops Mutual releases for the week of June 26th.

In Miss Nelson's support are Herbert W. Frazer, Frank Beamish, Lenora Harris and Tim Cronin.

Second of the Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, for release during the week of June 26, is "The Sign of the Spade." This marks the first of the Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, filmed under the direction of Murdock MacQuarrie since joining forces with the American Film Company, Inc. In this production, founded on a story by Kenneth B. Clarke, Helen Rosson, the attractive and appealing American Mutual star, is the featured player surrounded by a company of unusual excellence.

In the cast are Alan Forrest, Warren Ellsworth, Clarence Burton and George Gebhardt, the latter a character actor of wide repute and a recent addition to the American-Mutual studios.

Mutual's three-act offering for the week is "Tangled Skeins," an American Drama, featuring Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh, released June 29. This feature is screened under the direction of E. Mason Hopper. George Periolat is also in the cast.

Three two-reel subjects comprise Mutual's short length features for the same week. "The Fate of the Dolphin," a stirring story of the sea, filmed at the American-Mutual studios and starring Edward Coxen and Lizette Thorne, is released June 26. The Mustang-Mutual two-reeler released June 30 is "The Demon of Fear." It features Anna Little and Frank Borzage.

Considerable interest is centered in the Centaur-Mutual release, "The King o' Make Believe," a romantic comedy, because it offers Crane Wilbur in the first of the new two-act feature releases in which he is to star. It will be issued on July 1.

Comedy offerings for the week present a galaxy of noted funmakers in wide variety of laughable roles. Vogue offerings are "A Safe Loss," starring Rube Miller, and "Just for a Kid," with Ben Turpin and Rena Rodgers. These will be released June 27 and July 2.

"When Adam Had 'Em," featuring Carol Halloway and John Sheehan, June 28, and "A Gink from Kankakee," starring Orral Humphrey, July 2, are the offerings from the "Beauty" studios.

"Jerry's Big Haul," June 30, featuring George Ovey, is the Cub offering.

Various topics of interest are included in Mutual Weekly No. 78, which will be released June 28. In "See America First," for release the same day, the Gaumont-Mutual cameraman takes the spectator on a trip through Glacier National Park, pointing out the wondrous points of interest in this great national garden. "Reel Life," the Mutual Film Magazine in pictures, for release July 2, offers a wide variety of interesting subjects.

Renew Suits Over Vanoscope

Protracted Litigation Between William J. Robinson and Lewis C. Van Riper, Reaches Another Stage.

THE long, legal fight between William J. Robinson and Lewis C. Van Riper involving the rights in connection with the exploitation of the Vanoscope projecting machines has been renewed by the filing of a suit against John H. Hobbs, Harris Hammond, Clyde H. Slease, Mr. Van Riper, the Continental Motion Picture Company, the Vanoscope Company, Inc., Henry B. Singer, trustee of the bankrupt corporation, and the Vanoscope Company by the Inventions Corporation, of which Mr. Robinson is vice-president.

The complaint recites at length the history of the Vanoscope Company's affairs during the past few years and alleges the defendants named conspired to break the contracts which Robinson had with Van Riper and the Vanoscope Company to finance the exploitation of the Vanoscope machines, and defraud him of the earnings which would ultimately have accrued to him.

It is alleged that about the time Robinson obtained judgments against Van Riper and the company aggregating $290,000 the defendants caused an agreement to be filed in the Patent Office at Washington, which purported to show that the Continental Motion Picture Company owned the rights to the patents and granted a license to the Vanoscope Company to manufacture and distribute the machines.

As a matter of fact, it is charged the Vanoscope Company owned the capital stock of the Continental Company and the agreement was executed for the purpose of rendering any judgment which Robinson might obtain against the Vanoscope Company uncollectible.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week of June 18 at New York's Best Motion Picture Houses.

"The Clown" and "Diana" at the Strand.

The Strand theater for the week of June 18 presented a double bill, the main feature, "The Clown," being augmented by a two-reel subject, "Diana," which is a film treatment of the Greek myth of the Goddess Diana and Acteon. Victor Moore is the star of "The Clown," written for him by Marian Fairfax and produced by the Jesse L. Lasky Company. The action is rapid and the photography is especially noteworthy. Supporting Mr. Moore are Thomas Meighan, Florence Dagmar and Billy Jacobs.

"Diana the Huntress" has been dramatized for the screen by Francis Trevelyan Miller, Litt. D., L.L. D. The cast comprises Baroness von Dewitz, Paul Swan, Lionel Braham, Grace Osborne, Mary Navarra, Frederic Osborne, Percy Richards and William Schley. A Mutt and Jeff Cartoon and the Topical Review completed the picture program. Solos were given by Jan Rubini, Bruce Weyman and Kate Davis.

Frank Keenan at the Rialto.

"The Phantom," with Frank Keenan as the star, was the leading attraction at the Rialto. Mr. Keenan has the role of a notorious "gentleman thief," who specializes in big jewel robberies. Hoping to steal a famous necklace he gains entrance to an exclusive week-end party at a fashionable summer home. When the opportunity comes to steal the jewels a situation has developed that changes all his plans. The beauty of the daughter of the household disarms him and he is further influenced by the discovery that her brother is planning the same disgraceful exploit that led him to the place.

An interesting budget of news and topical pictures, animated cartoons, scenic and scientific films, a new Keystone comedy with Harry McCoy in the stellar role, and a musical program that included solos by Alfred De Manby, Robert Gottschalk and Miss Muriel Symonds were features of the entertainment.

"Destiny's Toy," at the Broadway.

The Broadway theater's latest Famous Players-Paramount production, "Destiny's Toy," written and directed by John B. O'Brien, for Louise Huff, the actress whose clever work in the Famous Players adaptation of "The Old Homestead" won her a host of admirers.

"Destiny's Toy" is a seaside story, the scenes being laid on Block Island. Nan Carter, the daughter of a wealthy American, is washed ashore, after losing her mother in a shipwreck. How Nan is raised by a kindly fisherman, becomes the dupe of gangsters, and finally finds herself back in her father's house is told in five interesting reels.

The remainder of the bill consisted of the Animated Weekly News, colored scenics and educational studies, cartoons and a two-part Keystone Comedy.

Eighty-first Street Theater Program.

At the Eighty-first Street Theater four new Triangle pictures were shown. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday William H. Thompson in "The Dividend," and a new Triangle Keystone comedy, were shown. Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday Lillian Gish in "An Innocent Magdalene," and the latest Sennett Keystone comedy, comprised the bill.

"CIVILIZATION" SOLD IN SIX STATES.

Thomas H. Ince has just disposed of the state rights to his production of "Civilization" in six states, to H. Rathner, manager of the Supreme Feature Film Company. The states selected by Mr. Rathner are Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, North and South Dakota and Montana. Mr. Rathner was in New York to attend the premiere of "Civilization" and immediately began negotiations. The price paid is not stated.

Vitagraph for June's Last Week

"Letitia," a Drama, Goes Out Through General Film as Well as Two Comedies.

HEADED by the three-part Broadway Star Feature "Letitia," Vitagraph's releases for the week of June 26 ought to please. "Letitia" is a drama and the program is well balanced by the aid of two single comedies, "Losing Weight" and "The Foxy Trotters."

Charles Kent, in "Letitia" enacts the role of Dent, an old business man who is suffering from failing health owing to the fact that he constantly broods over his misdeeds years before, when in a burst of anger he had deserted his wife and little child, Letitia. Belle Bruce is a convincing Letitia, and others in the cast are Hugh Wynne, Gordon Gray, Thomas R. Mills, Charles Wellesley and Frank Chapman. Harry Davenport directed the action from Gordon Arthur Smith's scenario.

George Kunkel, in "The Foxy Trotters," expresses his disapproval of the popular indoor sport, dancing. Other Vitagraphers appearing in this picture are Anne Schaefer, Carmen Phillips, Jack Mower, Archie Warren and Vera Rowe. Dave Smith directed the picture from the story by George F. Burkhardt.

In "Losing Weight," Hughey Mack, Vitagraph's heavy-weight comedian, finds his enormous girth a hindrance to him in business. Jewell Hunt and John Flatow are assistant laughmakers in this comedy, which was written by Lawrence Semon and C. Graham Baker, and directed by the former.

FARRAR DISCUSSES SCREEN SCORES.

Geraldine Farrar, Lasky-Paramount star, discussing musical scores for the screen in Paramount Progress, points out the fact that film accompaniments offer a distinct field for the student of music.

"Anything which deepens the appreciation and increases absorption in the screen picture enhances its value," declares Miss Farrar. "Music selected from this point of view has proved a valuable adjunct to the photoplay. In 'Carmen' the accompanying music, identified as it is in the minds of not only opera goers but the general public, eliminates any sense of incompleteness due to the absence of the spoken word. Much of the interpretative music of 'Ramona,' to cite another example, sustains and I believe actually stimulates the mood of the scene.

"Here is a distinct field for the student of music—to search out and make available the musical settings which will add to the total value of motion pictures. In proportion as the music harmonizes with the theme of the scenario, the period, and the essential quality of the story, so will the art value of the whole be augmented."

UNITY TO RELEASE NAT GOODWIN PICTURE.

New releases of the Unity Sales Corporation include the Strand theater "Diana," a beautifully colored feature, portraying the life and romance of the immortal huntress. Many of these scenes were taken in Greece on the slopes of Mount Olympus.

Andrew J. Cobe states that he has secured the Nat Goodwin picture entitled "The Marriage Bond." The story is based upon the celebrated novel and stage success, and in it Mr. Goodwin is seen in the part of a wronged husband. While "The Marriage Bond" is an intensely dramatic picture full of suspect and thrills, yet Mr. Goodwin has an opportunity to display his wonderfully marked humorous gifts. He is supported by a powerful cast of well known screen favorites. A feature of the production is the beauty of the many massive and impressive sets which are used.

TO EXPLOIT "FALL OF NATION."

The National Drama Corporation, following the successful production of "The Fall of a Nation" at the Liberty theater, has begun preparations for a country-wide exploitation of Thomas Dixon and Victor Herbert's patriotic musical spectacle. Within three months, according to present plans, the largest cities in the country will have the attraction and several touring companies with complete orchestras will be sent out.

The first production outside of New York is scheduled for Monday, June 19, in Clune's Auditorium, Los Angeles. Mr. Dixon is now in California, where he went to supervise the opening on the coast. On his way east he stopped in Chicago, where the Illinois theater will house "The Fall of a Nation" from July 3 indefinitely. Four companies are projected for the territory south of Mason and Dixon's line.

Selig Athletic Serial Opens June 26

Will Cover All Lines of Sport and Will Run Twelve Weeks.

THE first release of the Selig Athletic Film Series, presenting the most famous stars in every line of legitimate sports, for which sport-lovers the country over have been anxiously waiting since the announcement by Selig of this innovation, will be released June 26, through the V-L-S-E.

The series, which consists of twelve one-reel subjects, one to be released each week, will include every line of athletics from boxing to skiing. It is being produced under the personal direction of J. H. Herman, a well-known figure in the athletic world.

To date nearly every athlete known to sport followers throughout the country has signed a contract calling for his appearance in one of this series. These include champions and runners-up in boxing, wrestling, field events, billiards, pool, roller and ice skating, ski jumping, swimming, bowling, tennis, golf, rowing, canoeing, hockey, basketball, polo, automobile, curling, fencing and a host of others.

During the production of the series any event that may come up will be included in the series, provided, of course, it is of sufficient importance to warrant it. It is also arranged that if the Olympian Games are held this year, the Selig Company will have the exclusive rights to film them.

In line with the efforts of its promoters to make the series a popular one, leaders in the various lines of sport will write articles telling of their ideas of physical development and giving instructions on how to become perfect men and women. These articles will be copyrighted and will carry illustrations of the writers. They will be prepared for each release and will be sent to sporting editors throughout the country, more than 500 of whom have already agreed to run them.

To offset the complaint that filmed sport events heretofore have been lacking in good lighting qualities, the Selig Company has constructed a monster lighting plant which can be shipped and installed in any park, hall or arena. It gives perfect film results, whether the athletic contest takes place day or night, rain or shine. In order to insure this result, it is interesting to state that this lighting plant, when placed over a ring, produces more than 1,700,000 candlepower.

CAMERAMAN GAUDIO JOINS MUTUAL.

Antonio Gaudio, formerly cameraman in chief for the Universal, has joined the Metro-Yorke forces. He is a master of motion picture photography, as is evidenced by the beautiful photography in the many big features he has photographed. Mr. Gaudio will travel to California with Haroid Lockwood and May Allison, where Metro-Yorke features, following "The River of Romance," which Mr. Lockwood and Miss Allison are now producing at Thousand Islands, will in future be produced.

Mr. Gaudio has become a member of the Metro-Yorke staff at the request of Director Henry Otto, who is directing the two popular stars. Mr. Otto and Mr. Gaudio have worked together on many big features and it was his knowledge of the photographer's unusual ability that made Mr. Otto so anxious to secure the camera man's services.

"THE CRISIS" PLAYER A LINCOLN STUDENT.

Sam D. Drane's characterization of Abraham Lincoln, in the forthcoming Selig specatcular production, "The Crisis," is pronounced by those who have viewed private showings of the Abraham Lincoln scenes to be wonderful in every respect. Drane has spent the best years of his life studying Lincoln lore. He has visited all the localities that in any manner figured in the life history of Lincoln, has talked with Lincoln's son and has studied all the books in which the great emancipator is mentioned. He greatly resembles Lincoln and his make-up is the result of many years of careful study. It is believed that Drane will prove to be one of the greatest Lincolns that ever appeared on the motion picture screen. Drane never before appeared in his world-famous Lincoln characterization in motion pictures before "The Crisis" was filmed.

LYRIC THEATER CHANGES OWNERSHIP.

The Lyric theater, Austin, Minn., has been purchased by F. F. Latta. Mr. Latta is now the owner of two other picture houses in Austin, the Cozy and the Princess. S. G. Latta will manage the Lyric. Evening prices will be 15 cents for adults and 10 cents for children. Matinees will be given daily with admission at 10 cents.

Chicago News Letter

By JAS. S. McQUADE.

Ho! For the Chicago Exposition and Convention.

THE time is drawing pretty close now when the Sixth National Convention and Exposition will be added to the past events in the history of the film business. How necessary—how immensely important—it is that this annual meeting of exhibitors throughout the country should surpass all former gatherings of the kind both in the number of exhibitors in attendance and in the value of the measures passed, for the good of the exhibition business particularly and for the advancement of the trade generally.

The lukewarmness of many exhibitors in the past towards these big annual meetings has been deplored by all true friends of the film business. It is absolutely urgent that exhibitors should unite and present a solid front to the well organized forces that have been ranged against the rights of the moving picture. From every part of our country there should be a worthy representation at the Chicago Convention and Exposition in July. It is your bounden duty, exhibitors; it is for the protection of your very livelihood that you should come en masse to Chicago and consult with your fellows for the greatest good of your business in the future.

Don't cheat yourself by offering the excuse that you can't spare the time. If you were dead, your house would go on just the same and, perhaps, better. And so with all of us.

By exchanging views with your brother exhibitors at the convention you will doubtless be able to give them some good points about exhibition, and also get from them some that will be of good service to you.

Perhaps in your town you may not as yet have met with any hurtful opposition to your business. At the convention you will learn how to meet such opposition in the best way.

The question of censorship will be one of the prime subjects discussed. Come and learn all that has been done to combat it, and how best to protect your business against it in the future.

It will afford both education and inspiration to take part in this convention and exposition. You will feel prouder of your calling when you see with your own eyes the great crowds at the Coliseum and so many of your fellow workers at the convention.

It doesn't matter whether you are a member of the League or not, so far as your coming is concerned. Come and join the big throng, and join the League if you want to.

In these enlightened days when organization and preparedness are so absolutely essential, I, were I an exhibitor, should be ashamed to acknowledge that I was not a member of an organization of exhibitors.

You will have all the entertainment that you can possibly take advantage of while in Chicago. The Chicago Local of the M. P. E. L. of America has already seen to that. But all play and no work is a poor program for an exhibitors' convention, and at school we learned, long ago, that such a program was impossible.

Come along, exhibitors! You will profit much by a little work and enjoy yourselves thoroughly with the play that has been provided for your special benefit.

Opening of "Ramona" at the Auditorium.

W. H. Clune's twelve-reel feature, "Ramona," will open at the Auditorium, this city, on Monday, June 19. Extensive preparations are being made for the opening presentation.

Three massive stage sets, which will serve as transformation scenes, are being rapidly installed at the time of writing. The first of these is an exact replica of the Santa Barbara mission, in California, and built on the same scale; the second is a reproduction of the home of Helen Hunt Jackson's heroine in the story, and the third gives a view of a pass in the San Jacinto mountains, the three scenes representing the three periods represented in Mrs. Jackson's famous love story.

The interpretative music, it is given out, is of a most elaborate character, the entire score requiring almost as much time, art and skill as it would take to compose an ordinary opera. It is understood that the prices will be arranged on a popular scale, as the great seating capacity of the Auditorium will enable the management to do this.

The Clune-"Ramona" syndicate, which is responsible for the filming of Helen Hunt Jackson's historical and romantic novel, can boast of a working force that includes several bright and well known men in the theatrical and minstrel business.

John J. Holland, general manager of the syndicate, is the widely known minstrel manager of that name. His assistants include Fred McClellan, formerly manager of New York's Luna Park, who will manage the Chicago engagement of "Ramona" at the Auditorium; Fred Le Comte, assistant general manager, with headquarters in Chicago, is of the firm of Le Comte & Flesher; H. F. Matthews, New York representative, was recently with the Shuberts; Harry Dull, manager of the Pittsburgh (Pa.) show, will be remembered as a prominent one-night stand manager and producer, who featured the Four Huntings for several seasons; Walter S. Duggan, manager of the "Ramona" show now in Providence, R. I., was at one time business manager of one of Cohan & Harris' attractions; James S. Hutton, one of the press agents of the Chicago show, is a veteran showman, and Burt Jacobi, advertising agent for the Chicago show, is a well known advance agent.

Ladies' Night Banquet at the Reel Fellows Club.

About 75 members of the Reel Fellows Club, with their wives and friends, attended the house-warming and ladies' night in the club's new quarters in the Morrison Hotel, on Thursday evening, June 15. Shortly following the dinner, which lasted until about 9 o'clock, the guests were entertained by a cabaret performance given by the courtesy of the Morrison Hotel. After that the tables were cleared from the floor and an informal dance was held in the banquet room.

During the dinner speeches referring to the growth of the Reel Fellows Club and the good work accomplished by it were made by Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company; E. K. Hollander, photoplay editor of the Chicago News; H. C. Miller, manager of the Boston theater; Alfred Hamburger, owner of the Hamburger Enterprises, and C. H. Woods, of the Chicago Post.

William J. Sweeney, always to the front for the success of the coming exposition and convention, stirred up the members on behalf of that big enterprise.

R. R. Nehls, president, and M. G. Watkins, secretary of the club, spoke on the membership campaign now being conducted and made a spirited appeal to everyone engaged in the film business to join their ranks. Twenty-six applications for membership were announced and accepted by the committee on membership.

Among the prominent delegations present were fourteen representatives of the World Film Corporation, headed by E. C. Jensen; eighteen from the Emerald Motion Picture Company, including Dolores Cassinelli, Tom Keesey, Charles Huntington, Rhea Laughlin and others, and thirteen members of the Press Writers' Club.

Arrangements were made for an automobile party and chicken dinner for members of the club to Cedar Lake, Ind., on Saturday, June 24, leaving Chicago at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. Ladies are invited.

Chicago Film Brevities.

William Jacobs, owner and manager of the Lexington theater, Milwaukee, paid this office a pleasant call one day last week. The Lexington is a modern house and seats 700 people. The programs are selected from the Triangle, Metro and Mutual service. Five reels are shown on Monday, Thursday and Friday of each week for five cents, seven reels being shown for the remaining days, for which ten cents admission is charged. Mr. Jacobs reported that business was fair. He is an old subscriber of the Moving Picture World, and expressed the opinion that it is the most reliable publication in the business.

W. E. Green has been appointed manager of the Kleine Optical Company in the place of Frank L. Hough, who has resigned. Mr. Green held the position of assistant to John Peltzer, manager of the sales department of Edison, for four years. He and Frank L. Hough worked together for a time in the New York offices of that company. For two years afterward he was purchasing agent of the Mutual Film Corporation in the general offices of that company, in New York City.

R. O. Proctor, formerly branch manager of the General Film Company's office at Kansas City, Mo., has been appointed branch manager of Metro's Chicago office. The appointment was made by District Manager Skirboll.

The General Feature Film Company, with headquarters in the Mallers Building, this city, through its president, William Hersberg, has purchased the output of the Cosmofotofilm juvenile comedies for the states of Illinois and Wisconsin. Simeon Griever, the Chicago manager of the company, states that there is a big demand just now from exhibitors for these comedies, owing to the growing popularity of children's matinees. The General Feature Film Company also controls all of the Ivan film releases for Illinois and Indiana.

N. W. Fulton, traveling salesman for the Reliable Feature Film Company, 64 West Randolph street, this city, made a call at the Chicago office of the World last week. Mr. Fulton reported good business while on the road. He was formerly connected with Eugene Cline, of this city.

The Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company had three camera crews, with special artficial lighting equipments, at the Congress Hotel during Republican convention week. The same number of camera outfits and operators were in St. Louis doing special work during Democratic convention week, and Cameraman Kelley was in Toledo securing special pictures of the convention held there by the Knights and Ladies of Security. H. S. Moss, of the producing department of the company, is now directing a special industrial film in Chicago.

Thomas H. Ince's eleven-reel feature, "Civilization," now showing in New York, will open at Cohan's Grand Opera House, this city, on Sunday, June 25. W. F. Rochester, stage director of the big spectacle, arrived in Chicago Thursday, June 15, to make preparations for the exhibition. As a number of voices are required during the prologue and epilogue to secure the desired effect, Mr. Rochester is now rehearsing the vocalists and also the accompanying interpretative music for the picture.

The Enterprise Optical Company is now comfortably settled in its enlarged quarters at 554 West Randolph street. About 10,000 square feet of floor space has been added to that formerly occupied by them. The general offices of the company are now situated on the third floor, the fourth floor being entirely taken up by the factory and machine shop. John McAuley, the company's traveling representative, recently returned from Minneapolis, where he made a sale of eight 1916 model machines to the Elliott & Sherman Enterprises, which concern is now booking Clune's feature subject, "Ramona," in a number of the northwestern states.

The children's betterment film, "Uncle Sam's Babies," will entertain Chicago moving picture lovers at the Strand during "baby week," June 19 to 26. The film is being shown under the auspices of the Woman's City Club of Chicago. The picture takes the spectator throughout the entire country, showing thousands of children in nearly every phase of child welfare work, as conducted in different cities and in connection with various activities. Chicago's effort along children's welfare lines are well represented by views of the Northwestern Settlement, Hull House, the Home for Destitute Crippled Children, the Mary Crane Nursery, Open Air Schools, and the Chicago Tuberculosis Sanitarium. After the run at the Strand, "Uncle Sam's Babies" will be shown in various theaters throughout the city. The private presentation of the picture given at the Strand on Monday afternoon, June 12, drew a full house.

It has been announced that "The Fall of a Nation," Thomas Dixon's spectacular plea for preparedness, will open at the Illinois theater, this city, on Monday, July 3. A review of this picture appears on page 2256 of this paper in the issue of June 24.

Ricorda Gradwell, vice-president and general manager of the Oliver Typewriter Company, has been engaged by the World Film Corporation, to take charge of its "commercial management." Mr. Gradwell left Chicago for New York on Tuesday, June 13.

Thomas Saxe, of the Saxe Enterprises, has made his big Alhambra theater in Milwaukee extremely popular by his unique plan of looking after children who may be brought to the theater by their mothers. Adjoining the theater is a playground provided with nearly every equipment and plaything that children like. Nurses are in charge, and the mother who leaves her child in the playground is given a check bearing a certain number. In case the nurse is unable to make the child happy, the number on the check is flashed on a small curtain near the screen. The mother seeing the number knows that the child needs her, and she goes quietly out without interfering with the pleasure of others.

George Bowles, when last heard from, was in Manila, where "The Birth of a Nation" was being shown, having opened Griffith's great picture successfully in Melbourne, Sydney and Adelaide, Australia. Hongkong and Tokio will be the next cities invaded by the globe-trotting press agent and manager.

The suit for $250,000 damages against the Universal Film Manufacturing Company brought by Daniel J. Wall and H. B. LeClaire, was transferred from the Circuit Court of Cook County to the United States District Court on Thursday, June 15. The complainants declare that they are the originators and owners of the "Slaves of Satan," which they accuse the defendants of having pirated and produced under the title of "Graft." It is expected that the court may have to view the picture in order to decide the case.

Director Colin Campbell, of the Selig Company, went to Charleston, S. C., about a week ago to take some special scenes for "The Crisis," including Fort Sumpter and Fort Moultrie. From Charleston he proceeded to New York on a business mission, after which he went to see one of his sons who is a student at Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me. After completing the final assembling of "The Crisis" film, Mr. Campbell will engage in the production of a five-reel feature drama written by Gilson Willets, the title of which has not yet been decided upon. The work will be done at the Chicago studios.

William N. Selig, who has devoted much of his time to supervising the production of "The Crisis," believes that the length will probably be twelve reels. It is one of the most expensive dramas ever filmed and every detail has been attended to with scrupulous, artistic care. Grosset & Dunlap, book publishers, are preparing a special photoplay edition of "The Crisis," believing that the film will prove very popular.

Director Marshall Neilan and the members of the company engaged in taking special scenes in New York City and Connecticut for "The Prince Chap," have returned to Chicago, where the production is now being continued at the Selig studios.

The following programs have been announced at the prominent downtown theaters in Chicago for the week beginning Sunday or Monday, June 18 and 19:

Studebaker—"Gloria's Romance"—seventh chapter, "The Harvest of Sin" (George Kleine) and Frances Nelson and Arthur Ashley in "What Happened at 22" (World).

Fine Arts—Manager Hamburger has retained Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle's pictorial rendition of dance and drama, "The Whirl of Life," for another week, the third of its run.

V-L-S-E theater (formerly the Ziegfeld)—"Sherlock Holmes" (Essanay), with William Gillette in his famous role. This picture is in seven reels, a review of which appeared in the issue of May 27 of this paper.

Strand—W. S. Hart in "The Apostle of Vengeance" (Ince); "Uncle Sam's Babies," under the auspices of the Woman's City Club of Chicago, and Mutt and Jeff cartoons.

Orchestra Hall—Louise Huff in "Destiny's Toy" (Famous Players); "Bird's-eye View of the World's Great Cities," and Paramount-Gray animated cartoons. Letitia Gallaher and Walter Unger will be the soloists.

La Salle—Seventh week of "The Little Girl Next Door" (Illinois vice film).

On Saturday, June 17, Alfred Hamburger changed the name of the Ziegfeld theater to the V-L-S-E theater, the change signifying that in the future this house will be the home of V-L-S-E photoplays. Mr. Hamburger will remain the director of the theater. The arrangement was made between Alfred Hamburger, owner of the Ziegfeld and a string of other Chicago theaters, and Sidney E. Abel, manager of the Chicago office of V-L-S-E, Inc.

NEW GRAND AT ANAHEIM OPENS.

Beautiful Theater, Costing $35,000 and Seating 700 Persons, Shows "Ramona" at Initial Performances.

AT Anaheim the New Grand theater, at East Center and Philadelphia streets, has opened and will give as its first production "Ramona," produced by the Clune company. The New Grand is one of the most beautiful theaters in Southern California. The building was erected by Mrs. Sadie Froham at a cost of $35,000. Although it contains two storerooms on the ground floor and sixteen office rooms in the second story, these are secondary to the theater and nothing in its construction was sacrificed to them. The room is 62 by 140 feet in dimensions, has a cement sloping floor and will seat 700 persons. The chairs are in circular rows, and are twenty inches wide.

The house is under the mangement of Edward Mozart. Mr. Mozart has been in the theater business for more than forty years. He declares the New Grand is going to acquire a reputation for giving nothing but the best films that can be procured for money, and expects to maintain it. He is starting with one of the best presentations in filmdom and one that especially appeals to this region.

TWO STARS UNITED.

Seena Owen of Triangle and George Walsh, the Fox Player, Married Six Months Ago—Romance Just Leaked Out.

Miss Seena Owen, a bright particular star of Triangle, has been married to George Walsh, leading man for the Fox company. The wedding took place last February at San Diego, but the news leaked out only this week. The marriage is the outcome of a romance which began a year ago, when George Walsh was a member of the Griffith company.

Miss Owen has a leading role in the big forthcoming Griffith feature, "The Mother and the Law," and will continue as a Triangle star. The couple are living with the bride's parents, but are about to start housekeeping for themselves in a Hollywood bungalow. George Walsh is a brother of R. A. Walsh, the Fox director, and is playing prominent parts with that company and assisting his brother.

Jail Term for "Solicitor."

Jack Ward, a young man who it is said recently operated in Santa Barbara, in the pretense of representing the Curtis Publishing company of Philadelphia and "stung" Harvey Clark and other employes of the American Film company by engaging to give them "write-ups" in the publication named that would for a modest charge make them famous in their profession, is now in the county jail, thinking it over. He will continue in this sort of reflection for the next four months.

Shortly after parting with $10 Clark became suspicious of the glib Ward—after the latter had left town—and he sent a wire to the Curtis company inquiring if Ward were authorized to collect money for the magazine, and telling of his transactions in this field. The reply was that Ward did not represent the company, and requested that he be arrested and prosecuted for obtaining money on false pretenses.

Clark knew that Ward had gone to Los Angeles and that he was "working" the screen people there as he had in Santa Barbara, and he swore to a complaint against him in the local police court. Ward was arrested in Los Angeles and taken back to Santa Barbara. He made things easy all around by pleading guilty.

To Produce Pictures for Colored Persons.

The Lincoln Motion Picture Company is the latest addition to our Los Angeles film producing enterprises. It's a film company of which the owners, operators and actors are colored persons. It is the purpose of this film concern to produce pictures for negro theaters or theaters catering to colored persons. Noble M. Johnson is the president, Dr. James T. Smith, treasurer, and Clarence A. Brooks, secretary. Mr. Johnson is the leading man. One picture, entitled "Realization of a Negro's Ambition," has already been released.

Bosworth to Support Farrar.

Geraldine Farrar, lately arrived on the coast with her husband Lou-Tellegen, will have the support of Hobart Bosworth, the distinguished star and director. He has been especially engaged by Cecil B. De Mille to play one of the principal roles with the popular singer-screener.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

D. W. Griffith expects shortly to leave for New York to arrange preliminaries for the production of his new feature, "The Mother and the Law."

J. Farreall MacDonald, former director for the American Woman Film Corporation, has resigned that position, and has been engaged as director for the Mabel Normand company. Mr. MacDonald, who was injured in an automobile wreck at Chatsworth Park a few weeks ago, has recovered.

Up at the Flying A studio they are making ready for the July Fourth Rodeo, and it is reported that sixteen outlaw horses have just been purchased up the country and will be brought to Santa Barbara and ridden for the first time. After that the horses will be broken. All are fine animals.

During the present week the Lasky company has made numerous changes in the department heads. Captain Ford, who has been at the head of the engaging department, has been transferred to act as assistant director to Cecil B. De Mille. At present Captain Ford is confined to the hospital where he has undergone a slight operation, but he is expected to be able to return to the studio shortly. As the new head of the engaging department, Milton Hoffman, studio manager, has selected Fannie Ferris, for a long time the engaging head for William H. Gregory of New York.

Ollie Kirkby is still on the list of injured and it will be some weeks before she will be able to get around without crutches.

Mary Miles Minter and Wallace MacDonald, with supporting company, directed by William C. Dowlan, were in this city this week, filming scenes for the big feature "Youth's Endearing Charms" being put on by the American.

Up in Santa Barbara the front of a furniture store will be used as the entrance to Maxim's Paris, in scenes to be taken for the two-reel comedy, "That Sharp Note," written by Al Santell and directed by Archer MacMackin. The proprietor will appear in the picture.

This week Los Angeles actors, film players, and all those in the theatrical lines took part in the great parade for Preparedness. Mack Sennett was the master of the section which marched hundreds strong. All of the various clubs and organizations that appeared in the parade visited at different nights during the following week the Empress theater, where they saw the Vitagraph company's "Battle Cry of Peace."

Miss Helen Gibson, leading woman for "The Hazards of Helen" company, received a letter from officials of the New York committee for the "round-up" to be held in August at Sheephead's Bay, New York, asking her to represent the western women riders and to participate in the events. Miss Gibson during the making of a picture for "The Hazards of Helen" in the past week climbed hand over hand on a rope hung from two poles and dropped to the cab of a moving engine. It would seem after this stunt that New York races would have no terrors for her.

J. V. Bryson, formerly of Minneapolis, who for the past few months has been manager of the local exchange of the Golden Gate company, has gone to the Minnesota town on business. While away, D. Bershon, assistant manager, has had charge of the place where Universal films are distributed.

S. N. Robinson, who has been Exchange Manager for William Fox, has been transferred back to his old stamping ground, Minneapolis, and Field Carmichael, who was manager in Denver, replaces Mr. Robinson.

Metro is in Calexico, where new Majestic theater has opened with "A Corner in Cotton," a feature which was made partly in that city. Miss M. W. Stralee, the manager, requested this picture especially for the opening.

B. A. Loper, Pathe manager, has been confined to his bed for several days suffering from an attack of grip.

kiddies of the Fine Arts. At the opening of the studio school term Douglas Fairbanks, who is now in New York, promised to make the children special presents at the close of the term. In the picture he is seen distributing one hundred dollars to the student-actors as a personal gift. Each one of the children plays in Mr. Griffith's films. Mr. Fairbanks is a great lover of children, as you can see by the smile on his California sunburned countenance.

Walter Kerl, superintendent of manufacturing of the Universal Film company, has claimed Miss Agnes L. Reyes as his bride. Miss Reyes is a descendant of a family which settled in California when it was Mexican territory. After the wedding the couple will take a two weeks trip to the northern part of the state.

A number of Ince's stars including Louise Glaum, Howard Hickman, Jerome Storm and a large company of supporting players, under the direction of Charles Giblyn, left this week for San Diego where they will engage in the filming of seventy-five scenes. The title of this story is "Somewhere in France" and is an adaptation, by J. G. Hawks of the late Richard Harding Davis' story of the same name. Principal among the scenes to be staged at San Diego will be those depicting the army aero corps in action, and at rest, for aviation plays a big part in the narrative. Arrangements have been made for the use of the United States government birdmen, both instructors and pupils, and Director Giblyn consequently is expecting to obtain some remarkable "shots," both on and above the ground.

At Coronado, near San Diego, plans for the new building for the Bank of Coronado have been approved by J. D. Spreckels, the millionaire. The building will contain, in addition to the bank, fourteen store rooms; also twelve office suites. A motion picture theater is to be fitted up in the building and has been leased by a Los Angeles company, and another portion, of the building will be occupied by a garage. Work has started.

J. V. Spaugh of Ontario, an exhibitor of wide experience, and formerly of Eureka, has just purchased the Euclid theater from Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Milling. The house was closed while a number of important improvements were being made. Mr. Spaugh also installed two new Power 6-B machines, put in a new screen and a number of other improvements.

Believing that the Panama-California International Exposition at San Diego merits all the publicity possible the Essanay has just released practically the entire reel of motion pictures devoted to the exploitation of this fair.

Manager Jacobs of the Neptune theater in Venice has taken over the Auditorium, a home built over the sea. He has just inaugurated a plan whereby patrons of one house can see the show at the other for the price of one admission. Coupons will be issued. One can attend the first show at the Neptune, for example, and then go to the Auditorium and pay five cents more and see the show there.

Raymond Wells, who put on "Julius Caesar," has been engaged by the Universal to assume the direction of little Lena Baskette, the child actress-dancer, in a series of Egyptian pictures, the most of which will be filmed in the desert country. Wells has jumped into prominence through his direction of the elaborate Julius Caesar spectacle at Hollywood.

Stricken with pleurisy, William Farnum, well-known film player and old time legitimate star, now with William Fox, was reported in a serious condition at his home in Hollywood. Mr. Farnum became ill suddenly while at a party at the home of Director Oscar Apfel and was unable to speak. He was rushed to his home immediately. Later news says Mr. Farnum will be able to take up his work within two weeks, according to his physician. The attack was caused by an injury received when playing in "Ben Hur" at Boston ten years ago.

William S. Hart soon will be seen in the long-awaited "Aztec story," in which he has been working at Inceville, when he is presented by Thomas H. Ince in "The Captive God." This Triangle-Kay Bee play is by Monte M. Katterjohn and offers Hart in a role that is totally unlike anything he ever has attempted since his desertion of the footlights for the film studio. The part is that of a stalwart Castilian who, shipwrecked in the early part of the sixteenth century, is adopted by the people of Tehuan and made their leader because of his superior wisdom. Hart is declared to have rendered another fascinating performance. He appears, it is true, sans chaps and sombrero and six-shooters, but his magnetism is expected to prove as powerful as ever. The cast that appears in support includes Enid Markey, P. D. Tabler, Dorothy Dalton, Robert McKim, Dorcas Matthews, Herbert Farjean and Robert Kortman, in addition to the large supporting cast.

Ethel Teare, of Kalem comedy fame, is exhibiting a big and healthy coat of sunburn for this week.

Harry Millarde and company returned from Catalina Island, where they have been producing a one-reel comedy featuring Miss Teare. Victor Rottman plays opposite, with Gus Leonard and Miss Myrta Sterling in the cast.

Lloyd V. Hamilton has not only completed a one-reel comedy which tells of Ham's busy day in flirtations, but is rehearsing a short act for the Knights Templar entertainment for June 21, when he, Bud Duncan and Gus Leonard will put on one of Hamilton's acts to entertain the visitors.

The Princess theater, in Santa Ana, has been sold by Charles E. Walker and Mrs. Edith P. Walker to T. P. Kingrey and E. J. Cooper. Mr. Cooper has announced that it is his intention to amplify the program at the theater.

Lewis J. Cody, erstwhile legit star, but now leading man for Mabel Normand, says he is glad to be back in the old harness of grease paint and props. The Normand players, under the direction of J. Farrell MacDonald, are contemplating an up-country trip to secure scenes for the first six-reel feature. They probably will go to Tia Juana to get some racing scenes.

Director William Worthington with his star, Ruth Stonehouse, is working on "The Spring Song." Miss Stonehouse is supported by Franklyn Franum, who plays opposite, and a large cast. In this five-reel production Miss Stonehouse presents some of the beautiful dances which made her famous before she became a photoplayer. She is a great little dancer, you bet!

Irwin Talks on Summer Business

Says Public Will Seek Big Plays in Spite of the Weather if Exhibitors Advertise Them.

THE members of the sales force of the V-L-S-E are preparing to add fresh laurels this year to their achievements of last summer. By reason of the forward strides which the Big Four has made each week consecutively since that time, this is by no means a small task. But the representatives of this organization are none the less confident of the final outcome.

With their service to exhibitors perfected to a high degree; with a list of subjects generating enthusiasm among the sales force, and with the advantages of the open booking methods of renting pictures established throughout the country and indorsed generally by exhibitors, they feel they can overcome the handicap which the substantial increases that they have to excel imposes upon them.

Discussing the ardor with which the members of the Big Four force are entering upon the campaign to help exhibitors during the summer months and through such help add to the company's business Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the V-L-S-E, said last week:

"Last summer our business instead of falling off because of the weather increased each and every week. In other words, we proved by our efforts the fallacy of the old theory that business in the film industry must necessarily fall off in the summer time. This is simply another way of saying our experience demonstrates that exhibitors are keen, intelligent business men, and that if proper co-operation is offered them they will join in putting on more pressure when the handicap is greatest.

"It would be foolish to try to discount the fact that hot weather does tend to keep people away from theatres. But on the other hand, it is equally apparent that strong attractions and intelligent service may be used to counterbalance the influence of such weather. This is best proved by the fact that the legitimate theaters during the summer months turn their theaters into moving picture houses, secure the very best possible attractions which they can obtain, exploit them with the same enterprise that they use in publicizing their stage offerings, and as a result frequently play to more profitable business than they do during the winter months.

"If the legitimate theater manager can do this, certainly the moving picture exhibitor who is more familiar with the public's likes and dislikes in pictures than his theatrical competitor, and who is better able to surround those pictures with the environment that makes for their greatest success, should find it easy to duplicate or excel his competitor's experience.

"It is simply a question of selecting those productions which are so powerful in their dramatic appeal that the public will seek them, regardless of the state of the weather, and then advertising these productions to the widest possible extent.

"The reason the V-L-S-E feels so confident as to what it may expect during these few months, is first because we have taken extensive steps to see to it that our service in behalf of our customers is complete and unfailing in its efficiency and second because our manufacturers have gone to unusual lengths to provide pictures that will give to an exhibitor's business the needed stimulus to keep it at a normal level during the torrid season.

"They have appreciated that of all seasons of the year the summer is the one in which pictures of extraordinary merit should be released. In other words, they have appreciated that it is a wise man who makes the best showing when business is poorest, it is the wise exhibitor who runs the greatest attractions and advertises them most liberally during the summer months, and so they have arranged to provide them with such attractions.

"With 'Sherlock Holmes,' 'The Ne'er-Do-Well,' 'The Suspect,' 'Salvation Joan,' 'God's Country and the Woman,' 'The Law Decides,' 'Love's Toll,' 'Dollars and the Woman,' and others of equal strength already at the disposal of exhibitors as attractions of extraordinary drawing power, there is in reserve an array of pictures which make those mentioned, superior as they are proving to be, look to their laurels.

"We believe—and we feel with good reason—that with our plays and players and with our assistance in properly advertising and presenting these pictures, the exhibitors who show them will be able at the end of the summer season to point as we did last year to a record of consistently increased business."

History of Troy, N. Y., in Film

Centennial Picture Will Show City's History for Last 100 Years—Many Interesting Features.

A NOVEL feature in connection with the centennial celebration at Troy, N. Y., will be a moving picture relating to events in Troy for the past hundred years. This photoplay is to be shown during the week of September 25 to 30, inclusive, under the auspices of the Women's Committee, of which Mrs. Leonard H. Giles is chairman.

The picture will begin with the term of Mayor Pawling, followed by a reproduction of Lafayette's visit to the Emma Willard School and numerous other interesting events, concluding with a picture of modern Troy. The first picture was taken early in June on the Emma Willard grounds, and this snapshot film-making will continue during the summer all over Troy.

It was announced that when the picture is presented, many residents of this city will see themselves on the screen, together with many other interesting features. The plan of the committee is to make the production historical, as well as humorous.

Hereward Carrington---Psychic Extraordinary

THE career of the author of "The Mysteries of Myra" feature series is as interesting almost as an episode from his own dramatic creation, now being filmed and released by the International Film Service, Inc. Mr. Carrington's father was an Anglo-Englishman whose many years' service in India among the Yogi is responsible for the inherent leaning towards things psychic in the son. In no other country has such progress been made in the study of Yogiism as in India. The mystery of the Orient is a fit setting for the occult.

Hereward Carrington.

At a tender age, Hereward Carrington manifested a profound interest in psychics, and when nineteen years old he became a member of the Society for Psychical Research. At the age of twenty he went through a two-year course of study and training, during which time he spoke to no one and did not see five people.

Mr. Carrington has attended seances in almost every country and has also conferred with the most eminent psychics of the United States, France, Italy and England. While in Naples, he was present at many seances directed by that famous psychic and medium, Eusapia Palladino. In 1909 he was responsible for this renowned woman's tour of the United States. Mr. Carrington owns one of the most unique libraries in the world. It contains four thousand volumes of psychic lore.

"The room looks just like any other library," states Mr. Carrington, "and one would feel the same there as anywhere else only that they know they are completely surrounded by four-thousand spook books."

Harry T. Morey, one of Vitagraph's well-known artists, has appeared in hundreds of screen productions and made an enviable record, playing all kinds of parts, from the village "boob" to the statesman. Mr. Morey at present is working in "The Battle Cry of War," a sequel to "The Battle Cry of Peace," now in course of production by William P. S. Earle under the personal supervision of Commodore J. Stuart Blackton. Commodore Blackton collaborated with Cyrus Townsend Brady in the writing of the story which, when completed, will be in ten parts.

Does Color Enhance Dramatic Realism?

J. A. Berst, Vice-President and General Manager of Pathe, Thinks So, and Illustrates His Point with "A Matrimonial Martyr."

"REALISM," said J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, the other day in talking of "A Matrimonial Martyr," Pathe's next Gold Rooster release," is the essential quality in a picture—that goes without saying. It was a recognition of that fact which prompted the house of Pathe a number of years ago to experiment in coloring films, since by the use of natural colors realism is increased. The coloring process is laborious and costly, but the popularity of Pathe pictures in Pathecolor bears witnes to the fact that the extra labor and expense is well worth while, and it is evident that along with the increased realism of colored pictures comes a greatly added beauty as well.

"When we saw the Balboa company's production of 'A Marimonial Martyr' for our Gold Rooster program some months ago, the beauty of its photography and the full ripeness of its wonderful outdoor scenes demanded no less appreciation from us than the process of Pathecolor, which is hand-color.

"Blackberry patches, outdoor swimming pools washing up to the lips of mossy banks, fruit orchards, country estates, flower-fringed roads and lastly, the not leastly, the charming summer dresses worn by Miss Roland insisted on COLOR. So we sent 'A Matrimonial Martyr' abroad to our Paris laboratories, there to be treated to the tedious and expensive process of Pathecolor. And the feature, returned, endorses our efforts on it.

"People generally appreciate the element of color as one that makes for greater realism. This appreciation makes itself felt by the exhibitor, as witness the enormous bookings on our 'Beloved Vagabond,' 'A Rose Among the Briars,' 'The Shrine of Happiness,' etc.

"So we are assured of the commercial value of 'A Matrimonial Martyr.' Its artistic value is, of course, self-evident."

"A Matrimonial Martyr" is a comedy-drama in five reels, for release on the Pathe Gold Rooster Program in the week of June 19. It was made by the Balboa company, and features Ruth Roland, charming star of the "Who Pays?" series, "The Red Circle" series, the Gold Rooster play "Comrade John," etc. Miss Roland is ably supported by Andrew Arbuckle, Daniel Gilfether, Marguerite Nichols, Mollie McConnell, R. Henry Gray, etc.

The story tells of a shrew wife whose temperamental explosions cause her husband to leave her. She then engages a companion who is singularly like her in every smallest physical detail. This companion is one who some time before met the henpecked husband and is secretly in love with him. The shrew goes off to Reno, leaving her companion mistress of the household, and the husband comes back. The complications are innumerable, both dramatic and ludicruous; for the girl finds herself in the position of wife of a man she loves, without any of a wife's privileges; and the man falls in love with his rejuvenated "wife."

Miss Roland plays both the shrew and the mistress of the household and in some cleverly photographed double exposures converses with herself on either side of the screen. Andrew Arbuckle plays the matrimonial martyr.

CHANIER TO SUPERVISE PATHE WORKS.

J. A. Berst, vice president and general manager of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., has appointer G. L. Chanier, general superintendent of factories and studio of the Pathe Exchange. Mr. Chanier will have under his immediate supervision the factory in Bound Brook, the factory in Jersey City, the studio in Jersey City and the Pathe News department.

Mr. Chanier has previously been connected with Pathe, being at the time of his resignation some two years ago one of the oldest in point of service of any employees of the house. He is an acknowledged expert in technical matters. Mr. Chanier was lately superintendent of the Selig Polyscope studios and factories in Chicago.

PARAMOUNT PROGRESS PRINTING BIOGRAPHIES.

Thumb-nail biographies of all stars appearing in Paramount pictures are being printed each week on the back page of Paramount Progress by the editor, H. I. Day. As the result of thousands of requests from exhibitors all over the country, this plan has been adopted to supply theaters showing Paramount pictures with brief and breezy biographical sketches, which may be reprinted in their own house organs. A small cut of the star is used with each biography.

Brady Talks to Mothers

Producer Tells Them They Are Responsible for Existence of Suggestive Pictures.

William A. Brady, addressing the Federated Women's Clubs of America recently, threw a small shell into a tranquil gathering. "You mothers of the country are responsible for any and all suggestive pictures," he said. "If you will just follow the methods of the striking garment workers and establish a system of espionage at the theaters playing immoral or salacious subjects, and then with pickets warn other women away you will soon prove to the manager that his house canot thrive on bad pictures. You sit here and talk matters over when, if you would devote half your energy to correcting the subjects you debate, the nuisance would soon disappear.

"I have a son fifteen years old. I want him to read Thackeray—he prefers Horatio Alger. He has never seen his mother play her most famous part in 'Divorcons,' but he has seen her time and again in 'Captain Brassbound's Conversion' and 'Major Barbara.' I do not want him to see her other than as the noblest woman ever created."

Mr. Brady made many suggestions to the gathering. When he bid them good-bye he received a rousing cheer. The following day he was interviewed by a committee and wrote out his ideas about placing pickets in front of moving picture houses in which immoral productions were projected.

PARAMOUNT PRINCIPLES PROVED SOUND ON COAST.

An interesting test of the soundness of the principles of the Paramount Pictures Corporation has been made on the coast in a territory not yet reached by the general prosperity evident in other parts of the country. The Progressive Motion Picture Company, distributors of Paramount Pictures in the states of California, Washington, Oregon, Arizona, New Mexico and Nevada, has made the test in the coast theaters with Paramount principles and has proved the soundness of the theories of better pictures and longer runs conclusively in this field. This success is particularly remarkable because business in this region is not on a par with that in the rest of the country and it is extremely difficult to get a foothold for such principles.

Herman Wobber, general manager of the company, who made a brief visit to New York recently, declared that Paramount is having a remarkable success on the coast.

"Conditions are not bad on the coast," states Mr. Wobber, "and it is surely wrong to say that the motion picture man on the coast is not making any money. The great wave of prosperity evident in other parts of the country has not reached the coast yet in the motion picture industry and it hasn't in any other business. The film industry is not booming on the coast, because business conditions generally are not the same as they are in the East. Paramount exhibitors, however, are taking in the great bulk of the profits on the coast and the situation is steadily improving, due largely to the fact that the Western exhibitor has such excellent idea of the manner in which to present a picture."

CLERGYMEN AT THE RIALTO.

The Rialto enjoyed the unique experience last week of playing to a large attendance of clergymen; in fact, they were present in such large proportion that the management made systematic inquiry to discover the cause for the phenomenon. This developed the fact that men of the cloth are a good deal like other mortals, in that they were attracted by the presentation of one of their number on the screen, in the person of a minister with a "punch." Grim-faced William S. Hart, in the role of a back-woods "gospel slinger" who preaches the brotherhood of man to the lawless Kentucky feudists until he gets "riled" and gives them a concrete example of the church militant, was the magnet responsible for the unusual attendance of clergymen.

PIONEER GETS FEATURE.

A transaction of importance is reported by the Sun Photoplay Company, which has announced the recent sale of its great five-reel feature "A Woman Wills" to the Pioneer Feature Film Company. The territory covered includes the State of New York, Greater New York and New Jersey. The advance bookings made by the Sun Photoplay Company were so satisfactory that very little difficulty was experienced in convincing the Pioneer Feature Film Company of the merit, from the box-office standpoint, of this production.

AUSTRALIAN NOTES

THE Triangle pictures opened in Melbourne last Saturday, May 6, at the Majestic theater, which has just been converted from a "legit" house. The theater has been entirely redecorated for its new role. The lobby to the dress circle is panelled in oak, while the hangings are in plain cream and black, with the Triangle well used as a decorative device. Australian marble has been used extensively throughout the building. The interior of the auditorium is plain in color, giving an impression of lightness and ventilation and is free from any ornate architectural features. The stage, it is announced, is designed after the Strand theater, New York. The cost of the alterations to the theater was £7,000.

The first program presented consisted of two Ince productions, viz., "Peggy" and "The Golden Claw." Both were much appreciated by the large audience present.

The Triangle program in Sydney was not up to the average set by past performances, but the three productions presented were of an entertaining nature. "The Lily and the Rose" and "Saved by Wireless" were the chief attractions, while "The Raiders" was screened at night sessions only.

The latter is by far the best dramatic offering, having an interesting story, and starring that fine actor, H. B. Warner, "The Lily and the Rose" is the weakest Triangle play yet. The chief fault seems to be in the story, as the acting, with the exception of Lillian Gish, is splendid.

"Saved by Wireless" is the usual Keystone melodramatic burlesque.

This week's Triangles at West's Pictures, Adelaide, are "Let Katy Do It" and "Fatty and the Broadway Stars."

Australasian Films, Ltd., released this week a three-part drama entitled "A Man—That's All," with Charles Villiers in the leading role. It is a very poor production, and not up to the standard set by some home-made productions lately. The chief fault is in the story, as the acting, photography and direction leave little to be desired. The settings are also particularly good.

High prices evidently have not agreed with Sydney picturegoers as the J. C. Williamson Co., Ltd., have brought down the prices of admission for "The Birth of a Nation" from six shillings ($1.50) to a half-a-crown (60 cents), a reduction of over half.

With the new prices crowded houses have become the rule.

The big Griffith spectacle opens in Melbourne for a limited run on the 20th inst.

In regard to the proposed Board of Censors for Sydney, Mr. Black, chief secretary, has given notice of his intention to propose to Cabinet that such a board be formed. Mr. Black considers that he, as departmental head of the police force, will be in a better position to see the pictures than the customs authorities. He has given the assurance that, in the event of a Board of Censors being formed, that all films will be judged from an artistic standpoint. When "Hypocrites" was shown here some time ago Mr. Black declared it a fine picture; he says that the nude in pictures is not necessarily offensive, as a fully dressed woman in certain positions may give greater offense.

Jack Gavin, who produced "The Martyrdom of Nurse Cavell" and other Australian pictures, has just finished a two-reel farce comedy featuring Ernest Vockler, entitled "Charlie at the Show." Vockler has become a well known figure in the lobbies of various theaters in Sydney in his Chaplin impersonations. He wears the Chaplin "disguise" in the picture. It was taken at the Annual Royal Agricultural Show in Sydney, and shows many of the events.

"Business Is Business" was screened at the Haymarket theater this week. Nat Goodwin, who portrays the leading role, is well known in Australia, having played for a season opposite Margaret Anglin. One of his plays was "A Gilded Fool," and it is a peculiar coincidence that the Fox film adaptation of that play was screened in Sydney last week. Goodwin's fine interpretation of Isadore Lechat in "Business Is Business" has evoked many congratulatory remarks.

Features shown in Sydney this week include:

"One Day," the sequel to Elinor Glynn's "Three Weeks." Doubtless the Puritanical minds of the community will frown upon the immorality of the general public who go to see this picture. (Very few of them will go themselves and see what the picture is really like.)

"Aristocracy" (Famous Players), with Tyrone Power and Edna Mayo.

"My Madonna" (Metro), with Olga Petrova in the leading role. These pictures featuring Mme. Petrova are becoming very popular.

"Chimmie Fadden Out West," a sequel to "Chimmie Fadden," screened two weeks ago. Victor Moore seems to have jumped into instant popularity.

"David Harum" (Famous Players).

"Seven Sisters" (Famous Players), a splendid production with Marguerite Clark, who is given full opportunities to show her abilities.

"A Woman's Resurrection," a Fox melodrama, with Betty Nansen.

TOM S. IMRIE.

Pallas Pictures Studios Active

Constant Improvement and Enlargement Evident—"Doc" Cannon and Walter Frederick Added to Roster.

CONSTANT enlargement and improvement is evident at the Pallas Pictures studios in Los Angeles. One of the additions now being built is a fireproof building, designed for storing paints and oils used in the finishing of large sets. The building is being erected near the main stage, and when finished will eliminate the troubles of the artists who must now make many trips back and forth from the scenery department to the stage in order to get proper color schemes for the settings. Various prop buildings and sets used in the last production are being torn down to make room for several large exterior sets for "Nell of Thunder Mountain," starring Vivian Martin. The most recent acquisitions to the Pallas Pictures roster include Walter S. Frederick and "Doc" Pomeroy Cannon, both motion picture players of prominence. Walter Frederick comes from the New York Motion Picture Company.

"Doc" Cannon is another actor of wide experience, principally in character leads.

PARAMOUNT PROGRAM FOR JULY 3.

Blanche Sweet in the Lasky production, "The Dupe," and Donald Brian, featured by the Famous Players in "The Smugglers," will be the stars in the five-reel Paramount Pictures released for the week of July 3. The Lasky picture will be released on Monday and that from Famous Players on Thursday.

Short subjects which complete this week's program will be "Munich the Magnificent" in the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel-Pictures; Paul Terry's drawing, "Farmer Al Falfa's Watermelon Patch," in the Paramount-Bray Animated Cartoons, and the weekly release of the Paramount Pictographs.

Included in the index of this Pictograph edition will be "Weights and Measures," "Testing Your Mind; Memory for Numbers," by Professor Hugo Munsterberg, and more "Better Babies." Film novelties in the same issue will be "Assembling a Flivver," and "Boob Town New York," in which Gotham is picturized as the city where people are too busy to work.

MARY CHARLESON JOINS SELIG FORCES.

Miss Mary Charleson, who has been featured in innumerable productions by the Vitagraph, Lubin and Equitable companies, has gone to Chicago and joined the Selig Company. For her first production Miss Charleson will appear with an all star cast in "The Prince Chap," which is to be directed by Marshal Neilan. Miss Charleson was given an enthusiastic sendoff by her many friends in New York.

E. M. ASHER RETURNS TO COAST.

E. M. Asher, who has been in New York for the past five months, has left for the Coast. Mr. Asher was formerly associated with Sol L. Lesser, with whom he came East for the purpose of marketing "The Ne'er-Do-Well."

Spokes from the Hub

By Marion Howard.

HATS off to Mrs. Marcellus Ayer for refusing to run advertising reels at any price! In consequence she is doing just as good if not better business than ever, and it is a common sight to see a long line of autos and cabs outside her playhouse. Why? Because she is giving the intelligent theatergoing public what is desired—a variety of the best brand of reels obtainable. By request she is putting on some of the older Biograph and Essanay pictures not seen here by her following. Also on the program was "The Cave Man," which I missed when released earlier.

The Mutual is giving the public some interesting pictures quite up to date, such as showing how concrete bridges are made, taking us into the depths and heights of structural work. "That's the stuff to show," said a man across the aisle who wore a ribbon badge marking him a graduate of Technology. This company has had a picture called "Reel Life" showing how an interior scene is made with a large gathering, some 400 persons being employed to represent an audience at the average theater. We get the entrance, the seating by ushers of belated ones, the applause and dispersing of audience at the will of the director. All such help the industry, as it shows the great patience required on the part of director and players to reach the desired result.

I was invited to see "The Melting Pot" the other afternoon at a run-off, and barring the expose of the awful treatment of the Jews by Russia was enjoyable for the excellent work of Walker Whiteside, who makes his bow on the screen, that is, we have not seen him here earlier. His personality is felt all through a somewhat remarkable picture which might be seen with profit, though the scenes are a bit ticklish just now with Russia involved in a war. Jewish friends of mine declare the book from which the play is taken is not a bit overdrawn, and that Zangwill knew his Russia well. I did not like the bit illustrating the melting pot, as it savored more of Hades and is a blot, inasmuch as this country doesn't make it hot for immigrants. However, it illustrates the idea well enough in the blending of all nations into a whole.

"The Habit of Happiness," featuring Douglas Fairbanks, he of the happy smile, ought to be seen everywhere, as a tonic for the blues. I don't know when I have laughed so heartily or left a theatre in a better frame of mind, and all about me I saw the same thought of this play registered in the radiant faces. The story is vastly different from anything produced along those lines and the fascinating personality of Fairbanks adds much to the lesson taught on the value of cheerfulness and optimism. George Fawcett is some sight as the grouch, and as for his cheerful (?) companion, the 'cellist who played only funeral marches to enliven the evening hour, I take off my hat. Every bit of that play is worth while, and is a credit to the Triangle. It interests men, women and children equally, and to my mind is a powerful sermon on the value of good nature. William Jefferson, son of the lamented and genial "Joe," was one of the derelicts and did his part to the life. Where the director rounded up all those men is a mystery for no two were alike, and they had the tramp air stamped all over them. I liked especially the atmosphere introduced through the Bowery Club of down-and-outers who needed just that sort of invasion introduced by Sunny Wiggins. Fairbanks again has a chance to show his athletic ability, combined with brain activity to deal with effective blows. The titles were a great feature in this production.

We are to have "La Vie de Boheme," a Brady-made picture, at the Park theater, July 3, and others of this brand will be run there as a result of the recent visit to New York of Thomas D. Soriero, who is nothing if not enthusiastic. His orchestra, too, is giving excellent music with now and then some illustrations on the screen largely his own idea. "Gloria's Romance" is taking well at this house; also the Drews in whatever they do. "Borrowing Trouble" is another one of their good titles, though lost on my neighbor, who said she did not see any signs of borrowing trouble in the play. "The Jones' Auto," is especially good as a cure for the blues or dyspepsia; best of all, these little domestic plays strike home to thousands and unconsciously they carry a lesson along.

At the Fenway they are running the Frank Daniels series, and Alice Washburn, who is a former Boston woman, is making good in character work. I saw that splendid offering, "Pasquale," with that adorable actor, George Beban, playing the title role, and oh, so well! The Morosco company has given us nothing better that I can now recall, and the novelty of it all, the atmosphere, the finished team work of the players, will make this stand out and high up on the list of artistic productions this year. Myrtle Stedman and Helen Eddy presented different types in a flawless manner, and we always like to see Page Peters.

The Film Club was entertained recently at the offices of the V-L-S-E by Manager George Baldson, who showed by request "The Sporting Duchess" filmed from that clever old comedy which has delighted thousands in many lands and featuring Rose Coghlan in a part played by her many seasons. This was shown at the request of the club president as a courtesy to Miss Coghlan, an honorary member, and because for some unknown reason the film has not been seen here much, if at all. Some short subjects were shown, and between them remarks were made by returning members from New York, who were shown courtesies there at the hands of the producers. Dr. G. Maude Hough, who is secretary of the Professional Women's Club, told of the visit to the Vitagraph studios. The Film Club was officially presented to the State Federation of Women's Clubs at Lynn, June 15, before a large gathering.

At the risk of being called a gusher, I must enthuse a bit over "The Snowbird," not only for its story and settings, but for the work of that trio of stars Mabel Taliaferro, James Cruze and Edwin Carewe, who also directed it. There were some really great scenes with splendid photography and flawless settings. Naturally the work of the players is in line with previous efforts, but there is so much more to commend itself in the entire picturization as to make one desire to see it again. It was a joy to see Cruze the husband of Marguerite Snow.

Well, when Essanay captured William Gillette it was a lucky day, and most of us old stagers (as to theatergoing) rather enjoyed the filmed version of "Sherlock Holmes" better than the speaking one. Maybe a familiarity with the lines and voices of the players aided in this view. The story is old, but Gillette does as fine a piece of work as has ever been given the screen, so I would suggest "repeats" on this all along the line.

"Ramona" gave us a big treat and deserved the crowded houses. It was a big advertisement for motion pictures in general, for I saw hundreds at the closing performance here who rarely if ever attend the picture houses, but who will, when managers wake up to the necessity of giving entirely clean pictures, and not pad their programs with slapstick stuff, ordinary music, advertising subjects and cheap vaudeville. There is a large population here which is willing to pay good prices to see high-class stories and to hear good music, but which objects to mixing with another class which dotes on cheap stuff, meaningless antics and vulgar doings There is no snobbery in this at all, but a cold fact stated by an observer of box office patrons. Plenty of theaters abound for those who cannot afford to pay more than a quarter and they are entitled to their money's worth, of course. We realize managers are not in the business for their health or for philanthropic purposes, but I look for the day when theaters will be better graded along those lines.

The Exeter theater is running double bills of rare excellence and at no advance in price, the entire lower floor being but 25 cents. We had on one bill "The Innocent Lie," and "The Snowbird,"—two strong offerings given us by the Paramounts and Metros, capitally done. I am told that the first named was made in Bermuda, yet it did not seem so, for we have been in Ireland and could almost swear at first glance that the "ould sod" was really before us. It shows the art of the producers in creating such atmosphere. Valentine Grant had a congenial part and was well supported by a picked company. Frank Losee and Jack Clark made good. This is worthy a "repeat" at any theater.

Miss Rose Garrity of the Film Club, a violinist of merit, took part in the scenes between the reels of "Ramona," and made a fascinating picture in Spanish attire. She is also a sculptor and is busily engaged on a bas relief of Monroe Salisbury as Alessandro. This will be on exhibition later. The play is now at Providence, R. I., and goes later to Portland, Me., and elsewhere in New England.

Motion Picture Educator

Conducted by REV. W. H. JACKSON and PROF. HARDIN LUCAS

NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION.

"ADVANTAGES of Portable Moving Picture Machines for City and Rural Schools" is the announced title of a paper to be read at the American Museum of Natural History, New York, on Friday morning, July 7, by Dr. Alvan N. White, State Superintendent of public instruction in New Mexico. The occasion is to be a meeting arranged through the co-operation of a committee on visual instruction appointed by the science department of the National Education Association with the trustees of the museum. This event will be one of the many scores of meetings on the programs of the various departments of this greatest of all educational conventions, which is to be held this year in New York City.

It is interesting to note that other papers to be presented to the same audience that hears Dr. White are to treat of "The Value and Importance of the Educational Museum," "The Technique of Exhibitions," "Collection, Organization and Circulation of Visual Aids to Instruction by State Bureaus," and related topics. There is announcement also that some up-to-date films of remarkable excellence will be shown.

Thus the motion picture is given its rightful place as an aid to instruction now fully recognized as co-ordinate with other long established visual aids. And I take occasion here to assert my hope and belief that motion pictures will be used in progressive schools increasingly for purposes other than mere educational recreation and that there will be found in the best schools a conscious and well-planned system of correlating motion picture content with other forms of visual material and with the regular school studies. In fact it may develop that the reel lessons will become the chief basis of correlations between studies! Who knows?

The members of the committee referred to are: Dr. Edward W. Stitt, New York City, chairman; Dr. H. A. Randall, Brooklyn; Dr. Jean Dawson, Cleveland; Dr. C. G. Rathmann, St. Louis; Prof. G. R. Twiss, Columbus, O.; A. W. Abrams, Albany; Dr. T. M. Balliett, New York; Supt. J. H. Beveridge, Council Bluffs, Ia.; Supt. H. M. Gilmore, Webster Groves, Mo.; Prin. C. H. Carson, Pasadena; W. B. Kelly, Richmond, Md.

STANDARD PROJECTORS IN NORMAL SCHOOLS.

If the normal schools of the various states are actually to train their pupil-teachers broadly, as of course they sincerely aim to do, then certainly every such institution must have its own projector. In this case not only are the students themselves fairly entitled to the educational benefits to be derived from the use of reel lessons, but there is the added consideration that these future teachers should receive also such special training in the pedagogy of the supremely modern aid to education as will enable them to use the new tool with success when the schools in which they are later to teach have become fully equipped for child development.

It is encouraging to observe the very hopeful tendency among normal schools to purchase motion-picture outfits. I have no doubt that the following list of teacher-training institutions that have procured standard projectors is far from complete, but I am inserting the names of these known possessors of such machines, partly as an informational aid to others desirous of facts to support their requests for official permission and financial assistance, and partly as a challenge to every normal school to go get itself a projector, quick!

If your normal school owns a standard machine and therefore belongs on this list, please let me know the fact; also date of installation, make and model. So far as reported to me the machine placed in these institutions are of Powers make.

State Normal College, Ypsilanti, Mich.; Normal and Industrial College, Milledgeville, Ga.; State Normal School, Plattsville, Wis.; State Normal School, Mayville, N. Dak.; State Normal School, Keene, N. H.; Hampton Normal and Industrial Institute, Hampton, Va. In an early issue I shall give a list of high schools, later churches, etc.

REPLIES FROM ABOUT HALF OF THE STATES.

The co-operative educational film service plan I have been expounding through these columns during recent weeks (April 15 and 29, May 20 and 27, especially the last mentioned date, and June 3), has already struck responsive chords in about half the states of our country. Undoubtedly the others will all be heard from soon. The only danger seems to be that certain institutions will fail to secure a place on the circuit, merely because of their slow acceptance of the opportunity I am putting before them. Certain other schools may find themselves practically inaccessible to this educational picture service because of surrounding desert territory (in which no other member has been enlisted). Every prospective circuit member should clearly realize that educational films are to be available to his school only on condition that a large number of other schools can be stimulated without delay to subscribe each for a whole school year of weekly five-reel programs. Your opportunity may easily pass on to others unless you see to it that about a dozen runs for each weekly program are signed for in your region, preferably before July.

From Missouri, for example, comes this note:

"We shall likely have about $650 to invest in machine and film rental if we can get satisfactory portable machine and non-inflammable films."

My reply is that your funds seem more than ample, although of course more money can buy better facilities and also two-or-more-run service, that is, the privilege of running each weekly program through a projector the stated number of times.

Several have written that they might do something along this line next year. I suppose they have the idea that they can wait until September before deciding that they will subscribe for service beginning that month. Of course, such a notion is grossly erroneous, for the special reprints will not be ordered in July (six weeks or more in advance of the date we shall expect to begin using them) unless enough of you school men can and will act decisively by that time. Please get rid of the assumption that this is a proposition you can take up at any time it may suit your fancy. It is absolutely essential that the circuit be fully assured before a single film reprint can be warranted.

I trust that none of those who have written me for more literature but who have evidently omitted to read with care my articles that are so easily accessible in these columns, will take offence at my omission to rewrite in personal letters all the points I have elaborated on this page during the past two months. As I stated last week, this co-operative enterprise cannot reasonably or safely incur heavy promotion expenses; we must depend upon those sincerely interested to secure for themselves the copies of the Moving Picture World to which they have been referred. At any rate I do not know of anyone that is willing to bear the expense of supplying them gratis.

When you have carefully read this department in the issue for May 27, I shall be glad to have you write me at any length; and I shall be glad to answer, so far as time may permit my doing so. For the many communications reaching me I am grateful.

HARDIN LUCAS.

ANIMATED WEEKLY "PUTTING THEM OVER."

While in Washington recently Cameraman U. K. Whipple of the Universal forces, succeeded in getting such excellent pictures of President Wilson that Editor Cohn decided to have them protected by copyright. Later he sent Whipple to Oyster Bay, where Colonel Roosevelt posed especially for the Animated Weekly. Finding that some of his stuff was being appropriated, Cohn resolved to put an end to it by copyrighting all the pictures which were taken at the Republican Convention at Chicago, and all others taken during the political campaign.

When the Republican candidate, Charles Evans Hughes, came to New York after the nomination, Cameraman Whipple took a series of pictures of him on the roof of the Hotel Astor.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Udell's Correspondence School.

DAVE UDELL, with the air of a discoverer, remarks on the solid value of The Moving Picture World to the Exhibitor. This is something we have known for some time and a thing we have repeatedly pointed out in these pages, but Mr. Udell offers an excellent set of rules for study and, while it takes up a lot of space, we are going to run his letter almost in full. The trouble with the average Exhibitor is that he does not make any systematic use of his trade paper. He may skim through it and he keeps it on his desk for future reference, but he is not systematic. He does not get the fullest value for his money. Mr. Udell writes:

Did you ever stop to consider that The Moving Picture World is a study, a huge text book, without the aid of its elementary teachings, the moving picture theater manager will always be a fledgling in the moving picture business?

There is a way to study this work. I call it weekly instalment lessons in how to make money by conducting a clean and legitimate business. The more one studies the book and applies it to his business, the better he enjoys it, and the more money he makes.

By constant perusal of this important work I have adopted the present system, which might be good lesson work for others. The system is as follows:

1. Careful reading of all the ads.

2. After listing all the best looking subjects in productions, I consult the reviews. The pictures receiving the most attention by disinterested writers are listed.

3. After making a careful list of all the wholesome subjects, I read Facts and Comments. Usually a mighty clever idea lurks between the lines. Some one is always finding a flaw in your best efforts and you have to make changes accordingly. Let me point back to a few paragraphs in Facts and Comments, which have made me extra money: July 3, 1915, page 37, second paragraph. The essence of which is to cut out the gruesome parts of a film before showing. The result will be self-explanatory. Paragraphs three and four of the same issue are also important.

Also June 12, 1915. Paragraph three, one of the first shots at the lurid poster which has had a telling effect.

4. In making out my list of good films (from one reel up) I leave several inches of space between each name and while reading through The Moving Picture World find spicy comments and advertising ideas to insert in these open spaces about each film on the list. When these plays are two or three weeks old I look over the long list and pick the ones I want. It takes about three hours a week to make a complete catalogue of each week's substantial plays. By making this catalogue I find that I save many hours rummaging through a long series of Moving Picture Worlds trying to find a review.

5. Louis Reeves Harrison, in my opinion, is the philosopher of the business in general. I clip all of his essays and put them under separate cover (underlining the best paragraphs) for future reference. Two or three hundred of these profound and ethical essays make a book well worth keeping.

6. Of course all advertising for exhibitors goes without saying under a private cover. I even have special stalls for Steve, Jimquin, Ralph Ruffner, George Editor Carpenter and a few other big ones. This specimen of reference book is commencing to look about as bad as the old school dictionary, soiled, worn and torn by constant use.

7. By reading the Photoplaywright one finds that it is really devilish hard work to write good photoplays. "A real photoplay is something more than a few sheets of paper covered with typewriting in a certain form." By studying this department it doesn't necessarily mean that you must be a photoplaywright. You receive a keener insight into the foundation of your entire business. It teaches you to be less critical, and more receptive.

8. It being necessary to prepare these days, I am well armed with extracts on censorship, which also makes a volume.

9. By clipping the remainder of important news items, etc., the poor old issue looks like damaged goods, but system first, always.

Inclosed you will find a few ads and a couple of photographs of the two theaters I am managing. You notice in front of one of the theaters is a sign reading variety. Instead of using the name of a play all the time I think it a good policy to advertise something personal about the theater, as: Quality Wins, The Play's the Thing,

We Brought the Laugh to Town, etc. A sign should always be unusual, and not merely painted letters. If Paramount and other trade marks are helping the theaters, all right, but I cannot name a brand of film that is constantly good, or even fair. There are only two or three first-class features released each week. So the man who displays a large trade mark of a producing company instead of his own theater is not only advertising (and paying dearly for it) the producing company, but many other theaters using the same brand. Trade mark theaters are like the Ford automobile—look alike, advertise the same, keep a reserved and cool personality of a certain denomination, instead of having individual characters. The variety theater which selects its own pictures from several companies, mixes comedies, dramas, cartoons, news pictorials, etc., on the same program every night—has a character and a trade mark which others cannot imitate. The variety theater will be the winner in the long run. The manager of a variety theater usually has a tough occupation, but he "gets the crowds."

There is much to what Mr. Udell says about house trade marks. It is imbecillic for an exhibitor to spend his own money making a name for a brand that he may presently lose to another house, and yet many theaters are so identified with a service that it is almost impossible to break from it when the time comes. There are even houses named after some releasing affiliation. It is understood that the value of a brand name is not inconsiderable, but capitalize the brand name at a lesser valuation than your house name and you can then run any brand without having to eat crow. Mr. Udell sends in some better than usual advertisements that must go over for a week or so, but we are finding space for the pictures of the houses, which are the Majestic and the Crystal, Paxton, Ill. The Majestic shows the

Real Goods.

Howard S. Clemmer, of the Clemmer, Spokane, Wash., has a real idea for his kiddie matinees. It is the Klemer-Klink Book, about seven by ten inches on really good paper printed in black and one color. The cover and first page were given out at the first children's morning matinee. Each week thereafter a page was added until the full twelve pages were given out, when the back was added. The pages are uniformly perforated and are fastened together with a colored cord. Following the completion of the book a composition contest was inaugurated, the book being sent with the composition. The idea is good. It makes for regularity of attendance, and sustains interest, but apart from the cleverness of the idea, the book itself is better done than nine tenths of the picture theater advertising. As the work is copyrighted by Mr. Clemmer and it carries a local imprint, it is to be supposed that it is entirely a local production, but Mr. Clemmer could make a good side line out of supplying the sheets to other exhibitors.

From L. J. Scott.

L. J. Scott, of the Kansas City branch of the V-L-S-E, sends in some of the good things that have come to his desk from various exhibitors. The Comet Theater, Albia, some state in that vicinity gives out a card on the back of which is the time table of the various roads and at the bottom "Arrange to spend your evenings in Albia at the——" an "over" turns the card to the house advertisement. This is a handy card for the suburbanite who comes into town to shop and who wants to know when to start for home.

Somewhat similar is an "owl car" time table for the benefit of the patrons of the Idle Hour, Kansas City, which announces that it is "Open all night and part of the day." The card enables the morning hour patron to study the leaving time and connection with other owls on crossing lines. The card emphasizes the fact that the house is open all night and is of peculiar value to the man who goes home after the regular service has stopped. He can figure out if he has time to take in a show.

The Elite, Greenleaf, Kans., had special envelopes printed up for The Battle Cry of Peace, the front carrying the card and the exhibition date and the back part of one of the cuts for this feature. It may have been done for the mailing out of special advertising, but it opens up a new suggestion to the live wire manager. Since envelopes must be supplied, it will cost very little to have them specially printed if as many as 500 pieces are sent out and at the same time a few envelopes for general office use can be slipped in.

A page from the Manhattan Daily Nationalist gives a write up of the new Wareham, Manhattan, Kansas. It treats interestingly of the house and a special two column story tells of the ventilation. One paragraph will suffice to show that the press man is on the job. It reads—

> When the plant was being installed, the engineer in charge made a personal call at the city offices and inquired as to whether or not the city officials would make any objection to the emptying of the waste water from the air washer, into the city sewers.
> He explained that the water became positively filthy after two days' use and had to be changed even oftener than that in many localities. He informed the city officials that in some cities special arrangements had to be made for the disposal of the waste water because of the objection of the authorities to such contaminating filth being run through the public sewer. This proves how impure the ordinary air is and shows the length to which Mr. Wareham has gone to give his patrons the very best in everything possible.

Some house in Coldwater, Kans., is represented by the Amusement Weekly. One advertisement for a glee club speaks of the Opera House but there is nothing else to show whether this is the program for the opera house or some other theater. The heading, the editorial heading and the program proper are equally guiltless of any house name, nor does it apepar in the reading matter. At least the editorial head should add to "published every Tuesday," the words, "By the Opera House" or whatever it may be. It is set in type too large to fit the page, so far as the running stories are concerned, and the type is wasted on some clip stuff not worth while, though part of the matter is local and appropriate. There is so little that it should all be local. At that it has both an editor and Associate Editor, the former being W. T. Reed and the latter Myrtle L. Reed, "Leonard" being the circulation manager, and probably the usher who puts out the sheets.

Good for Wilby.

R. B. Wilby administers a kick to the word "movies" that has a lot of steam behind it. When Mr. Wilby starts to say something, he can generally get it out of his system in a way to be understood by all, but this is particularly good. It might do for your program, for you'll never get the fullest appreciation for your pictures so long as you permit them to be called by the gutter appelation:

"MOVIE" IS NOT BEING USED NOW.

> A writer on a local paper, defending the friedless word "movie" declared that it was in common use among people. As a matter of fact we have not heard moving pictures referred to as "movies" in a month. The usual word now seems to be just "pictures." "Movies" is not just slang, it is a cheap, flippant expression without the aptness which slang must possess to be at all permanent. There is no more justification for the word "movie" as a name for "The Battle Cry of Peace" or "The Birth of a Nation" than there would be for "newsie" as a word by which to refer to a newspaper. Nor, for the matter of that, is "newspaper" less awkward a word than "photoplay."

Spurr Activities.

The second issue of Film and Footlights, Dolly Spurr's new house organ for the Royal-Grand, Marion, Ind., is as full of meat as a butcher shop. In her editorial she announces that she is going to buck the Sunday closing again presently, even if she has to go to jail a second time. She takes two whole pages for sound argument, and we said argument, which is not denunciation. She makes one telling point when she remarks that the right sort of church would hold its members, who might attend the pictures at some more convenient hour. This is one weak point of the ministerial arguments. Closing the theaters will not force people into the churches.

On another page she takes up the matter of competition and writes:

> Lots of talk is going around about a new theater that it to be built here. Some of our patrons are anxiously asking if we think it will hurt us any. Now why should WE worry if there was a dozen new ones?
> It takes something besides a swell building to make a theater "go." We have put in seven years of the hardest kind of work, to build up our reputation, and it will take more than seven years of anyone's time to get it away from us. The combined efforts of a whole family has made the Royal Grand what it is. And these kind of workers cannot be HIRED for any kind of money!

And on the same page comes this:

> Listen! Have you ever bought a ticket of G. W. S. and had him snap at you like a peevish poodle? We expect you have. Few have escaped.
> Anyhow, we don't want you to pay any attention to him. He really won't bite you. Fact is he don't even know he's cross. Its just the excitement of handling so much (?) money. He wouldn't hurt anyone's feelings for the world.
> We're trying our best to break him of the habit, but its a hard job, teaching an "old dog new tricks."
> We apologize for him.

As the house is run by the Spurrs it is evident that G. W. S. is one of the family and Miss Spurr neatly covers the excitable member. That Films and Footlights suggests the house itself, intimate, confidential, friendly. It is the sort of organ that makes and holds friends.

Neatly Arranged, But—

George A. Bleich sends in a neatly aranged advertisement announcing his addition of Triangle to his program, but even for an opening announcement we think he has a little too much type. In this respect it is not quite up to the Bleich standard, but it is an exceedingly well planned advertisement in general make up and even those who do not read all of the copy can get the general idea from the larger lines, and this is the true secret of writing proper advertising. If you must use many words plan so that the most important lines shall stand up above that they may be grasped by the hasty reader.

Practical Work.

The Triangle theater, Brooklyn, is located about as close to the real centre of things as can be arranged, and is in the heart of the shopping and theater district and handy to what night life Brooklyn has apart from New York City. Last year a vacant lot next the theater was run as an airdome, but now this has been arranged as an auto park with room for forty or fifty cars which may be parked without charge whether you are a patron of the house or not. That is where the value of the scheme lies. You use the park on your shopping trip and feel under some obligation to patronize the theater when you do your amusement tour—and attending the Triangle is not a thing very difficult to learn. The park could pay a good return were a fee charged for the service and still be an advertisement to the theater, but the management looks beyond the smaller return and invests this comparatively small profit as an advertisement and so gains a larger if more indirect return.

Lots of other people would make more money could they see that the dollar indirectly influenced is worth four times as much as the two bits in hand paid.

Beware of Browns.

The Victoria, Buffalo, send in a lot of back programs. They lay out their programs nicely, but their printer does not seem to be able to make his brown ink work. A good photo brown on a lighter tinted stock is a mightly pretty combination when it is well done, but the ink must work right or the job is a botch, and the Victoria's printer has some trouble with the front page that is not helped much by the use of cuts of too coarse a screen for the stock used. On a straight type run he does better work, but with a drawn front he is apt to fail. It might be noted, in passing, that too much benday on a cover design is seldom successful. The front should show clean cut and well-defined lines and lettering, and benday plates were never intended for this work but to fill in stipples with. An effort is made in the text to suggest the program of a theater, and here the house works well. The programs announce the attractions with dignity and taste instead of looking like a poorly set advertisement. Each page carries an italic paragraph top and bottom, referring to coming subjects or the house itself. The lines are not obtrusive and yet they carry a lot of argument. They are set in two-thirds measure and line with the left hand margin at the top and the right at the bottom, which is much more effective than were this reversed since it takes the eye down the page in orderly manner. Where more than a single feature is shown the various items are lettered, probably to conform to the stage cards. The lettering is done in the order of showing, but the titles are displayed in the order of their importance.

With Extras.

The Somerset, Philadelphia, seems to have a new one. It gets out a four page weekly program and then supplements this with "Goodwin's Almanac. Issued Daily from the Somerset Theatre." These are manila sheets 5½ by 8½ with a big type day and smaller date, some argument and then the announcement for the day and the underline. Most houses would take the whole of a throwaway for the attraction, but here the management seems to realize that house talk counts for as much as the show and puts its best foot first. It is a capital scheme, and by indenting the talk it gets further display by being smaller than the rest, which is a peculiarity of type that sometimes lack of size is even better than an incerase. There is plenty of variety to these talks. One, for example, gives the seven points, in imitation of a chewing gum. One tells the girls that if their young men take them to five cent houses they do not love them as much as though they took them to the ten cent house. As a sample this seems to be the best of the lot sent in, though all have value:

About Ourselves.

> We are nice young men (if we must say so ourselves), just bubbling over with enthusiasm, ambition, progressiveness, palpitating energy and all those other faults of youth. Behind our bid for your patronage are years of experience in satisfying discriminating movie tastes. We have a sublime faith in ourselves that is beautiful to behold. And we have faith in you!—faith in your intelligence and critical judgment. We believe you want the best in pictures shown in a clean, comfortable, orderly theatre, and are willing to pay 10 cents admission for such entertainment. Otherwise we are quite ordinary humans, confessing to a taste for lavender socks, roquefort cheese, and Elinor Glynn.
> Being but human we are prone to err, maybe displease you sometimes. When we do, remember "To err is human; to forgive, divine." That's why so many wives belong in heaven.

Personality counts even in the preparation of a throwaway, and the cumulative effect of these seven sheets a week is far stronger than the single program, though here, too, they make the types talk, though here they do not date their days.

Changed Names.

The former Majestic, Monon, Ind., has been renamed the Strand, and opened in May with the Pickford "Cinderella." The opening announcement is on a colored Hennegan one sheet circular. For the opening night a Pickford souvenir, "not a photograph" was announced in a rather mysterious fashion as "something which, when seen, you will never want to part with." This is rather a strong statement and is liable to raise expectation too high; always a mistake. It is better to slightly underestimate than to overboom, and then contentment follows. In general, however, the announcement reads sincerely and convincingly. One printer's error stands out. The color design cuts the space, the lower third being headed "program." Here the Hearst-Vitagraph is announced in eighteen point and Cinderella only in eight point. Since it was stated in the upper portion to be the feature, it should be featured in the program section. As it is, the small type detracts from the feature suggestion. If you have a feature keep it a feature all over the bill. Do not play it up in one part and neglect it in another. Speak of it at all times with proper reverence.

Summonsed.

Joe Vion used the fake summons to boom his home-produced drama at the Crescent, Bronx, and he did it about as well as anyone has done. He did not load it down with a lot of extra advertising matter, but had one prepared that at first glance would seem to be a court paper. It was gotten up with the proper legal cover and the only radical departure was the substitution of the name of the house for the title of some law court. Just for that we'll forgive his running fashion notes in his program.

How Is It?

C. W. Wonderly sends in a program for the Rourke and Wonderly theater, La Junta, Calif. The program announces that the films will be shown matinees at the Wonderly and the night shows at the Rourke save when there is some other evening attraction at the Rourke. This seems to be a new idea and we wish Mr. Wonderly would drop us a line and tell us how it works. The program is printed on the Triangle colored blank program by the local office, with undated days. It contents itself with listing the attractions and stars and explaining the seemingly complicated scheme of dates.

From Philadelphia.

Steve Talbot sends in a batch of Philadelphia advertising. If we waited for the managers to send in we would get little, but Steve stays on the job. The Victoria varies the usual "enclosed find two tickets" with a request that after you use them you sit down and tell the management what you think of the house. This takes the curse off the free distribution and gives a reason for sending the tickets that flatters the recipient.

The Stanley prints on the back of its program the instrumental score of the Stanley March. Another Stanley program announces that Paramount pictures are first shown at the Stanley and then are not seen in the city for four weeks, returning to a sister house, the Palace, at the end of that time, "except on special occasions."

The Victoria uses a small program with a neat layout and a carefully prepared time table and postcards a mailing list for special features. The Arcadia uses a twin of the Victoria program in size and color with the same form of time table. This does not give the starting hour of each attraction, but states that starting times are cerain hours and that after the feature runs the time to the start of the next show is filled in with short subjects. We prefer the exact time table on the Bleich style, but for convenience, this form is appended:

> The Main Production will be exhibited as nearly as possible at 10.35—A. M. 12.25—2.15—4—5.55—7.45 and 9.30 P. M. ON SATURDAY EVENING—6.45—8.15 and 10 P. M. THE PERFORMANCE IS CONTINUOUS FROM 10 A. M. to 11.15 P. M.
> The main production requires one hour and ten minutes, and during the balance of the time short subjects are exhibited.
> You can easily form your calculations from the above information.

The original is rather too wide for its height, but the general proportioning of the type is well done.

The Fifty Sixth street theater program is almost too solid. This is about a 5 by 8 inch sheet in black on white with a red border. On the reverse side more generous use is made of the red form to show the house title in black on red rays. A program set so closely is good for an announcement to those interested, but it is not a good advertisement for the making of fans. The other side is probably trusted to reach the stranger.

Gosh!

We hear a lot about the high cost of paper and inks, but the printer who charges an additional five cents to imprint a thousand heralds on account of ink prices certainly is up to the moment.

Thinking.

The Rex, San Francisco, wanted to do something different, so it got up a blue mailing folder with the title of "The Yellow Passport" printed on its face above the address. These were slit and into the opening was thrust the weekly program printed on yellow paper, a bright yellow that was in vivid contrast to the blue. It is safe to say that most persons pulled out and read the yellow slip, many of whom would have basketed merely the folder itself. Just a slight variation vastly increased the efficiency of the piece of advertising. The insert must be reasonably small since it must be folded to less than an inch and of a width that will permit it to be put in the folder without overlapping. The folder is so formed that a short end laps over the face. The fold also laps over the end of the insert and both are held in place by the same paper clip. The colors prevent successful reproduction, but you can work out the idea with a little study.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticised, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

Warning.

EVIDENTLY the school graft and the revision bureau scheme are getting stale, for the present fashion of taking money from the boob seems to be through the always effective appeal of copyright, and in the last few months all sorts of copyright schemes have sprung up. The most common of these seems to be the publication of a large number of synopses in the form of au alleged magazine, which is protected by a blanket copyright on the contents of the whole. As recently pointed out, this blanket copyright necessitates the transfer to the individual authors of their separate rights, which must be recorded in the Copyright office, a second record of transfer being made when the right is passed along to the ultimate purchaser. This makes a triple record in the copyright office of all stories that are produced, and a multiplicity of records is never to be desired.

But there is another and perhaps more important angle to this matter. Material must be copyrighted by the owner of the rights. This means that under the blanket copyright, the right to the script must be transferred to the publisher of the fictitious magazine, in full legal form, or any record made under the blanket registration will be attainted. If the author reserves his right and a legal transfer does not pass, it is most probable that the courts would hold that legal entry had not been made and that therefore the matter was not legally copyrighted. This process of transfer is not necessarily expensive, but the script cannot be offered the manufacturer by the author until the rights have been again transferred to his possession. It would require a judicial proceeding to establish a precedent, but high authorities on Copyright law have expressed the opinion that unless every minute legality is strictly followed the safety of the rights are imperilled.

A second scheme is the individual copyright of synopses or scenarios and a concern now offers to supply authors with thirty printed copies of each story and copyright the same for ten dollars plus. Here the entry will be made in the name of the author and the rights will lie directly with him, but here it will probably be found that "copies for sale" within the meaning of the Act means copies offered publicly for sale. This, too, may cause trouble. It does not, in any event, avoid the second transfer to the producing purchaser.

This concern, as part of the bait, announces that the copyright will be looked after by a registered patent attorney of thirty years' experience. This is poppycock. No department of the Government suffers less from red tape than the Copyright office since it has been in the hands of the present Register, Thorvald Solberg. No attorney is required, nor is any special experience necessary. You send to the Copyright office for a registration card. This you fill out and return with the article to be entered and the fee therefor. Presently you will receive the registration notice card and the entry is complete. Later on you may be sent the file copy, properly marked for identification, as the present law permits the return of matter not required by the Librarian of Congress. This is preserved as evidence. Nothing could be more simple than the system devised by Mr. Solberg, and nothing more than average common sense is required on the part of the entrant. If you insist upon copyrighting your efforts as books, let the work be done by the local printer and copyright yourself, but it will be better to wait and let the purchaser make the single copyright entrance that is really required.

Finding Out.

"How can I know if I am right if you will not help me by criticisinz my plays?" wails a writer. We give it up, but Jess Willard became champion by getting licked a few times and learning to do better.

Do It Now.

Write your Mexican war play and put it in the drawer with your story of the Europeau war, the Titanic disaster, the Salem fire and the rest. Theu you can give your mind to more profitable things.

Serves Them Right.

Lately a story was sold on synopsis. The reconstructor tore it all apart and rebuilt it (perhaps unconsciously) along the lines of a book he had read. Now the publishers of the book are after the makers of the story. The author had written an original story and one that would not have been in conflict. Great is the synopsis only.

A Sold Synopsis.

So many readers have asked to see a real synopsis that, although we do not believe that this is going to be helpful, we asked John William Kellette to let us have one. Mr. Kellette is assistant to John Adolfi, of the Fox Film Corporation, and through the courtesy of that director we present the synopsis of ——— ——— ——— ———, the synopsis of which was written by the Rev. Clarence J. Harris. This is a copy of the synopsis which Mr. Harris sold the company. Mr. Kellette suggests that authors make their own continuity of this and compare it with the Adolfi version. As a hint or two he gives parts of two bits of action, in connection with which he writes:

In sending this synopsis of the Harris story I want to say that if you desire to see how Mr. Adolfi and I picturized it I'll send you the complete script later. I'd advise, unless you think it adding too much to your already heavy burden, that you suggest to your readers that they take the synopsis, as published, and build themselves a five-reel story for your perusal and their own advancement, merely for practice—for they will find, upon completing it, that they have love, struggle, success, triumph, temptation, resistance—every single element one would like to find in a well portrayed drama. Have them find opportunity for the "brigbt spots," the little comedy touches that prevents a scene going stale, and incorporate it into their construction.

For instance:

50—1—Table set—Dave and Maria seated, talking—Caprice starts to get something from stove, but Maria, with cunning, stops her and makes her sit, thus to show Dave she likes Caprice—Maria gets chicken from oven and Dave starts to cut it—Maria glares at Caprice, who becomes uneasy—Dave working at chicken leg.
51—Closeup of Maria, expectant.
52—Closeup of Caprice, joy.
53—Closeup of Dave—Knife slips from chicken leg into gravy—He spatters the grease.
54—Closeup of Maria—The grease hits her on the side of the face.
55—Closeup of Caprice—Surprise—Sudden laughter.
56—Closeup of Maria, wiping grease and glaring.
57—Closeup of Caprice—Sbe suddenly sobers and starts to eat.
58—Full Set—Dave, with severed chicken leg, holds it up—Caprice and Maria both extend plates—It looks as if Maria will get it, but Dave is only showing it to her—He puts it on Caprice's plate—Maria sore.

All of that can be put into a fifty-foot scene and hold the interest and is warranted to get at least two laughs.

The student will find places without number where the story can be advanced and comedy introduced without switching away from the story.

Continuing the action:

Dave finds that his cider jug is empty. Caprice wants to go to get some, but Dave prevents her. He'll go himself.

60—1—Table set—Dave takes jug and exits—Caprice about to cut into the chicken leg.
61—2—(Outside Dave's shack)—Airdale terrier lying on stoop—Dave enters with jug and exits.
63—1—Maria glares at Caprice, who looks up—Maria jawing her.
64—2—Airdale hears noise and looks into house.
65—1—Maria arises and accuses Caprice of laughing at her when the grease hit her—Caprice denies it and starts to run to safety—Maria takes the chicken leg and puts it on her own plate—Looks off.
66—Through window—Dave seen in distance, swings jug walking away from camera—Caprice yelling to get his attention.
67—1—Maria hears Caprice yelling and goes to stop her.
68—2—Airdale looking into house—Exits into house.
69—1—66—Maria and Caprice at window—Maria shaking her.
70—1—Airdale at table—Mounts chair and takes chicken leg from Maria's plate—Exits.
71—1—66—Maria pushes Caprice toward table and follows.
72—2—Airdale enters from house with chicken leg and exits.
73—1—Maria discovers the chicken leg is gone.
74—Closeup of Airdale on lawn eating the chicken leg.

But the script writer must not write in the impossible things for animals to do. In this case the Airdale made a good actor. He loved chicken, and he knew that the only way to get it was to mount that chair and take it from Maria's plate. To get that point over, we bought four chickens, as the studio scenes required two and the exterior scenes required two, just because our work was mapped out that prevented the taking of the interior and the exterior on the same day—the interior scenes being photographed in Jersey and the exterior in the Catskills.

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of tbis department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 143.

Best answer will be published, and the names of otbers sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Theater managers looking for high class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

What is the relative efficiency as between a 110 and 220 volt incandescent lamp?

Roll of Honor on Question No. 136.

The names on the Roll of Honor are, some of them, again there only by a little stretching. I would advise many of them to scrutinize the answer very carefully. There seems to be a very general misunderstanding as to one phase of the last part of the question, viz: would the lens be nearer or further away from the film with an 80-foot throw?

Now, stop and think for a moment. The film is one conjugate foci point and the screen the other. As you shorten one of these points you automatically lengthen the other, therefore as you bring the screen nearer the lens you automatically move the lens further from the film. That is an automatic action which cannot be changed.

The Roll of Honor consists of Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas, whose answer needs considerable fixing on one or two points; C. W. Tuthill, West Orange, N. J., who puts the lens nearer the film; Ralph W. Martin, Los Angeles, Cal., who is correct, but too darned technical; C. E. Linstruth, Carthage, N. Y., who keeps the lens the same distance from the film; F. F. Bell, Palestine, Texas, whose lens dope is correct, but who is a little weak in locating the observation ports; W. B. Allen, Edmonton, Canada, correct; L. Pagenhardt, Westernport, Md., wbo moves the objective toward the film; Manuel Nosti, Tampa, Fla., who says the back focus would not be the same, but don't say what it would be; Bert Meester, Hobart, Ind., who is correct on the lens dope, but lacking in details on port location, and Wilson Hays, Barton, Md., whose reply is published.

Reply to Question No. 136.

By Wilson Hays, Barton, Md.

The question:

In building an operating room how would you locate the lens and observation port openings for the masons? Explain fully. Suppose you are projecting a 16-foot picture at 100 feet, and tbe throw is shortened to 80 feet, could you use the same objective and condensers, and if so, would the objective still remain the same distance from the film? Picture would be smaller, of course. How much smaller?

The Answer:

I would locate the ports somewhat after the fashion shown in Fig. 1 of the sketch. The machines are set five feet apart, and each one is 2 feet 6 inches off center. Lens ports are 12 x 12 inches, and observation ports 12 x 24—that is to say, the hole tbrough the wall is that size. Tbe stereo lens port is 6 x 18 inches, and is located 5 feet 6 inches off center, with 3 feet between it and the nearest projector. Spot light ports are 18 x 18 inches, located 3 feet 10 inches from bottom of port to floor, which height will allow the average man to operate the spot conveniently while standing. Machine and stereo observation ports are located 4 feet from bottom to the floor. Lens ports are at a height of 3 feet, but tbeir height will be determined by the pitch in projection. The ports in the drawing are intended for a moderate pitch, and the measurements will answer in many cases. Sbould you have very nearly level projection the lens ports must be located a little higher, with tbe center about 45 inches from the floor. On the other hand, should the pitch be very steep the approximate angle of projection must be found and the machine set at this angle. Drop a plumb linc from the lens to the floor and measure out from this point the distance you want tbe lens to set from the wall. Plumb up from this point to the line of projection, and this height will be the approximate height of the port center from the floor. Provided the openings are left large enough, no trouble should result from this method. The distance the different ports will set from each other will be determined by the size of the operating room and the length of throw. On a short throw with a large picture it would be advisable to set the projectors closer together than 5 feet.

Fig. 5 shows how both the temporary and permanent ports are set at the angle of projection. Fig. 2 shows how the bottom and sides of the spot port should be flared. Machine and stereo observation ports are made the same size, viz: 12 x 24 inches, and are fitted with adjustable ports sliding in grooves (as per Fig. 86, Page 220 of the Handbook —Ed.), and also should be fitted with glass and shadow box. Shadow box and fire shutter are shown in Fig. 3. In Fig. 3 I have located the adjustable port on the inside of the wall. The glass is placed about the center of the wall. The top of the shadow box is cut out to allow the fire shutters to drop. (You have only sbown one shutter in Fig. 3. You should have shown 2, viz: the fire shutter and the adjustable shutter.—Ed.) If glass in the machine ports is intended a sliding door may be provided for both spot and stereo, so that they may be closed at all times wben not in actual use. The spot and stereo observation ports may be much smaller than in the drawing. In fact the stereo port may be reduced to 8 x 10, with some added inconvenience in projecting slides. A large spot port will allow the operator to listen for his cues witbout so much inconvenience. Fig. 4 shows how temporary 12-inch square lens ports are filled in after the machines have been permanently located in their proper place. A board is fastened outside the port, with a hole that will clear the light ray about ¾ of an inch. A similar board is placed on the inside of the port, with a smaller hole, since tbe light ray flares slightly. Tbe size of these holes can be found by projecting the light on the board in their respective positions, marking a circle around the light and cutting the hole out with a keyhole saw. A tin cone is then constructed which will exactly fit through the two holes, and when it is in place liquid cement is poured in from the top, as shown in Fig. 4. Before the cement has had time to set hard project tbe light to make sure that the board has not moved. When the cement has hardened remove the form and finish filling in the top with a trowel. The tin cone should be removed, and the finished port painted black on the inside. The sides of the stereo lens ports should be filled in, leaving a long slot-shaped opening in the wall, just wide and long enough to clear tbe top and bottom rays.

Tbe same objective and condensers may be used to project a picture at 80 feet which were used to project one at 100 feet, provided no account be taken of the up-to-date dope on matching the E.F. of the condensing set with the E.F. of the objective. Since changing the length of the throw changes the B.F. of the objective, it is evident that the condensers would not have the same relation to tbe objective as formerly. A 16-foot picture projected at 100 feet would be about 12 feet 7 inches in width when projected with the same lens at 80 feet, since 16÷100=4.25, or .16 of a foot, therefore the width of the picture would increase 4.25, or .16 of a foot with each increased foot of throw or decrease by the same amount with each decreased foot of throw, and, since the distance in tbis case is decreased by 20 feet, we would bave .16 x 20=3.2 feet less width of picture, and 16—3.2=12.8 feet width of picture at 80 feet.

Of More Than Passing Interest.

Some time ago the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity introduced an ordinance into the Council which provided fees for examination and licensing of operators. The proposed ordinance failed to pass, due, I was told, mostly to the opposition of the president of the Council, Mr. Frank L. Dowling. I immediately opened a correspondence with President Dowling, calling his attention to the fact that a proper fee for examination would have a decided tendency to shut off, or at least curb, the activities of "operators' schools," which, without providing any practical theatrical experience, gave their "pupils" from one to two months' instruction and sent them down for examination simply in the hope that by some stroke of good fortune they would manage to get by. I called his attention to the fact that some of these school-taught operators had been up for examination as many as eight, nine, and even ten times, and that if they had to pay a reasonable fee for each examination they certainly would not apply to the Board until they had some reason to suppose themselves really competent.

I also told President Dowling, in language which could not be mistaken, that it was nothing short of an outrage on the public at large to allow the issue of a license to an operator to project pictures without examining into his competency from the optical point of view and without testing his knowledge as to ability to put on a picture with the least possible amount of eye strain.

It required considerable correspondence to impress President Dowling with this proposition, but at last I received the following communication:

> Mr. F. H. Richardson, 17 Madison Avenue, New York City.
> Dear Sir: The attention of President Dowling has recently been called to your letters in relation to the possibility of requiring the further examination of operators of moving picture machines, and he has turned the matter over to me, instructing me to consult with you to see if we can jointly draw some ordinance which will cover your views with regard to proper knowledge of the projection. I shall be glad to make an appointment with you at this office, where we have the necessary references to aid us in formulating an amendment to the ordinances.
> Yours very truly,
> ALBERT E. HULL,
> Assistant to the President.

In order to avoid any possibility of working at cross purposes in respect to this letter, I went down to the Bureau of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity and interviewed Mr. Wynkoop, the engineer directly in charge of matters electrical, and the immediate superior of the Board of Examiners. I had a long conference with Mr. Wynkoop and the first Deputy Commissioner, at the end of which it was suggested that I embody my ideas with regard to an optical examination and the licensing fee in a letter to Commissioner Williams. This I did, and within a few days received the following communication:

> F. H. Richardson, Esq., 17 Madison Avenue, New York City.
> Dear Sir: I have your letter of March 27th. I shall appreciate it if you will call upon me at your convenience. I suggest that you come Saturday morning between ten and eleven.
> Respectfully,
> WILLIAM WILLIAMS, Commissioner.

In compliance with the Commissioner's request I went down and had more than an hour's conference with the Commissioner, Mr. Wynkoop and the chief engineer of the Department. I succeeded in convincing Commissioner Williams and the other gentlemen of the necessity for an examination in matters optical, and tendered my services, which offer was accepted, to instruct the examining board, so they could make a competent examination along those lines. Mr. Williams said he would immediately consult the corporation counsel, and if the opinion rendered sustained his view that he had the power to order such an examination he would do so. On May 11th I received the following communication:

> Mr. F. H. Richardson, 17 Madison Avenue, New York City.
> Dear Sir: I refer to your letter relating to the department's action with regard to examining moving picture operators in respect of their knowledge of the optical features of the trade. The department has decided that, in its examinations of candidates for a license to operate motion picture machines, it will, until further notice, include therein questions calculated to disclose the candidate's ability to project satisfactory pictures. I am advised that this change in the department's method of conducting its examinations has already been made known to you informally. Respectfully,
> WILLIAM WILLIAMS, Commissioner.

It will thus be seen that this department has succeeded in obtaining for New York operators a much needed protection against the influx of incompetent school-taught men, who know absolutely nothing about the optics of the projector. More than this, we have secured some measure of protection to the eyesight of the public, in that this change will operate to induce present operators to get busy and study the optical end of their profession, because you cannot tell, gentlemen, when it will happen that an even more thorough awakening will come, and the department will order a re-examination of all operators. Should that at any future time happen it is up to you to be prepared for it. The knowledge is now available, and there is no reason in the world why you should not perfect yourselves along these lines.

Both Commissioner Williams and Mr. Wynkoop are to be congratulated on the fact that they are broad-minded men who are willing to listen to arguments and to concede that which is proven to them to be right. Had a more narrow minded Commissioner been in office it is quite possible we could not have secured this most beneficial change.

As to the license fee matter, it is still up in the air, and what the final outcome will be I cannot at this time say.

Quite Easy.

John Tillman, Brooklyn, N. Y., asks:

> Will you, through the department, favor me with an opinion on the following: The problem was put to me by an out-of-town operator and caused a good deal of argument. Is it possible to have two lamps burning in series, and by throwing in two switches change them to a multiple connection?

Yes, Brother Tillman, that is quite possible, and can be done in several ways, one of which is illustrated in the sketch. You will observe that when switch A, which is a single-pole, double-throw switch, is thrown downward, and switch B, which is also a single-pole, double-throw switch, is thrown upward, the two lamps are in series, but when the switches are thrown over, downward, the two lamps are in multiple. There would, however, be a difference in result by reason of the fact that when the lamps are in series you have the resistance of one rheostat, plus two arcs, whereas when they are in multiple the total resistance in so far as it affects the arc is decreased by an amount equal to the resistance of one of the arcs.

At Last.

For years the editor of the projection department of the Moving Picture World has stood alone in publicly, asserting the fact that the speed at which the projection machine is operated is an exceedingly important factor in the presentation of the photoplay and that, moreover, the projection of the picture is in the nature of a fine art.

Now, however, at long and last, comes a leading producer, Mr. David W. Griffith, who evolved that most wonderful photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," and who is now head producer of the Reliance and Majestic companies of the Mutual Film Corporation, and says:

> The tempo (speed—Ed.) at which a motion picture is run is as important as it is in the playing of a stage play.

Recently in instructing the New York Office of the Mutual Film Corporation as to the speed at which the "Battle of the Sexes" should be run, Mr. Griffith said in part:

> I cannot overestimate the importance of seeing to it that this picture is run at very nearly its proper schedule. A matter of five minutes slower or faster for the entire picture might not effect it perceptibly one way or the other, but if the entire five reels should be strung out for ten or fifteen minutes over time the picture would be absolutely ruined. * * * Often the exhibitor wants to lengthen a show so that he may not have to put another picture on, with the result that he absolutely ruins the picture, and succeeds not only in dragging the audience out, and keeping them out of the theater for good. * * * I should think it would be a good plan for the man in charge of the exhibition of pictures which require care (Will Brother Griffith kindly show me the picture which does not require care—Ed.) to know enough about projection to be able to put on a show himself. In many instances thousands of dollars have been spent for theaters, for the production of moving pictures, and for the exhibition of moving pictures which were absolutely wasted. The location of the theater has been blamed WHEN THE REAL FAULT LAY IN THE PROJECTION OF THE PICTURE. * * * I have seen pictures absolutely "dead" in one place which went "big" in another; not in any way on account of the difference in the audience but purely and simply because of the difference in projection; in one case, the successful one, there being a good, clear light, the right tempo (speed—Ed.) and correct focus. I am emphasizing this particularly for the benefit of the many theatrical people who are getting into the motion picture business, that they may not lose sight of this important item until it is too late.

Mr. Griffith might have gone very much farther. He mentions the number of pictures ruined by lack of sufficient speed, but he left unmentioned the thousands of instances where the picture is ruined by too much speed. I suppose, however, we should be thankful for the favor received, since this is, so far as I know, the first time that a producer of motion pictures has expressed himself as viewing projection in the light of a fine art. I venture the assertion that, now that the ice has been broken, it won't be so very long before this highly important matter will receive at least some degree of the attention it has literally been screaming for for years. If the editor of this department made an index of the number of things which it has advocated long before anybody else was willing to even consider the matter, only to have the powers that be, later on, adopt the ideas as their own and put them into effect, we would have quite some index—quite some index, indeed.

Baby Local.

Thomas W. Dougherty, New Rochelle, a suburb of New York City, says:

> All the boys of Local 366, Westchester County, feel very badly indeed by reason of the fact that none of us will be able to hear your address at Madison Square Garden. We are all working, and that is the answer. No. 366 is known as the "Baby Local," but we are growing just the same, and at present have, I think, eighty-seven members, including operators and stage hands, there being twenty-one operators. We have only been organized a little over a year, and conditions are fairly good, whereas before we were organized we received as low as seven or eight dollars for a week of six days; now eighteen dollars is the minimum. We do our best to please the managers in return for the increased salary. In fact, the policy of local 366 is for its members to do a little more than they are asked to do, giving results on the screen at the lowest possible expense. The managers are beginning to see the light, and are coming over to us one by one. And now, here is the latest move: New Rochelle operators are going to have a license, which, thank Heaven, will do away with boy operators. Now, Father Richardson, as we will be unable to attend on Projection Day, any first Sunday in the month you happen to pass through Mt. Vernon on your Go-Like-The-Devil, the boys will be very glad indeed to have you pay us a visit at Labor Lyceum, on South Fourth avenue. And now, I am seeking a little advice. The new fire laws compelled my manager to remove the operating room in our Airdome, which stands in the center of same, among the audience. The way it stands at present the picture is 16 feet. I am using 110 volt, 60 cycle current through a Hallberg economizer. In moving the operating room we will have to increase the present throw of 75 feet by 50 feet, making a total of 125 feet. Now if I have the same size picture, what will be the light results at the screen, considering the longer throw? The screen is a muslin one with three coats of flat white paint with a black border, as shown in the new Handbook. Can we get good results under the above conditions with A. C.?

The increased throw up to 125 feet won't be at all bad, provided you line your optical system according to Table 1, Page 141, of the third edition of the Handbook. You would, however, get a much better result if you were to get another economizer, wire the two in multiple and set them on their lowest notch. This ought to give you about 80 amperes at the arc, which would supply an illumination approximately equal to 40 amperes D.C. I would suggest that you first try the matter out with your own economizer, working at its maximum capacity. If the result is not satisfactory you can then get another transformer (economizer), and do as suggested. A 16-foot picture at 125 feet will mean that your lens will work on pretty close to a 5-inch back focus, and assuming your present lens to be of small diameter it will probably be necessary to exchange it for another one, possibly a Gundlach No. 2, or some other lens of nearly equal diameter. Assuming the back focus at which the lens will work to be 5 inches, if you can get 22 inches between the apex of the front condenser and the film, then you can do with a 2-inch diameter lens. If, on the other hand, you can only get 18 inches, then you will have to have a lens 2¼ inches in diameter, and if you can only get 16 inches, then it will have to be 2 7-16 inches in diameter to avoid light loss. See Table 1, Page 141.

A Progressive.

John Vander Mate, Jr., Grand Rapids, Mich., orders a Handbook and says:

Now, here is a man who not only studies the department and the Handbook, but is proud of it; he's a progressive. He is not like some of you chaps who curse the department, its editor and the Handbook, and there sneak off down in the basement, lock the door, light the gas jet behind the furnace and there carefully and thoroughly read the department. My compliments to Brother Vander Mate. It is within the range of possibilities that I may be in your city along the latter part of next winter; can't tell yet. I expect to pass Sault Ste. Marie on the return end of the trip, and if the expense of a side trip to Grand Rapids won't be too much, I might conclude to visit your

Local Unions, Attention.

As has been told you, I lectured on projection to Hudson County Local Union No. 384, I. A., recently. In a letter to Brother I. G. Sherman, president of the local, I mentioned the fact that Washington, D. C., Local Union 224, I. A., was considering the proposition of "fathering" a lecture by the editor in the Capitol City. A day or two afterwards a carbon copy of the following letter was received at my office. I am publishing it for the benefit and consideration of other locals which I expect to visit in the near future. As I have said before, both President Sherman and Hudson County Local 384, are very live wires. They are the kind of union men to not only DO things, but do them in the best possible way; they are up-to-date. They believe that intelligent argument, improvement, and diplomacy are exceedingly valuable adjuncts to the labor movement, and that industrial war, as represented by the strike, the lockout and strong-arm methods, is a thing only to be resorted to when all other methods have failed. Read President Sherman's letter, my brothers. Aside from its commendation of the efforts of my humble self, as exemplified in my lecture on projection, it contains much food for thought.

Mr. B. S. Spellbring, President Local 224, I. A., Washington, D. C.:

My Dear Mr. President:—I have been informed by Brother F. H. Richardson, projection editor of the Moving Picture World, that your local has now under consideration the advisability as to his (Brother Richardson) delivering a lecture to the members of local 224, on "Projection." Believe me, brother, your local will make no mistake by not only "considering," but ACTING. For after you have heard him once you will want to hear him again; that is, if you are, as I believe, one who has the best interests of his local at heart, and the sincere desire to raise the profession of operating from out the depths where it has lain for so long, and give to that profession the distinction to which it is entitled, and call it —ART. Why should not we operators be accorded the same amount of respect that is given to the producer, the actor and the manager? The answer is a simple one. It rests with ourselves! We can maintain our dignity as men, and also command the respect and admiration of our employers, and become ARTISTS instead of "crank twisters," if we will only ———. I left the preceding sentence un-ended; you will obtain the full information as to how this may be accomplished, if you care for it, from Richardson himself. On Saturday, May 6, we of Local 384 had the extreme pleasure of listening to Brother Richardson for nearly an hour and a half, that, too, at the unheard-of hour of 4 a. m., and all would have been more than willing to have remained until sunup if "Rich" had not "tired." Results were noticed as early as the Monday following, and that, too, is "going some." It shows that the operator, as a class, is beginning to realize the finer points of his art when "shown" by as able a man as Richardson, and let me say this: In making your arrangements do not lose sight of the fact that you are about to receive in your midst a brother, for Richardson is a member in good standing off Local 306, New York City; also an honorary member of Local 384 of Hudson County, N. J. It would be presumption on my part were I to, unasked, attempt to advise you as to how to proceed with your arrangements, but this is the way Local 384 did it: A committee was appointed to secure a hall that would be a credit to the organization, and one that they would not feel ashamed to invite their employers to, as we did not want them to get the impression that we were "cheap." It was finally decided that we give a dinner, to cost one dollar per plate, and to which each operator should bring his employer (the men who pay our salaries), for it was the men behind the pay-roll we wanted to reach. Others were welcome, but they had to pay their own. No moneys were expended from the local treasury, each operator paying for his employer and himself, and all money was paid into the hands of the committee ONE WEEK in ADVANCE OF THE TIME SET for the dinner to be held, so we knew just what we had to work upon. Then I, as president, sent an official letter to the Exhibitors' League of Hudson County, inviting them to be present in a body. The president, vice-president, and several other members of the league were present, besides a large number of exhibitors who were not members of that body. At the dinner, I, as toastmaster, called upon the president of the League for a few remarks, and I wish you could have heard them, for we received, WITHOUT FIGHTING, that which all unions are after—RECOGNITION. You know, as well as do I, that operators many times spend money foolishly, and to their own detriment; here is an opportunity to spend it wisely and well, and the results will be of untold value to you. I am sure you will agree with me in this after you have heard Brother Richardson, for he drives home each point so sharply that it leaves an impression upon the minds of the employers which will not soon fade. That is why it is imperative that you have the employers present, for it is from them that you expect to receive an increase in salary. Now do not misunderstand me, Brother Spellbring. I do not mean to say that your employer, after hearing this lecture, is going to turn around and hand you a "five-spot," but I do say it will more than pave the way for you to receive greater consideration at his hands. Richardson is a big man, physically and mentally; his theme is a big one, therefore it behooves you to make your affair correspondingly big, so that it will not only be a credit to the "Nation's Capitol," but Local 224, as well. Assuring you that I will render any assistance for this really beneficial work that Brother Richardson is trying to do for the operator that may be in my power, and with best regards to you, your colleagues on the Executive Board, and Local 224, I am,

Sincerely and fraternally yours,

I. G. SHERMAN,

President Local Union 384, I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M. O.

Interesting Letter.

From Missouri comes the following somewhat lengthy but interesting letter.

> Inclosed find money order for the new Handbook. When it arrives my library will consist of nine volumes of Hawkin's "Electrical Guide," "Motion Picture Electricity," by Hallberg, "The Electric Motor," by Burns, Power's "Hints to Operators," and the second and third editions of your "Handbook." I also bave the first one hundred and twenty-five questions and answers typewritten and bound together, with all the illustrations re-drawn. It sure is a migbty nice volume of information. And now, here is a puzzle. Have travel ghost with my 1911 Motiograpb, and cannot get rid of it. Have widened tbe main blades of the inside sbutter and set same so tbat the lens is entirely closed before the film movement begins, and is kept closed until the movement is fully completed, but Mr. Travel Gbost, nevertheless, remains on the job. Could it be caused by slight vibration of tbe framing carriage due to worn parts, which would move the picture on the screen while each frame is being exposed? Have installed new shutter gears, and late type of shutter. It also may be due to optical system being out of line, since on the old Motiograph when you pull tbe lamphouse back to matcb up the lens system, as I have done, the heavy lamphouse tends to sink down, thus throwing the system out of line. My manager is building a new theater and we will have entire new equipment. I wisb to use meniscus-biconvex condensers. Now suppose Table 1 calls for two 7½ planos, would it be correct to use one 7½ meniscus and one 7½ bi-convex, measuring distance X and Y, as per Table 2, Page 143? If not, how would you figure the correct focal lengtb for the combination? As I understand it Missouri state laws require, or at least in tbe year 1911 did require operating rooms made of sbeet metal. We wish to use a concrete operating room, but the insurance men say they would not approve it. This is a funny world. I wish you would correspond with these officials on the subject of concrete fireproof operating rooms. In your new book you say to place the film link above the aperture. Wby not, if you use an open type machine, place the film link above the top loop where it would burn in two instantly in case of fire? Could you give me further description of that incandescent in lamphouse. I cannot understand tbe explanation in the Handbook. Looks as if tbe cut was reversed or sometbing. What do you think of a 90 ampere motor generator set with tbe dynamo shunt wound? Ought it not to be compound wound? And can you operate two arcs in series off a motor generator set, for instance, a machine of 90 ampere capacity? I saw tbe last reel of "Lyman Howe's Travel Festival" at one of our theaters last night. Tbe projection was excellent, except for one or two things. During the last balf of the last reel the operator cranked witb his rigbt band and wrapped up a pile of slides with his left. I stood in the operating room door and watcbed bim take off the arc lamp knobs, and slide carrier cone, and the stereo lens, witb result that there was poor speed regulation; also he unfastened the eye bolts wbicb anchored the machine, and accidentally moved the picture off the screen at least two feet. The audience was paying fifty cents per seat, and don't you think he sbould have waited until the sbow was over before beginning to tear down tbe macbine? Also I was told he used two copper strips to boost the operating room fuses, otberwise tbe work was excellent. Will you have tbe International president of the I. A. T. S. E. write me, as I would like to join a local wbile continuing my work in tbis city. I cannot afford to leave here and spend six months in another town in order to make myself eligible.

I have complied with your request witb regard to the I. A. You should bear from the International office soon. And now witb regard to your questions. No, travel ghost would not be due to anytbing but wrong timing of tbe shutter, or shutter blade too narrow. In order to get travel ghost you bave got to have the lens uncovered wbile the intermittent is moving, since travel ghost is, as I have often explained, due entirely to the movement of brilliant, white objects across tbe screen, which leave an impression in tbe eye greater tban the impression left by tbe surrounding comparatively dark objects. I cannot say what it is, but if it is travel ghost (streaks of wbite up and down from white objects on the screen) tbere is sometbing wrong witb tbat shutter of yours or the gears. Holding tbe fly wheel side with one band try to move the sbutter with the otbcr. If you can move it to any considerable extent, tben find out where the lost motion is, for that is the seat of your trouble. As to the meniscus-bi-convex condensers, you need the same E. F. as you would have with the plano combination, and for two 7½ tbe E. F. would be $7\frac{1}{2} + 7\frac{1}{2} = 15 \div 4 = 3\frac{3}{4}$ inches. It is therefore only necessary to inform the dealer that you want a meniscus-bi-convex combination having a 3¾-inch equivalent focus, assuming that you want them to take the place of two 7½ plano-convex. As to metbod of figuring the E. F., tbat is plainly shown in the paragrapb marked "example," and the one just above it on page 143. With regard to tbe refusal of the insurance men to approve of a concrete operating room, why that is pure, unadulterated official stupidity. You could unquestionably take them into the courts and force tbem to approve a concrete operating room. From any and every point of view a concrete operating room is far superior to a metal room. It represents about tbe best there is in operating room construction. It is approved by the autborities in New York City, Boston, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, and practically every city in the country. If you will give me the names and the addresses of tbe officials I will be glad to take the matter up with them and try and show them the utter absurdity of tbeir position. As to tbe cut on page 302 of the Handbook, you attach the lamp socket to the bottom of tbe lamphouse at the rigbt in front corner, connecting one side of the socket to one side of the incandescent circuit in the usual way, through a switcb and fuse, of course. Tbe other side of the socket is also connected in the usual way, except that you cut the wire inside the lamphouse and attacb the end coming from the lamp socket C, to binding post B, and the other end, B, you attach under the screw just above the letter B, so that wben you close the lamphouse door, which is represented by the line to which the upper block is attached, you force spring A back and break its contact witb the screw, as shown. Tbe drawing really should bave had a letter on contact screw, which is opposite arrow point A, so I could refer to it as screw F, or whatever letter I gave it; also the line representing the door should have been given a letter.

If Lyman Howe knew bis operator had pulled off any such stunt as you describe that operator would lose his job so quick it would make his head swim. I thoroughly agree with you that he did wrong, and very wrong at tbat, regardless of whether the audience was paying 50 cents or 10 cents per seat.

A shunt wound generator of a motor-generator set can be used all right, but it will work much better if compounded, provided the compounding be done with reference to the work tbe machine is to do.

You ask whether one can operate two arc lamps in series with a motor generator set. If you mean can the two arcs be struck, why yes. That can, I think, be done with almost any motor generator set. But if you mean is it possible to maintain satisfactory illumination, from the projection point of view, using two hand fed arc lamps in series, operating from a constant potential generator, that would not be practical, and even with a constant current generator it would bardly be practical unless you used automatic feed lamps, because the minute one arc got tbe least bit longer than the otber its voltage would rise higher than the other, and tbe illumination of both lamps would thus be directly affected. To obtain satisfactory results eacb arc would bave to be maintained at absolutely constant length.

Bright Men.

Charles S. Stuckey, Niagara Falls, Canada, says:

> Enclosed find a couple of answers I have managed to find time to evolve. I am temporarily disconnected from the movie game, and bave returned to my old place of employment on the switcbboard of tbe Canadian Niagara Power Company, whicb is one of Niagara's "big sbows." I am sorry I could not get time to answer more of tbe questions. I have made the long trip from Edmonton, Alberta, where I hung up my bat during a considerable period. Glad to see my old pal, Bill Allen, on the Honor Roll a few times. Tbere are lots of bright young men in Edmonton, particularly in the union. I am afraid, however, they need a little sbaking up, or awakening. Am much interested in the drawings and accompanying descriptive matter by Friend Martin. He sure must have some "noodle" to dig up such original dope. My best regards to Martin, and tbe rest of tbe "department belpers."

Right you are, Brother Stuckey, wben you say "department helpers." I bave often said it is not "my" department, but "our" department, because tbe correspondents are just as important as tbe editor. True, I could conduct a department, and possibly an acceptable one, too, without a single correspondent, but it would not begin to do anywhere near the good it does when I have tbe combined help of many able operators, and even the man who asks what seems to be a foolish question frequently does a lot of good, because he sets tbe editor and others thinking, and even though we may laugh, still we get good out of it. Just stop and consider tbat proposition for a moment, my brothers, and you will see that it is true.

I am sorry about Edmonton—its location, I mean. I know it is a live wire, and I would like to visit it on my trip next winter, but it is so far out of tbe way tbat the trip would, I am afraid, be altogetber too expensive. Tbe Moving Picture World could bardly be expected to stand tbe expense of the long trip which would be necessary in order to reacb tbat far-off spot, just to visit our comparatively small union, much as I would like to. We welcome you back, Brother Stuckey, and hope you will be witb us for a long time, whetber you are actively engaged in operating or not.

Drill and Dynamite.

Cbauncey L. Greene, Grantsburg, Wis., in writing of another matter says:

> I bave one of your latest Handbooks, third edition, and nobody could separate me from it, even with a drill and dynamite.

That is not the way they usually do it, Brotber Greene. As a rule, where the owner is separated from tbe Handbook, it is done by the simple process of "lend me your handbook for a day or two will you," which "day or two" lengtbens out into—well it never comes back.

Dark Room Illumination.

In the arrangement and use of lights in a "dark room" for negative work either red, green or yellow light may be employed, and although the greatest precaution is necessary when handling sensitive film before and during the first few minutes of development, yet a good amount of light may be used to illumine the walls and ceiling of the room, providing the source of light is not near to, nor directly shining on the sensitive film.

To blacken the walls and ceiling is unnecessary for the intelligent and careful worker, but if he be of the type that leaves doors open and lets strong daylight on the walls, then certainly blacken them, or else lock him in until he has finished; or, preferably, get rid of the careless man, for he is sure to invent some other method of doing mischief. The important thing to remember is that the danger of fogging film alters in inverse ratio to the square of its distance from the source of light when the latter is an electric lamp with colored glass in front of it, and very nearly so when translucent paper or other substance is used in the place of clear glass.

We will carry out an imaginary test, and show the application of this rule. It is desirable to test a red lamp which gives a good bright light. At two feet distance from it we will place a board, and on it lay a piece of sensitive film three quarters of it covered by a piece of black paper, and turn on the lamp. After a minute we shall shift the black paper so that half of the strip is exposed, leave it thus for half a minute, then shift the paper so that now three-quarters of the film is open to the light; leave it for another half minute, then remove the paper, but leave a five-cent piece lying on this hitherto unexposed end, and give a one minute exposure. Thus the four divisions of the film have received exposures of 1, 1½, 2 and 2½ minutes, and the part sheltered by the coin has not been exposed at all. The strip is developed in total darkness in a strong bath which we know would bring everything possible up in an under exposed negative in a known number of minutes and is left in it for this time. It is then fixed and rinsed in water and taken into daylight.

The lamp which was absolutely safe at six feet, so that the film could be exposed to it for eighteen minutes without fogging, will at a distance of three feet be safe—for how long? Three inches is one twenty-fourth of six feet, so when we bring it within three inches of the lamp to see how the image is progressing during the early stage of development, it is in light five hundred and seventy-six times stronger than before, so the safe time will be 1-576 of 18 minutes, or about one and three-quarters seconds, and it will fog if held there for three seconds. Now we see the importance of a thorough understanding of this rule and how easily a negative can be ruined by being held too near to what is considered a safe light.

How, then, is it possible to work safely among these dangers; must we work in darkness? Light the room with a good bright red or yellow light that will not fog a test strip at two feet distance in one minute, and let it be in such a position that no undeveloped film will ever be brought nearer than eight feet where it could with safety remain for 16 minutes. Let the walls be white so that there is a comfortable amount of light all over the room, owing to reflection, and place a shelter between the framing up bench or stand and the light, so that during the somewhat lengthy process of putting the film on the frame it will receive only the reflected light from the walls, reflected walls are easy to see by, but affect the emulsion far less than the direct light (we need not enter into the theory, but the fact can be easily tested and proven), and with the above arrangement the film will not be fogged by half an hour's exposure on the framing stand. When the film is on the frame, switch out the light close to the developing tank, and leave that one which is about eight feet away, put the frame in the tank and put a cover over it. We know that the developer takes about ten minutes (let us say) to complete its work, so wait five minutes, giving the frame an occasional shake, then switch up the developing light, and as the film is far less sensitive we can examine it without danger and then put it back and cover the dish until we think it should be finished; look at it again and either take it out or allow further development, as the case may be. Thus we work in a comfortable light and perfect safety.

If any chemical fog has occurred during development—and by this vaguely applied term we may understand fog which has not been caused by the action of light—it will show on the little round spot where the coin lay, and which has never been exposed, so that we can allow for it by calling that spot clear film and comparing the other parts to it. Let us say that on so comparing the parts we find that the exposures of 1, 1½ and 2 minutes have made no impression on the film, but the 2½ minutes exposure has made that part just faintly different from all the rest of it; this means that the red lamp did not fog film exposed to it for 2 minutes at a distance of two feet, but did fog when the film was left for 2½ minutes. A film can be put on a frame in 15 minutes with ease, so we desire to have a film that will not fog in that length of time. If the lamp we tested was safe for 2 minutes at 2 feet, how far away must it be to allow a safe 15-minute exposure, or, say, eight times as long as 2 minutes? At twice the distance it can be exposed four times as long; at three times the distance, or nine times as long exposure may be safely given, and so on, according to the mathematical law of inverse ratios and the power of light at varying distances, and physically the safer is the greater.

We must not forget that this law has an inverse bearing. The writer has known of valuable negatives having been injured by ignorance of this fact. Those mysterious foggings which with some workmen occasionally occur when it was declared that every care was taken, and that the film stock was bad—are due to ignorance of this law and an obstinate determination on the part of the culprit not to take the advice of those who know more than he does. The writer speaks with some force on this matter, because there is nothing meaner than the action of an obstinate man when he wilfully refuses advice and, spoiling another's work, throws the blame on the other worker. For a manager to listen to the gossip of the unlearned, when he has not the technical knowledge requisite to see where the faults really lie, is to start that most fatal thing, the shifting of the blame on the absent, and encouraging dishonesty among the staff; the most untruthful will always come off best in such a game.

The glass, paper or other material used to cover the lamp should be tested with a spectroscope to see that it does not merely dim the light, and at the same time let the chemically active rays through it, but that it really stops those chemically active rays and lets the harmless ones through, for we want as many and as much of these latter as possible, so as to be able to see what we are doing in the room. There are many excellent brands of such paper and material, which have been carefully tested by the manufacturers, and also it is easy to get the proper kind of glass, so that there is no use for the circulating libraries which some people like to glue around their lamps. A quantity of the wrong sort of fabric on a lamp only makes it difficult to work in a room and accidents are liable to happen more under these conditions than when a proper and stronger light is used.

Comparative Speed of Cine Film.

There have been many calls for speed ratios between the various brands of cinematograph films that the following table is given as being an approximate speed ratio of the various makes.

As no two emulsions are ever exactly alike in speed, these numbers are given as a guide only, and cannot be guaranteed as being of hair-splitting accuracy, but they may be relied on as being sufficiently correct for all ordinary purposes of exposure. As a rule, Panchromatic emulsions do not retain their color sensitiveness for long periods, and indeed any film that is not fresh should be tested for sensitiveness before using.

The writer has used Eastman film two years old with good results, but it was carefully stored in a cool, dry place. On the other hand, film that was practically fresh but had been in a damp tropical climate was insensitive in spots and could not be used on account of the large transparent blotches which disfigured the emulsion where the combined action of the moisture and heat and possible fungi had acted upon it.

In the following table the highest numbers represent the greatest sensitiveness.

Hydrochinon Being Manufactured.

Photographers the country over will be much satisfied to know that American manufacturers are awaking to the field before them in the production of chemicals for the photographic trade. Just before going to press word comes to us that the Du Pont Chemical Works are now producing hydrochinon on a small scale, but expect that it will soon be a standard Du Pont product, manufactured on a large scale. We also hear that the Abbott Alkaloidal Company produced about a ton of hydrochinon during the month past, and that the manufacture of mono-methyl-paramidophenol sulphate, or in its better known name, Metol, has commenced.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by Clarence E. Sinn and S. M. Berg

Musical Setting for "What Happened At 22."

Released June 26 by the World Film Corp'n.

(Suggestions prepared by S. M. Berg by special arrangements with G. Schirmer, Inc., Music Publishers, New York.)

THIS "Musical Suggestion Cue Sheet" is not designed to solve every possible musical requirement of the film, but is intended as a partial solution of the problem—what to play for the picture. It has proven to be of great assistance to the leader, not only by relieving to a degree the tedium of rehearsals, but by assisting materially in overcoming those conditions encountered when the film is not available until the hour of performance.

Musical Suggestion Cue Sheets can be obtained (free of charge) by managors from their local exchange in advance of the date of release, and a sufficient number should be secured to provide one for each member of the orchestra. This will afford to the progressive leader an opportunity to acquaint himself with the general character of the film drama he is to portray with his orchestra.

Together with the suggested music at the title or descripitve cues where it is to be played, the tempo or characteristic is given so that the leader can select or substitute any or all of the numbers from his own library, thereby avoiding any financial outlay though still carrying out the interpretation.

The timing of the picture is based on a speed of 15 minutes to a thousand feet. The time indications will help the leader to anticipate the various cues which may consist of the printed sub-title (marked T) or a described action (marked D). For instance: 8T, "Wilfred White," is a sub-title and is printed reading matter on the screen. But 57½ D, "When Dave turns out light," is a description of action.

Dave Wilson, a forger, is in love with Louise Lloyd, who is applying for a position to the Hollister Employment Agency, run by a man in league with Dave's schemes. Louise ultimately gets a position as companion in Joseph Knowlton's house. She meets Frank, the son, and a mutual liking springs up. Dave, seeking information, becomes a valet in the same house. Knowlton is investigating some forgeries in which Dave is implicated. Learning this Dave attempts his murder. Dave is arrested and Knowlton recovers from the attack. The story closes with the future happiness of the lovers.

This is a modern crook story with considerable change of action. Note the misteriosos and agitatos as suggested.

Note particularly: Telephone bells, 8 and 50½; police whistle, 59¼.

The theme selected is "I'm A-longin' Fo' You"—Hathaway.

Time schedule: 70 minutes (five reels, 4,750 feet).

"The Battle of the Victors."

(By S. M. Berg.)

There has just been presented in New York City two feature films: "The Fall of a Nation," by Thomas Dixon, music by Viitor Herbert, and "Civilization," by Thomas H. Ince, music by Victor Schertzinger. By a peculiar coincidence the given name of both the authors is Thomas and, stranger still, that of both the musical composers is Victor.

Victor Herbert, born in Dublin, Ireland, in the year 1859, and educated in Europe, is well-known as a composer of all characters of music. Suites, symphonies, operas and operettas are all from the prollfic writer's pen.

Victor Schertzinger, born in Philadelphia in 1889, was educated in New York and Europe. At the early age of 16 he was a soloist on the concert platform and since then has been responsible for many original musical settings for feature films. Among them may be mentioned "Peggy" and "The Beggar of Cawnpore."

It was with considerable interest that the writer visited the Liberty and Criterion Theatres to hear what would be presented as a musical interpretation of these great films. Both give every opportunity to run the whole gauntlet of human emotions with their snatches of comedy, deep pathos, magnificent military and marine spectacles and colossal battle scenes. What more could a composer wish for?

Victor Herbert's score will stand as a master conception of orchestration. It can be safely said that in no work which has ever come from this famous composer have such opportunities arisen for him as in the scoring of this film. In lighter vein the Italian episode and the orchestral effect of organ-grinding is masterful in its humor. The opening with the American spirit calling to the oppressed of the European nations, the theme of the treacherous European rulers, the inspiring military air at the scenes of the marching armies are all distinctive and characteristic. The outstanding musical setting, however, is the one interpreting the signing of the Declaration of Independence. And those battle scenes, where the action depicting the advance or retreat, the success or failure of the enterprise, are musically there. If the troops advance, you are inspired to advance with them. In retreat you feel it is under orders and not the desire of the fighters. Victor Herbert has indeed shown what can be done in the musical score and has brought to bear upon it all of the art and knowledge of which he is master.

In listening to Victor L. Schertzinger's musical interpretation of "Civilization," it was with some knowledge of what this young genius could do. A careful study has been made of almost all his scores and some have been dissected and discussed in these columns. Of course it was expected that he would attempt to outdo himself in his present effort and royally he has arisen to the occasion. Not satisfied with a musical interpretation, he is also responsible for the words sung by the soloists and the incidental choruses. Without doubt the outstanding composition is the loyal martial air. We hear it first as the introduction, then with the King and his court, again when war is declared and the armies march to battle, and again at the close when peace is declared and they return to the arms of their beloved ones. One is almost inclined to feel that more is expected of Schertzinger than of Herbert, for he has had the one needed thing in this particular line—experience. Whatever may have been expected, every thought and wish is gratified. At the opening of "Civilization" we are treated to a stage setting with voice solo and human characters depicting a pastoral scene of peace and plenty. As the day breaks and the sun rises we hear the booming of cannon and the whistle of exploding shells, and we see depicted before our eyes the horrors of war. Here I think is where Schertzinger excells himself. The pastora airs and the solo are delightful and their interpretation of the scene is perfect.

To sum up these wonderful works, we find on one hand age and experience and on the other youth and genius. In the battle for supremacy neither is superior to the other so an honorable draw must be declared with both receiving the sincere compliments and good wishes of those interested in better music for the picture.

Musical Terms.

Musicians and lawyers have one thing in common, a delight to argue over the definition of a word. Musical terms are composed of words from all foreign languages, principally French, German and Italian. There are many dictionaries that give us so-called interpretations of these terms but musicians differ considerably with them. Of course one of the reasons for this is that so many musicians in America are using these languages as their mother tongue with the result that they give them a personal interpretation different from the recognized one. Again words of a foreign origin when adapted to another language frequently carry some different meaning. Realizing the controversy over the original literal meaning of musical terms and the modern interpretation given, a compiled list will be found of the common ones in use and their modern interpretation. There will also be found the common abbreviation of the words which will accompany them in brackets.

A

ACCELERANDO (ACCEL).—Gradually faster; livelier.
ACCENTO.—Accented; marked; enforced; accent the notes; an irregular stress.
ACCIDENTAL.—Any chromatic sign not found in the key signature, occurring in the course of the piece.

Long Auto Trip for "Dusty" Farnum

Pallas Pictures Star in Journey from San Diego to Bucksport, Me., Will Make Good His Pet Name.

NOT only a cross-country automobile trip, but one that will start at the most southwesterly point in the United States and has a northeasterly point as its destination is now being arranged for by Dustin Farnum, the popular Pallas-Paramounut star. With San Diego, Cal., as the starting point "Dutsy" is mapping out a route that will terminate at Bucksport, Me., his home town, where he will spend his summer vacation.

It is expected that the popular Pallas Pictures idol will start on his transcontinental trip immediately upon conclusion of his work on his latest photoplay vehicle, "The Parson of Panamint," now being produced at the Pallas studios in Los Angeles, which will be released around the end of June. It is also planned to have the first print of "The Parson of Panamint" delivered to Carl H. Pierce, head of the New York office, by "Dusty" on his way through New York. The player will be accompanied by Tom Kennedy, the well-known pugilist, who has promised to lift the car out of any bad spots encountered on the trip.

Motion picture men all along the line are planning big receptions for the well-known film star, and that this trip will create wide interest not only among followers of the motion pictures but also in the automobile world is readily expected.

Turner Pictures on Mutual Program

FLORENCE TURNER, the screen's oldest favorite, is to star in a series of six five-act Mutual Star productions, the first of which, "Far from the Madding Crowd," a picturization of John Hardy's ever popular story, will be released by the Mutual Film Corporation on June 19. Subsequent Mutual Star productions in which Miss Turner will be featured are "Doorsteps," a screen version of the famous English comedy of the same name, to be released July 20; "The Welsh Singer," to be released August 17; "The First Settler's Story," picturized from Will Carleton's widely read poem, for release September 14; "Shop Girls," a five-act sociological drama, to be released October 12, and "Redeemed," a human-interest drama which will go to the public November 9.

Florence Turner.

In each of these productions Miss Turner will be supported by a powerful company of players, among them Campbell Gullan, Malcolm Cherry, Henry Edwards, who will appear opposite Miss Turner and others of equal note. All six productions were screened under the direction of Larry Trimble, known as one of the ablest motion picture directors connected with the industry.

Miss Turner occupies a most unique position in the hearts of the picturegoers both in this country and abroad. To her belongs the distinction of being the first actress to be featured in a photodrama. Early in her picture work Miss Turner was the only player then before the public who was honored by having her name used in connection with the advertising of a picture. She was the first to head her own company of screen players.

Florence Turner is first and last an actress. There is no part that she does not make stand out, and there is no phase of film acting she does not comprehend.

"A Matrimonial Martyr"

Five-Part Gold Rooster Play, Beautifully Colored and Featuring Ruth Roland.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

WHAT this production lacks in comedy, the element it is supposed to portray most strongly, is compensated for to a large extent in the artistic beauty of coloring, settings, photography, etc. The charming personality of Ruth Roland is at its best as she plays the role of Erma Desmond romping on her uncle's farm; but she is less at home in the character of Mrs. Stanley, the discontented wife of a scientist. Playing a double role is always more or less of a tax, and in those scenes presenting double exposure work the picture will win much admiration.

Those supporting Miss Roland are Andrew Arbuckle, Daniel Gilfether, Marguerite Nichols and Henry Gray. The story treats of how Erma Desmond, persecuted by a grouchy uncle, decides to elope with her sweetheart. When they are about to depart she changes her mind and goes to visit a friend in the city. Another change of mind converts her into the companion of Mrs. Stanley, who, noticing the girl's similarity to herself in appearance, takes advantage of the opportunity to make an extensive trip, leaving Erma in charge and assuming the name of Mrs. Stanley. Queer complications occur, including the return from abroad of Mr. Stanley, who proceeds to fall in love with his wife as he supposes Erma to be.

The production lacks in a measure that spontaneity of circumstance that makes for good comedy, but is a beautiful production as before stated. It was made at the Balboa studios in the California sunshine and has gained much thereby.

First of "Sonny Boy" Pictures

Tefft Johnson Film Corporation Issues Single Reels in Which Children Are Featured.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

THESE comedies of child life possess the same wholesome flavor and natural humor that characterize Booth Tarkington's famous "Penrod" stories. The central character is a boy, about as mischievous as a normal youth of his years should be, and for partners in harmless deviltry he has all the children of the neighborhood, including a little colored girl, who bids fair to become one of the strongest comedy elements in the series. Tefft Johnson is writing the scenarios, directing, and acting the part of the father, with Willie Johnson playing Sonny Boy, whose initial adventures go under the names of "Sonny Boy at the Bat," "Sonny Boy in School Days" and "Sonny Boy and the Dog Show."

The first of the three pictures opens with scenes of a ball game where the youngster's ambitions are inflamed so that he dreams of himself as the proud possessor of a uniform and a bat. With these marks of greatness he sets out to win the prettiest little girl in town, and of course his prowess is suitably rewarded. The school days story, showing how Sonny Boy starts for school but lingers by the wayside to strike up an acquaintance with a colored girl of his own age, has a surer comedy touch. A basket of laundry is left by the wayside for a goat to devour while Sonny Boy introduces his new friend to the classroom. The democracy of healthy childhood is amusingly illustrated in this number.

"Sonny Boy and the Dog Show" contains a first rate idea carefully carried out, an idea that more than any of the others is reminiscent of "Penrod." Seeing pictures of a fashionable dog show, the children of the neighborhood determine to have their own exhibit which they stage with local canine talent. All of these subjects may be recommended.

Biographs in Two and Three Reels

"By Man's Law," a Strong Drama—"The Billionaire," an Extravagant Comedy Elaborately Staged.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

AMONG the many excellent pictures reissued by Biograph during the past months, few are more worth while in point of theme and treatment than "By Man's Law," a two-part drama based on the hypocrisy of reformers who do nothing to better the conditions that cause suffering and crime. It is a story of unpleasant facts, pardonably exaggerated for dramatic purposes, and given a personal illustration in the lives of several convincingly drawn characters.

There is the oil king, responsible for a strike which brings misery to the hundreds of families thrown out of work, also his complacent son, a leader of the Society for the Prevention of Vice, whose activities increase as the physical welfare of the community declines. Interest is focused on the fate of a young man who finds himself without either employment or money and on his sister, ready to do any kind of work to tide over the hard times. White slavers regard the girl as fair prey and are attempting to influence her with glowing promises when the vice committee interferes and places the innocent child in a reform school. Her escape, her death and the revenge of her grief-crazed brother are brought out in scenes of tragic intensity, admirably acted by Mae Marsh, Alfred Paget, Bobby Harron, Charles Mailes, Donald Crisp and Antonio Moreno.

For small town audiences "The Billionaire," a three-part picture containing plenty of broad comedy, should do very well. It was produced on an elaborate scale to give impressive effects in the presentation of midnight gayeties in a Parisian restaurant, and equally fine from a spectacular viewpoint, are the scenes of a musical comedy performance. The story is slight, but affords sufficient opportunity for an able cast, including Charles Mailes, Gertrude Bambrick, Dave Morris and Isabel Rea.

"La Vie De Boheme"

Alice Brady is Starred in Extremely Artistic Paragon-World Film Picture Directed by Albert Capellani.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

PRODUCED with rare taste to realize the full romantic value of Henri Murgur's story and acted with intelligence and feeling, "La Vie De Boheme" occupies a certain place among five-part photoplays of the first class. It might well have been extended several reels, without running the risk of wearying an audience, for there is a winning charm and sentiment in the presentation of the tragic career of Mimi sure to arouse responsive emotions where a story more complicated in its construction but less irresistibly human in its appeal would leave the spectator unmoved. The book, not the opera, was the model, and Director Albert Capellani caught the spirit of the original work with remarkable completeness, whereas Alice Brady's interpretation of Mimi is unquestionably the best thing she has done for the screen.

Scene from "La Vie De Boheme" (World).

In producing a subject of this description Director Capellani, being a Frenchman with an intimate knowledge of French life, feeling and traditions, is in a peculiarly fortunate position. The spirit of the Latin Quarter in Paris and of Bohemia and also the combination of irresponsibility, gay abandon and unselfish kindliness characteristic of the impecunious artists that live for the joys of the moment are expressed in the scenes of this photoplay as they have seldom been expressed in the past. Such is the setting of environment and character prepared for a sympathetic portrayal of the love affair of Mimi and Rudolphe. Their unhappy romance seems to be a natural part of a life not governed by social laws effective in more conventional communities, yet in the end grievously affected by them, for Rudolphe, it will be recalled, is an aristocratic Bohemian, anxious but unable to throw off the ties of wealth and family.

The meeting of the innocent girl, unaccustomed to the wiles of men, and Rudolphe, who has left his uncle that he may live in the Latin Quarter, is prettily pictured and extremely well acted by Miss Brady and Paul Capellani. There are many delicate little touches of characterization, as the passion between them grows and Mimi is asked to prove her love by sacrificing it for the sake of Rudolphe's career. Miss Brady is altogether sincere and convincing in indicating the self-sacrificing devotion of the girl, who remains true to her love through every trial, and beautifully pathetic are the scenes preceding her death as she lies on a couch surrounded by friends whose kindly attentions come too late.

Atmospheric settings, artistic lighting and perfect photography play a considerable part in making the picture the exceptional example of screen art that it is. Then the acting is uniformly good, with Chester Barnett and Zena Keefe making much of the parts of Marcel and Musette.

"A Woman's Honor"

Fox Melodrama of Italy and America That Is Sensational, Realistic and Full of Atmosphere.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THERE is an up-to-date quality, a realism in atmosphere and a spaciousness in this picture that carries its melodramatically romantic story along with considerable sweep. It is called "A Woman's Honor," and its heroine, played by Jose Collins, is an Italian girl of the hills who in the opening scenes affiances herself to a young man of the village, who is leaving for America to make a home for her. She goes to Naples to make her living while she waits, and there falls into the clutches of a certain "terrible woman," and in a barred room of her magnificent house is visited by a count. She is strong and the woman has to come to the count's assistance to quell her. The backgrounds of these Italian scenes are quite convincing. The girl is given enough money to get to America and in the Pittsburgh coal region (actual backgrounds) she meets her lover dying from a mine explosion. Over his dead body she swears to destroy those who have done her so much harm. The spectator will be sure to keep his eyes on the screen while the tale is being unfolded.

There are scenes in New York where, after the death of her lover, the heroine begins a new chapter of her history that carries her back to the old country, where she murders both the count and the "terrible woman." Her new lover, a rich Italian lawyer of New York, goes back with her. He is the nephew of the count, but when her vengeance is complete and he learns her story, he takes her back with him to "the land of happiness" over the sunlit sea. It is a picture that will amply justify itself in the box office, and there is nothing in it that should cause any censor to fail to give it free approval.

"The Purple Lady"

Sidney Rosenfield's Comedy Is Basis for a Rolfe Five-Reel Picture Full of Amusing Characters and Situations.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

WHILE "The Purple Lady" was on the screen at the Metro projection room the reviewer was oblivious to the discomfort of a warm and humid day and a small room quite filled with people. The characters in the picture are splendidly done, and, while the developing situations keep one looking forward with expectancy, the unexpected and delightfully irresponsible antics of the story bring up much that will make laughter and some of it will be good and hearty. It is full of the atmosphere of "a good time" among the "White Lights."

One starts out with disliking the leading character, Silas, played by Ralph Herz, whom the plot ill-advisedly made "unpleasant"; but it doesn't last, due wholly to the player, who compels us to forget that he is a hypocrite; he almost turns him into a good fellow. The scenario would have escaped this disability by making him only a subordinate member of the "Up-Lift." Allan Hale plays a light and airy villain—"Count," smuggler, thief and lover of the "Purple Lady," who dances at the Purple Cafe. This charmer, drunk or sober, is played by Irene Howley. The story is all about a necklace which the count has stolen and given to the Purple Lady to "dispose of." Silas, engaged to marry an heiress (played by Gretchen Hartman) has seen the Lady and taken her to Coney Island. She has the necklace with her. When she is drunk she forgets, and next morning Silas is astonished to find that he has a pearl necklace; so is his housekeeper. His friend the detective (George Pauncefote) is looking for the necklace. Before long circumstances bring 'em together, necklace, detective, detective's wife (Cora Williams), Count, "Lady" and all, at the home of the heiress, and the time is just before the wedding. The heiress' father is played by Howard Truesdell and her mother by Mrs. William Bechtel. There is a most astonishing tangle of affairs in which every little inconvenient item in the hero's troubles, effectively disposed of for the moment, makes things worse in the end, till, if it had not been that the detective is his friend, he would have been in an awful fix.

We cannot honestly praise the photography except in the interior scenes, which are usually the best part of any picture at all. One may notice, too, a lack of enthusiasm shown, to take one instance, by the Count's wearing the same suit for all times and scenes. But the backgrounds were well chosen and with an eye to the audience's sense of beauty. The stage sets, too, were ably-conceived and constructed.

George Lessey had charge of the direction. June Mathis prepared the screen adaptation, and there is one player besides those mentioned, Guido Colucci, in the part of the cafe owner, who also did good work.

"Destiny's Toy"

John O'Brien Writes and Directs a Famous Players' Four-Part Good All-Around Melodrama.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IT IS good melodrama that John O'Brien gives us in the Famous Players' four-part "Destiny's Toy," released June 15. Mr. O'Brien is the writer as well as the producer of the story. Louise Huff has the leading role, that of Nan, a singular castaway, raised from childhood to young womanhood by a fisherman and who upon his death goes to the city. Miss Huff is surrounded by a good acting cast, which includes J. W. Johnston, John Bowers, Harry Lee, John Dillon and Tammany Young. The exteriors, or rather those that pertain to the seashore, are staged in picturesque rocky locations.

Miss Huff as the child of the shore and as the girl who meets such stirring adventures in the city, where she is under duress employed by a band of thieves, satisfactorily fills the role of Nan. Mr. Johnston as Carter, the father, who, as the result of a shipwreck loses his daughter, only to meet her grown to womanhood in later years, is forceful, convincing. Mr. Dillon is a good Bad Riley, the sturdy chief of the thugs. Mr. Bowers has the role of the Rev. William Carter, adopted in childhood and educated for the ministry by the wealthy Carter, who believes himself childless.

The story has many human touches, especially in the earlier stages of the story in the scenes between the fisherman and the child. There are, too, strongly contrasting types in those who surround Carter and in the thugs. There are strong situations in the scenes where the thieves set out to rob the home of Carter, the killing of the butler, the pursuit by and the battle with the police and the taking over by the minister of the care of Nan. There are lighter moments, too, such as the attempt by the socially ambitious woman to match her daughter with the minister or the romping of the clergyman with his ward. The denouement, wherein Carter discovers in Nan the daughter he had supposed drowned and to whose marriage with his adopted son he had dissented, takes advantage of the dramatic possibilities.

"The Prima Donna's Husband"

Five-part Triumph Production in Which the Combined Efforts of Julius Steger and Joseph A. Golden Bring Good Results.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE screen version of the old French play of which a private showing was given at the Lyceum theater on Monday morning, June 12, was written by Edna G. Riley. Its star is Holbrook Blinn, with Clara Whipple and Kathryn Browne Decker in the feminine leads. The play, which had the finest of success in days gone by on the American as well as the European stage, is of that deeply emotional type that appeals to most of us. It pulls at the heart strings in spite of resolutions to be immune from sentimentality.

The picture, although wonderfully impressive, is not, technically speaking, faultless; nor are its faults numerous. Perhaps the most careless spot, and this is due to the cutter, occurs where Henry Vale, the husband of the prima donna, enters a carriage to follow his wife to a certain hotel where she is to be entertained by a wealthy society man. This scene is followed after a sudden cut by a similar one in which the carriage, faced in the opposite direction, is drawing up in front of the hotel with Vale alighting. Another lapse in detail shows Vale being released from prison on parole, and still in his convict garb when he is sent to the outside world with good wishes and letters of recommendation. But in spite of these and other hindrances to smoothness of development it cannot be denied that the production is a powerful one. Holbrook Blinn, as the musical director, who in a moment of passion and perhaps self-defense, stabbed the man who interfered with his domestic happiness, and was sentenced to a life term in Sing Sing, gives an excellent impersonation. Clara Whipple as the daughter of the trays accurately the various psychological effects caused by her contact with people and conditions.

C. J. Van Deusen has directed this production, in which Evart Overton, Templer Saxe, William Dunn and John Costello appear in the supporting cast. In "The Man Behind the Curtain" we see a distinctly melodramatic type of photoplay. It boasts a pretentious story, which was written by Minnie Krakauer, is artistic in development, perfectly consistent, and presents the extreme play of circumstances that characterizes legitimate melodrama. The most startling character in the play is Perkins, played by Templer Saxe. He is the butler in the Stanhope home where Edna Hall, an orphan girl, goes to apply for the position of secretary to its mistress, whom she finds dead. A hand protruding from the portieres drops a dagger, the girl drops her letter of application and her handkerchief as she flees. The butler picks them up, and hereby hangs the thread of circumstantial evidence which the villainous Perkins holds over her head in later years when, by a strange freak of fate, she meets and becomes the wife of Mrs. Stanhope's son.

The picture was released on Monday, June 19, and is one of the best productions of its kind appearing on the market.

"The Return"

A Gripping Photodrama in Three Reels by Selig, Featuring Kathlyn Williams and Guy Oliver.

The charm of life that all men seek,
The joy of love they prize,
Is only found one place on earth—
In woman's soul and eyes.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

W. E. WING has given us a story in "The Return" (a three-reel subject, by Selig, to be released on July 3, through the General Film Co.) that will be received by everybody with a spirit of thankfulness because it possesses the vital element of being "somewhat different" from the ordinary run of photodramatic stories, and that it also has a grip that steadily increases in intensity until the end.

Director Heffron has fully realized all the possibilities of the story in the production. His apt use of double exposure at times to show the spectator the mental workings of Ione (Kathlyn Williams), a society favorite, who suffers from inheriting the savage strain of her ancestors, serves the double purpose of making dark places clear and of adding a tinge of mysticism that increases attention.

In the scene where Ione is shown in a state of mental chaos, in the choice between Rutley (Guy Oliver), a man of high intelligence, who is a leader in business circles, and the strong man Pascho (Wellington Playter), who makes a living by juggling with 400-pound dumb bells, the resort to double exposure brings the workings of Ione's mind clearly before the spectator. As she looks at the photograph of Pascho it suddenly becomes transformed into that of Rutley; and as she leans back, with eyes closed, dreaming of Pascho and his mighty strength, he appears to the spectator at the point towards which she appears to be gazing. She changes her position and we catch sight of Rutley at a new point in her line of vision. By this means the mental and intellectual struggle between the woman in her that is born of civilization and the woman in her that is born of atavism is conveyed to the intelligent spectator in a way that is clearly understood. This I consider a great triumph for the moving picture, so far as its power of expressing involved emotions is concerned.

Kathlyn Williams may well refer to Ione as one of her best studied efforts, in the long list of her photodramatic successes. That scene in the box, in the vaudeville theater, where Pascho by his brute strength attempts to make Ione subservient to his wish, is a splendid illustration of the superior strength of woman's will and a higher intelligence. She humbles the great mass of brawn and muscle by a look and an imperial toss of the head.

Guy Oliver's Rutley is in keeping with quite a number of excellent characterizations that can be placed to his credit. As Pascho. Wellington Playter photographs well and acts competently. The part of Maritana, the vivacious little vaudeville signer and dancer, who loves Pascho and who is ardently loved by him, is played very well, indeed, by Miss Vivian Reed. Sidney Smith's Bela is excellently drawn and shows all the venom and spite of an Italian of the lower class, who lives by his wits. Bela loves Maritana and naturally hates Pascho with all the bitterness of his race.

This fine picture cannot fail to raise the standard of the General Film Company's programs. The excellent cast shows that William N. Selig is doing his best towards that end.

A Pair of Kalems

"The Music Swindlers," the Fourteenth Installment of "The Social Pirates," and "The Beggar and His Child," a One-Reel "Ham" Comedy That Must Be Seen to Be Appreciated.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

"The Music Swindlers."

THE particular form of swindling exposed in this installment of "The Social Pirates" is one of the most despicable and also one of the most flourishing forms of preying upon the unwary. The number of young women whose parents and friends have been led by some rascally teacher of music to impoverish themselves in order to develop the voice of the misguided aspirants for an operatic career is added to daily in all the large cities. The young girl who is the victim of the swindler in the fourteenth episode of the George Bronson Howard serial is fortunate enough to make the acquaintance of Mona and Mary, and these two energetic women get after the professor without loss of time. The man tries in every way to hold on to his ill-gotten gains, but proves no match for the duo of wrong-righters who have already come off victorious in thirteen previous encounters with rogues of his stamp. The plot is laid and hatched, and the singing teacher's dupe is able to start life anew with $5,000 of recovered money as a nest egg. The action is filled with touch and go, and Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby dash and beam through it, armed (and, occasionally, bare-armed) with a woman's strongest weapon—a gratifying supply of becoming frocks. Frank Jonasson, R. L. Dell, E. Forrest Taylor, Priscilla Dean, Edward Clisbee and R. E. Bradbury are cast for other parts.

"The Beggar and His Child."

"Truth will out!" No funnier "Ham" comedy than "The Beggar and His Child" has ever been released by the Kalem company. In a desperate attempt to avoid work and to capture the nimble nickel, Ham and Bud determine to become street musicians, and Bud disguises himself as an innocent child of the suffragette sex. And a charming picture of sweet artlessness he doth make! He is adopted by a family of wealth, in the orthodox manner laid down for juvenile heroines, and to see him, surrounded by his pretty toys, playing "gee-gee" with his doting papa or tucked safely away with his Teddybear in his little bed, is to behold a beautiful and touching sight. The inserts accompanying several of the scenes are aptly humorous. The credit for the scenario and its directing must go to Ham. "Muscular but unforced" describes the fun with which he has filled the reel.

William Russell's next big Mustang five-reeler in the series personally supervised and presented by Samuel S. Hutchinson, is to be "The Torch Bearer," in which he appears as the millionaire owner-editor of a newspaper, the watchword of which is "Clean Politics."

Vitagraph Director Van Dyke Brooke is working on a Broadway Star Feature with Leah Baird in the leading role. Mr. Brooke also plays in the production with George Arvin, Jack Ellis and Harry Fisher. The picture will be released in three reels.

"Broken Fetters"

Five-part Bluebird Production Features Violet Mersereau in Oriental Melodrama.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE story of "Broken Fetters" has been cleverly written and produced by Rex Ingram. While it takes the spectator in the most insuggestive way possible into the home of a rich Chinaman, "dealer in merchandise and souls," in the Chinatown section of New York, the picture is fraught with much sunlight and beauty in the personality of dainty Violet Mersereau, both in the wonderful gardens of her foster-father's home in China, and in the artistically furnished but vice-imbued house of her captor in America. There are also gentle touches of comedy in evidence; and although some might object to the central theme of the play, the sweetness and purity of the girl who passes unscathed through the most dangerous part of her journey toward freedom lifts the tone of the picture above the sordid level to which otherwise it might have descended.

The early part of the story in which Kittens Reicherts makes good as the child Mignon, daughter of the American consul at Hongkong, shows how, bereft of her only surviving parent, Mignon is adopted by a wealthy Chinese mandarin. Grown to young womanhood Mignon prays repeatedly to her favorite joss to be allowed to go to America. One day while she is absorbed in prayer before the joss the Chinese trader, Foo Shai from America, overhears her and leads the innocent girl through the gate of the city to the sea beyond which, he tells her, lies the wonderful land of America. With her arrival in America the story develops another branch which envelops the fortunes of a young artist destined to liberate Mignon from the clutches of the vile Chinaman, Foo Shai.

Much could be written in praise of the general development of the production and of the excellent work of the supporting cast, which consists of William Garwood as the young artist, Frank Smith a remarkable type as Foo Shai, Charles Fang as Shang who lost his life in defense of Mignon, Charles Francis, Earl Simmons, William T. Dwyer, Paul Panzer, Isabel Patterson, Paddy Sullivan and Guy Morville. Well-timed suspense, natural action, good photography, and rich and appropriate costuming are other attributes worthy of mention.

"The Wasted Years"

Five-Reel Horsley Mutual, Starring Crane Wilbur.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE story of an old man reviewing his own life at a moving picture show, "The Wasted Years," starts out most favorably. The release has every appearance during the earlier scenes of being a genuine story, instead of a mere vehicle for Mr. Crane's heroics in the center of every scene, with as many closeups as an amorous director would give his favorite lady star. But those wasted years are merely glimpsed and they seem to consist principally of marrying a very pretty and mercenary girl, who becomes the mother of a very sweet child. Either the author has aimed better than he was able to shoot, or the story is without definite aim, for it is destitute of compensation. The mother dies, and the little girl dies of "inherited consumption," something unknown in medical practice, and the wastral tries to get the girl he meanly deserted, only to find that she has married a real man.

An affecting story could be constructed along such lines, one of genuine pathos, and Mr. Crane could play the lead as capably as any one, but the natural course of such a life history, involving as it does the careers of other people, is disregarded for the sake of thrusting Mr. Crane to the front on all occasions. Acting is not so much a question of obtruding an actor's personality upon story interest as it is a matter of intelligent response to the requirements of a role. There is not only wide opportunity in every strong characterization for the interpreter, but there is also a limitation—he is there to interpret the character, not himself. The obvious Mr. Crane may be pleasing to himself—the subtle Mr. Crane would be more interesting to an audience.

Two Lubin Productions

"Those Who Toil," a Five-Reel V-L-S-E, Starring Nance O'Neil, and "Sons of the Sea," a Three-Reel Melodrama, Released on the General Film Program.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

"Those Who Toil."

DANIEL CARSON GOODMAN is the author of "Those Who Toil," the latest Lubin screen drama, to be released by the V-L-S-E. Ever since Frances Hodgson Burnett wrote "That Lass o' Lowrie's," the story of the lowly-born girl, who is the central figure in a struggle between capital and labor, has been a favorite theme with stage and screen fiction. The physical combat which takes place when the rebellious workmen attempt to enforce their demands by an attack upon the property and life of their oppressors, never fails to furnish a "big scene" of suffcient violent action and dramatic power. The motives which actuate the characters in such a story are so vital to their welfare and so broad in their scope as to compel the spectator to take a firm stand upon one side or the other; the drab, unlovely lives of the humble toilers involved in the drama, demanding the sympathy of everyone who thinks and feels.

Author Goodman has placed his tale among the oil fields of Pennsylvania. Jane Brett, the daughter of a poor oil worker, becomes a trained nurse and helps minister to the sick and injured of her native place. Her father is killed in an accident, and the rebellion that has been smoldering in Jane's breast against the wretched conditions of the workers in the community, breaks out. She tries to arouse William Jameson, the owner of the oil wells, to the injustice of his methods, is repulsed, and, in a fit of sudden resentment, tries to kill him. The girl is arrested, but gains her freedom through the efforts of the millionaire's son. Young Jameson determines to investigate conditions at the wells. He keeps his identity a secret, and Jane falls in love with him. Morgan, the leader of the toilers, also loves Jane. When the wells are fired and a desperate battle takes place between the strikers and the guards, Morgan, who has learned the truth about his rival, leads the mob against him. The young fellow faces the infuriated workmen bravely, and Jane risks her life to save her lover. When peace has been restored justice is promised to the toilers.

Such a story, while dramatic in motive, follows the narrative form and is but slightly related to "the well-made drama" of the spoken stage. The love affair involving Jane, John Jameson and Morgan occupies a secondary place in the author's scheme of things, the wrongs of the striking workmen dominating the theme and the action.

Edgar Lewis, the director, has obtained an unlimited supply of local color for the picture, the mob scenes and the burning of the oil wells being impressive. Nance O'Neil as Jane Brett had little difficulty in conveying to their fullest extent the emotions which animated the character. To an actress of Miss O'Neil's experience and ability such a part presents no subtle problems. Herbert Fortier, Victor Sutherland, Tom Tempest, John Sharkey, Fred Chasten, Ray Chamberlain and Adelaide Hayes were equal to every requirement of their several roles.

"Sons of the Sea."

Four characters tell the story of this three-reel photoplay, the scenes of which are laid on the Pacific Coast. Dave Meyhew, a fisherman, befriends a poor lad named Dick Morley, and makes him a partner in his fishing business. Dave is in love with Nellie, the daughter of a neighboring fisherman, but the girl prefers Dick, and the elder partner accepts the situation and becomes one of the family, after Dick and Nellie are married. Tom Edwards, a gun-runner who is engaged in getting arms into Mexico, persuades Dick to put his money into the scheme. He then tries to get rid of the young fellow, and, during a fight in a barroom, Dick shoots and kills the bartender. Dave helps his partner to escape with Nellie, and then joins the revenue service. By this time the girl has learned that she has married the wrong man. She remains true to Dick, however, and Edwards again gets on her husband's trail and forces him to take a hand in another gun-running scheme. The revenue cutter upon which Dave is an officer chases Edwards' boat, and Dick is shot in trying to escape. He dies at home, with Nellie and Dave to comfort his last moments, leaving the widow and the revenue officer free to wed each other.

Millard Wilson, who wrote and directed the scenario, has not overburdened his plot with characters, or retarded the action with a plethora of cut-backs. In the main the incidents are in keeping with the theme, the author's solution of his problem being justified by the deeds of his characters. As a director Mr. Wilson has not proved quite so successful. During the smuggling scenes he has allowed Dick and Edwards to display a want of caution that is not compatible with even a scanty supply of gray matter. Painted exterior drops mar some of the interior settings.

Lucy Payton as Nellie gives the best performance of the cast. Her natural method and reserve force are her chief assets. Cecil Van Auker, whose forte is "heavies," contributes an intelligent portrayal of Dick, and Millard Wilson made no mistake when he cast himself for Dick. W. J. Spencer plays Tom Edwards after the manner laid down and approved by followers of the old school of acting.

"The Head of the House"

Knickerbocker Star Feature Made by H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer—Frank Mayo Plays Dual Role.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

DESPITE a number of slips in direction, this three-reel melodrama, with occasional touches of comedy, will make a satisfactory program number because of rapid action, extravagantly romantic situations and some effective water scenes. In its essentials the plot is far from new, but that need not materially detract from the entertainment value of the story, which affords an opportunity for pleasing views of attractive locations and some excellent double exposure work.

It is best to take incidents such as we find here without inquiring too closely into their plausibility, for they would not stand the test. A wealthy bachelor retires to his country estate to avoid the advances of designing young women. It happens that a burglar, the exact physical double of Morril, breaks into the house and the bachelor conceives the happy idea of changing places with the intruder and forcing him to remain and entertain guests who are coming for an unwelcome visit. Morril escapes in a motor boat, taking a young newspaper woman as his companion, and in the course of time the two are stranded on a deserted island, while the burglar plays host to the fashionable visitors.

The rather obvious opportunities for humor in the situation are realized by Frank Mayo, who makes his table manners everything that they should not be, drinks whiskey to excess and becomes uproariously intoxicated to the horror of the conventional guests. Just about this time the fugitive bachelor, after paddling innumerable miles on a raft, returns with his companion in adventure and the burglar is permitted to resume his profession.

In a more carefully directed picture, rafts of dissimilar construction would not have been used in connecting scenes, nor would a man have returned from a two weeks' stay on a desert island quite as though he had just stepped out of a barber's chair. Lillian West appears to advantage in support of Mr. Mayo.

"The Heart of a Child"

Five-Reel Red Feather Adaptation of Frank Danby's Famous Novel Played by Company of English Screen Performers.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel production is based on a book by the late Mrs. Frankau, or Frank Danby, as she was known to a large portion of the reading public. "The Heart of a Child" was perhaps her best novel in many respects, and its sympathetic, altogether human story made a great stir when it first appeared. The screen adaptation, directed by Harold Shaw, has this sympathetic note and well repays watching, though many of the plot incidents have been used in other pictures.

An English company of performers, headed by Edna Flugrath, appears. The scenes are distinctly English. There is no mistaking the types pictured in the London slums, where Sally Snape is first discovered in her sidewalk dance. Too many close-ups are employed at the start, particularly in the crowd scenes. The London fog is also visible at times, an atmospheric condition that does not help the photography, though it adds to the verisimilitude of the production.

Scene from "The Heart of a Child" (Universal).

The story of Sally Snape's career is a fascinating one. She comes up out of the very gutter and goes on and on, from the dance hall to musical comedy success, defending her chastity at all times, and eventually marrying Lord Kidderminster, who knew every step of her climb.

Edna Flugrath is pleasing in the leading role; also Hayford Herbert as Lord Kidderminster. The minor characters, particularly those playing Johnnie and Mary, do good work. The bank holiday and wedding scenes are well staged and novel.

Word from Helen Holmes, who is now with her company of Signal-Mutual players in Hawaii, states that some exceptional locations have been secured for a number of the exterior scenes of "The Diamond Runners," a forthcoming five act Mutual Star Production featuring Miss Holmes. The locations chosen for these scenes are situated about 100 miles down the coast, in one of the most desolate sections of the island.

"The Way of the World"

Five-Reel Universal Production, Based on Clyde Fitch Play, Features Hobart Bosworth and Dorothy Davenport.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THE interrupted wedding has long been a favorite theme in drama, but it cannot compare with the interrupted christening in this release. Clyde Fitch probably never devised a more dramatic situation than the one found here, when the angry, jealous husband points to his wife's friend, and tells the clergyman to give the baby "Not my name—his!" It is the climax of a long, carefully handled string of situations, and gets over with strength and conviction.

Dorothy Davenport and Hobart Bosworth have the leading roles in this screen adaptation of the Clyde Fitch drama. F. McGrew Willis wrote the scenario and Lloyd B. Carlton attended to the direction. The performance is a smooth and enjoyable one throughout.

The first three reels move slowly but with increasing interest toward the crucial scenes in the last two reels. John Nevill, the married man, who saved the heroine's life before her marriage to another, is still posing as her friend. He has apparently stifled his own love for her, but later it so consumes him that he conspires with a political boss to bring on the scandal. He voluntarily drags his own name, that of the woman he loves, and her husband, into the mire, thinking he will win her in the end. In her desire to clear her name, the wife stabs Nevill and his confession follows. The production is free from padding, tells a well-rounded story and is altogether successful.

The supporting cast includes Emory Johnson, Adele Farrington, Jack Curtis, C. Normand Hammond and Gretchen Lederer.

"Casey at the Bat"

Five-Reel Fine Arts by William Everett Wing, with De Wolf Hopper in the Title Role.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

SUGGESTED by the famous poem, "Casey at the Bat," tells of Casey's downfall during a final test of strength between the ball nine of Mudville and Frogtown and gives Mr. Hopper opportunity for one of those humanizing performances which seem to fit him almost as well as he fits them, and that is saying a great deal. The story fits him in another respect—he has been The Fan, of all baseball fans, during a large part of his varied career, and every move he makes on the field is filled with that subtlety of performance which only such capable actors seem to understand. He plays the role for all it is worth without obtruding De Wolf Hopper any more than one of his size and striking personality can help.

Though Casey is the one man on whom the Mudville ball nine can depend to win a game in a tight place, a local hero as long as he is of use, he is nothing but a grocer's clerk in private life, and Hopper never loses sight of the fact. He commands attention by a marvelously intelligent interpretation rather than by thrusting himself into the foreground, a great relief in these days of camera-made stars of the closeup variety. Casey loses the final game through intense anxiety about a tiny tot of a little girl playmate who has been severely injured and becomes an object of general disfavor where he has really been the cause of readjusting a wrong done the mother of the tiny tot and leaves town on foot, his famous home-made bat in hand, at the end for what is hoped to be a happier career. Mr. Hopper gives the role so much artistry that the story is made delightful through his adequate interpretation.

"The Deserter"

Out of much-used material, the army post, the pioneers, the Indian uprising and the rescue when a coward goes for aid, Ince's five-part "The Deserter" is made over, with the addition of a bawdy-house fight in the beginning and a funeral nearly a half-reel long at the end. The man who deserts when he can't get the girl who is "sorry" because she has just become engaged to the man she loves, who gambles and drinks as well as breaks his oath of loyalty, is honored with a long funeral at the end because he did what any manly man would do under the same circumstances. There are some effective skyline scenes and large ensembles of the Ince variety by way of redemption, but the idea of elaborately honoring those to whom honor is not due is far from appealing to common sense.

"The Clown"

A Lasky Feature With Victor Moore and Florence Dagmar in the Leading Parts.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

IF ATMOSPHERE, settings and photography were suffcient to make a good feature "The Clown" would easily fall within this category. Important as these elements are in every feature they cannot redeem a poor plot, poor direction, and poor acting. Mr. Moore's acting is splendid; he has a most thankless part, but in spite of it makes a very good showing. Florence Dagmar on the other hand is plainly impossible. I had imagined that her type of acting had died with the late but unlamented Yankee films and similar brands. I will not say more, else the mantle of charity might not stand the strain. Capable artist that he is, Mr. Meighan does not show up well in his part in "The Clown." The part was beyond all histrionic skill.

The story told by the film is not only pressing the verge of improbability, it bristles with obvious crudities and inconsistencies.

The scenes in the circus were delightfully realistic, there were occasional touches of genuine pathos, and one or two situations were not lacking in dramatic strength. Taken as a whole, however, this feature undoubtedly falls below the high and consistent average of Lasky productions.

Bert Williams in Biograph Comedies

Star Comedian of Ziegfeld Follies to Be Featured in Two Reel Comedies Through General Film Service.

The announcement of the Biograph Company to the effect that they will feature Bert Williams in a series of two reel comedies should come as an agreeable surprise to the exhibitors. Little need be said about the popularity of Bert Williams—he is known everywhere. The fact that he has again been chosen as the star comedian of the Ziegfeld Follies just opened at the New Amsterdam Theater bespeaks his box office drawing power.

The laugh producing expressions of Bert Williams are especially adaptable to pictures—his droll pantomime being doubly effective on the screen. His initial release embodies much of the work that has won him favor on the stage, including his famous pantomime poker game, which is welcomed by his vast army of followers the country over in the Ziegfeld Follies each year.

It is expected that the first Bert Williams comedy will be released July 24—although several bookings have been made for exclusive pre-release showings for the week of July 17.

General Film Company

SHE WON A PRIZE (Vitagraph), June 9.—Epes Winthrop Sargent is the author of this one-reel comedy in which a stenographer wins $1,000 in a scenario contest, passes herself off as an heiress and captures her employer. The method of his capture is amusing, and Edith Storey plays the part of the heroine for all it is worth. Antonio Moreno, Josephine Earle, Donald McBride and Florence Natol have congenial roles. George D. Baker directed the reel.

THE SELIG-TRIBUNE, NO. 47, 1916 (Selig), June 12.—Chicago National Guards turn out to stimulate enlistment; review and graduating exercises at Annapolis; President and Mrs. Wilson at Annapolis; Republican politicians at Chicago; Coliseum at Chicago; launch of the Bucentaur at Manchester, Mass.; U. S. Coast Artillery practice; Carnival and running races at Sheepshead Bay; Lord Kitchener in London; Suffragette Parade, Chicago.

HER LOVING RELATIONS (Vitagraph), June 12.—This one-reel comedy has a simple little plot, but there is a deal of human nature in it. An orphan girl, whose father has left her well provided for, makes her relatives believe that she is penniless and must be taken care of. In this way she learns their true character. William E. Wing wrote the scenario, and Mary Anderson, Anne Schaefer, George Kunkel and George Lawrence give a good account of the acting.

THE ALASKAN MOUSE HOUND (Kalem), June 13.—This is a "Ham" comedy, but the mouse hound is a member of the cast. Ham and Bud and the other actors figure in a series of amusing situations with the hound, the animal being closely related to a German sausage dog.

CANIMATED NOOZ PICTORIAL, NO. 11 (Essanay), June 14.—Wallace A. Carlson's clever burlesque on the animated weeklies, another of Dreamy Dud's nightmares and a scenic are all contained on this split reel. Mr. Carlson's fund of humor is as plentiful as ever and his skill with the pencil has also not diminished.

THE BACHELOR'S ALLIANCE (Kalem), June 14.—In this one-reel comedy Ethel Teare becomes a policewoman and arrests an entire bachelors' alliance for flirting, after its members band together to protect themselves against the opposite sex. Edwin Ray Coffin is the author of this original scenario. Miss Teare wears a most becoming uniform and gets plenty of fun out of her part. Jack McDermott, Victor Rottman and Gus Leonard lead the bachelors.

THE SELIG-TRIBUNE, NO. 48, 1916 (Selig), June 15.—Republican Convention at Chicago; German war pictures smuggled into the United States; dancing nymphs at Nahant, Mass.; big fire, San Francisco; Brooklyn Knights Templar Review; Washington, Candidate Hughes; German war pictures "On Eastern Front"; San Francisco, launch of ship D. S. Scofield; El Paso, arrival of Battery E, 5th U. S. Artillery.

HUNGRY HEARTS (Vim), June 15.—Plump and Runt are rival artists in this one-reel farce. They both become involved in a love affair which gets them into trouble and furnishes a corresponding amount of amusement for all disinterested persons. Not the funniest of the Vims, but a laughable reel of fair average.

THE STENOGRAPHER'S STRATEGY (Kalem), June 16.—Sis Hopkins takes a position as a stenographer in this one-reel comedy. She is a few letters shy in her spelling, but she gets her employer out of a serious difficulty when his wife discovers him flirting, and provides fun for everyone else. A review of the picture was printed in the issue of June 24, page 2259.

A RACE THROUGH THE AIR (No. 84 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series) (Kalem), June 17.—The hazard which Helen Gibson performs in this one-reel drama consists in dropping from an aeroplane on to a moving freight train. This feat should satisfy the most ardent lover the sensational. The story, by Herman A. Blackman, is a good bit of melodramatic writing.

THE SPIRIT AWAKENED (Biograph), June 12.—Blanche Sweet, Alfred Paget, Edwin Dillon and Chrystie Miller are the chief actors in this admirably constructed one-reel Griffith reissue. Sound character foundation has been given the picture. The scenes are laid on a farm.

OTTO THE COBBLER (Lubin), June 12.—Another of the Otto one-reel farces with D. L. Donn in his broadly comic impersonation of the Teutonic hero, this picture, written by M. N. Milligan, contains a funny mix-up between Otto and a suit case full of counterfeit bills. Patsy De Forest, Emily Lowry and Bernard Seigel are also concerned in the affair.

HAROLD THE NURSE GIRL (Vitagraph), June 16.—The action of this one-reel farce discloses a new profession for one of the sterner sex—when desperately in need of funds. The reel has the merit of novelty except at the finish, and is played by William Dangman, Florence Natol, George O'Donnell, Richard Turner and Harry Mayo. Director, Frank Currier.

HUBBY PUTS ONE OVER (Lubin), June 17.—The humor of this one-reel farce is based upon the mistake made by a jealous wife, when she objects to her husband kissing the cook. The author is so unfeeling as to permit the husband to triumph over his wife. A fairly good farce. Francis Joyner and June Daye are cast for the married couple.

THE COWPUNCHER'S PERIL (Selig), June 17.—There isn't much novelty in this one-reel drama; but Tom Mix and his horse are in it, and Victor Forde and Pat Chrisman and Joe Ryan and that means there's a lot of expert horsemanship. The reel moves right along and Tom does a neat fall from his steed, the same knowing animal having a bit of business all to himself.

General Film Company Specials

A STRANGE CASE (Vitagraph), June 10.—The plot of this detective drama does credit to the authors, Jane Dixon and Roma Raymond. Its chief merit is its quick action and the firm hold it maintains on the interest of the spectator. The fact that no such adventures ever befell any human being, does not effect its entertaining qualities in the slightest degree. Harry Morey acts the leading role convincingly, and Ned Finley, Adele Kelly, Edward Elkas and Frank Holland complete an excellent cast. Eugene Mullin directed the production.

THE DISAPPEARANCE OF HELEN MINTERN (Kalem), June 12.—The twelfth installment of "The Social Pirates" deals with the adventures of a young stenographer employed by a politician. The girl learns some of the man's secrets and is kidnapped by him. Mona and Mary trace her to the place where she is kept a prisoner and effect her release. Events move at a rapid pace and Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby are as effective as ever as the two heroines. Frank Jonasson, E. Forrest Taylor, Mrs. Dunlap, R. L. Dell and Edward Slisbee are members of the cast.

THE TWO ORPHANS (Selig), June 12.—A three-reel screen version of "The Two Orphans, the celebrated French drama, written by the French dramatist Dennery, in which Kate Claxton starred for so many years, this Selig release was bound to have much to commend it. The story is so appealing, is constructed with such skill and offers such a variety of strongly drawn characters that it affords every opportunity for the making of a successful photoplay. Kathlyn Williams and Winnifred Greenwood play the sisters, and T. J. Carrigan, Charles Clary, Myrtle Stedman, Adrienne Kroell, Lyllian Leighton, Leighton Stark and James O'Burrell are the other members of an adequate cast.

THE MAN IN THE STREET (Edison), June 13.—A reissue of an Edison three-reel photoplay that won an excellent reputation for itself when it was first produced. Its story is full of human appeal and the leading parts are acted by Marc McDermott, Gertrude McCoy and Duncan MacRea.

PUTTING IT OVER (Essanay), June 13.—This is a capital two-reel comedy-drama. The plot bowls along at a lively rate, the complications have real humor and the work of an excellent cast rounds out the pleasing features of the picture. Harry Beaumont and Marguerite Clayton have the principal parts.

THE AVENGER (Lubin), June 13.—A review of this picture was printed in the issue of June 24, page 2254.

AN OLD MAN'S FOLLY (Knickerbocker), June 16.—A three-reel melodrama in which Daniel Gilfether has the leading role of a banker who steals from his wife a necklace which he bestows upon his mistress. A crooked detective called into the case by the wife learns the state of affairs and is induced by the adventuress and her male partner to blackmail the old man instead of holding them up. In carrying out his plan the detective kidnaps the banker's daughter. The denouement is swift. Through the intercession of the sweetheart of the daughter the old man is enabled to escape the consequences of his folly—the daughter is located and rescued, the necklace is recovered, and the wife is left in blissful ignorance of her husband's perfidy.

FOOL'S GOLD (Essanay), June 10.—The wife of a wealthy business man, who becomes the victim of a pair of sharpers through her weakness for gambling, is the heroine of this three-reel photoplay. The story grips and, also, teaches an excellent moral lesson. Nell Craig has the part of the wife, Darwin plays the husband, and Patrick Calhoun and Marion Lydston act the two sharpers.

LIBERTY BELLES (Biograph), June 14.—Dorothy Gish, Gertrude Bambrick, Jack Pickford and Reggie Morris play the leads in this three-reel film version of the clever stage play that introduced pink pajamas to the footlights. A review of the comedy was printed in the issue of May 20, page 1351.

SONS OF THE SEA (Lubin), June 15.—A review of this three-reel drama is printed elsewhere in the present issue.

ASHES (Vitagraph), June 17.—The atmosphere of this three-reel photoplay is thick with gloom. A man who deserts his child because its mother died in giving it birth, is not a heroic figure, to say the least. A railroad fireman with the want of control shown by Gordon Bennett would be just as apt to ditch his train as he was to put his own life into the scrapheap. Lovers of the East Lynne school of fiction will relish this picture. Corinne Griffith, Jack Mower and Anne Schaefer have the principal parts. Miss Griffith is excellent in the dual role of wife and daughter. Mr. Mower overacts, and Anne Schaefer is as dependable as ever.

PAY DIRT (Knickerbocker), June 18.—This five-reel western romance has to do with mining claims, gambling saloons, gunplay, an attempt at lynching, and a hero and heroine who discover their parents in a most dramatic manner. With such a collection of surefire material for a melodrama of the land beyond the Great Divide, there is no want of action, once the story gets started. Henry King and Marguerite Nichols lead the cast.

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

SHOES, June 26.—This five-part production is based on a story which appeared in Collier's, the basic idea for which originated in a book written by Jane Addams. The line which is quoted "sold out for a pair of shoes" carries a deep significance. The story tells of the struggles of a young girl who earns five dollars a week in the five and ten-cent store and brings her pay envelope unopened to her mother each week to help to support three small children, her mother, herself and a lazy father. The picture is an excellent study in sociology, was directed by Lois Weber, and features Mary MacLaren.

International Film Service

HEARST-INTERNATIONAL NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 47, 1916, June 13.—San Francisco, firing coast defense guns; launch of oil tank steamer Scofield, San Francisco; British sailors defending Salonika; police of San Francisco fight and kill desperate bandit; battle over establishing a garbage plant on Prall's Island, New York; Democratic leaders at St. Louis; dipping shad from the Potomac River; accident of Third Avenue elevated railroad, New York; fashion section; animated cartoon by Tom Powers.

HEARST-INTERNATIONAL NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 48, 1916, June 16.—Auto race at Chicago; Commencement Day, West Point; President Wilson awarding the diplomas; 60,000 sheep on Utah ranch; Washington, Chas. Evans Hughes and reporters; Republican nominee in New York; Gen. von Mackensen at Constantinople; review of Turkish troops; St. Louis, Democratic leaders; Col. Roosevelt meets son at steamship pier, New York; Pennsylvania militamen in mimic battle; President Wilson in Flag Day parade, Washington; fashion section.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

THE PURPLE LADY (Rolfe), June 26.—A comedy from the stage play by Sidney Rosenfeld and a delightfully amusing picture. Ralph Herz, in the leading role, provides plenty of fun and is the mainstay of the film; but there are plenty of laughable situations in it. A longer review will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Mutual Film Corporation

BILLY VAN DEUSEN'S EGG-SPENSIVE ADVENTURE (Beauty), June 14.—An amusing comedy in which Billy, on a jaunt in the country, comes across a pretty artist. He orders her to paint a beautiful sunset for him, which is duly delivered at a later date. An awful discovery is made, however, when Billy's pet cat licks the sun and the yellow tints of sunset from the picture. It transpires that in dire distress for lack of money, the yolk of an egg has been substituted for yellow paint.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 76 (June 14).—Interesting items of this issue include views of the new monorail road at San Francisco, a pugilistic contest between two legless men, movie stars in the automobile fashion show at Los Angeles, the latest picture of Lord Kitchener, World series pennant raised at Boston, army trucks making test run with infantry and various other important items.

JERRY AND THE MOONSHINERS (Cub), June 16.—This will be found to be an excellent farce comedy with valuable laugh-getting qualities. Jerry gets in bad first with the magistrate, then with some men in a saloon, and later with a couple of moonshiners. In the first two instances he is able to elude punishment, but the third and last finds him being led off by the authorities. Very funny.

REEL LIFE, NO. 7 (Gaumont), June 18.—This instructive number contains views of the way terrapin are propagated, showing pictures of baby turtles emerging from the eggs. Views taken at an agricultural experiment station in New Jersey and animal studies by Elwin R. Sanborn of the New York zoo complete this excellent number.

RUFFHOUSE (Vogue), June 20.—A slapstick comedy, in which most of the scenes take place in a hospital. The production is distinctly what the title would imply, and some incidents do contain fair comedy merit, but much of the slapstick work is overdone.

THE HOUSE ON HOKUM HILL (Beauty), June 21.—An excellent comedy number, in which an author goes insane because he gets his hero and heroine in a predicament from which he cannot extricate them. As quotations of the author's new story are thrown on the screen scenes from it are enacted, and just at the point where both hero and heroine are imprisoned in a cellar and a movable stone wall, manipulated by the villain, is about to grind them to pulp, the author, pumped dry of ideas, goes crazy because he can think of no way to save them. Unusually good.

SEE AMERICA FIRST, NO. 41 (Gaumont), June 21.—Views taken in and about Birmingham, Ala., lead this number. The second half consists of a three-act burlesque by Rea Irvin and Harry Palmer. Shadowgraphs, or animated silhouettes are employed, the story being a melodrama of the old type. The bathing scenes are a little broad. The method is very amusing and should be tried again.

Mutual Film Corp. Specials

THE FIREMAN (Lone Star), June 12.—Another two-reel Chas. Chaplin film. This time he is the driver at the fire department and antagonizes the captain by not responding promptly to the bells. The funniest scene in this picture occurs where the driver gets an opportunity to rescue the captain's sweetheart from a burning building. In spite of the fact that he also is in love with the young woman, the difficulty he has in screwing his courage to the "sticking point" is excruciatingly funny. Otherwise the picture contains little that does not suggest the kind of comedy business that one has seen again and again.

THE ABANDONMENT (Mutual Masterpicture de Luxe), June 15.—A five-part production from the American studios in which Helen Rosson is the feminine star, with E. Forrest Taylor appearing in the masculine lead. The story of the play is not out of the ordinary, and considerable lost action is noticeable in the development of the play. Helen Rosson is especially to be commended for her work as the selfish society girl who was unwilling to divide attentions with the patients of the young doctor, her sweetheart.

THE STAR OF INDIA (Centaur), June 17.—A two-reel subject, featuring Wm. Clifford, Margaret Gibson and the Bostock animals. This is the story of a valuable diamond, stolen from an Indian rajah. The substitution scene is well staged. The plot has many predecessors, but there are enough new twists to make this quite interesting. The Bostock animals are seen in full force and appear to particular advantage in this number. The closing scenes are quite sensational.

THE GENTLE CONSPIRACY (American), June 19.—A two-part drama, with Vivian Rich playing a double role. This production will be found moderately entertaining. It treats of the secret departure from home of a young girl whose mother is blind. She is killed in an automobile accident on the same night on which her cousin, the daughter of a thief and unknown to her family, enters her home to rob it. She is held by the father of the dead girl and made to impersonate his own daughter to save the mother the shock of her death.

THE WASTED YEARS (Centaur), June 19.—A five-reel Mutual Masterpicture, featuring Crane Wilbur, Mae Gaston and others. The story is that of an old derelict who wanders into a moving picture theater and reviews the scenes of his misspent life. At the close of the picture he is found dead by an usher. The picture contains much that is gloomy and unpleasant, but is well presented throughout. The successive periods in the life of a young man, who falls heir to a fortune and deserts his country girl to go to the city, are pictured in a well-constructed way. Some of the photography is not very clear, but the chief weakness is the rather sordid nature of the plot.

THE CRIMINAL'S THUMB (Gaumont), June 22.—A three-part melodrama, written by Lionel Barrymore and Wright Huntington, and produced by Edwin Middleton. Iva Shepard and Alexander Gaden have the leading roles, with Lucile Taft, John Reinhardt and other competent Gaumont players in the supporting cast. The story is moderately interesting and has been well developed. It treats of a safe robbery, the death by heart failure of the aged proprietor, and the discovery of the man who is in an indirect way his murderer, through his spatulate thumb, the imprint of which is found on the collar of the murdered man. Various minor threads add to the interest of the production.

FAR FROM THE MADDING CROWD (Mutual Star Production—Turner, No. 112), June 23.—This five-part production is an adaptation of the novel of the same name by Thomas Harding, O. M. It was made in England, features Florence Turner, and is delightful as far as the choice of rural Englisb locations is concerned. While the adaptation may be perfectly sincere, there is a feeling throughout that the most is not being made of the dramatic properties of the story. In other words, the narrative form has been adhered to too closely. The work of Florence Turner will be enjoyed as always. She is winsome as Bethseba, the simple farmer lass, and dignified as Bethsheba, the heir of her rich uncle's estate. The production will be enjoyed for the various good qualities which it possesses.

Paramount Program

BURTON HOLMES TRAVELOGUE (Paramount), June.—"Europe at Peace" is the title of the Burton Holmes contribution to the Paramount program; but a more exact title would be "Germany at Peace," for all of the scenes were photographed in Hamburg or Berlin sometime before the war. The pictures of the Kaiser, his staff and German soldiers illustrating the famous goose step are likely to arouse unpleasant manifestations of approval or disapproval in an audience.

PARAMOUNT PICTOGRAPHS (Paramount), June.—"Taming a Lion" takes precedence as the feature article in this issue of Pictographs. The scenes are unlike any shown before and remarkably interesting. Beginners at golf will receive some valuable pointers from Alec Smith's illustrations of how clubs should be held if the player is to achieve correct form. In the Better Babies department we see how the sense of touch is used in the development of a child's mind. There are several other subjects at once entertaining and instructive.

BURTON HOLMES TRAVELOGUES (Paramount), June.—More than the usual number of picturesque scenes mark this issue of Burton Holmes' travel series. The trip leads down a river passing through a remarkably luxuriant tropical country. There are interesting views photographed on Tay Tay bay, and particularly significant at this time, when there is so much discussion about prison conditions, are the pictures of the penal colony at Palawan. It appears that in the Philippines an excellent system has been instituted for the care and moral betterment of convicts.

PARAMOUNT PICTOGRAPHS (Paramount), June.—The editor of Pictographs continues his preparedness campaign by showing pictures of the United States navy, also by means of an animated diagram pointing out how the present fleet is inadequate for the protection of our coast in case of an invasion by a foreign power. The diagram may excite thought, but it could hardly be called a convincing argument. In the Better Babies department the advantages of the Montessori system in the development of children are illustrated, whereas other numbers maintain the standard of earlier Pictographs in point of interest and variety.

THE MAKING OF MADDALENA (Morosco), June 8.—Edna Goodrich is the chief player and the decided center of interest in this story of New York and of Rome. Her work goes to the making of a good picture. The subject was reviewed last week on page 2254.

SILKS AND SATINS (Famous Players), June 12.—Marguerite Clark has a delightful role in this five-part subject. It is a good all-around costume picture, it is played by a strong cast, contains situations that stir and that amuse, and it is well staged. It was reviewed in the previous issue of this paper on page 2260.

DESTINY'S TOY (Famous Players), June 15.—This four-part subject, which is reviewed at greater length in another column, is written and directed by John O'Brien. It is good melodrama. The leads are played by Louise Huff, J. W. Johnston and William Bowers.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Pathe Exchange, Inc., Specials.

THE IRON CLAW, NO. 16 (Feature), June 12.—"The Unmasking of Davy" is the title of this chapter in which Davy is about to be arrested as the Laughing Mask when a masked man appears in the doorway. We are thus left still wondering who the Laughing Mask is. The thrill of this chapter occurs when Margery, riding on horseback, stoops and picks up a fluttering paper which has escaped from the agents of Legar while they fight with Davy for mastery in gaining possession of the treasure for which they have been sent.

A MATRIMONIAL MARTYR (Balboa), June 19.—A five-part comedy featuring Ruth Roland. The production has been beautifully colored and abounds in artistic exterior locations and settings. The comedy element is somewhat forced, but the production as a whole will be enjoyed. Ruth Roland plays a double role with success. A full review of this picture will be found on another page of this issue.

Triangle Program

A BATHHOUSE BLUNDER (Keystone), April 2.—A fairly good farce, starting slowly, but speeding up to the limit toward the last. A review appears on page 983 of the issue of May 6.

BATHTUB PERILS (Keystone), March 14.—A highly amusing comedy of ingenious mechanical devices. One of these, resulting from the accidental connection of gas pipes with the water main and water pipes with the gas main, brings on intermittent floods of water and fire in a series of remarkable scenes.

THE WILD GIRL OF THE SIERRAS (Fine Arts), June 25.—Mae Marsh is given a role which has been attempted in the past, that of a girl grown up in a forest from childhood without seeing a white human being, and without other language than the inarticulate sounds of a wild beast. Her exposed limbs are not brown and hairy, but as white as nature and make-up can contrive, and her hair nicely waved. The story about her ends nowhere, like all blind alley themes, and it is without other interest than that aroused by mild curiosity.

CASEY AT THE BAT (Fine Arts), July 2.—A story founded on the poem and giving De Wolf Hopper a very humanizing role to perform is worked out effectively through his fine impersonation.

Universal Film Mfg. Company

BILLY'S WATERLOO (L-KO), June 7.—A low comedy number, featuring Billy Ritchie and Gene Rogers. The acrobatic lover is not a favorite with the girl's father, who throws him out. A series of rough-house, knock-about scenes occur. The action is fast and furious and has a climax that will be appreciated by those who like this type of humor.

THE FALSE GEMS (Laemmle), June 11.—This number, written by E. J. Clauson, piques the interest from the beginning, but there is a certain indefiniteness about the plot and relationship of characters that prevents it from being a really strong number. Rupert Julian is the husband, Elsie Jane Wilson the wife and Douglas Gerrard the friend. The main situation would almost have justified another reel in order to clear up certain points.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 24 (Universal), June 14.—Parades and pageants in various cities lead this interesting number. It also includes views of Germany's high-seas fleet, Kitchener, Chas. E. Hughes, an elevated wreck and Hy Mayer cartoons.

BETTY'S HOBO (Big U), June 15.—A pleasing number, by Calder Johnstone, featuring Thomas Jefferson and Zoe Bech. A tramp presents the little girl with a whistle, which she uses to bring help with when she is lost in the woods. The tramp turns out to be a boyhood friend of her father's. The number has a strong juvenile interest, and makes a pleasing little story.

A ROMANCE AT RANDOM (Laemmle), June 18.—In this number, by E. J. Clauson, Rupert Julian again appears as Arthur Botts, a conceited fop. A married woman, portrayed by Elsie Jane Wilson, seeks to retain him as co-respondent. The situation is a good one and Gus Alexander, who plays the husband, gets a laugh when he appears.

DIRTY WORK IN A BEANERY (L-KO), June 25.—Reggie Morris, Fatty Voss, Dave Morris and Gertrude Selby are featured in this comic number. The restaurant scenes contain considerable humor of a characteristic sort. The photography is unusually good and the number fairly strong as a whole.

THE BROWNS SEE THE FAIR (Nestor), June 26.—A domestic comedy in which Brown and his wife decide to visit the San Diego fair, with their four children. Brown flirts with a girl, which precipitates trouble. The plot is very slight, but the situations contain some amusement of the quiet sort.

PEGGY AND THE LAW (Imp), June 27.—A simple story, by Wm. Addison Lathrop, featuring Edith Roberts and Harry Benham. The young man buys Peggy's property at a foreclosure sale and comes to dispossess her. But when he sees Peggy he decides to ask her to remain, as his wife. A pleasing little love story, well presented.

GOD AND THE BABY (Big U), June 28.—This story of a bank cashier, who starts with the bank's funds for Florida, is held up and later given credit for saving the money, has been done before. It makes an entertaining story, however, and is well handled here. Malcom Blevins and Marjorie Ellison are in the cast.

TWICE AT ONCE (Big U), June 29.—A low comedy number, by Craig Hutchinson, featuring Margaret Joslin, Harry Todd, Ernie Shields and Marcia Moore. Ernie becomes engaged to two girls at once and has a hard time getting away from the fat one. There is a knockabout finish, which gets up considerable amusement.

MUGGINS (Victor), June 30.—A story by Harvey Gates, with a simple plot, which proves quite effective. The wife of a mountaineer finds herself tired of the wilderness and flees to civilization with her sister and child. The child is taken ill and begs for its father. The father appears and a reconciliation follows. Just a fragment of life, pleasingly presented. Gretchen Lederer, Elizabeth Janes and Norbert Myles appear.

BASHFUL CHARLEY'S PROPOSAL (Joker), July 1.—A comedy of homely types, by Allen Curtis, featuring Gale Henry, Chas. Conklin, Wm. Franey and Lillian Peacock. The two lovers are made up to look exactly alike and this leads to complications. This is quite amusing and carries the interest fairly well.

Universal Film Mfg. Company Specials

HER HUSBAND'S HONOR (Laemmle), May 11.—A two-reel drama, by J. Grubb Alexander, featuring Ben Wilson, Dorothy Phillips, Charles Ogle, Wm. J. Welsh and Miss Von Ottinger. The young wife is lured into a polite gambling house, where she loses heavily. She is then tempted to sell some valuable secrets in possession of her husband to acquire money to pay her gambling debts. The husband later hears her confession and turns tables on the crooks. This is not intensely dramatic, but is presented in an attractive way and holds the interest. The settings are pleasing.

THE UNCONVENTIONAL GIRL (Imp), May 26.—In this two-reel number Edith Roberts appears as a tomboy girl, fond of outdoor sports. She comes in contact with a burglar, who has entered the house for purposes of revenge; he imagines the man who ruined his sister is a brother of Helen. But the man is a suitor to Helen's sister and later, when confronted with the burglar's sister and baby, a marriage is consummated. The story is entertaining and unconventional as the girl herself. The big dramatic scene is where Helen confronts Sidney with the girl and baby before a roomful of guests.

THE GENTLE VOLUNTEER (Rex), May 28.—A four-reel story of Civil War days, by M. B. Havey, featuring Ben Wilson, Dorothy Phillips, Joseph Girard and Vivian Prescott. This begins with plantation scenes of an elaborate sort and pictures the sale of a slave woman and her child to a cruel master. The mother escapes with the child, but is followed by a bloodhound. The mother dies and the child is brought up by kind people as their own. She does not learn her negro origin until, during the war, when she enlists as a boy and sacrifices her life for her lover. This is a distinct reminder of Uncle Tom's Cabin in general atmosphere, though not so dramatic a story. It is entertaining and produced by a large cast.

THE SILENT MAN OF TIMBER GULCH (Gold Seal), May 30.—A two-reel number, by Robert Leonard, the author and Ella Hall playing the leading roles. The story is one of an old, half-demented hermit, separated from his wife by his own dissipation. Later his daughter, who is the image of the mother, comes and the sight of her revives her father's reason. The story is interesting, but has a lugubrious tone. Both these players are better in stories of a brighter, happier type. The tale is located in the pine woods country.

TOUGH LUCK ON A ROUGH SEA (L-KO), May 31.—Dan Russell appears in this burlesque sea story as a retired commodore. He and his son fall in love with the same fair charmer. The son sets the father adrift in a small boat, but he manages to board the son's vessel and starts in to get his revenge. The scenes on the "Sinkatania" are cleverly staged, a special set being built for this purpose. There are laughs running all through this, the humor being of the slapstick, knockabout type.

HOW STARS ARE MADE (L-KO), June 14.—A two-reel number, featuring Alice Howell, Ray Griffith, Fatty Voss and others. The slavey and janitor decide to become moving picture performers and break into the floral parade, posing as the devil and an angel. There is some roughness in this, but nothing extremely offensive. The humor is hardly up to that of certain predecessors, but there are some pleasing moments of a nonsensical sort.

OUTWITTED (Universal Special), June 19.—No. 8 of "Peg o' the Ring." This number is full of small incidents, all interesting and sufficiently exciting to hold the attention firmly. Peg escapes from the gang and shows up among her friends while being mourned as dead. She snatches the letter from her father's accomplice and turns it over to a traffic cop for safe-keeping. Later she is abducted, through Mrs. Lund's duplicity, and the installment closes with her facing fresh perils.

THE FOOL (Rex), June 25.—A two-reel number, by Wm. Addison Lathrop, featuring Ben Wilson, Edna Hunter, Jean Stuart and Lois Alexander. The husband is a young mechanic, working on a new invention. His wife, tiring of waiting for his success, leaves him and her child for the butterfly life. Later she returns with broken wings and ends her life as the result of her folly. The husband marries the girl across the hall. This is simply and effectively handled and holds the interest because of its natural development and the attractive interior scenes. The smashing of the completed invention because it would replace the work of many men seemed over-sentimental. The subject as a whole is quite strong.

IT HAPPENED IN HONOLULU (Red Feather Photoplay), June 26.—A five-reel subject, written and produced by Lynn Reynolds, featuring Myrtle Gongalez, Val Paul, C. Norman Hammond, Fred Church and others. This is straight comedy, with a touch of drama at times. It is brightly pictured, and while not extremely original, contains much amusing action. The plot concerns a young man, falsely accused of absconding with his father's money. He follows the girl of his heart to Manila and Yokohama and finally weds her in Honolulu. The settings are attractive throughout.

PIRATES OF THE AIR (L-KO), June 28.—A two-reel comic number, featuring Alice Howell, Fatty Voss, Phil Dunham and others. The scenes in the hotel bar and kitchen contain many flashes of fun, but there is a tendency to the vulgar at times. The airship scenes in the second reel are well staged. Alice Howell climbs from one aeroplane to another, while in midair. Of course this is a studio setting, but it is put on with considerable ingenuity and carries the illusion quite well. An automobile is seen tearing through houses during the rapid-fire portions of the picture. The number is a little rough in places but on the whole an enjoyable one.

V-L-S-E, Inc.

THE MAN BEHIND THE CURTAIN (Vitagraph), June 19.—One of the best melodramas of the season. It was produced in five parts by C. J. Van Deusen and features Lillian Walker. The story deals with the strange adventure of an orphan girl who applying for a position at the home of a wealthy woman is ushered into the room where the woman sits in her chair dead. A full review of the production will be found on another page of this issue.

World-Equitable

LA VIE DE BOHEME (Paragon—World), June 19.—Owing to an extremely artistic production and the very sympathetic acting of Alice Brady, Paul Capellani, Chester Barnett, Zena Keefe and others, this five-reel picture may be recommended as an exceptional attraction for discriminating exhibitors. Director Capellani was unusually successful in catching the spirit of the Paris Latin Quarter and in giving an impressive version of the tragic romance. The picture is reviewed on another page of this issue.

Miscellaneous

THE SCENARIO BUG (Huntington Film), June.—The first of a series of ten two-reel comedy pictures being made by the Huntington Film Company at Huntington, L. I., under the direction of Charles C. O'Hara, who also is writing the scenarios and playing the leading character. There is not much of a connected story in these two reels and the humor is rather coarse, depending upon familiar slapstick devices; but no doubt audiences capable of finding amusement in comedy of this type still exist. Mr. O'Hara is assisted by Maggie Weston, Billie Bowers, Harry Robinson and others.

RAISES OVER $15,000 FOR ACTORS' FUND.

E. H. Sothern, Vitagraph Star, Bids Farewell to Stage After Close of Two Weeks' Successful Benefit Performances.

THE Finance Committee of the Actors' Fund of America has just reported that E. H. Sothern's two weeks' performances at the Shubert theater in New York City resulted in increasing the funds by $15,000. Mr. Sothern, assisted by Miss Julia Marlowe, has also recently given several extra matinee performances, bringing his contributions to charity for the month up to $28,000.

Mr. Sothern, who is to make his first appearance as a screen star under the Vitagraph banner, has declared himself as well pleased with the arrangements made for his debut in a romantic part that will carry him back to the early days of his career, so far as make-up and versatility are concerned.

Three Plays for Lasky in July

Blanche Sweet, Wallace Reid and Cleo Ridgely, and May Murray Will Head the Casts.

PHOTOPLAYS admirably suited for broad exploitation and effective presentation by exhibitors in the summer months are announced for release in July by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company. The three productions will be released through Paramount on the first three Mondays of the month, the schedule being Blanche Sweet in "The Dupe" on July 3, Wallace Reid and Cleo Ridgely in "The Selfish Woman" on July 10, and Mae Murray in "The Dream Girl" on July 17.

In addition to the emphasis which the public has placed upon the personnel of Lasky directors—they as a body being as well known as the stars—the public also has come to a keen recognition of the names of authors. In this connection it is interesting that, including the Lasky releases in June—Fannie Ward in "The Gutter Magdalene" by Willard Mack, and Victor Moore in "The Clown," by Marion Fairfax—five consecutive productions from the Lasky studio are based on original stories. "The Dupe" and "The Selfish Woman" are by Hector Turnbull, and "The Dream Girl" is by Jeanie MacPherson. Cecil B. DeMille is the producer of "The Dream Girl."

In support of Blanche Sweet in "The Dupe" there will appear Thomas Meighan, Ernest Joy and Veda McEvers. The cast for "The Selfish Woman" includes, in addition to the stars, Wallace Reid and Cleo Ridgely, Joseph King, Charles Arling, Billy Elmer, Bob Fleming, Edythe Chapman and Dorothy Abril, and in support of Mae Murray in "The Dream Girl" will be Theodore Roberts, James Neill, Earle Fox, Charles H. West, Mrs. L. McCord and Mary Mersch.

World Film for July

Kitty Gordon, Alice Brady, Carlyle Blackwell and Gail Kane Among Those Featured.

THE program of releases of the World Film Corporation for the summer months, according to the way it is at present arranged, is of sufficient interest, both in point of stars and stories to attract more than the usual attention. On July 3 Kitty Gordon, last seen in "Her Maternal Right," will make her third World appearance in another highly emotional tale, "The Crucial Test," in which the British player has an excellent opportunity of expressing her versatility. A strong cast of World players surrounds Miss Gordon.

In direct contract in a story as unlike and theme as dissimilar, Holbrook Blinn will characterize the release date of July 10 in a powerful tale, "The Weakness of Man." July 17, Carlyle Blackwell and Muriel Ostriche will be seen in their first vehicle, "Sally in Our Alley," which was produced from a scenario inspired by the famous old song classic of the same name. It is of the sentimental type and a light but fascinating relief from the highly dramatic efforts of the other two.

On July 24 Gail Kane will be seen again, this time in "Paying the Price," suitable in every sense to her talents, and another contrast to the previous three features.

Following upon her tremendous success in "La Vie De Boheme," and in a picture story, as alluring, comes Alice Brady on July 31 in "Miss Petticoats," based on the popular novel of the same name. A number of the scenes were staged on board an old whaler, off the coast of Massachusetts.

BOOK UNITY FOR FOUR SOUTHERN STATES.

After a visit to New York extending over a long period, F. M. Sanford and C. R. Scott have returned to Dallas, Tex., having booked the entire program of the Unity Sales Corporation for Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Both members of the firm are very well known in film circles, especially in the southwest. Mr. Scott has operated a chain of theaters and exchanges for several years, and Mr. Sanford is equally well known, having been for a long time in charge of the southwestern interests of the World Film Corporation.

MAC DERMOTT AND BRABIN AGAIN TOGETHER.

Marc MacDermott, Vitagraph star, and one of the most popular artists on the screen, will soon start work under the direction of Charles Brabin. Brabin directed MacDermott for three and a half of the five years he was with the Edison Company. It was under Brabin's supervision that the first five-part MacDermott features were produced.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"THE GRASP OF GREED" (Bluebird).

John Meeson's Will was one of the "best sellers" in the days when H. Rider Haggard's stories were read by everybody who was anybody throughout the world some years ago. This book has always held great possibilities for photoplaying, but Bluebird scouts have been the first to discover the fact. Consequently "The Grasp of Greed," the title under which the Haggard story will be released, July 17, with Louise Lovely in the stellar role, will hold many qualifications that should give it a great popular appeal.

Scene from "The Grasp of Greed" (Bluebird).

Originality in theme, a trait that made all the Haggard stories from "She" to the last one he wrote "best sellers," will be the principal charm to steady patrons of the picture houses. The idea of having a miser's will tattooed on the shiny-white back of a beautiful girl, by a half-drunk sailor, and then have the will hold perfectly good when probated, will be accepted as novelty enough.

But there are sensational scenes, heroic struggles and one of the most realistic shipwreck episodes filmed in many a day to keep excitement on tap while an engaging love story is unfolded—enough of all kinds of emotion to satisfy every type of picture devotee. Louise Lovely, the prettiest girl in the Bluebird galaxy of stars, has a role that fits her to a nicety, and her supporting company has Lon Chaney and Jay Belasco as principals in a numerous and clever assemblage of talent.

Ida May Park created the scenario from Haggard's novel and Joseph De Grasse directed the production.

ESSANAY TO MAKE QUAKER STORY.

The quaint Quakers of early Pennsylvania have served as subjects for the films in few instances, as compared with the other peoples of the world, but a delightful story has been built around them in a forthcoming Essanay three-act piece, "The Way of Patience." It is a story of a girl who rebelled at the stringent creed of her people and went out into a strange world. The theme is built on how her unusual innocence permitted her to explore the depths of society and escape unscathed, to later find the right man. Nell Craig offers an excellent interpretation of the part. Darwin Karr appears in the masculine lead. Ernest Maupain is the heavy lead.

SHOWING MAN WHO PUT SAND IN SPINACH.

That ancient mystery which has disturbed the palates of restaurant patrons and lovers of home cooking for generations has been solved. It seems the secret of the affinity between sand and spinach is in possession of all chefs—French or otherwise. One of these culinary experts was caught in the act for Paramount Pictographs and will be shown on the screen at his gritty task for the information of Paramount audiences. The feature is entitled, "He Has a Good Job."

INTERNATIONAL GETS PICTURES FROM ORIENT.

Nelson B. Edwards, staff camera man of the Hearst International News Pictorial with the Turkish army at Constantinople, is responsible for a number of remarkable photographs showing Turkish infantry in the field.

The failure of the Allies at Gallipoli led Edwards to Constantinople and the Turkish battle fronts in Persia. He took pictures of General Liman Von Sanders, German military advisor to the Ottoman Empire, Field Marshal Von Mackenson, reviewing the Turkish troops, and Enver Pasha, commander in chief of the Turkish armies. Mr. Edwards also photographed the Turkish troops in action, besides getting characteristic action pictures of many dignitaries of the Ottoman Government. All these pictures will appear in the current releases of the Hearst International News Pictorial.

In launching this news reel Mr. Hearst plans to give the public an actual newspaper in pictures. He will work out some radical innovations, plans for which have been formulating for some time.

"THE CROOKED ROAD" (Knickerbocker).

"The Crooked Road," featuring Henry King, is the Knickerbocker Star three-reel release of July 14. It is an unusual story of the tenements, centering about the activities of a gang. For the exterior scenes Mr. King and his company went up to San Francisco and camped out for a couple of days in the Barbary Coast quarter of the city. A remarkable feature of these scenes is the indifference of the slum dwellers to the camera. They refused to be constrained in their movements, and in several scenes crossed the background about their business, lending an unforeseen touch of realism.

"THE VAGABOND" (Chaplin-Mutual).

The third Chaplin-Mutual comedy will be released July 10 under the title of "The Vagabond." In this story the player returns to his famous make-up which he discarded temporarily for the filming of "The Fireman," his preceding Mutual release. Eric Campbell, the "heavy" of Chaplin-Mutual releases, Edna Purviance, the comedian's leading woman, Leo White, Charlotte Mineau, Phyllis Allen and Lloyd Bacon all have important parts.

The story, while presenting a series of typical Chaplin laugh-provoking comedy, nevertheless has its touch of pathos, and in these scenes the comedian gives a striking portrayal of his well known dramatic qualities. For the first time in his career, Chaplin, who essays the role of an itinerant musican, brings into play his famous violin of which so much has been written.

Scene from "The Vagabond" (Mutual).

An unusual artistic touch is added to one of the interior sets, depicting a ball room of a New York social leader's home, by the use of valuable paintings, loaned to Chaplin by one of his wealthy friends of Los Angeles. Among other old masters in this particular scene is a genuine Rembrandt, loaned to Chaplin by a Coast connoisseur. For a certain incident in one of the other interior scenes a splendid oil painting of Miss Purviance, recently completed and forwarded to her by a leading New York painter, is used.

"SUSIE SNOWFLAKE" (Famous Players).

Anna Pennington, star of the Ziegfeld Folies, makes her photoplay debut in the title role of "Susie Snowflake," a Famous Players production released on the Paramount Program June 22. Appropriately enough, the story deals with musical comedy stage life and Miss Pennington plays the role of a young girl who rises to stardom on the stage.

For the theater scenes the Famous Players erected a complete replica of a musical comedy theater in the studio. Here

Scene from "Susie Snowflake" (Famous Players).

Miss Pennington did one of the celebrated dances which has made her the idol of the musical comedy world, while a full orchestra played and a complete audience applauded her cleverness.

There is a good deal of real heart interest in the pathetic little figure of the diminutive dancer who finds her only home a chilly, loveless barn of a place and whose youthful exuberances are curbed at every turn by her aunts. In the role of Susie, Miss Pennington has a most happy medium for her introduction to the photoplay public and it is safe to predict that she will score a complete success. Among those who appear in her support are Leo Delaney, William Courtleigh, Jr., William J. Butler, Marcia Harris and Billie Wilson.

In accordance with a new arrangement entered into with G. Schirmer, Inc., the well known music publishers, a special musical score has been prepared for this subject, copies of which are obtainable from the various Paramount exchanges.

"THE REGENERATION OF MARGARET" (Essanay).

"The Regeneration of Margaret" is a timely Essanay drama in three acts which finds the origin of its subject in the defective infant. It is not built on the theme of "should the baby die?" nor does it resort to medical machinations for the carrying of its plot. Rather it is an absorbing story of a girl grown to healthful womanhood and her strange contact with the very specialist who doomed her to die as an infant. She, a nurse, finds him a helpless invalid, reveals her identity, and dares him to practice in his own instance what he has decreed for others. The bullet he intended for himself strikes her sweetheart, the son of the other doctor, who would not give her up for dead and by a secret operation saved her life. The boy does not die, and out of the maze of misunderstandings there comes the softening influence of love of humanity as against surgical harshness. Warda Howard, well known in Essanay emotional parts, takes the principal role, supported by Ernest Maupain, John Junior and Patrick Calhoun.

VIM ACQUIRING STORIES AND PROPS.

"A thrill in every comedy" is the new slogan of Vim Comedies. For some time Mark Dintenfass and Louis Burstein, managing director, have been preparing to introduce this novel element into the slapstick comedies featuring "Pokes and Jabbs" and "Plump and Runt." A large number of scenarios answering the requirements have been accumulated, and the producing companies are at work on the first stories introducing thrilling situations.

The plan necessitates the purchase of cars and other paraphernalia for staging railroad wrecks, burning bridges and other "thrillers." Messrs. Dintenfass and Burnstein have been in negotiation with a number of railroad companies and other organizations for material, and have acquired already a trolley car, day coaches, an engine and similar "props" for use in the pictures now in work. Arrangements have also been made with a Florida railroad and surface car road for the use of their tracks. The necessity of obtaining these franchises was one of the principal reasons for the decision of the Vim Comedy companies not to come North from the Jacksonville studios for the summer months, as previously contemplated.

"A MILK WHITE FLAG" (Selig).

William N. Selig's policy of having his best stars appear in shorter length productions and of devoting time and care to making the Selig one, two and three-reel pictureplays meritorious in every way has resulted, according to a statement of the Selig Company, in trebling its business during the past six months.

Mr. Selig in the pursuance of his General Film policy announces the release of "A Milk White Flag," one of Charley Hoyt's cleverest satires, which will be released in three reels through General Film service on Monday, July 10. Otis Harlan, king of American comedians, will be featured. His support includes a company of players each one carefully chosen for a certain type in this Hoyt comedy.

"Some Duel," a Tom Mix Western comedy, released Saturday, July 8, through General Film service, is the first of a series of Mix Western comedies which will fill a long-felt want in filmland. Every Saturday until further notice a Tom Mix comedy full of daring stunts will be released. They will be in one or two reels.

"Legal Advice," another Tom Mix comedy, will be released through General Film on Saturday, July 15.

"LITTLE MARY SUNSHINE" FOR PATHE.

"Little Mary Sunshine," a recent Pathe Gold Rooster play, has met with really remarkable success. The chubby dimpled face of filmdom's "littlest leading woman" has caught the public fancy to such an extent that exhibitors have been petitioned by their patrons for more pictures in which she appears.

In consequence, J. A. Berst, vice president and general manager of Pathe, has contracted with the Balboa company for the exclusive services of the child in forthcoming Gold Rooster Plays.

As public and exhibitors alike have persisted in calling the baby "Little Mary Sunshine" (the title of her first feature), everyone concerned has forgotten the name on her birth certificate, and as "Little Mary Sunshine" she will probably go down in film history. Everyone who has seen the first picture in which this remarkable child was starred will bear witness to how well the name fits the talented youngster.

The famous bear which was her playmate in her first feature will probably appear in the new pictures. Henry King, who was so successful in directing the baby before, will again be her director.

"THE SACRIFICE" (Selig).

"The Sacrifice" is a Selig Diamond Special in three reels, released in regular service through the General Film Company on Monday, June 26. Eugenie Besserer enacts the leading role, and is most ably supported by Guy Oliver, Harry Mestayer and others. "The Sacrifice" contains a strong and gripping appeal for preparedness and patriotism. It also convincingly presents another side of warfare, namely the sacrifices of mothers, wives and sweethearts, who grieve at home for those who march forth in defense of their country.

Scene from "The Sacrifice" (Selig).

There is a succession of spectacular battle scenes in which many men, heavy artillery, armored automobiles and rapid fire guns are used. "The Sacrifice," originally intended for a special feature film, has been placed in General Film regular service by the Selig Company following the policy of Mr. King to make his shorter length releases among the best.

"PURITY" (American).

Announcement is made by the Mutual Film Corporation of the release of a six-part film allegory, "Purity," featuring Audrey Munson, the famous artist's model, on July 17. This production was made at the studios of the American Film Company, Inc., at great cost and several hundred actors figured in the filming of this big feature. Many of the scenes were taken in a natural ampitheater on one of the most beautiful estates on the Pacific Coast. Weeks were taken to perfect the scenes and every detail worked out under the eyes of artists of note.

The story is taken from Greek mythology. Purity wanders over the earth exerting a good influence on everything. She is loved by a struggling poet, who idolizes her. They both love, but he is unable to sell his poetry, and marriage is impossible because of his poverty. Purity's wonderful beauty and grace of body is seen by an artist, who gets her to pose for an allegorical painting. She does it to get money that her sweetheart's poems may be published. She is successful and the lovers are happily united.

The allegorical characters, Evil, Beauty, Art, Music and Drama, all play important roles in this remarkable drama. Prominent in the cast supporting Miss Munson are Eugenie Forde, Nigel de Brullier and William Carroll. There are numerous ballets which add delightful ancient atmosphere to the action.

Walthall and Mayo Featured Apart

Stages at Chicago Essanay Studios Are Set for Pretentious Productions of Company's Leading Players.

THE extraordinary activity at the Chicago studios of the Essanay Company, where twelve companies are now at work on short and long subjects, has been made necessary by the order of President George K. Spoor that the next two Essanay multiple reel dramas, featuring Henry B. Walthall and Edna Mayo, respectively, be made decidedly artistic offerings. Thus, the one, two and three-reel subjects are being made somewhat farther ahead of program than usual, in order to clear the studios for the two features. Magnificent sets of one feature will take up the space in the largest studio, while the sets for the other play will be constructed in both other studios.

Work on Mr. Walthall's next vehicle has already begun. The play gives Mr. Walthall widest opportunity to display his ability. He will be supported by numerous stage stars and Essanay players who are customarily to be seen in leading roles. Antoinette Walker, leading woman for David Warfield in "The Music Master" and other Belasco productions, takes the chief supporting part. Exteriors will be filmed at Camp Logan, the rifle range and encampment grounds of the Illinois National Guard, situated just north of Fort Sheridan, the United States army post.

"The Return of Eve," with which Edna Mayo will make her next bow to the screen public, offers, perhaps, one of the most delightful topics ever filmed. As a stage play it was a hit, and with the added possibilities of the film it is sure to be one of the most pleasing offerings from the Essanay studios.

Eugene O'Brien, long a Broadway leading man, who has played opposite the greatest women stars in pictures, will support Miss Mayo. Other stage stars of high standing will appear in the other principal roles.

President Spoor is glad to call to the attention of exhibitors and public that neither of these plays hangs on crime or the sex topic for the development of the plots. They will be absolutely clean subjects, he promises, relying on their human touches and their originality, rather than violence, for their thrills and entertaining features.

"THE HIDDEN FACE" (GAUMONT).

The members of the Gaumont stock company working under the direction of Edwin Middleton have signalized their return from the south by the production of "The Hidden Face," a three-act photoplay of New England life of wide appeal. Miss Iva Shepard has never had such a strong part since her association with the Gaumont players. It is that of a mother who must witness the false accusation of the man her daughter loves while shielding the foundling who is in reality her own son. The son is played by Alexander Gaden. As in a number of other Gaumont plays, Mr. Gaden appears in the role of a minister, a part well adapted to his sympathetic and winning manner.

"The Hidden Face" is frank melodrama, but melodrama of the higher type. It is full of action, but the character drawing is distinct. The Gaumont companies have been drawn upon for players, Miss Shepard and Mr. Gaden being supported by such excellent players as Miss Lucille Taft, Charles W. Travis, Henry W. Pemberton, John Reinhard, Albert Macklin, James Levering, James Davis, Myles McCarthy and Miss Mabel E. Trinneer.

As the frivolous young wife of an elderly millionaire, whom she does not love, Mae Gaston, the charming Horsley leading woman, is seen in one of the best roles of her career in support of Crane Wilbur in the Centaur feature, "A Woman's Reputation."

COMING HORSLEY SUBJECTS.

Margaret Gibson, the charming and vivacious little star of the David Horsley productions, will be seen in a new line of work with the presentation of the two reel Centaur feature, "The Good-for-Nothin' Brat," with William Clifford as co-star, among the Horsley-Mutual releases for the week of July 8.

As the "Brat," Miss Gibson is seen in an entirely new character and in many instances her emotional disposition carries her through some highly dramatic situations, while on the other hand she delights with her comedy work. The story is from the pen of a new photoplay writer, Alvin J. Neitz, who constructed the action about a rural village.

A strong supporting cast is included with Frederick Montague, Dave Allen, Marguerite Foss, Janet Sully, Myra Davis Dowling and other Horsley favorites. The story was filmed under the supervision of Director Charles Swickard.

"A Merry Mix-Up," a rapid-fire starring vehicle for George Ovey, will be the offering from the Cub Comedy Company. Ovey is seen as a substitute husband and it is a case of laugh from start to finish. Dainty little Claire Alexander is the chief support of the Cub comedian, while the rest of the cast is made up of Louise Horner, Janet Sully, Louis Fitzroy, George George, Jefferson Osborne, Margaret Cullington, Harry Jackson and many of the Cub comics. The story is by Milton H. Fahrney, who is likewise the director of the Cub output.

"THE QUITTER" (Metro-Rolfe).

"The Quitter," a five-part Metro-Rolfe wonderplay, in which Lionel Barrymore is starred, and Marguerite Skirvin is featured, will be released on the Metro program July 10. The story was written by Isola Forrester, a special writer on the New York Evening World, and produced under the direction of Charles Horan. Among the prominent members of the cast who appeared in support of Mr. Barrymore and Miss Skirvin are Scene from "The Quitter" (Metro).

Edward Brennan, Paul Everton, Charles Prince and Julius D. Cowles.

The story of "The Quitter" is laid in Arizona in a gold mining town called Paradise Gulch. There are many interesting scenes staged in this production. Director Horan found an ideal western mining location near Delaware Water Gap, where he built an entire town. The "Three Cheers" saloon is one of the many picturesque sets, as is the western courtroom scene, where the trial is held. Mr. Horan has used many real western types, including Indians and half breeds, who were brought East for this feature.

BERLIN SHOWN IN HOLMES TRAVELS.

Burton Holmes, the traveler, has chosen "Imperial Berlin" as the starting point for his Paramount screen journey through the most famous cities of Europe. Berlin, the City Beautiful, will be shown as it was before the present war began, when it enjoyed the distinction of being the cleanest and one of the most beautiful and efficiently governed of all the great cities of the world.

From Hoboken, the "gateway to Germany," the party will enter the harbor of Hamburg to study the shipping in the greatest seaport of continental Europe, also one of the four cities of greatest commercial importance in the Occident. With a glimpse of the city and a view of the new Bismarck Denkmal, the screen tourists reach Berlin in time to see the changing of the King's Guard at the famous Koenigs-Wache in the royal Prussian city.

IRENE CASTLE PHOTOS IN DEMAND.

That Irene Castle has a great and ever increasing following is attested by the unprecedented demand for her photos as the crowds at the Allied Bazaar fought and pushed and shouted their bids for the privilege of owning one of these souvenirs. The bidding was fast and furious, and some of the fabulous prices obtained for these pictures are evidence that the public has a warm welcome for Irene Castle, on or off the stage, in "still" photography or on the screen.

The International Film Service, Inc., is now at work with Mrs. Castle on a big new screen production, the name of which has not been announced. This picture will be the popular star's first effort since her seven-day flying trip to England, where she bid her husband "bon voyage." Mr. Castle is now at the European war front with the British Royal Flying Corps.

"THE CONFLICT" (Vitagraph).

"The Conflict," a Blue Ribbon Feature, presenting Lucille Lee Stewart, has been announced for release by Vitagraph for Monday, July 3. Miss Stewart, as Madeleine, a poor but proud country girl, had excellent opportunities in this picture to display her capability, and the picture shows that she has made the most of them.

"MAUD, THE EDUCATED MULE" (International).

"A Tempest in a Paint Pot," by Geo. Herriman, and "Maud, the Educated Mule," are animated cartoons scheduled for release July 3 by International Film Service, Inc.

"Maud, the Educated Mule," is a particularly happy subject for cartoon-comedy. There is action aplenty. "Maud," in the leading "heavy" role, whales the everlasting daylights out of the rest of the cast, including our old friend "Si," who in due course of the narrative, is treated to a fast ride on a barrel. His career over Greater New York and environs is not even slowed up by a collision with the Woolworth building, which Scene from "Maud the Educated Mule" (International).

crashes to ruin and desolation before the cataclysmic hoof blows of the long-eared bird from Missouri.

A "Krazy Kat," by George Herriman, is always a riot of laughter, and in "A Tempest in a Paint Pot" we have both "Ignatz" and "Krazy" at the very top of their speed. These ludicrous but intensely human children of the Herriman mind grow funnier with each release. Not only are the situations clever, but the animation seems to be perfectly in accord with the style of navigation suggested by both characters as they appear each day in "still" cartoons.

"THE APOSTLE OF VENGEANCE" (Ince).

"The Apostle of Vengeance," released June 25, a Triangle-Ince picture, brings William S. Hart back to his army of followers. The story is strong and virile and is filled with human interest that gives it an almost universal appeal. Hart plays the role of the eldest son of a family of Kentucky feudists. He has left the mountains fifteen years before to go to the North and become a minister. He succeeds in his ambition and has just received a call to a new and larger parish when there comes a call from his family to come home and take up a bitter quarrel with their ancient enemies who have just slain the father.

Nothing in pictures is finer than Hart's portrayal of the mental struggle that follows between the dictates of heredity and the teachings of God. He eventually returns—not to fight, but to preach the gospel of the brotherhood of man. Nona Thomas, who is the leading woman for Mr. Hart in the picture is particularly appealing and provides the touch of softness to the strong scenes in which the star makes his strongest appeal.

"THE DEMON OF FEAR" (Mustang).

In "The Demon of Fear," a two-part Mustang subject in which Frank Borzage, Anna Little and Jack Richardson play the chief parts, Queenie Rosson is given an opportunity to prove her title to some of the popularity enjoyed by her sister, Helene.

Dealing with a man born a coward, who struggles through life tortured by fear, the principal part of the story is carried to the public by means of a tottering old man's recital of his trials and unhappiness caused by this inherent cowardice. Frank Borzage plays the part of the old man, and his younger self through the early years, bringing into the story a girl named Anna (Anna Little), whom he marries and loses, her death caused by his lack of courage.

There are many beautiful scenes laid along the rocky Pacific shore, where the waves break in great clouds of foam over the reefs, and where it requires the skill of an expert surfman to launch a boat and make a landing through the rolling, breaking combers.

Thrills, heart-throbs, comedy, pathos—all are intermingled in this virile photoplay enacted by the strong Mustang company. "The Demon of Fear" will be released by Mutual on June 30.

"THE PRIVATE BANKER" (Selig).

Following the release of the Selig Diamond Special "A Milk White Flag," on Monday, July 10, another noteworthy Selig Diamond Special is announced for release on Monday, July 17. This is entitled "The Private Banker," and features Wheeler Oakman, Edith Johnson, Leo Pierson and others. It 's a drama of the Italian quarter and one exciting climax is shown when the girl stops a steam shovel and saves the life of her lover.

"Shooting Up the Movies" is another of the Tom Mix series of Western comedies released by the Selig Company every Saturday through General Film Service. "Shooting Up the Movies" contains a laugh in every inch of the two reels. A company goes west to take motion pictures. The cowboy mistakes acting for the real thing and there is excitement. A love story also adds interest to this production. Tom Mix stars and presents a number of exciting stunts which will thrill the most blase audience.

Wallace Macdonald, Gertrude Le Brandt, Alfred Ferguson, Margaret Nichols and Harry von Meter are the players appearing in Mary Miles Minter's support in her first American-Mutual feature, which will be released shortly under the title of "Youth's Endearing Charm." The piece is being filmed under the direction of William D. Dowlan, pending the arrival at the Santa Barbara studios of James Kirkwood, to direct Miss Minter's feature productions.

Boston Civic Worker, William H. Foster, Secretary of the Ford Hall Foundation, Takes Up the Gauntlet Against Censorship of Moving Pictures—Enthusiastically Points Out Great Value of the Films to the Community.

By William H. Flynn, Boston Correspondent of the Moving Picture World.

BOSTON, MASS.—A glowing tribute to moving pictures was paid by William H. Foster, Secretary of the Ford Hall Foundation in discussing "The Ethics of Motion Pictures" at the New Thought Forum, Dr. Hale's South Congregational Church at Exeter and Newbury streets. He termed the influence of the screen enlightening and a source of education not only to the youth of the slums but to the Harvard or other college graduate as well.

A large number of people in this country receive their ideals from the silent drama, he declared, and added that pictures cannot be considered lightly. He placed the motion picture drama above literature and the spoken drama as a means of expressing thought and imaginations. The speaker referred to motion pictures as one form of democracy—an art distinct and different from other arts.

"I am against censorship," declared Mr. Foster. "It will do no good. The only way to improve is to substitute good for bad. Only constructive censorship will do this. The 'movies' are the greatest adjunct to preaching that the world has ever known. In New York city scores of saloons have quit because they could not stand up against the competition of the motion pictures. The silent drama has been charged with giving an unfair view of the liquor traffic. This is the highest recommendation that could ever be given to the moving picture theater.

"Outside of the motion picture industry there is no large industry where the owners have tolerated a volunteer army of censors, and not only abide by their decisions, but pay the expenses for running off thousands of reels before their eyes every year.

"Time and space are lost in the 'movies.' And this is well for art can never be a reality. Art seizes some emotion or beauty and sets it up apart from any surrounding circumstances. The photo-play is not an introduction to literature. It is in a class by itself and independent of any art."

Toward the ends of his remarks Mr. Foster strongly recommended the introduction of motion pictures into schools and colleges. He said that Roman history taught through moving pictures would bring far better results than text books. The conscious and unconscious education received through motion pictures, he said, was of the greatest value. He called the heroines of the screen clean and wholesome, and added that truth can be visualized in motion pictures as in no other way.

Local Film Men Pleased by Abrams Advance.

Boston, Mass.—Hiram Abrams, the well known moving picture man of this city has received a host of congratulations on his election to the presidency of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, succeeding W. W. Hodkinson. Several persons in this territory are predicting Mr. Abrams will make things hum in his new berth and a big surprise is expected within a short time. An account of Mr. Abrams was printed in this paper last week.

Despite his comparative youth Mr. Abrams has risen to a high place among motion picture distributors and exhibitors entirely through his own ability and desire to make good. His talents for the artistic end of the work have exerted an influence in the improvement of subjects, methods of presentation and general advance of the pictorial stage. Mr. Abrams makes his home in Boston although much of his time is spent in New York.

FROM CAPITAL CITY.

By Clarence L. Linz, 635 Tenth St. N. E., Washington, D. C., Special Correspondent.

New Hy Art Film Company's Officers.

Washington, D. C.—Local exhibitors were well pleased to learn recently during a visit home of John Payette, formerly with the General Film Company in Washington, that when the Hy Art Film Company was incorporated he was taken in as a junior member with the title of assistant manager. Mr. Payette is one of the best known and best liked young film men in this section, and everyone is glad to learn that he is climbing towards the top. He is the sort of a chap always willing to do one a favor, or meet one half way in any sort of a deal. He is a model youngster and a credit to the industry.

The officials of the newly formed corporation are: Edmund K. Fox, president; Barry Buckley, vice-president; George R. Mayo, secretary and treasurer; Gibbs L. Baker, general counsel; Arthur S. Hyman, formerly manager of the local branch of the General Film Company, manager, and John J. Payette, assistant manager. They are marketing a number of features including "One Day," "Salamander," "The Folly of Sin," and "The Man of the Missing Finger," all of which they are carrying through the entire Southern territory. They are also working three copies of "The Battle Cry of Peace," and are handling "The Christian."

Films in French Schools.

Consul-General A. M. Thackara, Paris, writes in Commerce Reports that by a Presidential decree of March 25, 1916, an extra parliamentary commission was appointed; in connection with the Ministry of Public Instruction, to study means whereby the use of the motion picture may be generalized in the different branches of public education.

The appointment of this commission is the outcome of a report made on December 23, 1915, to the Chamber of Deputies by the public instruction committee of the Chamber. In laying this matter before the President, the Minister of Public Instruction said in part: "Despite the grave events of the present time, we must not neglect certain measures whose utility, although not immediate, will be realized in the future. After the war, the national school will have work laid before it more important than in the past. It will be its task to hasten and increase the intellectual and moral development of the country.

Censors Again Appeal

Pennsylvania Board Asks Supreme Court to Set Aside the Recent Decision of Judge Audenried of the Common Pleas Court—Wants Elaboration of the Higher Court's Decision on the Former Appeal.

Special to Moving Picture World by Philadelphia News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Members of the moving picture industry in the vicinity of Philadelphia were recently surprised when it was learned that Deputy Attorney General Kun, representing the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, had taken an appeal from the decision of Judge Audenreid, which sustained the Lubin film, "Dollars and the Woman," to the Supreme Court. This production, a five reel picture, which has been passed by the board of censors in many other states, was ordered cut by the board here, ten eliminations being demanded.

The Lubin Company appealed the case to the Common Pleas Court, and three weeks ago Judge Audenreid rendered a decision that the State board had exceeded their legal powers in ordering the elimination, as was published in the Moving Picture World.

It is reported that the action taken on behalf of the Pennsylvania Board of Censors is designed to establish and define more fully in the Supreme Court the powers of review vested in the Common Pleas Court. The appeal to the Supreme Court, it is understood, indicated a desire to have the court elaborate a decision made recently which took from the Common Pleas Courts the right to revise the decision of the Censors and order the eliminations anew if necessary.

In this decision the Supreme Court held that the Common Pleas Courts' powers were limited to ruling upon the breadth of the jurisdiction of the censors only. When the Common Pleas Courts found that the censors had "abused the powers vested in them" they were empowered to rule to that effect, which nullified the censoring. How far this discretion can be employed by the Common Pleas Courts, it is the desire of the State Board of Censors to learn through the appeal recently filed.

New Theater Begins New History.

Reading, Pa.—The hundreds of pedestrians daily passing along the north side of Penn street near Seventh, Reading, Pa., where excavations are being made preparatory to the erection of the largest moving picture theater in that city and one of the largest in the country, perhaps, little realize that many years ago that spot was the most frequented place in the city and has quite an interesting history.

This location has a history well worth recalling at this time because of the interest centered in the building of the new palatial theater. The site attracts in other respects. The buildings, which have recently been demolished, were the smallest as a group, on Penn street east of Third. They were tiny two and a half story structures with small dimensions otherwise.

These old houses stood as landmarks and memories of various happenings in the history of Reading. They were in reality curiosities, walled in as they were between higher buildings and of an ancient architectural style. They were remnants of the city of Reading when it stood as a city of but several thousand inhabitants.

The Imperial Theater Sold.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The large moving picture theater, the Imperial, located at Nos. 217-19 South Sixtieth street, has been purchased by Robert N. Wannemacher from Robert Bloomgarden, for a nominal consideration, subject to mortgages of $72,500. The theater measures 90 by 130 feet, and is reached by a lobby 32 by 72 feet. The new owner has made arrangements whereby William I. Greenfield, will manage the theater.

Great Northern Theater Improvements.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Henon & Doyle, well known architects of Philadelphia, are receiving bids for alterations and an addition to the Great Northern theater, Broad street and Erie avenue. The contract will soon be let and the work of renovation will be rushed forward with all possible speed. This theater is one of the largest moving picture theaters in that section of the city and is patronized daily by thousands of persons.

New Delaware Amusement Company.

Wilmington, Del.—The Winter Garden Amusement Company, of Wilmington, Del., has recently been granted a charter under the laws of that state for the purpose of conducting places of amusement. The new concern has been capitalized at $400,000, F. D. Buck, George W. Dillman and M. L. Horty being the principal incorporators.

Allen Theater Leased.

Allentown, Pa.—William F. Wolle, of 105½ Hamilton street, Allentown, Pa., has taken over the Allen moving picture theatre at Second and Hamilton streets, having leased the same from E. J. Lumley, who has conducted the theater ever since its erection a number of years ago. Mr. Wolle intends to devote all of his time to the management of the theater and announces that he will exhibit nothing but first class pictures for the large patronage enjoyed by that house. The first show under his direction was recently given and the folks who visit the Allen were entirely satisfied with the character of the show given.

BALTIMORE NEWS LETTER.

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mt. Royal Ter., Baltimore, Md., Special Correspondent.

Censors Choose Permanent Office.

BALTIMORE, Md.—The recently appointed Board of Moving Picture Censors has leased offices at 204 East Lexington street for a term of years.

In regard to the opinion of the Baltimore Sun we can't help wondering whether this well established paper had in mind the Censor Board, as well as some others, when it wrote the editorial entitled "Thanks, Farmer Harrington!"

Says the editorial in part:

"We offer Governor Harrington our most sincere congratulations on the Agricultural Board which he has appointed. He has done himself 'proud' and the state 'proud' in his selections. . . . If the governor had made all his appointments on the principle on which he has made these, what a splendid official plant he would have constructed!"

Taxes are Now Due.

Owners, exhibitors and exchangemen, take notice that if you owe the city for taxes you can save additional six cents that will be tacked on to every dollar after July 1 by paying now.

"All taxes," states the advertisement of City Collector William C. Page, "on real estate and on all forms of personal property, including shares of stock and other property valued or subject to valuation by the State Tax Commission, will be in arrears July 1."

New Manager for Strand.

Baltimore, Md.—Edward Rosenstein, manager of the Strand theater, 404-6 North Howard street, has accepted a position with the Pathe Freres Company, and it is understood that Harry Woods, now resident manager of the Hippodrome theater, will supervise the management of the Strand in the future. Just who Mr. Woods will appoint to succeed Mr. Rosenstein as manager of this house has not, at this writing, been divulged. The Strand prospered under the former manager, who held this position since the theater was opened. It is well patronized. Mr. Rosenstein will take over the management of the phonograph department for the Pathe Company in the East.

Lyman H. Broening in Baltimore.

Baltimore, Md.—Lyman H. Broening, who is associated with the Famous Players Company as chief photographer, is at this time visiting in Baltimore at his home. His uncle is States Attorney William F. Broening. This is the first vacation Mr. Broening has taken in four years.

New Corporations.

Baltimore, Md.—The Film Advertising Company, moving picture films, exhibitions, etc. Incorporated by E. J. Vogeler. The capital stock is $100,000.

The Carrolton Amusement Company, motion picture devices, reels, etc. Incorporated by Harry D. Caskey. Capital stock is $5,000.

The New Will Be Cool.

Baltimore, Md.—L. A. DeHoff, manager of the New theater, 210 West Lexington street, has just had a new refrigerating plant installed and the patrons of this house can now expect a polar region atmosphere when they enter the house. Also the price of admission to this theater has been changed to 10 cents for both night and day performances. Heretofore 20 cents was charged for seats on the lower floor after 6 p. m.

Will Rebuild Lubin's Theater.

Baltimore, Md.—It is announced through Wm. Tyler, manager of Lubin's theater, 404-6 East Baltimore street, that arrangements have been made to install a large Kimball orchestral, human-voiced organ, in this house. Plans are now being prepared for the placing of the instrument. The whole theater, exterior and interior, states Mr. Tyler, is to be rebuilt.

New Theater in Robertsdale.

Robertsdale, Pa.—Grissinger Bros., care of the Pastime theater, this city, are now taking bids for the building of a one-story moving picture theater to cost $10,000 which is to be erected on North Main street, this city.

Bluebirds in New Gem.

Baltimore, Md.—Through H. M. Siegel, traveling representative for the Fairmount Feature Film Company of Philadelphia, handling Bluebird and Red Feather features, a contract has been signed up with Nick Burns, proprietor of the New Gem theater, for the features of this company. "Undine" is the first one that will be shown at this house. Mr. Siegel has just returned from a very successful trip through West Virginia.

East Fayette St. House Permitted.

Baltimore, Md.—The ordinance which was introduced in the city council of Baltimore requesting permission for Joseph A. Gallagher to erect a moving picture theater at 2239-43 East Fayette street has been signed by Mayor Preston.

Feature Hits in Baltimore.

Pearce & Scheck's Victoria and the Picture Garden are both showing the film entitled "Where Are My Children?" this week.

By request a return booking of "The Hero of Submarine D-2" was shown at the Strand theater, 404-6 North Howard street, on June 15, 16 and 17.

The Lord Calvert theater, 1627 Hartford avenue, arranged to show the first episode of "The Mysteries of Myra" last week.

There are twenty-five houses in Baltimore that have regularly booked the Mutual Chaplin releases. Last week "The Fireman" was shown at the Hippodrome, Lubin's and the New Pickwick, and it is stated that the film is being shown to standing room only crowds.

From a reliable source it is learned that the business of the Mutual exchange in this city is beginning to be very brisk. Mr. Evans seems to be handling the situation with great care and skill and the Baltimore exhibitors are complimentary in their comments on the new method of this company in catering to them and meeting their demands in regard to the booking of the star series.

"Hansel and Gretel" was the feature at the children's matinee which was given on Saturday, June 17, at the Parkway theater, 3-9 West North avenue. Manager Bernard Depkin, Jr., states through his advance program, which is mailed to the patrons of this house, that through their system of ventilation the temperature of this theater will always be 20 degrees cooler than that outdoors on the hottest days.

PITTSBURGH NEWS LETTER.

Beautiful Shiloh Theater Opened.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Shiloh theater, a beautiful new house in the Mt. Washington district, Pittsburgh, was formally opened to the public last week in a most auspicious manner. It is owned by Henry Polk and replaces the old Shiloh theater, which was closed in April. Many exhibitors were present on the opening night and all congratulated Mr. Polk on the high standard he has set. The new Shiloh is up-to-date and complete in its appointments, as well as quite attractive throughout. A pipe organ supplies the music. Feature pictures are shown daily and the admission is 10 cents.

Edward Balson Buys Knickerbocker.

Braddock, Pa.—The Knickerbocker theater, Braddock, has been taken over entirely by Edward Balson, who has purchased the interest of his partner, Benjamin Burke. Mr. Balson has also recently purchased the Cameraphone theater, at Sharpsburg, and is converting it into an up-to-date and thriving house. Joseph Burke is manager of the Cameraphone.

Herrington To Build

Pittsburgh Soon to Have Handsome Picture Theater on the Site of Frederick J. Herrington's Coliseum in Mount Oliver, a Suburb of the City—Will Seat 1,200 Persons—Will Cost About $50,000.

Special to Moving Picture World from Pittsburgh News Service.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Frederick J. Herrington is having plans prepared for a handsome 1,200 seat theater to be erected soon on the site of his Coliseum theater, in Mount Oliver, a suburb of Pittsburgh. Mr. Herrington is president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America and one of the pioneers in this city. He entered the exhibiting business eleven years ago and has operated a number of houses here with marked success. For the past year he has conducted the Coliseum, which is a very attractive 440 seat theater.

The contracts for the new theater will be let by Mr. Herrington within the next few weeks, or as soon as the architect's drawings are completed, after which work will be started at once so as to have the house ready for opening in the fall. The building will occupy practically the entire lot measuring 53 by 129 feet, which property Mr. Herrington owns. The structure will be strictly modern, two stories in height and of brick and steel construction. The cost of the building will be about $30,000, while an additional $20,000 is to be invested in equipment and furnishings.

The great popularity of Mr. Herrington's Coliseum theater among the people of the Mount Oliver district alone warrants his plans for making the new house one of the largest and most attractive in Western Pennsylvania. A number of new features as well as his proven ideas formulated during his long success in the business will be incorporated by Mr. Herrington in his latest venture.

"Man and Millionaire" a Pittsburg Local Film.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—A unique and interesting moving picture contest was launched recently by the Pittsburgh Press, and it is attracting much attention not only among picture fans but the leading exhibitors of the city as well. The usual popularity voting contest is under way, in this instance to chose the thirteen principals in a photo drama entitled "Man and Millionaire," which was the prize winning scenario in a recent competion conducted by the same paper.

As a feature of added interest the ballots deposited at the following theaters, which are also backing the contest, are counted double: Alhambra theater, East End; Arsenal theater, Butler street; Belmar theater, Homewood and Bennett avenues; Bellevue theater, Lincoln avenue, Bellevue; Cameraphone theater, East End; Columbia theater, Fifth avenue; Elite theater, Federal street, Northside; Garden theater, North avenue; Imperial theater, Beaver avenue; Knickerbocker theater, Braddock avenue, Braddock; Lyric theater, Fifth avenue; Liberty theater, Fifth and Shady avenues; Minerva theater, Fifth avenue; Majestic theater, Fifth avenue; Novelty theater, Federal street; Olympic theater, Fifth avenue; Regent theater Penn and Highland avenues; Strand theater, Forbes street; Temple theater, Sixth street; William Penn theater, Federal street.

The Star Is Again Shining.

New Kensington, Pa.—The Star theater, New Kensington, Pa., has been re-opened following a remodeling process which has made the house a very cosy and attractive one. The Star was taken over about a month ago by George Kyros, of New Kensington, and Mike Comnus, of McKeesport. It now seats 400 persons. General and Mutual service is used, beside several serials at present. The house is managed personally by Mr. Kyros, who recently conducted the Colonial theater.

Western Pennsylvania Notes.

The Quality Film Co., 404 Ferry street, Pittsburgh, has announced that it will handle in Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia "The Yellow Menace," an elaborate new serial picture in 16 episodes, produced by the Serial Film Corporation and owned by the Unity Sales Corporation. Manager Max Herring states that the serial is to be liberally advertised and should prove a big success, as it is in line with the preparedness idea.

The Colonial theater, Farrell, Pa., will be closed for extensive alterations by its owner and manager J. C. Leslie, during the week of June 26. A beautiful new front is to be installed and other improvements made which will add greatly to the attractiveness of the house. Feature pictures will be shown after the reopening.

Duston Farnum, Pallas Picture Star, in His Dust Gatherer.

Mr. Farnum is making good his pet name, "Dusty," on a transcontinental trip from San Diego to his native home, Bucksport, Me. Motion picture men along the line plan a series of welcomes for the popular star.

Ollie Kirkby, Kalem Company Heroine of "The Social Pirates" series. See the pile of Moving Picture Worlds? They weren't "planted," either.

Want Ohio Convention

Cincinnati Exhibitors Hope to Bring Together Members of All Existing Organizations in State in Single Strong Central body—Local League Encouraged by Attitude of Several Influential Exhibitors.

By Kenneth C. Crain, 610 First Natl. Bank Bldg., Cincinnati, Special Correspondent.

CINCINNATI, O.—Prospects for an Ohio exhibitors' convention in Cincinnati, which will bring together members of all existing organizations for the purpose of forming a single, strong central body, if possible, are growing brighter, as letters of acquiescence and encouragement are received from various influential exhibitors by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce. Frank Bevestock, of Mansfield, O., president of the Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, has written H. Serkowich, secretary of the local body, that he is perfectly willing to have his league meet in Cincinnati to amalgamate with the others, his executive board having so decided at a recent meeting. Max Stearn, president of the Ohio Exchanges, is also said to be in favor of the move, and indications are that the meeting will be a success from every standpoint.

Airdomes Are Open.

Cincinnati, O.—Airdomes have opened up all around Cincinnati lately, since fairly warm weather has succeeded the prolonged period of rain, resembling that of last year. Several new ones were ready for business with the coming of summer weather, notably that of the Park Hall theater, out in Oakley. The Bon Ton airdome, adjoining the Bon Ton theater, in Evanston, is also ready for business, and indications are that if some reasonably warm nights come along to encourage the public to sit outdoors the roofless houses will do a big business.

Picture Hits in Cincinnati.

The Grand opera house had a big run on the Universal production, "Where Are My Children?" beginning Sunday, June 11, with Tyrone Power as the star. Al. E. Brandt, special Universal representative, was much pleased with the success of the picture in Cincinnati. Manager Libson of the Grand ran the picture four times daily, beginning at two o'clock.

The Alhambra theater has a way of staging long runs which has brought it several records during the past few months, and Manager Weigel is highly gratified. The latest of these long runs was the Essanay production, featuring Charley Chaplin in "Police." This ran for sixteen consecutive days, followed very closely, by the way, by a seven-day run of the same film at the Colonial. Then a return engagement, for the fourth or fifth time, of "The Spoilers," released by the V-L-S-E exchange, occupied three days at the Alhambra, making a total of probably a month's business for that film at the Alhambra. On every one of its engagements it has drawn well, and this and other pictures shown repeatedly by Manager Weigel indicate that his judgment in the matter of come-back quality is pretty accurate.

Manager Harry L. Orear, of the General Film Co.'s Cincinnati offices, is immensely gratified at the success with which the Chaplin releases being handled through his office are meeting. The forthcoming appearance in Cincinnati of Essanay's "The Little Girl Next Door," in seven reels, based on the revelations of the Chicago Vice Commission, is expected by Mr. Orear to duplicate its sensational success elsewhere. The film has been passed by the Ohio Board of Censors on account of the powerful lesson which it conveys and has been extensively booked through the State.

McMahan & Jackson announce that they have closed a contract with the Unity Sales Co., of New York, covering the entire United States rights for "Diana the Huntress," the clasical film which was so successful in Cincinnati when shown recently at the Lyric theater in connection with the engagement of "The Dumb Girl of Portici."

DETROIT NEWS LETTER.

By Jacob Smith, 503 Free Press Building, Detroit, Special Correspondent.

What Detroit Exchanges are Doing.

DETROIT, MICH.—The Mutual exchange is being entirely remodelled and already can be seen a great improvement—the paper and poster departments have been transferred to the top floor. Manager Trask reports excellent business on six Chaplin prints which are working to capacity—also good business on the Mutual Masterpieces with fair business on the general program releases.

The Triangle is still working on its new quarters on the top floor of the building on Broadway—already a projection room has been installed for the convenience of exhibitors. A fireproof vault has also been built in the rear.

The new Universal quarters at Cass and West Fort streets are certainly handsome and up to date and it is doubtful if there is anything finer anywhere. Manager Geo. Weeks surely did use good judgment when he picked this location. Decorators are still working there and it will be several weeks before everything is completed—and then—wait for the big formal opening.

L. G. Parkhurst at the Pathe exchange says "doing better business every day."

D. Leo Dennison, in charge of the Paramount exchange, reports that he is now booking his features in every town in Michigan of more than 5,000 inhabitants. And why shouldn't the best theaters in every town want Paramount pictures?

A. J. Gilligham is now established as the National Film Company in his new quarters on the third floor of the Empire theater building, Woodward avenue.

The Big Four exchange in the Peter Smith building is also a busy place, and Manager Duncan reports no let-up in business, despite the warm weather.

Changes in Detroit Theaters.

There have been quite a number of changes in the management and ownership of some of Detroit's smaller houses. The Virginia Park, 1227 Hamilton boulevard, has been sold to F. S. Wadlow and his partner, but the name will remain the same; the former owner was Charles D. Wesch.

John P. Church is now booking manager for the Forest theater, Woodward and Forest avenues.

The Palace theater, on Fourteenth street, has been sold by Paul Hoffman to John R. O'Dell, who also operates the Frontenac theater, Frontenac and Harper avenues.

The Warfield theater, 1030 Hastings street, is now under the same ownership as the Castle, also on Hastings street.

M. J. Conroy is now the lessee of the Countess theater, 1370 West Fort street, formerly operated by Maurice Caplan and Ben Reuben.

Among the theaters recently closed in Detroit have been the Illa, 345 Dix avenue; the Greenwood, Greenwood and Kirby avenues; the Wigwam, the Parkview, the Vinewood and the Ideal.

Edward Poland has purchased the Theatorium, 531 Baker street, from Otto Seestedt.

Detroit Newslets.

About 25 moving picture theaters in Detroit are now running amateur contests one night each week with good results. It is customary to divide about five dollars in cash to the winners.

Mitchell Granby, manager of the Fox exchange in Toronto, accompanied by his assistant, Ben Rogers, were in Detroit, Sunday, June 11, spending the day with Neil Kingsley, Detroit Fox manager.

BUFFALO NEWS LETTER.

By Joseph McGuire, 611 Erie County Bank Bldg., Buffalo, Special Correspondent.

Jamestown Managers Arrested.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.—The Federation of Churchmen of Jamestown, N. Y., is trying to close the moving picture theaters of that city on Sunday. Petitions in favor of Sunday closing were recently signed by 450 residents and forwarded to District Attorney William S. Stearns at Fredonia, N. Y., for action. As a result Michael Woods and August Bergren, owners of Jamestown theaters, and six employes were arrested. The theater ticket sellers and operators work seven days each week, and this is the ground upon which the prosecution is based.

H. L. Byrne on Road With Features.

Buffalo, N. Y.—H. L. Byrne, former manager of the Bijou moving picture theater, Buffalo, is now road representative of "Twilight Sleep," which recently played the Family theater, this city. Another recent feature at the Family was "The End of the World."

Jack Farren Takes Over the Murray.

Rochester, N. Y.—Jack Farren, manager of the Victoria theater, Rochester, has taken over the Murray theater of that city.

Temple Theater's New Manager.

Albion, N. Y.—H. H. Buckle is the new manager of the Temple theater of Albion.

Harton Co. Takes Colonial Theater.

Elmira, N. Y.—The Harton Co., proprietor of the Regent theater, Elmira, has also taken over the Colonial theater.

E. B. Cridler Visits Buffalo.

Dansville, N. Y.—E. B. Cridler, proprietor of the Dansville opera house, was a recent visitor at the World Film office in Buffalo. "We always have two copies of The Moving Picture World at our theater," said Mr. Cridler. "Everything is running along nicely. Our regular price of admission is 10 cents, but when we put on a large feature we sometimes advance the price to 25 cents. We never mix pictures with the road shows that occasionally give one night performances at our house. On these nights the pictures are withdrawn, and this policy is very satisfactory to our patrons."

Mr. Cridler has had the Dansville opera house for the past four years. During the four previous years he conducted the Theatorium.

A. Somerville Managing the Happy Hour

Buffalo, N. Y.—Harry Somerville has been appointed manager of the Happy Hour moving picture theater, Buffalo. He has managed the Family and Airovict theaters of this city and the Lyric of Jamestown. He is remodeling the front of the Happy Hour. This is a five-cent house, the shows running from 12 noon to 11 o'clock at night. M. A. Myers, head of the Myers Amusement Co., which conducts the Happy Hour, has been ill for several weeks, but is now steadily improving.

Victor Zebil with Buffalo Exclusive.

Buffalo.—Victor Zebil, former manager of the Syracuse branch of the Exclusive Features, Inc., is now assistant to Louis Green, manager of the Buffalo offices of this service. The Syracuse offices were recently closed.

Merit Film Co. Opens New Office.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Merit Film Co., releasing the Ivan films, has opened a new office at 39 Erie street, Buffalo. Frank J. Willis is manager, and his assistant is Frank W. Ryckoff. In the same building Basil Brady has opened a new office for the International Film Service, featuring "The Mysteries of Myra," etc.

G. H. Penn Back in Buffalo.

Buffalo, N. Y.—G. H. Penn of Buffalo, formerly road representative of the Mutual in Cleveland, is now on the inside staff of the Mutual in his home city. At one time he was employed by the company in Buffalo. Before going into the film business he was in vaudeville as a member of the Singing Four.

"I'm glad to be back in Buffalo with my family," said Mr. Penn.

Buffalo Notes of Interest.

T. R. Smith, traveling auditor of the Mutual Film, recently visited the Buffalo offices of the company. He is going from coast to coast on a tour of the sixty-eight Mutual offices.

Miss Edna Kill, switch board operator at the General Film Co.'s offices, Buffalo, was recently married to August Christensen of this city.

H. F. Brink, Paramount road representative, recently placed this service with C. S. Smith of the Shattuck opera house of Hornell, N. Y. The Shattuck is having a satisfactory business.

W. P. Hazlett, special representative of the Kalem Co., recently boomed "The Social Pirates" in this city. He has been doing similar missionary work in Philadelphia and Chicago.

The list of new officers of the Buffalo Screen Club will be announced in next week's edition. Members and their wives and sweethearts recently held an informal dance at the clubrooms. The affair was well attended.

C. A. Persons, owner of the Bijou theater, Canandaigua, N. Y., recently visited the Paramount offices in Buffalo.

F. A. Kellar, manager of the Majestic theater, Lockport, N. Y., was another caller at the World Film office.

L. S. Diamond, inspector-auditor of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., has been spending several days at the Buffalo offices of the company. He is on a tour of the various Pathe exchanges.

"The Buffalo offices are in fine shape," said Mr. Diamond. "You might also mention that the home office of the Pathe has just sent in thirty subscriptions to The Moving Picture World for our various branches."

H. C. Robbins of the Kingston theater, Canaseraga, N. Y., devotes considerable time in promoting moving picture programs for church purposes in various states.

Crawford Wright of the Wright theater, Waterloo, N. Y., is considering a plan to hold a "pony contest" at his house.

Porter Johnson, special representative of the Paramount, has been transferred from Buffalo to Syracuse.

The Central Park Amusement Co. is operating two large moving picture theaters in Buffalo, the Premier, G. E. Dickman, manager, and the Central Park, E. C. Winegar, manager. Both are in a high class residential section.

Manager Davis of the Elmwood theater, Buffalo, recently had a capacity run with Fanny Ward in "The Cheat." This was a repeat booking of the film.

Sunday moving picture shows at Gowanda, N. Y., have been closed. "The enforcement of the labor law" was the reason one exhibitor gave for the closing.

Max Andrews, proprietor of the Andrews theater of Salamanca, N. Y., has taken on the Paramount Service.

H. E. Hughes, manager of the Buffalo branch of the Unicorn Film, has returned from a western New York trip, on which he boomed the Unicorn service.

Raises Censor Rates

Ontario Provincial Government in the Amended Cinematograph Act Just Issued Puts the Charge for Having a Film Censored at $2 a Reel—Had Been $1.50 a Reel—This Adds $10,000 a Year to Censorship Cost.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard St., E. Toronto, Special Correspondent.

TORONTO, Ontario.—When the new and amended edition of the Theaters and Cinematographs Act was issued by the Ontario Government this month, the discovery was made that the provincial authorities had raised the fee for the censoring of pictures by the Ontario board from $1.50 to $2 per reel. No notification was sent to the exchanges regarding this change and the difference was not noted until the censors began to charge the higher rate. The increase makes a difference of $10,000 per year to Toronto exchanges because 20,000 reels are censored here in a year.

According to the new regulations, films of a special size for use in churches, schools or private homes are not assessable when censored, providing that the machine in which they are to be used is not adaptable for the standard size of film, and, further, that the special film is of a non-inflammable substance. When such films are exempted, however, the manufacturer or dealer must have secured from the provincial treasurer a certificate to the effect that both films and machines in question are special in make-up. This certificate costs $150, and is renewable annually.

When the small films, non-inflammable and in reels not exceeding 400 feet in length, are submitted in the ordinary way, the censorship fee is 50 cents for each reel, according to the amended rules.

When a Montreal exchange wanted to release a reel of 1,400 feet of current Montreal views to a picture theater in Ottawa, Ontario, recently, it was submitted to the Ontario Board of Censors. The latter insisted that the film be split for two reels. The exchange insisted that the picture was intended as a single-reel release and was to be rented as such and finally the censor board accepted the picture as a one-reel subject. If the film had been split, the one picture would have cost $4 for censorship fees for the screening in the one house in Ottawa.

Ottawa houses are invariably supplied by Montreal exchanges in spite of the fact that Ottawa exhibitors come under the ruling of the Ontario Government. Ottawa is so close to Montreal, however, that Montreal exchanges look after film rentals for the nearby city.

Changes Among Local Exchange Men.

Toronto, Ontario.—A series of surprises were sprung on Toronto film men when a succession of announcements were made affecting the personnel of several local exchanges.

First the news flittered around that Charles Stevens, manager of the Cooper exchange (Kleine), Montreal, had been added to the staff of the Canadian Universal at Toronto to become special Universal representative for Eastern Canada. It was also announced that Walter Davidson had gone from the Universal head office to the head office of the World Features, Toronto.

Next came the announcement that Arthur Larente, Toronto branch manager for the Mutual, had gone to Montreal to assume charge of the Cooper exchange branch at Montreal. Jean Larente, brother of Arthur, also severed his connection with the Mutual here at the same time.

Then came the announcement that W. F. Barrett, formerly Universal manager at Winnipeg, had been appointed manager of the Mutual branch at Toronto to succeed Mr. Larente.

In the meantime confirmation was provided for a report that the Triangle had made preparations to open an exchange in Toronto. E. A. Fenton, Montreal, Canadian representative of the Triangle, is looking after arrangements which include the opening of the Toronto branch in August.

The Famous Players' Film Service, head office Toronto, is now represented in St. John, N. B., by J. Rosenfeld in succession to I. Soskin, who has come to Toronto to become special representative for the company.

New House in Rockwood.

Toronto, Ontario.—J. Smart has arranged to open a new moving picture theater in Rockwood, Ontario, and has contracted for Universal service.

Censors Handle "Who's Guilty."

Toronto, Ontario.—The Pathe serial, "Who's Guilty," has received rather rough treatment at the hands of the Ontario Board of Censors. The second episode has been condemned entirely and cuts have been made in other chapters of the series. The serial has not yet been offered to the exhibitors and it is feared that the subject will not be seen in Ontario at all.

First of Canada Film Pictures.

Toronto, Ont.—The first undertaking of the "Canada Film Company," a new Canadian corporation with headquarters in Galt, Ontario, is the production of a nine-reel feature, "In Self Defense," in which the invasion of Canada by an enemy force is depicted. With the assistance of a Member of Parliament, Mr. F. S. Scott, the co-operation of the Canadian Militia Department was secured for the taking of a number of scenes in which large bodies of troops appear. Localities in and around Toronto, Quebec and London, Ontario, are used for the enactment of the plot.

Charles G. Roos, formerly president and general manager of the Atlas Motion Picture Company, Detroit, is in charge of the camera and laboratory departments of the Canada Film Company while A. P. Garner is the general manager.

Liquidation of Starfilms.

Toronto, Ont.—Announcement has been made in the daily press of the liquidation of Starfilms, Limited, Toronto, Montreal and other cities, distributors in Canada for Metro features, upon the demand of A. C. MacNeil, accountant, of the Prudential Trust Company. By a judgment of Justice Bruneau, of Montreal, the firm is permitted, provisionally, to carry on its business under a contract with the Metro company. This contract provides, it is declared, for the payment of $1,200 per week by the Canadian company for the exploitation of Metro films in Canada.

Mr. MacNeil, who asked for the winding-up order, is said to hold an overdue note for $7,500. A. N. Brodeur and A. C. MacNeil have been named as provisional joint liquidators. The directors of Starfilms, Limited, did not contest the application for a winding-up order.

Recent Feature Hits.

Toronto, Ont.—Moving picture patrons of this city saw their first Triangle picture during the week of May 29, when "The Flying Torpedo" was exhibited at Shea's Victoria Street theater. A Triangle-Keystone comedy, "The Village Blacksmith," accompanied the Griffith feature, so that none but Triangle productions were seen at this house during the week. The new brand made a very favorable impression and the local newspaper critics spread themselves in their reviews of the show. The Triangle reels were secured through Mr. E. A. Fenton, Montreal, distributor for the Triangle in Eastern Canada.

Best Theater Publicity

Louisville Exhibitor of Wide Experience Has Decided That for Him the Most Effective Form of Advertising Is Space in the Local Papers, Especially the Sunday Editions—Has Tried Other Kinds.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., 1404 Starks Building, Louisville, Ky., Special Correspondent.

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—After trying out several forms of publicity to reach the devotee of the moving picture theater, Lee Goldberg, manager of the Mary Anderson and Keith theaters, reports that he has found the local press to be far superior to any other medium. Formerly Mr. Goldberg mailed out about 5,000 "weeklies" concerning the plays and players. Mailing this number of booklets was expensive from the standpoint of printing, postage and time required in addressing the cover envelopes. Now the company uses a full page in the Louisville Courier-Journal on Sunday mornings. This edition goes to about 50,000 homes, and it is generally figured that between four and five people read every edition. Mr. Goldberg therefore infers that at a slightly increased cost he is reaching at least ten times as many people in the larger circulation, and that the paper comes on Sunday morning when the masses have time to read the paper. In buying and maintaining the full sheet each week the company is going a step further than merely advertising its business, but is running a questions and answers column, and using a lot of interesting dope concerning the film world. The actual number of cuts used, fillers and reading matter, etc., is approximately the same as in the old weekly. Mr. Goldberg is very much pleased with the arrangement, and feels that other exhibitors will benefit in using such a system.

Competition Keen in Louisville.

Louisville, Ky.—According to several of the local exhibitors an unusual condition exists in Louisville in that the exhibitors are paying more for their attractions than in many other cities, and that they are realizing less in the way of box-office receipts. The answer simply is that competition in Louisville is so keen that the exhibitors really bid against each other and run up the price of the good attractions which are offered, and in the meantime the public is getting the benefit of the best reels in the country at the bargain price of five and ten cents. With the exception of some half dozen unusual attractions, prices for admission have remained unchanged for years.

Feature and Short Films in Louisville.

Louisville, Ky.—According to some of the local exhibitors the long subjects are holding up extremely well with the larger theaters, that is, such theaters as are known as photoplay houses. Many reports have been heard to the effect that shorter subjects were taking well in some cities, but with the exception of the transient houses, which undoubtedly are doing better with short run stuff. Several of the exhibitors, however, are of the opinion that new feature material is getting very scarce, and in some cases almost the identical plots of previous photoplays are being shown. One or two glaring examples have been called to attention lately. The manager of a local film company recently stated that it kept him busy firing back supposed manuscripts, which either portrayed talking parts throughout or which were almost exact duplicates of pictures shown within the last season or two.

Son Born to A. C. Farrell.

A. C. Farrell, Louisville manager for the Central Film Service Co., of Indianapolis, is the proud father of a handsome nine-pound boy who arrived early in the month. Mr. Farrell is now father of two husky boys.

Louisville Business Notes and Personals.

H. C. Cotter, general manager of the Unicorn Film Co., of New York, was recently in Louisville, and stated that he was considering the probability of establishing a branch office in the city.

David King, of Detroit, president of the National Theater Co., of Louisville, and interested in the National Theater Co., of Detroit, was in Louisville recently attending a stockholders' meeting of the local company, which is leasing its house to the Keith circuit.

George Hackett, manager of the Sun theater, Eighteenth and Gallagher streets, is having a new tile front put into the house. Work will probably be completed in about four weeks. The color scheme is white and green and will add greatly to the attractiveness of the theater. The seating capacity of the house is 500.

A recent visitor to the local film exchanges was J. H. Christy, an exhibitor of Salem, Ind.

Putnam Sanders, of Louisville, is operating his Broadway Skydome, on West Broadway, but is having a few bad innings just now as the weather man just won't be reasonable.

Henderson, Ky.—The Gem theater believes in preparedness and to that end has installed a large cooling and ventilating system which is giving excellent results. "A change of air every three minutes and good pictures are preferable to sitting at home," according to the management.

The Big Ftatures Rights Corporation of Louisville, which holds state rights on the big film "The Battle Cry of Peace," in Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and Tennessee, reports that it is doing an excellent business with this film, which has been shown in a great many cities and in several cases for return engagements. George Starkey, of Louisville, is advance agent for the company.

New Theaters in Kentucky.

Irvine, Ky.—J. E. Stivers has purchased the Lyric theater from L. W. Neal.

Newport, Ky.—The Frankel Amusement Company, of Newport, Ky., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000. The incorporators are I. Frankel, Julius Frankel and D. Roesch. The company will handle various theatrical enterprises.

Middlesboro, Ky.—The Brown Amusement Company has let contracts to R. L. Brown, of Middlesboro, for the construction of the new theater building to be used as a combined theater and business block. R. F. Graf & Son, of Knoxville, Tenn., are the architects. Prices have been asked on seats, indirect fixtures, four art doors, etc. The house will cost about $15,000.

Lexington, Ky.—During the past two years Lexington has made rapid strides in the moving picture industry. With a total population of about 40,000 people the city is now supporting seven theaters, including the Opera House, and Ada Meade, occasionally used for pictures; the Gem, a negro showhouse, and four large moving picture theaters, namely the Ben Ali, Strand, Colonial and Orpheum.

Fine New Theater For Chattanooga

Signal Amusement Company Will Build a 1,500 Seat Theater on Market Street Will Have Stage and Screen.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., 1404 Starks Building, Louisville, Ky., Special Correspondent.

CHATTANOGGA, Tenn.—The Signal Amusement Company has leased the C. D. Mitchell building, 628 Market street, as a site for a new theater to seat 1,500 people, and to be used for both pictures and theatrical productions. The proposed house is to have a full-sized stage. Plans are to be drawn by Clarence T. Jones, of Chattanooga, who will make a trip north to look over some of the principal theaters of this type before drawing plans for the new house. At present the city has no theater large enough for anything but vaudeville and smaller musical comedies. The Signal Amusement Company at present controls six moving picture theaters in the downtown district. W. H. Lindsey, president of the company, is also vice-president of the Napier Iron Works, and a director in several Nashville banks. T. A. Clarkson, secretary of the N. C. & St. L. R. R., is also actively interested in the amusement company. The company expects to arrange a novel front for the building of special terra cotta, to be lighted with invisible lights. It is also said that the company is preparing to increase the seating capacity of the Alcazar theater from 675 to 1,100.

New Theater in Maryville.

Maryville, Tenn.—W. E. Drummond, of Knoxville, has taken a ten-year lease on a piece of property in Maryville, and has let contracts to Herman Reuter for the erection of a combined theater and store building to cost about $18,000. The theater will be equipped for pictures. The building will be two stories high and with a basement. The front will be of white brick, trimmed in marble. The building is to be completed inside of three months. Maryville is enjoying a boom just now and the Aluminum Company of America alone recently let contracts for 100 new houses to be erected to house its employees and their families.

New Policy at Majestic No. 1.

Memphis, Tenn.—The Majestic Amusement Company recently announced that during the summer months Old Majestic No. 1, 49 South Main street, one of the big chain of Majestic theaters in Memphis, would adopt a new policy, that of showing return picked Paramount features on Saturday and Sunday at regular admission prices of ten cents, but that during the week a three-reel, or light program, would be shown at five cents. All re-engaged pictures are so advertised so that the addle-pated will not get mixed up on them and blame the management if they happen to see the same picture a second time.

ST. LOUIS NEWS LETTER.

By A. H. Giebler, 236 Vanol Bldg., St. Louis, Special Correspondent.

Death of John W. Cornelius.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—John W. Cornelius, one of the best known moving picture men in St. Louis and the Middle West, died in Hot Springs, Arkansas, on Friday, June 9th. Mr. Cornelius had gone to Hot Springs for a short vacation and recuperative trip, and was expected home by his family, who hoped to see him much improved in health.

Mr. Cornelius became identified with the motion picture business in St. Louis six years ago, when he bought the location on Sixth street midway between Pine and Chestnut, and erected the Lyric theater at a cost of forty-five thousand dollars. The Lyric was the first theater in the downtown district to be built from the ground up for the exhibition of moving pictures. The house is small, as theaters go nowadays, but it is one of the best equipped and best managed houses in the city. The Lyric set the pace for motion picture houses to a certain extent, and the policy of the management exerted a potent influence over every other house in the city. After successfully managing the Lyric for four years the theater at Delmar and Euclid was bought, rebuilt, and named the West End Lyric. This is one of the most pretentious houses in town, and is under the same standard of management and policy as the other Cornelius houses, which now include the Royal and the Lyric Skydome.

Mr. Cornelius was fifty-eight years old, and is survived by his wife, Mrs. Rose Cornelius, who has been very active in the management of the amusement enterprises controlled by her husband, and one son, James Cornelius. Mrs. Cornelius and her son will conduct the four units that make the Cornelius theatrical holdings, under the same general policy as heretofore.

Summer Films at the Shenandoah.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Shenandoah theater, Grand and Shenandoah avenues, closed its regular dramatic season on June 4, and opened the next day as a moving picture feature house with "The Ne'er Do Well." The Shenandoah is one of the Associated theaters, of which Wm. J. Flynn is the general manager, and which comprises the Arco, the Broadway, the St. Charles and the Juniata, all straight picture houses, and the Park, a dramatic house.

St. Louis Notes.

St. Louis, Mo.—Delmar garden, a big amusement park on the western edge of town, has a moving picture show this year which is free to the patrons of the garden. The admission paid to enter the garden entitles one to see the pictures, where features of a high class are exhibited. The moving picture theater is one of the most popular attractions of the place.

The Congress theater, under the operation of Hector Pasmezoglu, is giving out quite an attractive four-page program, with the bill for the entire week on three pages, and an answers department on the fourth page. The Congress changes pictures daily and the folder is decorated with cuts of the stars in the features advertised.

The Knickerbocker theater and airdome at Park and Compton avenues, has adopted the policy of advertising its program in the daily papers since the Barrett Brothers have acquired the management of the house. A number of the smaller neighborhood houses with daily change of program have come to see the value of newspaper advertising, especially where multiple reel features are used.

IN IOWA.

By Mid-West News Service.

Changes in Iowa Theaters.

Sioux City, Ia.—Walter James and Berry Fisk, widely known in Sioux City as musicians have purchased a moving picture theater in Cherokee, Ia. Both are cripples.

Independence, Ia.—The Knee family has sold the Allerton theater to Mr. Clatt of Wisconsin.

Harper, Ia.—Local business men have opened a moving picture show here.

Cedar Falls, Ia.—Manager Dodge has sold the Grand theater to Frank Schlueter of La Porte City.

Red Oak, Ia.—The Beardsley airdome has opened with vaudeville and pictures.

Mason City, Ia.—The Casino theater on Federal avenue has been opened under new management.

Armstrong, Ia.—Fred Robinson and C. E. Mcdowell have purchased the Gem theater.

Oskaloosa, Ia.—McConnell & Houser of Bussey have purchased the Orient theater.

Win Praise in Cleveland

Local Exhibitors Warmly Commended All Over the City for Good Civic Work in Helping the Babies' Dispensary and Hospital—League Adopts Resolution Thanking City for Hearty Co-operation.

By Hubert Persons, Standard Theater Bldg., Cleveland, Special Correspondent.

CLEVELAND, O.—Commendation of the press, pulpit and the public in general has been heaped upon the Cleveland exhibitors for the manner in which they conducted the fund campaign for the benefit of the Babies' Dispensary and Hospital. The exhibitors showed a film, the "Battle for Babies' Lives," in support of the work of the hospital and contributed their time and a percentage of their receipts in addition to permitting collections to be taken from their audiences.

The local newspapers warmly supported the campaign and as a result C. A. Megown, special representative of the Exhibitors' League, introduced the following resolution at the last meeting of that body:

"Whereas, the film industry of the Sixth City received from the entire press of the city the heartiest cooperation in the presentation of the Battle for Babies' Lives,

And whereas, we received even at a time when space was in great demand, a large amount of notice from the Cleveland Leader, the Plain Dealer, the News and the Press,

"Be it resolved that we extend to the press of the city and especially to the dailies herein mentioned, our hearty thanks for their cooperation, without which we could not have succeeded in our efforts to show the city the needs and work of one of her greatest institutions, the Babies' Dispensary and Hospital.

And let these resolutions speak of a bright future in all efforts for the city's good."

Celebrates Two Years' Success.

Cleveland, O.—Joe Grossman, of the Standard theater, has just celebrated the second anniversary of the opening of his house. Two years ago his announcement that he proposed to run only big features and to run them for a full week without change, was greeted as a joke by other exhibitors. Now Joe says the joke is on them, because his house is crowded to capacity at almost every performance. When the Standard opened, the admission price was five cents. He had raised his price to ten, then fifteen and for special features charges twenty-five cents and packs the house.

Grossman has just returned from New York where he went to book some big features for the summer season.

Sunbeam Asks Advice of Trade.

Cleveland, O.—The Sunbeam Motion Picture Corporation has just announced the creation of an advisory board composed of eleven exhibitors and theater managers. The plan is characterized as forging a new link in the relations between producer and exhibitor.

"The plan was adopted," John D. Raridan of the Sunbeam company said, "to permit us to keep in constant touch with the public's demands, and it will concentrate production effort on subjects which the exhibitors feel will be the most successful."

The Ohio advisory board is composed of the following:

Joseph Grossman, Standard theater; Gustave Schroeder, Enjoy-U. theater; W. C. Kasper, Fairyland theater; C. J. Goeppinger, the Melba theater; J. J. Harwood, National theater; W. H. Horsey, Carylon theater; G. T. Sharp, Southern theater; J. H. Wilk, Crown theater, all of Cleveland; J. F. Trunk, Dome theater, Youngstown; Edward A. Zorn, Temple theater, Toledo; and Victor L. Schram, Grand Opera House, Canton.

It was also announced at the Sunbeam office here that Fred L. Bennage of Akron is to have charge of the company's Detroit branch.

Police Look for Stolen Film.

Cleveland, O.—Cleveland police, searching for "The Night Riders," have set sleuths on a hunt for "The Still Voice" and are seeking to learn where "The Leap Year Tangle" is.

These are the titles of films taken from a messenger of the Victor Film exchange, 850 Prospect avenue, a few days ago. Daniel C. Stearns, manager of the exchange, appealed to the police. The films were taken by a man who stopped the messenger on the street.

Duchess Will Reopen in September.

Cleveland, O.—Manager Buckley has just announced that the Duchess theater, which closed June 17, will be reopened in September. The house is being operated by the Eclipse Amusement Company.

"As good as gold." "As white as snow." "As fine as silk." Why do other papers in this field invariably try to compare with the standard of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD? There's a reason.

Fred J. Herrington Stops Over.

Cleveland, O.—Fred J. Herrington, of Pittsburgh, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, was in Cleveland for a few hours on June 12 to confer with C. A. Megown, special representative of the local league, regarding national convention business. Herrington was on his way to a convention of exhibitors in Bay City, Mich.

Cleveland Notes of Interest.

Cleveland, O.—The film "Where Are My Children?" at the Opera House, the week of June 12, broke all attendance records, according to the theater management. It was first privately screened before clergymen, city officials, teachers and newspaper men.

Dr. R. H. Bishop, commissioner of health, said of the production:

"It teaches a lesson all should know in a way that is easy to understand." Others who commented favorably on it were John M. Sulzmann, councilman, and Miss Bertelle M. Lyttle, of the Federation of Women's Clubs.

Cleveland, O.—Miss Katherine Ressler's danse revue, held the first week in June at the Olympia theater, proved so popular that Manager Miller was forced to repeat the performance at a matinee on June 17. More than 75 children in fancy costume appeared in the revue. Moving pictures were used as a background to the performance.

Cleveland, O.—The film "The Evil Thereof," held up by the Ohio Censor Board after it had been booked for the Knickerbocker theater, was finally passed after the theater owners made a vigorous appeal for action. The production is declared to be interesting but devoid of anything which should be objectionable. Grace Valentine, a Youngstown girl, appears in the pictures.

Libel Suit In Illinois

Moline Exhibitor Sued by Two Neighbors for $5,000 each—Claim Is That He Showed Snapshot Slides with Joking Captions and That Damage Was Done to the Reputations of the Plaintiffs.

By Frank H. Madison, 6749 Emerald avenue, Chicago, Special Correspondent.

MOLINE, Ill.—Two unique suits, each asking $5,000 damages for libel have been filed in the Moline city court against Henry Hoffman, proprietor of the Lyric theater on Sixth avenue. Gust Kruse and Peter Christofferson, employees of local manufacturing plants, allege that the theater showed what are known as "snapshot slides," which exposed them to ridicule and damaged their reputations. The pictures were believed to have been taken on their way home from work together. According to the declarations under the picture of Kruse was shown the word "Schlitz" and under that of Christofferson the word "Pabst." The declarations further sets forth that the men are sober, temperate and have good reputations and that the alleged showing of their pictures taken without their knowledge accompanied by the names of two widely known brands of beer gave the impression to those who saw the pictures that they were men who were intemperate in the use of intoxicating liquors. The pictures attracted more attention, the document continues, because the town had a few weeks before been voted anti-saloon territory. Action is brought under the principle of law that a person has the right of privacy in regard to displaying one's picture to the public without the consent of the person photographed.

THE MATERNAL VIEWPOINT.

Things That Oak Hill Mothers Object to in Moving Pictures.

Oak Park, Ill.—Mothers, who are members of the Neighborhood Civic Club, were begged by Mrs. Fred Michael of the Illinois Congress of Mothers not to allow their children to attend moving picture shows unless accompanied. The pictures, she declared, often were harmful. It was possible for managers to run suitable children's shows at a profit, she asserted, as delightful programs could be obtained for as low as $5 and $6. A symposium by the members as to what they regarded as harmful films for children brought objections to:

Inevitable heroines, dressing like a girl of 16, with their hair down their backs, being out in the world, courted won and married. This, it was declared, led young girls to feel that they were being denied their rights and should have affairs of the heart.

"Little Lord Fauntleroy" led one lad of four years to believe that all women, his mother excepted, smoked cigarettes.

A mother entertained the members of a boys' club at a feature picture. A doctor performing an autopsy on the body of a woman was about to use the knife when the woman opened her eyes. He recognized her as his lawful first wife, believed dead. "The supreme temptation" to kill, the horror he portrayed and his subsequent attempts at suicide when he realized his predicament so frightened one twelve-year-old boy (his mother stated) that he telephoned her to leave the light on the front porch until he got home and it was necessary for her to remain with him until he went to sleep.

Peoria Reveals in Local Films.

Peoria, Ill.—In addition to its other work the Barker-Swan Film service is doing a great deal of local camera work, being called upon almost daily to film some current event. Citizens of Peoria take a great deal of pride in the new industry and the film company has reciprocated by starting the making of a film setting forth the many advantages of life in this picturesque city. The views are to be made more interesting by threading a story through them. The members of the Rotary Club recently had luncheon at the Barker-Swan plant, put on a few stunts for the camera and in the projection room was shown some of the work that the company has been doing.

A. Q. Myers Dies Suddenly.

Vandalia, Ill.—A. Q. Myers, 62 years old, manager of the Dixie theater, died suddenly of cerebral hemorrhage. Three children survive. The funeral was held at Macomb.

Film Man a Happy Father.

Bloomington, Ill.—A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Chism. The proud father is operator at the Castle theater.

Remodeling the Varietie.

Canton, Ill.—The Varietie theater picked an appropriate feature, "The Final Curtain," the night it closed for four weeks to remodel. The changes include setting the screen further back in a floral setting, an electric fountain, entire overhauling of the lighting system, redecorating throughout in pastel shades of brown and green, tile floor, new stucco front and rearrangement of lobby, new ventilating system and the installation of a 1916 Motiograph.

A Historic Reproduction in Waukegan.

Waukegan, Ill.—A reproduction of the old Waukegan Academy, which stood for fifty years on the site of the new photoplay house, is a feature of the lobby in George K. Spoor's (head of the Essanay) new Academy theater here. The other side of the lobby has a beautiful painting of the local harbor with its picturesque lighthouse.

Illinois Theater Changes.

Quincy, Ill.—C. E. Brosi has leased the Bijou theater in Hampshire street to I. P. Williams and Charles Walton of Carthage, Mo. The new managers will run musical comedy in connection with the pictures, changing the bill three times a week.

Peoria, Ill.—David M. Citron has leased the Garden theater at Garden and Adams streets to Frank T. Bolmer, W. G. Stephens and Charles Stephens for a year.

Petersburg, Ill.—Lawrence Watkins has opened his new Strand theater seating 400 persons. A feature of the house is a Minusa Gold Fibre screen.

Rushville, Ill.—J. P. Wilson of Astoria has sold his interest in the Majestic theater here to James Van Antwerp and Howard McCormick. Wilson has been operating the house only on Saturday nights, but the new owners will give nightly shows.

Litchfield, Ill.—L. E. Davenport has taken over the Royal theater here.

Streator, Ill.—Edward Scheibel has taken over the lease of the Plumb Opera house from Edward Day and will continue with feature pictures except Saturday nights and Sundays when vaudeville will be used. Day will devote his time to the management of the Majestic theater and also will operate the Dan theater with pictures on the nights the Plumb is running vaudeville, although the management of the houses are separate.

Danville, Ill.—Frank Snyder of the Danville Commercial-News has purchased the Majestic theater.

MICHIGAN NEWS LETTER.

Special to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

Received and Filed.

JACKSON, Mich.—Two dozen residents of Jackson petitioned the city council to pass an ordinance requiring moving picture theaters, pool rooms, fruit and candy stands and ball parks to close on Sunday. "Received and filed."

Michigan Theater Changes.

Three Rivers, Mich.—George Pierce of Constantine, a pioneer Michigan exhibitor, has purchased the Vaudette theater at Three Rivers, and is making extensive alterations to that playhouse. His future plans for the Vaudette call for an all-feature policy.

Marquette, Mich.—August E. Brauns of Iron Mountain has engaged Charlton and Kuenzli of Marquette to prepare plans for a moving picture theater, to be located on East Ludington street. The building will be 60 by 75 feet in size.

Bay City, Mich.—L. R. Simpson, proprietor of the Alladin theater, Bay City, has taken over the Star theater. A year ago Mr. Simpson was a restaurenter in Wichita, Kan. He features a 20-piece symphony orchestra every Thursday at the Alladin theater. He is proving very successful as an exhibitor.

Bay City, Mich.—Proprietor Lee of the Wenonah theater, Bay City, has secured an option on the Washington opera house, and if he makes the purchase he will give the Thumb District of Michigan one of the largest and finest photoplay theaters in the state.

Lansing, Mich.—The Washington-Strand theater has booked a ten weeks' series of the pictures exclusively for youngsters, which have been approved by the New York Y. M. C. A.

Elk Rapids, Mich.—Paul Starr has reopened the moving picture show at the Elk theater.

Pontiac, Mich.—Helmer George has purchased the Central theater.

PRAIRIE STATE NEWS LETTER.

Special to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

Patrons Set the Price in Dundee.

OMAHA, Neb.—Residents of Dundee, a suburb, decided by vote to have high-class pictures and expressed their willingness to pay to the new Dundee theater at 51st and Underwood avenue admission of 10 and 20 cents. This is the only suburban theater in Greater Omaha securing this price. It has just been opened by A. C. Hartman, who expended $25,000 in fitting up a thoroughly modern house.

Worked for Good Lawns.

Omaha, Neb.—A peck sack of dandelions was as good as money in getting a ticket to see "The Heir to the Hoorah" at the Krug theater. Manager Cole accumulated several wagon-loads of the lawn pests from industrious juveniles.

A New Omaha House.

Omaha, Neb.—Samuel Goldberg, president, and Harry Goldberg, treasurer, of the World Realty company, which is building a new photoplay theater at 1410-12 Farnam street were in the eastern markets for equipment.

Nebraska Theater Changes.

Dakota City, Neb.—O. E. Leonard has opened a moving picture theater here.

Humphrey, Neb.—Joseph Krebs has sold the Lyric theater to C. S. Jencks.

Norfolk, Neb.—Fred O. Largen is now manager of the Lyric theater, succeeding Dick Baker.

Central City, Neb.—A moving picture theater will occupy the lower floor of a building which S. A. Danielson will erect on Main street.

INDIANA NEWS LETTER.

Special to Motion Picture World from Indiana News Service.

Indiana's Big Historical Film Ready.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—The centennial historical motion picture, which has been made for showing at the various Indiana centennial celebrations and also a general distribution throughout the state, is now complete and Muncie, Crawfordsville and Logansport have had their first glimpses of it and pronounced it good. The picture includes the faces of James Whitcomb Riley, Governor Ralston and other famous men of the present day state and all of the historic scenic places.

Sole Picture Magnate of Logansport.

Logansport, Ind.—W. H. Lindsay, owner of the Ark and Paramount theaters of this city, recently closed a deal by which he became the owner of the Grand theater and thereby becomes owner of all the theaters of the city showing motion pictures exclusively. No one has any objection to the monopoly because Lindsay gets for his patrons the best that can be secured.

Muncie's Lyric Sold to C. C. Lower.

Muncie, Ind.—Charles C. Lower of this city has purchased the Lyric from Dudley Williston. The new owner was already the possessor of the Crystal, one of the most successful theaters of the city and he will operate both under the same management. Mr. Williston retires to devote all his time to the automobile business.

Lyric Goes Back to Stock.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Barton and Olsen, owners of a string here have announced that the Lyric, which has been featuring pictures, will be converted into a stock theater. It was recently changed from a vaudeville house into a moving picture theater. The chance came along to put in stock—Indianapolis has no other stock house—and Barton and Olsen grabbed it. The Paramount, always popular here, will be shown at the Alhambra, where they were introduced in Indianapolis.

Indiana Theater Notes.

Rockville, Ind.—Tad L. Johnson, who is well-known in motion picture circles in this section of the state, had remodeled and opened the Cozy theater, Elkhart, Ind. The Bucklen string of two are undergoing repairs, although the theaters are open for business. The management is putting in new ventilating systems, although there had been no complaint.

Monticello, Ind.—Harley Hornbeck, new airdome owner, has thrown open his house. Hornbeck believes in striking colors and a combination on the outside of his theater is Big Four in yellow and green.

Gary, Ind.—Contracts have been let for the erection of the $60,000 theater building which will grace Seventeenth street and Broadway. The theater will have a seating capacity of 1,000.

Muncie, Ind.—Work on the new Strand at Mulberry and Jackson streets has practically been completed and the finest theater in the state, according to the claims of Arthur Bennett, will open to the public within a few days. The "Strand Theater Magazine" for photoplay devotees has made its appearance on the streets and since it is something new in Muncie-typifying the wide-awake policies of the management—it is meeting with a great deal of consideration and comment.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The first co-operative motion picture house in Indianapolis will be ready for the public within a month. It is the outgrowth of the desire for a near-at-home attraction by citizens who live in a suburb of the city. A company has been formed, and enough stock has been sold to "neighbors" to insure the erection of a suitable building.

Exhibitors' Ass'n Prospers

Minneapolis Exhibition and Congress Held by the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association of the Northwest Cleaned Up a $700 Deficit and Left $300 in the Treasury—A Campaign for More Members.

Perry S. Williams, Special Correspondent, Address Tribune, Minneapolis, Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—The final auditing of the accounts of the big exposition of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of the Northwest, which was held in the Minneapolis Kenwood armory in May, discloses that this year's show not only cleaned up a deficit of $700, inherited from the 1915 exposition, but has left the organization with a working fund of about $300. Announcement of the success of the recent show was made by the executive committee after its meeting in the Bijou theater building, 14 Washington avenue North, a few days ago.

The committee decided on a sweeping campaign to bring every exhibitor in the Northwest into the association. The committee calls attention in its plea for members to the fact that in exchange for annual dues of one cent a year for each seat in the member's theater with no added initiation fee, a big saving is affected through the medium of the return-express and large discounts allowed members.

Those present at the committee session were James Gilosky of St. Paul, president; C. E. Van Duzee, treasurer; William Koenig and Henry P. Greene of Minneapolis, Frank Nemec of St. Cloud, W. A. Scott of Red Wing and Thomas Furniss of Duluth. The committee met in its new quarters on the second floor of the Bijou building.

NOMINATE LOCAL EXHIBITOR.

Picture Men of the Northwest Will Back Local Man for League President.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The moving picture exhibitors are letting it be known to the trade that when the time comes for the selection of a successor to President Herrington of Pittsburgh of the National Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, at the convention in Chicago next month, they will be solidly lined up behind a candidate from this section of the country. So far the sentiment seems to be crystallizing for Thomas J. Furniss of Duluth, owner of the Rex and Lyric theaters in that city, who has been a prominent and popular figure in the Northwest exhibitors' organization. Furniss is an intimate friend of Herrington and if the latter seeks re-election it is probable the Minnesotan will be able to swing his support to the Pittsburgh man. Furniss has not been approached with regard to the proposition by his friends and his attitude is not known.

Merchants Regard Film Business.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association which arranged the long business men's trade tour for a distance of 2,265 miles through North Dakota and Montana this year proved that it was a friend of the moving picture industry. In former years it has been the custom of the trade tourists to carry with them an outdoor moving picture show which was displayed at all night stops made during the trip, which lasted a week. After arrangements practically were complete for the feature again this year the officers of the association took the stand that the films interfered with the legitimate business of the moving picture men in these cities. Accordingly the outdoor picture feature was dropped from the program of the tour. A strong argument advanced in favor of the abolition of the free show was to the effect that the picture men in the smaller cities seldom had an opportunity to get extraordinarily large houses due to crowds in the town. However, since the coming of the Minneapolis trade special invariably brings out a large contingent of the home folks, the picture men are held to be the just recipients of the rewards of a large crowd.

Improvements at Jamestown's Ruby.

Jamestown, N. D.—S. K. Leen, manager of the Ruby theater of Jamestown, N. D., was in Minneapolis several days ago for the purpose of buying a new motion picture machine and generator. Mr. Leen's theater is being overhauled and remodeled and he wished to start it out with some new equipment.

D. C. Jeffery Goes to Australia.

The Favorite Feature Films Co. of Minneapolis has sent its treasurer, D. C. Jeffery, on a secret mission to Australia. Before leaving the city, however, Mr. Jeffery announced that he would make public some interesting news in a short time.

The Fund Frolic a Success

Minneapolis, Minn.—June 9, the moving picture men of St. Paul and Minneapolis staged a midnight entertainment at the Shubert theater in Minneapolis for the benefit of the Actors' Fund of America. The fund collecting ceased June 15, but the exact amount procured as a result of the Shubert program has not yet been determined. The exhibitors gave the entertainment their solid backing and it is therefore believed a large sum was collected at the box office.

"As good as gold." "As white as snow." "As fine as silk." Why do other papers in this field invariably try to compare with the standard of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD? There's a reason.

Safety Projector Factory Coming to Duluth.

Duluth, Minn.—M. E. Scott, president of the Safety Projector and Film Company, announces his corporation will construct a $125,000 factory in this city which will employ fifty men the year round. The company began the manufacture of its products June 10 in temporary quarters. It will make projection machines as well as films.

New Theaters and Changes.

Rochester, Minn.—The new B. B. theater, now being put up here, will be under the management of F. T. Gaylord. The building is situated on South Main street.

Duluth, Minn.—The cornerstone for the New Grand theater has been laid at West Duluth.

Ada, Minn.—A Minneapolis company, Dale and Whitson, has been awarded the contract for the construction of the new theater here, which is to be erected by Claude Weitsel.

Hibbing, Minn.—John Garrity of Superior, Wis., who has purchased the Orpheum theater here, has announced extensive improvements will be made before it is opened by himself and two sons. J. A. Miller, formerly was proprietor, but disposed of his interests to Garrity only a few days ago.

A New Orleans "Evening"

Picture Men Get Up a Film Party for the Governor, the Senate, the House and Invited Friends—Funniest Reel Supplied by Each of Five Local Exchanges Will Be Shown—Good Time Is Certainly Promised.

By George M. Cheney, New Orleans Correspondent of Moving Picture Wdrld.

NEW ORLEANS, La.—For the first time in the history of this city an event will be staged that will bring the Governor of Louisiana, the Mayor of New Orleans, and a long list of notables together as guests of the moving picture and newspaper men of the Crescent City. This event is modestly labelled "an evening," and it will be held at the handsome new quarters of the Press Club, in Saint Charles street, at 8 o'clock on the evening of Friday, June 23. The feature of the evening will easily be the contributions of five local exchanges—Triangle, Universal, General, Mutual and Metro. The manager of each exchange will project what is, in his opinion, the funniest one-reel comedy ever manufactured by his concern. Thus, Nat Ehrlich will contribute a one-reel Keystone; Al. G. Shear, an L-Ko; Hoyt Morrow, a General comedy; S. T. Stephens, a one-reel Mutual, and K. A. Bugbee, a one-reel Metro.

D. D. Moore, president of the Press Club, will this week designate a trio of judges who will decide which is the funniest film. The winner will be presented with a suitable prize. In addition to the motion picture feature of the entertainment, which will be exclusively for newspapermen who are members of the club, motion picture men and a few invited guests, there will be a number of cartoons by professionals on local sheets. City and state officials, usually targets for the cartoonists, will most likely be among those in the audience. Governor Ruffin G. Pleasant has signified his intention of coming, and a blanket invitation has been extended to members of the House and Senate, now in session at Baton Rouge.

This, the most unique and original event ever staged by the motion picture men of New Orleans in co-operation with the Fourth Estate, will be under direction of a committee that will consist of Col. John P. Sullivan, chairman; Harold W. Newman, H. C. Chaplain and Emile V. Stier. Maurice F. Barr, manager of Bluebirds, is managing the motion picture end of the entertainment. To the credit of Mr. Barr, let it be stated that it was to his idea and enterprise that the entertainment will be held.

Suburban Theater Combination.

New Orleans, La.—An important change in the suburban exhibiting field took effect on June 12. Messrs. Jacobs and Landry, owners of the Prytania theater, in conjunction with Mr. Marks, owner of the Cadiz theater, signed a lease for the Ideal theater, Cadiz and Dryades streets, formerly operated by Mrs. E. A. Anderson. In all probability, the new owners will close up the Cadiz theater, three blocks away, and concentrate their efforts on the Ideal theater.

Fox Office Notes.

New Orleans, La.—Fox Film New Orleans office was favored with a visit from J. H. Charlotte, travelling auditor, who declared that the booking system inaugurated by Local Manager R. E. Barron was the best he had ever seen, and in all probability would be recommended for Fox offices over the entire country. The Fox office closed five new contracts this week, which, however, is not near a record for the Crescent City office. Theda Bara, in "East Lynne," received a private showing at Pearce's Tudor theater recently, and was pronounced by attendant newspapermen as one of the best vehicles Miss Bara has had in some months.

Al. G. Shear Announces New Features.

New Orleans, La.—Al. G. Shear, manager of the Consolidated-Universal offices in New Orleans, got back from the district managers' convention in Atlanta this week, and immediately thereupon things began to hum at the C.-U. offices. Mr. Shear announced that he had secured territorial rights for "Where Are My Children" and Anna Pavlowa in "The Dumb Girl of Portici," for the states of Louisiana and Mississippi, Southwest Alabama and Southeast Texas. "Where Are My Children" was given its Southern premiere in New Orleans, at Fichtenberg's Dreamworld, beginning June 17. The picture will be run a month at the uniform admission price of 25 cents. Maurice F. Barr is handling the publicity end of the picture.

J. C. Ragland's Father Dies.

New Orleans, La.—All the exchange men have extended their condolences to J. C. Ragland, popular manager of the George Kleine office in New Orleans. On last Friday Mr. Ragland received word from Petersburg, Va., that his father, Emmett Ragland, had just died in that city. Despite a heavy rush of business incidental to the booking of the serial, "Gloria's Romance," Mr. Ragland at once dropped all business and hurried to the Virginia city.

W. C. Stillson With Pearce Enterprises.

New Orleans, La.—Wheaton C. Stillson, formerly cameraman for the Nola Film Company, has forsaken the machine for the exhibiting end of the business. Mr. Stillson recently accepted a position with the Pearce Enterprises as assistant general manager for its Canal street houses. The good wishes of his many film friends go to Mr. Stillson in his new field.

Picture Men in Preparedness Parade.

New Orleans, La.—The moving picture industry of New Orleans—all of the film colony, in fact—"did itself proud" when, 200 strong, it marched in the Preparedness Parade on June 3. Representatives from every end of the business—manufacturing, exhibiting and exchanges—swung into line to the tune of patriotic airs, along with about 40,000 other marchers. A feature was a bevy of pretty young women that followed closely behind the exchange men, forming eight abreast, clad in white. Including among them were stenographers, inspectors, rewinders, cashiers and poster clerks. The fair sex were led by Mrs. Al. G. Shear, wife of the South's premier exchange man, with Miss Bertha Sobel as aide. S. T. Stephens, manager of the Mutual exchange, was the unit marshal of the motion picture men. Nat Ehrlich, Triangle; M. F. Barr, Bluebird; R. King Evans, V-L-S-E; Hoyt Morrow, General; F. C. Ragland and Elmer Smith, of George Kleine; F. C. Wilkes, Paramount; Paul Ford and Gaston Dureau, of the Fichtenberg Enterprises, were Mr. Stephens' aides. In addition, Mr. Rotherford, special representative from Mutual's home office, and Raoul Junet, manager of the New Orleans office of Pathe, directed the second column of the movie men. Frank Marfese and Nat Sobel, local exhibitors, served as captains of the exhibitors' contingent, while G. B. Mars, of Mars theater, was one of the marshals.

A. S. Reuben Representing Bluebird.

New Orleans, La.—A. S. Reuben, motion picture editor of the New Orleans Daily States, has given up trying to dissect the marvelous stories sent to him by press agents of picture companies, and gone on the road, a full-fledged motion picture man himself. Mr. Reuben has been named special representative of Bluebird, under Maurice F. Barr, the New Orleans manager. He will have as his territory Louisiana and Mississippi. He brings to the company he is now connected with a thorough knowledge of conditions in his territory, since his "helps to exhibitors" column was a much appreciated feature of the Daily States.

C. E. Tandy Makes Strenuous Visit.

New Orleans, La.—C. E. Tandy came to the city this week, and went over the local situation with F. S. Wilkes, the local Paramount manager. Mr. Tandy nowadays is such a busy and important man, what with the managership of the S. A. Lynch Enterprises on his shoulders, that he spares on an average of but one day to each city he visits. He did not vary the rule this time, but managed to crowd into his twenty-four hours here activities that would tax an ordinary film man in a half-week.

Visual Instruction Dept. for Louisiana?

Baton Rouge, La.—Representative Simon Leopold has introduced a bill in the State Legislature to authorize the state board of education to provide films and slides and arrange for their proper distribution in various schools throughout Louisiana's parishes. He wants to create a separate department to take care of this work, and the state to appropriate $10,000 to finance the department. The bill will receive early consideration at the hands of Louisiana solons.

Shorter Crescent City Notes.

The Lyric theater, long the home of the legitimate, but later devoted to occasional projections of state rights films, will be sold at public auction on June 29.

R. King Evans, manager of the New Orleans V-L-S-E, was host to a number of exchange and newspaper men at 11 o'clock, Friday night, at the Portola theater, when he showed for their approval "For a Woman's Fair Name."

For the first time in the history of the city, the demand for a film induced an exhibitor to apply for two prints for simultaneous showings. This film was "The Fireman," in which Charlie Chaplin and Edna Purviance are stars. The film will continue to be shown for a week at the Plaza and Alamo theaters, both Fichtenberg houses.

ATLANTA NEWS LETTER.

By A. M. Beatty, 43 Copenhill Ave., Atlanta, Ga., Special Correspondent.

ATLANTA, GA.—Another high-class motion picture house opened in Atlanta on Monday, June 26, when the finishing touches were put on the new Criterion at 41-43 Peachtree street, opposite Walton street.

The Criterion has been erected on the site of the old Henderson hotel property. The building was reconstructed throughout into the most tasteful and modern moving picture house that money and brains can produce. From top to bottom the Criterion will be a gem—roomy, comfortable and with a spacious gallery, a perfect ventilating system, convenient entrances and exits, a wide lobby and a ladies' rest-room equipped with telephone, dresing tables, mirrors, tables, chairs, reading matter and a maid. The Criterion will make twenty moving picture theaters in Atlanta.

"Bottle Baby Fund" Benefit at the Grand

Atlanta, Ga.—Last year 325 babies died in Atlanta through lack of proper nourishment. To reduce this high rate and save some poor little unfortunates from a similar fate this year, a little band of Atlanta trained nurses have organized a "bottle baby fund" and are doing their best to make it a success with the meager money at their command.

To help this fund the Grand theater was open Sunday during the afternoon and evening. Motion pictures were shown, and the patrons of the Grand had the happiness of helping one of the most worthy causes that has ever been fostered in Atlanta.

Theaters Can Open Sundays in Columbus, Ga.

Columbus, Ga.—There will be for the present no Sunday "blue laws" in Columbus, Ga., and the Sunday moving pictures can continue in operation so far as the city council is concerned, that body having adopted without discussion a report of the police committee, in which it was claimed that council had no authority in the matter, that the question of Sunday observance was up to the grand jury and the solicitor general of the circuit.

The Muscogee grand jury recently adjourned for the term, taking no action on the Sunday moving picture question, and it is believed that the matter is about to become a closed incident. However, the ministers have declared against the moving pictures and they assert that the next grand jury will be called upon for relief.

Atlanta Notes and Personals.

O. P. Hall, formerly manager of the Fox Film exchange in Atlanta, and later manager of the Grand theater, is spending a vacation in the mountains. Mr. Hall will go to Buffalo with Yaarab Shrine in July, being a member of Yaarab's famous band.

George N. Shorey, proprietor of the Queen and Gay theaters in Knoxville, Tenn., was a visitor in Atlanta last week, calling on his friends among the film men.

Ike Berger, manager of the Victoria theater, is out again after a week's illness.

Harry K. Lucas, general manager of the Lucas Theater Supply Company, of Atlanta, accompanied by Mrs. Lucas, is on a trip to Savannah, through the country in Mr. Lucas' car, where they will spend two weeks on vacation.

Mr. Lucas has been in ill health for the past few months, and a rest was absolutely needed for him to recuperate.

Harry Simon, manager of the Braswell theater in Demopolis, Ala., arived in Atlanta Monday, accompanied by his bride. Mr. Simon is on his way to St. Louis, where he is a delegate to the Democratic convention from Alabama.

W. T. Kinnebrew, formerly of the Mutual forces, has accepted a position with and will represent the Pathe company in the state of Florida.

W. C. Brandon, manager of the Atlanta exchange of the V-L-S-E, spent two days in Montgomery, Ala., last week, and declares that the film is going fine here compared with the situation in Montgomery.

KANSAS CITY NEWS.

Kansas City Exchange Notes.

Kansas City, Mo.—A. D. Flintom, president of the Kansas City Feature Film, has returned from a business trip to New York.

R. L. Hewitt is the only man from the Kansas City General office to follow R. O. Proctor to Chicago and the Metro service. Mr. Hewitt was seven months assistant to Mr. Proctor in Kansas City.

Albert M. Goldstein has been added to the force of the Fox exchange at Kansas City. He will work in Oklahoma, Arkansas and Southern Kansas; and good reports have already been coming in from him.

Roy Bettis, formerly manager of the Picture Playhouse Film Co., and later handling other similar work, has joined the forces of the Unicorn at Kansas City. He will travel Eastern Kansas and Missouri. W. M. Beckenstein, formerly with Pathe, has been added, and will travel Iowa and Nebraska.

Kansas City Screen Club

New Social Organization for Screen Men Begins with 70 Members—Representatives of Nearly Every Branch of the Business Are Now Included—Temporary Officers Elected and Committee on Constitution Appointed.

Special to Moving Picture World, from Kansas City News Service

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Kansas City's Screen Club has been well started on its way, with a membership at the present writing of about 70—"fully paid." The initiation fee was set at $5, to let everybody in on the start. Included in this membership are exchange managers, traveling men, office men, exhibitors, machine supply houses, music supply houses, manufacturers, writers. Every branch of the business, almost, is represented.

It has been pretty generally agreed that the organization will have purely social purposes. But nobody denies that there will be beneficial effects on business because of the mingling of the various elements of the industry. That is its chief function. The exhibitors want to meet the exchange men socially, and get personally acquainted—the exhibitors want to meet each other, and get to boosting the whole game for the good of everybody.

The temporary officers elected were E. R. Pearson, president; Charles W. Harden, secretary, and C. S. Edwards, treasurer. An indication of the general demand for a club of the kind, and the enthusiasm with which the work is undertaken, was in the first steps following temporary organization. One man at each table was asked to collect applications and fees. Less than ten men in the gathering of 80 failed to respond, and within three days the fees of 70 had been collected.

A committee was appointed on permanent organization, to report at a meeting two weeks later. This committee includes representation from the exchanges and the exhibitors. It is as follows. R. C. Cropper, W. B. Tuteu, F. I. Buckingham, Joseph H. Gilday, E. R. Pearson, George B. Harrison.

This committee will present constitution and by-laws, and then the specific plans for the club's activities will be decided upon. There will be social events, of course, and the presence of stars. But whether "outsiders" will be permitted has not been decided.

At the first meeting, one of the honored guests was Richard C. Travers, who was one of the first members of the New York and the Chicago clubs of the same nature. He got in under the wire as the first member of the Kansas City screen club.

R. O. PROCTOR GOES TO METRO.

Local General Film Manager Becomes Head of Chicago Metro.

Kansas City, Mo.—R. O. Proctor left the General June 12, and took up his duties as manager of the Chicago office of the Metro.

The change is important, for both Mr. Proctor and Metro; this is the first time that the manager has served any other manufacturer than the General, and the Chicago office of Metro is the most important of that company.

Mr. Proctor was an exhibitor in Chicago in the "early days" of moving pictures. That was for two years, 1909 and 1910. In 1911 he entered the service of the General, as inspector, at Chicago. He served in about every capacity at the Wabash exchange, except bookkeeper, the longest time in one job there being as manager of the Wabash branch. He was put in charge of the Omaha office, and stayed there three months; then he was assigned to open the Des Moines office of the company. He came to Kansas City in July, 1915.

The Kansas City territory—Western Missouri, and Kansas—has prospered under his management. His success as well as his personal popularity can be testified to by many exhibitors, and by exchange men.

Theater Organization in Joplin.

Joplin, Mo.—The latest city in the Southwest territory in which moving picture theater managers have organized is Joplin. An organization to be known as the Joplin Managers' Protective Association was perfected at a meeting held in that city on June 8. E. M. Chapman, of the Ideal theater, was elected president, and L. F. Ballard of the Club and New Joplin theaters, secretary. The managers feel that they can obtain better results through organization than by working independently, and that theater goers will profit by their working in concert. The theaters which formed the organization are the Star, Empress, Royal, Electric, Princess, Ideal, Gayety, Club and New Joplin.

Strand Opens.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Strand theater, 36th street and Troost avenue, will open June 24, and will make music a special feature. E. A. Finch, manager, has engaged N. R. Chittohini as leader for a five-piece orchestra, and a concert grand piano has been installed.

Chatkin to Head New Exchange.

Kansas City, Mo.—The United Film Service in Kansas City will be supplemented soon by the United Feature Service, under the direction of A. A. Chatkin. The new organization will handle five and six reel features, usually to be rented on two or four day contracts.

Billy Sunday Services in the Willis Wood.

Kansas City, Mo.—The revival service of Billy Sunday in Kansas City have had a temporary effect on the moving picture business. It could not be expected that attendance of 20,000 to 40,000 people a day at his services would not be felt in the diminished attendance at the picture shows. Mr. Sunday has declaimed rabidly against theaters, among other things; but so far he has not had much if anything to say against moving pictures. Four days the past week he held services at noon, for men only, at the Willis Wood theater.

New Missouri Theaters.

Cameron, Mo.—A. E. Jarcoe has contracted for the erection of a moving picture theater here, to be opened in the fall. Mr. Jarcoe operates several theaters in the state.

Paris, Mo.—The Diamond theater was opened June 8, after being thoroughly remodeled by Manager Sebastian.

Springfield, Mo.—S. E. Wilhoit will erect another theater in Springfield, which will probably run some pictures.

Charleston, Mo.—The American theater has been sold to T. C. Lash and E. R. Lash, owners of the Lyric, who will operate it with features.

John Hicks Heads Local General.

John Hicks, formerly road man with the General Film Co. working out of Kansas City, Mo., and for five years with that company, has been promoted to manager of the Kansas City office. Mr. Hicks was lately put in charge of the sub-branch at Oklahoma City. He is well acquainted with the enlarged territory of the General from Kansas City.

Jack Brainard to Manage Unicorn Office.

Jack Brainard has been made manager of a branch of the Unicorn Film Service of Kansas City, recently established at Wichita, Kan. Mr. Brainard was formerly manager of the Wichita office of the Mutual.

Censorship in Colorado

Local Exhibitors Are Watching the Spread of the Censorship Ideas—Boulder Club Women Growing Captious, Object to "Battle Cry of Peace" as Propaganda for Armor Makers—More Liberality in Denver.

By E. C. Day, Denver Correspondent of Moving Picture World.Correspondent.

DENVER, Colo.—Moving picture exhibitors in Colorado are face to face with their first battle with censorship. It has broken out in the northern part of the state where the clubwomen have become possessed with the idea that they should watch the policies pursued by the owners of photoplay houses.

To date the situation has reached a stage where in one locality—Boulder—the clubwomen are censoring pictures without legal sanction; in another city—Greeley—they have caused to be framed an ordinance which they will ask the city council to pass and which provides for photoplay censorship, and in a third municipality—Ft. Collins—they have just begun a campaign which has for its ultimate object the naming of a board of censors by the city.

The plan originated in Boulder and got a foothold through the too liberal attitude of the exhibitors. It began by the clubwomen taking a fancied objection to one or two pictures shown. They made known their objections to the pictures and in their desire to please the theater owners pulled the pictures off their screens.

Taking advantage of the liberal and too accommodating exhibitors the women continued their censorship until now it is difficult to find any sort of picture that they will approve. They have gone further and have taken their case to other towns in the northern part of the state and citing the case with which they put their plan into effect in Boulder have sought to have the clubwomen in the neighboring cities take similar action.

However, they are not going to have smooth sailing in either Greeley or Ft. Collins, the localities in which the censorship activities of the clubwomen now center. The exhibitors in these towns believe in the showing of only high class, clean, moral pictures, but they believe themselves ably fitted to pass on the qualities of the photoplay productions which they book. They believe in proper and just censorship, but are not at all willing to have any one person or set of persons dictate to them what they shall and shall not do just to show their authority.

Call "Battle Cry of Peace" Propaganda.

The situation has grown so acute in Boulder, it is said, that the self-styled censors no longer stop at passing on the moral standards of moving pictures, but have gone further and attempted to put a ban on films dealing with the preparedness issue. "The Battle Cry of Peace" is one of the pictures they object to. Their claim is that it is a propaganda. Some of the cartoon comedies released through the Paramount program have found disfavor with the self-styled censors on the ground that they constitute a propaganda of the armor plate trust.

The whole situation is a striking example of the unfairness of censorship. It is especially interesting here in view of the recent action of the Denver Woman's Club, the largest body of its kind in the Rocky Mountain region, in giving a vote of confidence to the moving picture producers and exhibitors. This action followed the address made before the body by Frank Harris, manager of the V-L-S-E. Exchange in Denver, in which he cited that hundreds of thousands of persons were working from 12 to 16 hours a day trying to better the quality of moving pictures and showing the fallacy of a board of three persons trying to criticise and improve the work of this great body.

W. P. Moran Goes to Kleine.

Denver, Colo.—W. P. Moran is fast earning the reputation of being the most sought after film exchange manager in the Rocky Mountain region. Only a month ago Moran, then manager of the Mutual exchange in Salt Lake City, was offered inducements which brought him to Denver as manager of the Universal exchange here. Now announcement is made that Moran has been signed to return to Salt Lake and assume charge of the George Kleine office, which has just been opened by H. H. Buckwalter, western manager.

Moran's successor in the Denver Universal office has not yet been announced. His return to Salt Lake under Buckwalter, is of more than passing interest in local exchange circles, because it was under the same man that Moran first broke into the moving picture business. Buckwalter was manager of the General Film exchange when Moran accepted a position in the shipping department. He later became assistant booker, then booker and afterward went to the Mutual as exchange manager.

Miss Peterson Heads Local Kleine Office.

Denver, Colo.—The opening of the Salt Lake office by the Kleine company and the naming of Buckwalter as general western manager has resulted in Denver gaining new distinction as the only city which has a woman film exchange manager. Miss Bessie Peterson is manager of the local Kleine office. While Mr. Buckwalter will make his headquarters here his duties as western manager will require that much of his time be spent on the road and in his absence Miss Peterson will look after the Kleine interests in their entirety. She has been stenographer, booking clerk and cashier at various times.

New 800-Seat Theater in South Denver.

South Denver, Colo.—This neighborhood is to have a big moving picture theater of the size and class of a downtown house. Moore and Greaves, owners of the Princess theater on Curtis street, and of theaters in Colorado Springs, Pueblo and Cheyenne, this week took a lease on the building formerly occupied by the Rex at First and Broadway. They immediately started work of remodeling the building and will fit it up as a first class photoplay house. Two store rooms, that formerly occupied a part of the front of the building, have been torn out and the new owners will have a space 50x125 feet for the theater. It is planned to install 800 seats, making it the largest suburban house in the city. An orchestra will be installed and the theater will show only high-class features. The ten-cent admission will rule. The theater will be known as the Queen. It will not be opened before July 15.

Bradley Fish Gets Back Theater.

Denver, Colo.—H. Bradley Fish, who at various times in the last year has ben theater owner, road man and exchange manager in the moving picture industry around Denver, has returned to the ranks of exhibitors. He has taken over the Eleventh avenue theater, which he formerly owned, and is now remodeling and redecorating and will open the house with a program of features. He has signed a contract for Triangle productions and these will be the principal attractions of the house. Heretofore the Eleventh avenue has run a mixed program with one or two ten-cent feature nights. Fish proposed to operate exclusively on the ten-cent admission basis.

TEXAS NEWS LETTER.

By S. A. Harrison, 618 Comal St., Dallas, Texas, Special Correspondent.

H. F. Botto Promoted.

DALLAS, Tex.—During the week of June 5 there was a new office created in the offices of the Southwestern Triangle at Dallas, when H. F. Botto was made assistant manager to L. B. Remy, manager. Mr. Botto has been with the Triangle people less than a year, having affiliated with them in September, 1915, as booking clerk. Charles D. Touchon, recently with the Consolidated Film & Supply Company as manager of their office at Houston, Tex., has succeeded Mr. Botto as booking clerk.

New Exchange at Houston.

Houston, Tex.—A new exchange has recently been opened here. The Texas-Louisiana Film & Supply Company is the name, and it is located in the Foster Building, to handle feature films, machines, supply accessories, etc.

Beach Casino Opens.

Galveston, Tex.—The Beach Casino of Galveston has opened for the summer season with dancing and pictures. Although the pictures are free, Manager Burgess says he is going to give his patrons good new pictures or none at all.

Houston a Growing Studio Center.

Houston, Tex.—At the rate film manufacturing concerns are coming here Houston bids fair to be quite a picture-making center. At the present time there are three concerns in operation, namely, the Fox Players, the Havlin Company, and the Sunset Film Company. The Fox Players are producing one-reel dramas and comedies. The Sunset Film has not as yet made its policy public. The Havlin people have just finished making a local film.

Depinet Makes Successful Vivit.

Dallas, Tex.—Ned E. Depinet, of the Consolidated of Dallas, recently visited Houston and Galveston in the interest of the two new big films recently purchased by the company, namely, Anna Pavlowa in "The Dumb Girl of Portici" and "Where Are My Children," with the greatest success.

The Lincoln Closed.

Galveston, Tex.—Charles Trifton, manager of the Cozy and Star theaters at Galveston, has given up the Lincoln theater. Mr. Trifton had same leased for a year and when it expired he did not renew his lease. The Lincoln is closed for the present, but it is rumored that it will soon reopen.

Fire in Theater at Houston.

Houston, Tex.—The Union theater, one of Houston's suburban shows, was partly destroyed by fire May 31. The fire started in the building next door to the show. Repairs were quickly made and the show reopened in three days.

Built 500 Seat House in a Week.

Houston, Tex.—Paul Parracco has just broken all records for building theaters in Houston. He started on his new Best theater Tuesday, May 30, and finished it Wednesday, June 7. The house seats about 500 and is one of the most complete little houses in Houston. Mr. Barracco had all material, machines, seats and screen ordered and delivered before starting on the house. He put on a large force of men working day and night and finished the house in eight days.

Theaters Consolidate at Ballinger.

Ballinger, Tex.—Two picture houses in Ballinger have been consolidated recently and now operate under one management. Roy Reeder, who operated the Princess theater and the White City airdome, and L. Cohen, who managed the Queen theater, will jointly manage the new business. The airdome will continue pictures through the summer, and will undergo some improvements. The Queen will be used for picture matinees on Saturday afternoons, and for legitimate attractions during the winter. Extensive additions and alterations will be made in the Queen theater.

Alliance Closes Contract.

Dallas, Tex.—The Alliance Film Corp. of Dallas, composed of J. W. Hill and W. L. Lowe, has recently closed a contract for the Chaplin, Normand and Arbuckle cartoons, which are to be released one a week, and are meeting with much success in booking them.

Ezell Goes to Atlanta.

Dallas, Tex.—Claud Ezell, who has been handling the "Strange Case of Mary Page" for the V-L-S-E. office through Texas, is now in Atlanta in charge of the General Film office there.

New Theaters Hereabouts.

Houston, Tex.—Houston is to have a new suburban theater on Houston avenue and Washington street. The show will seat about 300 and will be under the management of R. C. Glohn.

Diboll, Tex.—B. F. Tucker has opened a new theater at Diboll. This gives this fine little city two theaters.

Galveston, Tex.—The Bell Enterprises, a concern owned by the well-known show men, G. W. Bell and Matt Ulrich of Galveston, now control the Dixie No. 1, Dixie No. 2 and the Rex theater of that city.

Houston, Tex.—It is rumored that the Cozy of Houston will reopen soon. This house has been closed for about four months. The Cozy is a large house, seating about 1,000.

NEWS FROM GOLDEN STATE.

California Items.

Tulare, Cal.—Manager Greenwood of the Theater Tulare has opened an airdome for the season.

Vallejo, Cal.—The Republic theater has been taken over by Thomas O'Day of San Francisco.

Berkeley, Cal.—W. S. Roney, of the Berkeley theater, recently presented "Ramona" for a run of one week at 25 and 50 cents, this being his first venture with a production of this length.

Oakland, Cal.—The Oakland Photoplay will commence showing first run Fox productions on July 2.

Nat Magner Buys Exchange.

San Francisco, Cal.—Nat A. Magner, of the company bearing his name, has returned from an extensive business trip to New York and Eastern trade centers and has brought back with him considerable new film. He has purchased the San Francisco holdings of the New Film Corporation on Golden Gate avenue, managed by J. L. Warner, and will remove the stock at once to his quarters in the Pacific building, where he has taken over two additional rooms. He has also taken over the rights for Ivan Film productions in this territory and will have several subjects on hand shortly.

Care With Film Carrying

In San Francisco Both Exchange Men and Exhibitors Are Taking Every Precaution to Make Good Showing in Matter of Film Transportation on Boats and Trains—Fear to Lose Valuable Privilege.

By T. A. Church, 1507 North St., Berkeley, Calif., Special Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—Unusual precautions are being taken by local film exchanges and by exhibitors located in suburban cities to keep the good will of transportation companies and to afford no reasonable excuse for curtailing the film carying privileges now enjoyed. The right to carry films as hand baggage on boats and trains out of this city has been retained for exhibitors only by a hard fight on the part of the Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco and if exhibitors are lax there is no doubt but that this privilege will be cut off for all time. A large quantity of red stickers have been prepared and one of these is being affixed to every case taken out of a film exchange by an out of town exhibitor, the notice of these, signed by both the Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco and the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, being as follows:

"Under no conditions will passengers be allowed to take motion picture films on board of any train or ferry boat without having same in fiber lined steel case securely key locked. Persons violating this rule will not only be refused film service by all film exchanges, but transportation companies will revoke film carrying privileges. No film exchange will allow films to go out other than in cases prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission."

It is desired to have exhibitors make as perfect a showing as possible in the transportation of films on boats and trains between now and the next meeting of the State Legislature, when legislation will be passed to cover this question.

FILM BOARD OF TRADE NOTES.

Film Board Meets in New Home—Full Meeting Last Tuesday of Each Month.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco held its first meeting in the new quarters in the David Hewes building at Market and Sixth streets on the evening of May 6, with a full attendance. Several new members were taken into the organization and the reports indicated that the Board of Trade was in a flourishing condition. Fred S. Peachy, who has been filling the position of manager for several months, was chosen secretary at this meeting and will attend to the duties of both offices. It was decided to hold a meeting for the Board as a whole on the last Tuesday of each month and to have the Executive Board meet twice a month. The members of the latter are Harry Oviatt, of the Pathe Exchange; X. K. Stout, of the Mutual Film Corporation; Louis Reichert, of the Metro Pictures Corporation, and I. H. Lichtenstein, of the Globe Film Exchange. It was also decided to hold a get-together meeting and dinner once each three months at the call of the secretary.

Poster Exchange Sold.

San Francisco, Cal.—Davis Bros., who for the past three years have conducted a poster exchange at 158 Eddy street, have disposed of their business to Lichtenstein & Morris, who own the Globe Film Exchange in the Pantages theater building on Market street. This poster rental business was started in a very small way along original lines and has been developed into quite an important business enterprise. Here it is posible to rent mounted paper and slides at a very reasonable price, as well as to secure heralds and other advertising matter. The new owners have taken possession and plan to continue the business along the same lines, but hope to be able to remove at an early date to Golden Gate avenue, where most of the film exchanges are now located.

International Adds to Service.

San Francisco, Cal.—Manager H. L. Knappen of the International Film Service is advising exhibitors that this concern has taken over Hearst-Vitagraph News and that it will be issued through this exchange after June 19 as the Hearst-International News Pictorial, all contracts in this territory having been taken over. Mr. Knappen is showing a handsome silver loving cup received from William Randolph Hearst for effective work in this field, the local office ranking fifth among the ten exchanges that have been established, leading Philadelphia, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Washington and Los Angeles. H. I. Krause, of the local traveling force, left recently for a trip through Nevada and will shortly establish headquarters at Salt Lake City as a branch of the San Francisco office. H. W. Korper is covering the interior of northern California and is meeting with great success with the "Mysteries of Myra." Word has been received at the local office to the effect that regular feature releases may be expected in July.

Leon Bories Visits Nevada.

San Francisco, Cal.—Leon Bories, for many years manager of the local branch of the General Film, but now with the California Film exchange, has just completed a trip to Nevada in the interests of this concern, making a portion of the journey by auto. He found conditions in the Sagebrush State in good shape, the recent revival in mining having made business quite lively. As a rule exhibitors are getting better prices there than are exhibitors in California in cities of the same size, from 15 to 25 cents being common. He visited Virginia City and had a taste of mining by being taken to the 2700-foot level of the Consolidated Virginia mine.

Back to Coast by Auto.

New York, N. Y.—E. M. Asher, who has been in New York on business has just left here in an automobile for a transcontinental trip back to his home in San Francisco.

Heard Around San Francisco.

Sam Gordon, well known through his long connection with large local houses, has taken over the Lyric theater on Fillmore street and will conduct this as a five cent photo-play house.

L. Frietas, of the Stockton theater, Stockton, Cal., was a recent visitor here and invested in an automobile as well as making extensive bookings.

A. Goldberg, manager of the Peerless theater on Third street, is to enjoy a two week's vacation in the southern part of the State and will visit some of the leading studios while away.

Pat Lynch, manager of the American Film Manufacturing Company of Santa Barbara, was here recently for a short stay.

The Empress theater has booked the Juvenile Film Company's imitation of Charlie Chaplin's Burlesque on Carmen for a week's run.

H. H. Hicks, manager of the Pacific Coast branches of the General Film, is taking a two month's leave of absence and the local branch is now under the direct management of Harry Schmidt.

J. W. Wright, of Riverbank, C. H. Douglas of Merced, and I. F. Morris of the Sequoia theater, Sacramento, were recent visitors here. Mr. Morris will enjoy a vacation at San Diego before returning home.

Vaudeville vs. Pictures

Exhibitors Complain That High Price of Film Service Is Again Opening Field for Variety—Recent Vaudeville Activity on Pacific Coast Evidences This Fact —Vaudeville Is Not Censored.

By Abraham Nelson, Special Correspondent, 601 Journal Bldg., Portland, Ore.

PORTLAND, Ore.—Vaudeville seems to be returning to favor among many of the theaters on the Pacific Coast. Within the past few months the popularity of variety shows with theater men has grown immensely and the reason has been sought by exhibitors of moving pictures. The exorbitant price of picture service is the reason assigned by J. V. Lynn, publicity man for the Peoples Amusement Company.

A few years ago fair feature service in Portland could be had at $200 a week and vaudeville could not compete. Now the price for feature service ranges from $500 to $1,200 a week, beyond a reasonable limit, some exhibitors declare, and good vaudeville acts can be obtained at an expense but little larger than the maximum charge now made here for film service. Most of the big photoplay houses in Portland are doing business nearing capacity, but complain that the prices demanded for film leaves too small a margin of profit.

The increased cost of film rental was the reason for the price raise in Portland last October when the admission to the downtown theaters was increased to 15 cents and most of the other cities in Oregon followed the Portland raise.

Nick Pierong, now manager of the Strand, and formerly manager of the S & C Empress in Portland, and S. Morton Cohen were among the first in this territory to realize the drawing power of photoplays and vaudeville combined, taking into consideration the comparatively reasonable price at which vaudeville acts can be obtained. The result was a combination of feature photoplays that were good, b ut not the so-called super-features for which exorbitant prices are charged, with substantial vaudeville acts.

The advent of Ackerman & Harris into the Pacific Northwest with Hippodrome vaudeville and good feature pictures at 10 and 15 cents followed the Pacific Photoville Circuit and S. Morton Cohen is said to have in mind a photoville enterprise of stupendous magnitude.

The exhibitors who discussed this subject said the manufacturers of moving picture films were to blame for the recent invasion of vaudeville into the Pacific Northwest in that they have gradually raised the prices until there are no fair returns for the kind of pictures that are sold. They say that photoplays at popular prices are in as much demand as ever and that the demand for vaudeville has not materially increased. It was pointed out that houses playing a combination of vaudeville and pictures have less to fear from censors for the reason that while condemnations and eliminations may hurt a picture, it does not upset the whole show. Vaudeville is not censored.

ROSE FESTIVAL IN PORTLAND.

Exchangemen, Exhibitors and Cameramen Kept Busy During This Annual Event.

Portland, Ore.—The annual Rose Festival was held here June 7 to 9. Heretofore this event has been a period of poor business for the city's theaters, but this time every downtown house prospered from the influx of visitors. The suburban theaters and those in the small towns in the vicinity of Portland suffered, however, by reason of the exodus of the people to the center of festivities.

Manager Leonhart of the T & D secured the Rose Festival films the day after they were photographed and on June 9 featured the Royal Rosarian Octette, singing the official song, "For You, a Rose in Portland Grows," the music for this song being written by W. E. McElroy, director of the T & D orchestra. The Columbia was tastefully decorated and Axa Genevieve Paget, classic dancer for the festival, appeared at the theater.

Cameramen who covered the festival were W. A. Van Scoy, Pathe; E. B. Lockwood for Selig-Tribune, A. Singelow of Seattle for Mutual and J. G. Sill. Mr. Sill, whose film was shown at the T & D, has prepared a thousand-foot reel showing every phase of the festivities.

The exchanges invited the out of town exhibitors to make their offices their headquarters during the celebration. Mrs. Lew Cullins entrusted her husband with the management of their theater, the Casino, at The Dalles, Ore., and came to Portland, where she was entertained by Mrs. G. A. Metzger. Other exhibitors were C. G. Matlock, owner of the Pastime, Pendleton, Ore.; George Bligh of Salem; Robert Marsden, Noble theater, Marshfield, Ore.; L. C. Morgan, Lyric, Prineville; C. J. Ward, Halsey; A. Bettingen, The Dalles; William Perman, Crescent theater, Junction City; A. H. McDonald, Rex, Eugene; Lieutenant Votzmeier, Fort Stevens, Ore.; Sam Sampson, Stevenson, Wash., and C. E. Small of Corvallis and others. Other film men in the city were C. J. Kerr, northwest manager for Metro, from Seattle and Jake Gottstein, who is associated with the Jensen and Von Herberg at Seattle in the Greater Theaters Company.

After a successful trip through the east exploiting big features, Mike Rosenberg, formerly of the Northwest Feature Film Co., returned to Portland in time to attend the festival. His brother, Al, motored down from Seattle to meet him.

Peoples' Publicity Manager.

Portland, Oregon.—J. V. Lynn, who has recently been employed as publicity manager for the Peoples Amusement Company, is one of those reserved young men who makes his actions speak louder than words. Mr. Lynn first came to the Peoples Amusement Company last year as publicity man for the Peoples Theater. He left the company in March this year to become road man for Universal, working out of Seattle. The Peoples Amusement Co. offered him a better position recently, that of handling publicity for both of the company's theaters, the Peoples and the Pickford, which he accepted. Mr. Lynn is a well known exhibitor in the Pacific Northwest, particularly in the Puget Sound territory, where he was formerly associated with the Olympic Theaters Company.

J. V. Lynn.

Rennie Succeeds Endert.

Seattle, Wash.—Hugh Rennie, who has been connected with the World Film for some time and lately was of Salt Lake City, has become manager of the Seattle branch, vice George Endert, resigned. Mr. Endert will take the "Dumb Girl" film and "Where Are My Children?" out on the road in this territory. He has many friends among the exhibitors in Oregon and Washington and should put these state right features over in good shape.

Airdome at Corvallis.

Corvallis, Ore.—An airdome was opened here June 8 by Taylor and Child. The complete equipment for the enterprise was furnished by the Service Film Co. of Portland.

Berger Gets Good Offer.

Portland, Ore.—Henry Berger, Jr. left June 5 for New York City to investigate an offer he had received from a large corporation which proposes to make colored moving pictures. Mr. Berger's work in colored photography received favorable comments in the World about a year ago when he exhibited his colored slides to Shriners' visiting Portland. Mr. Berger, together with his partner, Frank Jones, have since shown the slides through the East.

From Tillamook.

Portland, Ore.—Sol Baum, manager for Bluebird in this territory, returned recently from the Tillamook country where he reports good business prospects for the summer season. Tillamook L. E. Partridge now controls the two houses in the town, the Star and the Gem. A small house has been opened at Bay City.

News in Brief.

Seattle, Wash.—F. M. Simonton of the Standard Feature company is in this territory booking E & R Jungle films. He recently placed the picture in the Coliseum.

St. Helens, Ore.—A new theater has opened here called the Gem.

Portland, Ore.—G. A. Metzger, manager of the Northwest exchanges for Universal, with headquarters in Portland, returned recently from a trip through eastern Oregon and reports excellent market for the Universal product.

Portland, Ore.—Sam Harris of Ackerman & Harris, San Francisco, was a recent visitor in Portland.

Portland, Ore.—R. L. Metcalf, formerly chief organist at the Columbia, has gone to Long Beach, Cal., where he has a position in one of the big theaters. Ernest Hunt, a well-known organist in the Northwest, is now at the Columbia.

Seaside, Ore.—C. Lepler has rented his theater to Abbott, who owns the Sunset at Astoria.

WISCONSIN NEWS LETTER.

Special to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

Exhibitor's Body in Elevator Shaft.

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—The body of Carl W. Spreen, 40 years old, manager of the Happy Hour theater at Muskego avenue and Mitchell street, lay for nearly a week in the pit of the elevator shaft at the Manhattan building. He was in the office of the Universal Film exchange on the second floor on Saturday night. The following Friday odors from the shaft led to the discovery of the body. It is assumed that he walked into the shaft from the second floor, but the badly mangled condition of the body sustains a theory that he may have fallen from a greater height. He often transacted business with the Milwaukee Feature Film exchange on the fourth floor.

Wisconsin Newslets.

Madison, Wis.—Moving pictures were used to show better newspaper methods at the meeting of the editors of Wisconsin daily newspapers held in this city.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Murray theater at Murray avenue and Thomas is now under the same management as the Strand theater.

Rhinelander, Wis.—Manager James Algeo of the Cozy theater has booked the V-S-L-E. service for every Wednesday night.

Big Canadian Patriotic Picture.

Vancouver, B. C.—Charles G. Roos, superintendent of photography for the Canadian Film Company of Galt, Ont., was a recent visitor to Vancouver, accompanied by his brother, Leonard H. Roos, assistant cameraman. A number of scenic pictures were taken in this city, and the photographers afterward left for Banff, where two weeks will be spent in shooting the beautiful mountain scenery in that vicinity. Other views are being made along the route of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The pictures being taken on the present trip will be grouped under the title, "Canada at Peace," and will serve as the introduction to a nine-reel feature which has just been completed by the Canadian Film Company, and called "Self Defense." This production deals with an imaginary invasion of Canada by the Germans, and has been made with the approval and assistance of the military authorities. According to Mr. Roos a total of about 225,000 people appear in this picture, which will be released within the next few weeks.

Worth Noting in Western Canada.

Vancouver, B. C.—Charles Thomson, head usher at the Colonial theater, is back at work again after an absence of about twelve weeks, ten of which were spent in the hospital. Mr. Thomson fell through the glass canopy at the front of the theater, fracturing his hip.

Vancouver, B. C.—The official British Government films, entitled "Britain Prepared," played the entire week of May 29 at the Orpheum theater, and proved so successful that Manager James Pilling has booked them for a return date of three days, beginning June 15. Throughout the week the houses were very nearly capacity at prices ranging from 25 cents to $1.00. Prominent local citizens appeared each night and delivered addresses between the first and second parts.

The pictures opened a week's engagement at the Royal Victoria theater in Victoria on June 5, and at the Empire theater in Edmonton on the same day. Premier Bowser was among the speakers during the Victoria engagement.

Vancouver, B. C.—Hector Quagliotti, manager of the Colonial theater, ran "Madame X" for an entire week recently at 25 cents admission. This Pathe production has been purchased for Canada by the Famous Players Film Service, Ltd.

Vancouver, B. C.—Manager Creighton had as his guests on a recent evening the officers and men of the 158th Battalion of this city, who are scheduled to leave shortly for the summer camp at Vernon. The soldiers, to the number of about 800, marched to the theater in a body, where the best seats had been reserved for them, the officers and their wives being assigned to the boxes. "The Martyrs of the Alamo" was the feature shown.

Vancouver, B. C.—R. E. Berry, manager of the Empress theater at Vernon, B. C., was a recent visitor to Vancouver, arranging for his service during the summer months. A large number of soldiers from all over the province will be encamped at Vernon during this period, and Mr. Berry's company, of which F. N. Lawrence is the managing director, will also open the Vernon opera house with picture programs.

Victoria, B. C.—The Variety, formerly charging 15 cents admission, has reduced to 10 cents for the summer months.

Vancouver, B. C.—Marvin D. Thoreau is in charge of the Strand theater, managing the house for J. D. McPhee, attorney for the owners.

Winnipeg, Man.—"The House That Jack Built," a "safcty first" film, loaned by the Canadian Pacific Railway, was shown for three days recently at the Bijou theater, followed by two days at the Majestic. It is planned to show this picture throughout western Canada, with the object of reducing to a minimum accidents resulting from carelessness.

Collecting Patron Tax

Alberta Exhibitors Begin on June 1 to Collect Special War Tax on Theater Tickets—Amusing Experiences at Several of the Local Houses—Ticket Boxes Furnished by the Government Have Openings Too Small.

By E. C. Thomas, 821 Rogers Bldg., Vancouver, B. C., Special Correspondent.

CALGARY, ALBERTA.—June 1 marked the inauguration of the new theater ticket tax in Alberta, and on the day previous the special boxes provided by the government for the reception of the tickets were distributed to exhibitors. On the first day under the new regulations the theater managers had a more or less merry time explaining the situation to their patrons, many of whom were not aware of the new provincial law providing for the tax. The necessity of explanations by the cashiers required so much time that even when the houses were only comfortably filled, lobbies were crowded with patrons waiting to purchase tickets.

Although most of the local houses sold the war tax tickets at the regular box offices, one manager stationed a young lady in the lobby with the special coupons, and thus facilitated matters to some extent. At the Pantages and Empire theaters a variation of this plan will also be carried out hereafter, a special box office, open for one hour every day, being provided for the tax tickets.

There was considerable complaint on the part of patrons during the first day, and a few, evidently not understanding the situation, refused to attend the theaters at all, rather than pay the tax. Others became exceedingly wrathy over what they characterized as an imposition, and took it out on the blameless theatrical men, stating that as they were already contributing to the patriotic and other funds, it was an imposition to compel them to pay out any more money.

The government has supplied small red boxes into which the tax tickets are to be placed, and these, too, were a source of great trouble, as the slot in the top of the box is very small, and the regulations provide that patrons must deposit their own tickets. This occasioned much confusion and delay, and the exhibitors will probably ask for the substitution of hoppers or some receptacle with a large opening, into which the tickets may be dropped without trouble, or for a change in the regulations so as to allow the special coupons to be handed to the doormen. As a matter of fact, necessity compelled the adoption of this method in some cases on the opening day.

The tax at the moving picture theaters is one cent on each ticket, and at vaudeville and legitimate theaters, which charge a higher price of admission, the tax is two and one-half cents. There are only four such theaters in the province, however—two in Calgary and two in Edmonton. On admission of $1.00 or over the tax will be 5 cents, with the same amount on circus tickets. The tax does not apply to soldiers, who are admitted at the usual rates, nor to patriotic, religious or charitable entertainments. The tickets, which are in rolls of 2,000 each, bear the provincial crest and are colored pink for one cent, blue for two and one-half cents, and white for five cents. Box and tickets are supplied by the provincial secretary's department, which superintends their use and collection. Exhibitors are allowed a commission of ten per cent. on the tickets sold. Although exact figures are not yet available, E. Trowbridge, deputy provincial secretary, estimates that the revenue to be derived from this source in Calgary and Edmonton alone will total about $3,200 per week. There are eighty-one moving picture theaters in the province, of which slightly more than one-fourth are in the two cities mentioned.

The children were hard hit on the first day, but one manager solved this trouble, as well as making friends among the juvenile theater-goers, by standing in front of the house during the afternoon and presenting a tax ticket to each child who lacked the extra cent with which to purchase one.

THE NEW PANTAGES THEATER.

Plans Are Now Ready and a House to Seat 2,000 Will Be Built.

Vancouver, B. C.—Plans for a new Pantages theater in Vancouver, which have been simmering for several months, have finally been brought to a definite conclusion, and an announcement regarding the new house has just been made.

Alexander Pantages, head of the circuit bearing his name, has acquired by lease, with the option of purchase, a piece of property on the south side of Hastings street, near Carrall street, and directly across the street from the Rex theater. On this site will be erected a thoroughly modern theater costing between $150,000 and $200,000 and having a seating capacity of two thousand. There will be no stores or offices in front or over the new house, the whole space being used for the theater proper, which will have an open court entrance and wide exits at either side. The architect is M. B. Priteca, who also designed the Pantages houses in Seattle, Portland, Tacoma and other cities.

By the terms of the deal C. A. Godson, owner of the hotel property, and jointly with F. R. Begg, of the Strand theater property, becomes associated with Mr. Pantages in the new enterprise. It is stated that the work of tearing down the structures at present on the site will begin early in July, and it is hoped by rushing construction to have the theater ready for occupancy by the first of November. It is reported that the lease on the present Pantages, two blocks further up the street, expires within a short time.

Red Cross Benefit at the Grandview.

Vancouver, B. C.—Manager Corriveau of the Grandview theater donated the use of the house on a recent afternoon to the Ward Four branch of the Red Cross Society, who held a very successful benefit performance.

$10 to the Best Guesser.

Vancouver, B. C.—Manager A. W. Gillis of the Pantages theater is offering a prize of ten dollars to the first person correctly guessing the identity of the "Laughing Mask," in the "Iron Claw" serial, now being run at that house.

Winnipeg Theatrical Federation Dance.

Winnipeg, Man.—The dance carnival given by the Winnipeg Theatrical Federation on May 31 was a distinct success, and a large amount was raised from the sale of tickets, for the benefit of the Returned Soldiers' Association. The entertainment was held in the convention hall of the Industrial Bureau, which had been elaborately decorated for the occasion. Music was furnished by a fifty-piece orchestra and two military bands, while vaudeville performers from local theaters contributed specialties to the program. The affair was under the auspices of Mayor Waugh, and the refreshments were sold by members of the Daughters of the Empire and the French Red Cross Society.

KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURE.

THE HEAD OF THE HOUSE (Three parts—June 30).—The cast: Lynn Morril (Frank Mayo); Jean Kelly (Lillian West); Lillian (Jumsy Maye); Tom Ward (Frank Mayo); Aunt Mary (Ruth Lackaye). Direction of H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer.

Jean Kelly, a reporter, is outside the seashore home of Lynn Morril when a burglar enters. Scenting a story, she waits. Morril surprises the burglar, notes that the man resembles him, and changes places with him, for his aunt and cousin, Lillian, whom he dislikes, are coming on a visit. The new watchman fires a shot at Morril and he flees, dragging Jean with him. Hard pressed, he boards his motor boat. The girl jumps overboard and he tries to rescue her. They are cast upon a small island, from which they later escape on a raft. Reaching home, they find the masquerading burglar in disgrace. He makes a quick exit, and Lynn introduces his fiancee to the guests.

KALEM.

THE FANGS OF THE TATLER (No. 11 of "The Social Pirates"—Two parts—June 5).—The cast: Mona (Marin Sais); Mary (Ollie Kirkby); Wentworth (Frank Jonasson); Runkle (Edward Clisbee); Dick Carlton (Rupert Dell); Miml (Ruth Snyder); Sartwell (B. Furey). Director, James W. Horne.

Wentworth is the wealthy backer of The Tattler, a blackmailing society weekly, and Runkle his lawyer and tool. The plight of one of their victims brings them to the attention of Mona and Mary. After carefully laying their plan they change their abode to a fashionable hotel where Mona is the wealthy Mrs. Stephen Douglas, and Mary her paid companion.

Dick Carlton, an actor, pays ardent attention to Mrs. Douglas. A quarrel between Mary and Dick is arranged so that Wentworth overhears them and later becomes interested in her. She says that Dick has cast her aside for Mrs. Douglas, and hints that revenge by informing the absent Mr. Douglas would be sweet. Wentworth urges her on—for his own selfish ends—and falls into the trap of giving direct evidence that he is the owner of The Tattler, which is all the girls wanted to bring about his exposure in a dramatic scene and his disappearance from the city followed by the suspension of The Tattler.

MIDNIGHT AT THE OLD MILL (June 6).—The cast: Ham (Lloyd V. Hamilton); Bud (Bud Duncan); Doc. Sawbones (A. Edmondson).

Ham and Bud land jobs as gardeners at the Sawbones home. The Doc receives word that a bundle containing "you know what" will be waiting for him at the old mill at midnight. The Doc and his three fellow workers sharpen their instruments in gleeful anticipation of a night of experiments. Ham and Bud have meanwhile been more busy with their rivalry for the favor of the Doc's daughter than their gardening duties. Bud is the favored one, and when he hears the Doc instructing Ham to go to the old mill at midnight to get the bundle he hurries there first and slips into a bag.

Ham is scared stiff enough when he puts the bag on his shoulders without the necessity of Bud tickling his ribs, which makes Ham do the four-mile journey back to the house in two seconds flat. Back on the operating table Bud makes his presence known, and then on a pretext succeeds in inducing Ham to take his place for a few minutes. Then while Bud is managing his elopement with the fair daughter, the doctors prepare for their task. But the corpse comes to life—and starts a train of complications.

Mr. Exhibitor:—You will get more helpful information by carefully reading one trade paper weekly than by skimming over three or four. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD is the one paper you need.

IN CINDERELLA'S SHOES (June 7).—The cast: Dolly Randall (Ethel Teare); Pa Randall (Gus Leonard); Arthur (Jack MacDermott); Tom (Victor Rottman). Author, Louis B. Gardner. Producer, Harry Millarde.

Poor Dolly—her father is the manufacturer of a "comfort before beauty" shoe, and he makes her wear the clumsy things. Her efforts to get rid of the cumbersome shoes in favor of a cute little pair of fashionable tortures lead her into all sorts of mix-ups. But Dad has an eye for pretty tootsies when worn by those outside the family and his curiosity finally leads him into a pretty fix that enables Dolly to have the laugh on him and get his permission to suit her own fancy in footwear—as well as sweethearts.

JUGGLING JUSTICE (June 9).—The cast: Sis Hopkins (Rose Melville) · Rube (Frank Minzey); Constable Perkins (Richard Purdon); the District Attorney (Henry Murdock); Mrs. Strongarm (Olive West). Author, Samuel J. Taylor. Director, Robert Ellis.

Rube's anxiety to please Sis gets him into trouble and he finds himself in the town lockup, the first guest in ten years. The coming election of local justice and the activity of the women in the suffrage town suggests a plan to Sis to get Rube free of the toils. She enters the lists vigorously and is victorious over the town political boss in a campaign that is one continuous laugh. The day of the trial finds Sis handing out justice in her own way—she bosses everything and everybody. When the evidence is all in she declares Rube innocent and when the District Attorney asks if she will not give the jury a chance to say something, she declares: "The jury can say 'Good Night.' This here trial is over and I resign my job."

THE TREASURE TRAIN (No. 83 of "The Hazards of Helen"—June 10).—The cast: Helen, the operator, Helen Gibson); Jim Spencer, the guard (B. Pembroke); "Red" Byrd (Harry Schum); his aides (O. Philippi and Ed. Gibson). Author, S. A. Van Petten. Director, James Davis.

"Red" Byrd and his aides succeed in learning that a large treasure is being shipped on a certain freight car under special guard. They overpower the relief operator at Helen's station and tamper with the signals so that the treasure train stops, while the crew runs ahead to investigate, leaving Spencer alone to guard the treasure. The crew walks right into "Red's" trap, and the members are made prisoners. Spencer suspects trouble, and hurriedly slams the door of his car, barricading himself in.

The conspirators, temporarily foiled, plan a dastardly scheme. The two last cars of the freight are uncoupled and started down the grade, when, by skillful manoeuvering they succeed in causing a collision that stuns the guard and all but smashes the treasure car. Helen, arriving for duty, senses something amiss as she nears the station, and learns the truth before she is seen by "Red's" aides left to guard the train crew. Running down the track she boards the engine and sets out after the treasure car.

By a leap to the car, and her quick wits she succeeds in frustrating "Red" and in bringing the gang to justice.

THE DISAPPEARANCE OF HELEN MINTERN" (No. 12 of "The Social Pirates"—Two Parts—June 12).—The cast: Mona (Marin Sais); Mary (Ollie Kirkby); Carson (E. Forrest Taylor); Slatern (Frank Jonasson); his aides (Rupert Dell, Edward Clisbee). Producer, James W. Horne.

Fearing that his discharged stenographer may betray his secrets, Slatern, a crooked politician, has her spirited away to Madam Sutro's gambling den, which on the surface is a fashionable beauty parlor. Mona and Mary volunteer to aid Carson, a millionaire social worker, in solving the mystery and effectually exposing Slatern. Mona gains the confidence of the conspirators by pretending to betray Carson. Then Mary, as a blundering woman detective employed by Carson, falls into a trap set by Mona and Slatern for her. Finally the web of evidence is woven completely around Slatern and Madame Sutro and the politician's exposure and arrest comes at the climax of a drastic raid.

THE ALASKAN MOUSE HOUND (June 13).—The cast: Ham (Lloyd V. Hamilton); Bud (Bud Duncan); Mr. Gotrox (A. Edmonson).

Fashion decrees that to be in the swim you must carry an Alaskan mouse hound. So Miss Gotrox prevails on Pa to spend the small sum of $5,000 in gratifying her desire for a mouse hound. Meanwhile Ham and Bud notice that the dog-checking privilege in front of department stores is a valuable one, so they don messenger's caps and take their stand outside a store without asking the proprietor's permission.

Miss Gotrox, strolling in the park with her pet, is seen by Agnes, the adventuress, who succeeds in stealing the mouse hound. Pursued by police she drops the dog in Ham's lap and disappears in the store. Then poor Ham leads an exciting time trying to get rid of the dog, for like a bad penny, it always returns. Finally he persuades Bud to take it, not knowing that Bud has been promised a thousand dollars reward by Pa Gotrox for the return of his daughter's pet.

THE MYSTERIOUS CIPHER (No. 85 of "The Hazards of Helen"—June 24).—The cast: Helen, the operator (Helen Gibson); Chilton, dealer in antiques (G. A. Williams); his partner (P. S. Pembroke); Blanding, their tool (Ed. Gibson). Author, Homer Eon Flindt. Director, James Davis.

Chilton, a shady dealer in antiques, is in financial difficulties. He evolves a darlng scheme to recoup by defrauding the railroad. He ships a carload of worthless furniture which he places in the insurance statement at a $30,000 valuation. When Chilton learns the number of the car in which his furniture is being shipped he wires ahead to Blanding at Lone Point, telling him in cipher message to be certain that the car does not pass that station.

Blanding maneuvers a fire which completely destroys the supposed valuable shipment, and then goes into hiding to wait another cipher telling him that the claim against the road has been paid. Chilton and his partner succeed in getting the money from the road and are making their getaway. But Helen's suspicions have been aroused by the receipt of the strange ciphers at Lone Point and she begins an investigation. How her sharp wits—and, when the moment of peril comes, her bravery in the face of almost certain death—save the day for the road is told in the following scenes of this "Hazard."

THAT LONELY WIDOW (June 21).—The cast: Dolly (Ethel Teare); her father (Gus Leonard); Tom (Jack MacDermott). Author S. A. Van Petten. Director, Harry Millarde.

Dolly, home from college laden with sporting paraphernalia is told by her father that "she couldn't earn her salt." Angered, she secures a position on Dad's own newspaper under another name, and is assigned by the grumpy city editor to secure an interview from the Widow Jones, who has advertised for a mate. A few minutes later, Tom, the city editor's son, also arrives home from college with a letter of expulsion. Dad determines to put him to work—and his first assignment is also an interview with the Widow Jones. At the widow's home affairs get in a terrible tangle through Dolly being mistaken for the widow by the persistent suitors, but after an exciting series of laughs matters are straightened out with Tom and Dolly determined to form a life's partnership.

HER GREAT INVENTION (June 23).—The cast: Sis Hopkins (Rose Melville); Louie Cheesecake (Henry Murdock); the great inventor (Richard Purdon); his daughter (Mary Kennedy); her lover (Arthur Albertson). Author, Samuel J. Taylor. Producer, Robert Ellis.

Sis discovers an invention to make gunpowder harmless and sets out for the city to interest "the world's greatest inventor" in her project to end all wars. Louie Cheesecake, who believes he is "the world's greatest inventor," escapes from Buggeville and finds his way to the laboratory of the real inventor while that personage is out. Of course, Louie welcomes Sis' invention with open arms and, securing a keg of gun-powder, they prepare for an experiment. The real inventor arrives in time to get mixed up in a train of laughable and exciting incidents which end when Sis and Louie make their experiment and find themselves whirling through the air. Back in Blueberry Gap, swathed in bandages and carrying a crutch, Sis swears off inventing.

VITAGRAPH.

THE FOXY TROTTERS (June 26).—The cast: Joseph Goop (George Kunkel); his wife (Anne Schaefer); stenographer (Carmen Phillips); clerk (Jack Mower); office boy (Archie Warren); dancing teacher (Vera Rowe). Author George F. Burkhardt. Director, Dave Smith.

You can't get away from it, when the dance music starts playing, you just have to start wiggling your feet. Old Goop, though he was a confirmed hater of ragtime music and the graceful steps, which folks perform to its strains. When he catches his stenographer trotting around the office with one of his clerks, he reprimands her severely. When a dancing instructress moves in the apartment above him, the pat, pat of graceful feet, sets him wild. Then he gets up courage to go up and tell the instructress that the noise is offensive to him, but, well, who wouldn't fall for such a petite miss—he forgets his complaint and allows her to teach him the fox trot, and now he can't get enough of it. His stenographer thinks he has lost his reason, for he greets her in the morning by placing his arm around her waist and, to the whistled strain of a fox trot, whirls her gracefully through the maze of office furniture.

LOSING WEIGHT—(June 30).—The cast: Hughey (Mr. Hughey Mack); Jewell (Miss Jewell Hunt); Mr. Smith (John Flatow). Authors, Lawrence Semon and C. Grahm Baker. Director, Lawrence Semon.

Excess flesh is a hindrance to a business man—at least Hughey finds it so. Hughey has an appointment to close a million dollar deal, but finds himself delayed on every hand by his great bulk. He gets stuck in the doorway, is unable to get into a taxicab, breaks down a telephone booth, and gets to the office just in time to be too late. Then he sees Professor Reducer's advertisement and determines to lose weight. The professor puts him through a strenuous course of exercises and even outside the gymnasium, he keeps in trim by such little stunts as juggling safes, etc. After a few weeks of this he hops on the scales, confident of seeing a wonderful improvement—but falls back in a dead faint at the evidence of the merciless dial—a gain of 150 pounds. Hughey now resumes his life of ease, with beefsteaks galore and plenty of potatoes and lager beer on the side—and strange as it may seem, he is losing weight on the "diet."

ESSANAY.

A TRAITOR TO ART (Three parts—June 24).—The cast: Brenda Adams (Ann Kirk); Arthur Synott (Edward Arnold); Blount (Hugh Thompson); Pancha (Marion Lydston).

Brenda Adams and Arthur Synott, small-town sweethearts, become engaged. She goes to the city, however, to pursue her art studies. Some years pass and she makes but little progress. Blount, an eccentric artist with whom she works, persuades her to pose as Cleopatra. Pancha, who loves him, is enraged. Synott, now a minister, seeks Branda as he has received an excellent call and requires a wife at the city church. They marry and she gives up the Bohemian life. Pancha has seen the painting and is sure Blount is in love with its original. She slashes it to shreds. Brenda, in great fear because her minister husband has decided to visit the exhibition, goes to his studio to destroy the painting. Blount discovers her and the ruined work. He threatens arrest, but offers a way out. She leaves to think it over and Panca sees her depart. In a jealous fury she kills both Blount and herself.

VERNON HOWE BAILEY'S SKETCH BOOK OF ST. LOUIS (June 28).—As the scene of what Vernon Howe Bailey considers the greatest achievement of his career, St. Louis has been pictured in motion picture drawings with unusual care by this artist. During the exposition there Bailey, then a newspaper artist, received a commission to produce drawings for 22 full pages within three days. With hardly any sleep in the 72 hours he was able to deliver the drawings of the exposition on time. This stands as one of the greatest achievements in newspaper art work. In picturing this city for the screen he has handled a topic with which he is thoroughly familiar. Not the least feature is his reproductions of those quaint sections of the city which have furnished settings for scores of novels since Civil war times. On the same reel is a western scenic.

THE REGENERATION OF MARGARET (Three Parts—July 1).—The cast: Margaret (Warda Howard); Dr. Belknap (Ernest Maupain); William Ash (John Junior); Dr. Rankin Ash, his father (Patrick Calhoun); Mrs. Belknap (Florence Oberle).

Shortly after the death of her husband Mrs. Chanler's daughter is born. She is defective and when Dr. Ash calls in the eminent surgeon, Dr. Belknap, that expert, persuades the mother there are enough defectives and leaves the baby to die. Dr. Ash believes he can save her, however, and operates successfully. As the child was believed dead he takes her into his own home where she grows up with his son, William. She becomes a nurse and Dr. Belknap, now the husband of her mother, and who is striken with paralysis, is her patient. Knowing he once left her to die she hands him a pistol and taunts him, as a defective, to kill himself. Young Ash wrests the revolver from him and is shot. When she learns the identity of her mother the girl loses her bitterness and softens toward them all. Young Ash, convalescent, is delighted to learn she is not his sister and that they can marry.

THE VOICE IN THE WILDERNESS (Reissue Two Parts—June 27).—The Cast: The author (Francis X. Bushman); his butterfly wife (Irene Warfield); the sculptress (Gerda Holmes).

A young author decides to spend a few months in a small village where he can work without distraction. His butterfly wife accompanies him unwillingly. Strolling in the woods he stumbles over a small precipice. The sculptress, also seeking quietude, finds him and takes him to her cabin where she nurses him for weeks until he regains his senses. His wife gives him up for dead and returns to the city to take over her uncle's estate. Against his possible return, however, she places a note in a jug explaining her departure and leaves it with the storekeeper. The sculptress purchases a jug, and finds the wife's note. Herself in love with the author, she hides the paper and he believes his wife has deserted him. Finally he discovers the note and hurries to the city only to see through a window his wife being married to another man. He returns to the wilderness with the sculptress.

BIOGRAPH.

THE UNWELCOME GUEST (Reissue—June 26).—The cast: The slavey (Mary Pickford); the old father (W. Chrystie Miller); the son (Charles H. Mailes); the son's wife (Claire McDowell); their son (Jack Pickford).

The miserly wife hoards the money which she receives from her husband and when she dies its hiding place remains a secret. The son is advised of his mother's death and is informed that unless he gives his father a home the old man will have to go to the poorhouse. This the son and his wife are unwilling to do, but to avoid scandal they consent to take him. About this time a little girl from the workhouse comes to the son's home, she having been engaged to do the housework. Upon the old man's arrival at the home of his son he is made to feel that he is unwelcome. He and the little girl, being treated most unkindly by the son and his family, run away, and by a peculiar turn of conditions the son is made to regret the persecution to which he had subjected his father.

A FAIR REBEL (Three Parts—June 28).—The cast: Ezra Mason (Charles Perley); Steve Monteith (Charles H. West); Bill Bronson (H. Elsky); Gen. Abner Monteith (Walter Lewis); Clariette Monteith (Linda Arvidson); Nelse (J. Martin); Aunt Margie (Clara T. Bracey); Joan Fitzhugh (Dorothy Gish); Major James Stillman (G. Pierce); Capt. DePerrin (Robert Drouet); Major Watkins (Jack Brammall); Old Mammy, servant (Florence Ashbrook).

Steve Monteith and Ezra Mason, upper class men, and Bill Bronson, plebe, are chums and roommates at West Point before the Civil War. Steve prepares to leave for his home in Virginia, and Mason and he exchange photographs before parting. General Abner Monteith, Steve's father, and his sister, Clairette, are overjoyed when Steve arrives. Aunt Margie, and her adopted daughter, Joan Fitzhugh, who is fond of Steve, join the family and give Steve a warm welcome.

One year later the rumble of war is heard. Steve, now a major, and his father, a general, leave at the head of separate companies with the Confederate troops. The days at Monteith Manor are lonely for Clairette. Her cousin, Captain DePerrin, formerly of the French army, comes to act as her protector. He falls in love with her, but she does not care for him. Ezra Mason, now a colonel in command of the Union forces, and Major Stillman are granted a short leave of absence. They are ambushed by a Confederate near Monteith Manor. Major Stillman is wounded and is assisted to Monteith Manor by Mason. Nelse, the Monteith slave servant, sees the "Yanks" (Mason and Stillman) coming towards the house. Clairette takes Major Stillman in and Aunt Margie is put in charge as nurse.

A few days later, Mason receives a message telling him Clairette's father has died. Clairette is grief-stricken and Mason, now in love with her, tries to console her. DePerrin, jealous, schemes to get Mason out of the way. Major Stillman recovers and proposes to Aunt Margie. She surrenders and leaves for Washington with the Major, who has been promoted to colonel, taking Joan with them. Colonel Mason prolongs his stay at Monteith Manor. DePerrin is declaring his love to Clairette when Mason enters. Clairette goes to Mason for protection and he then tells her of his love. Major Watkins, in command of the U. S. Telegraph Corps, reports to Mason that all is quiet, and Mason looks forward to a few more pleasant days with Clairette.

Bill Bronson, now a straggler from the Confederate ranks, is caught by DePerrin taking food from the window. DePerrin questions Bronson and learns that Major Steve Monteith is in command of his troops. DePerrin is struck with an idea to get even with Mason and sends Bronson back to Steve with an anonymous note telling him that a Union officer is making the Manor his headquarters, much to the annoyance of his sister. Major Watkins and the telegraph corps reach their supply house and are startled by the Confederate troops, who open fire. Watkins, though wounded, rushes off for aid. The Union forces are attacked by the Confederates, but the Union troops repel the attack and drive the enemy back.

At the same time the supply house of the telegraph corps is burned by the Confederates. Major Watkins reaches Monteith Manor and reports to Colonel Mason, who orders him to telegraph the information to headquarters and save the army. Watkins climbs the telegraph pole near the Monteith home and is about to send Mason's message when the Confederate troops in charge of Steve open fire and kill him. DePerrin gives the troopers orders to shoot Mason. Bronson recognizes Mason as a friend who did him a service before the war, and is angry at DePerrin. The Confederate troops are about to kill Mason when Steve orders them to fall back. He is astonished to find Mason, and, forgetting his position, clasps Mason's hand. Mason surrenders and is placed in Libby Prison. DePerrin, officer of the day at the prison, has Mason placed in quarters known as "Rat Hell." Bronson on guard, acts as a guard for Mason in aiding his escape. Mason starts to dig a tunnel but is interrupted by DePerrin making his rounds.

Clairette arrives in Richmond to effect Mason's exchange. The commander at the Confederate headquarters sends DePerrin a message asking for a report on Mason. DePerrin tells Mason if he will swear never to see Miss Monteith again, he will secure his release. Mason tells DePerrin he disgraces the uniform he wears and rejects the proposition.

Bronson secures a Confederate outfit for Clairette and instructs her in the duties of prison guard. Clairette meets Bronson at the prison and takes his place. He gives her his gun and countersign, "Virginia." DePerrin tells "Bronson" (Clairette) to shoot any Union officer on sight who attempts to escape. Near where Clairette stands the earth breaks and she sees Mason coming through. He is about to strike when he recognizes Clairette. They exchange coats, she gives him the signal to pass the sentry and the countersign, "Virginia."

Clairette, now thoroughly frightened, sees DePerrin and guards coming. She tries to hide Mason, and DePerrin, at sight of a Union officer, fires. Clairette stumbles and falls at his feet. DePerrin recognizes Clairette, and, thinking he has killed her, commits suicide. The surgeon at the Confederate headquarters orders Clairette removed to her home. The war is over and Major Stillman and Aunt Margie return to Monteith Manor. Steve is astonished at the wonderful development of Joan and falls in love with her. He proposes and is accepted. They are sealing their engagement when Mason enters and interrupts them. Major Stillman and Steve greet Mason heartily and tell him he is all the medicine Clairette needs, and they plan to surprise her. Aunt Margie tells Clairette the Major has the medicine for her in the conservatory. Mason comes out from his hiding place, and proves to be the tonic Clairette needed most.

HUNGRY HEARTS (June 15).—The cast: Plump (Babe Hardy); Runt (Billy Ruge); Model (Ray Godfrey); Widow (Edna Reynolds); Art Connoisseur (Bert Tracey).

Artists both, Plump and Runt find that the combined results of their efforts in colors do not pay even for the hire of their pretty model. However, an angel appears in the person of an old connoisseur, who offers them a large sum of money for a finished picture of the model. The old chap's too evident admiration of the girl's shape arouses Plump's jealousy, and in a rage he slashes the canvas to bits, thus ruining their opportunity of getting the greenbacks.

Attracted by their door sign, a wealthy widow commissions Plump to paint her portrait. Plump tries, but her attempts at love-making disgust him and he leaves the work for Runt to finish. Runt, with an eye to the widow's wealth, makes hay while the sun shines and wins her hand, leaving the poor but pretty model for Plump. The tables are turned when it is discovered that the little girl is an heiress, and her fat hero is happy, possessing both wealth and beauty, while poor Runt finds that he has tied himself to a muchly overrated piece of second-hand femininity.

THE RAID (June 16).—The cast: Pokes (Robert Burns); Jabbs (Walter Stull); Mrs. Pokes (Mabel Best); Mrs. Stull (Ethel Burton); Policeman (Robin Williamson).

If a man bets his clothes in a poker game he should take the precaution to have some way by which he could reach his home safely in case he loses. However, Pokes failed to take this precaution, so after having lost everything in the game he suddenly realizes his predicament and refuses to give up his trousers. When his fellow players insist on the payment of his bet, Pokes seeks refuge in flight, clad only in his undershirt and pants. Pokes steals a policeman's coat and hat and wends his way back to the clubroom. When he bursts in on the players they are terrified at the uniform and, failing to recognize Pokes in his disguise, they dive pell mell through the window, leaving all the money on the table.

Failing to find his clothes, which have been removed, Pokes appropriates the money in payment for his lost attire and starts for home. On his way he passes a saloon, where Jabbs is engaged in an altercation. In the figbt Jabbs' new silk hat is knocked off his head and flies outside the saloon, landing on Pokes' head, who wears it away in glee. He conceals the money inside the band of the hat and crawls through the window of his house, where he finds his wife awaiting him with open but far from loving arms. Hanging the hat on a burning gas bracket, Pokes falls asleep, but his wife smells the blazing hat and hurls it out the window. The hat falls on Jabbs, who lives next door, just as he is about to enter his home. Recognizing the hat as his own, Jabbs is delighted, but fails to find the money.

The next morning Pokes, on missing the hat and being informed by his wife that she had hurled it from the window, is in despair over the loss of the money. On searching for the hat he sees it lying on the table in Jabbs' home, but is unable to reach it. He enlists the aid of a policeman, but Jabbs, entering the room at this moment, wrecks all the well-made plans of Pokes and his ally and routs them ignominiously.

NEVER AGAIN (June 22).—The cast: Plump (Babe Hardy); Runt (Billy Ruge); Pop Dale (Bert Tracy); His Wife (Helen Gilmore); Their Daughters (Florence McLaughlin, Ray Godfrey).

Pop Dale determines to go on a trip to Spain and at a day's notice orders the family to pack up. This upsets the little daughters. A hasty farewell and the girls are rushed down to the boat, leaving our heroes in a sad frame of mind. However, they also act with precision, and as the boat is drawing away, two forms dash madly over the rail and again the lovers are together, much to Pop's disgust.

Arrived in Spain, the charm and romance of the country appeal to the male members of the family, so much so that serious trouble ensues. Falling victims to the enticing guiles of a Spanish dancer, the two boys, forgetting their fiancees, become her admirers. Pop, attempting to break up this awkward state of affairs, is himself made a fool of and we have the three of them, each ready to cut the other's throat. The girls complain to their mother. She, in turn, appeals to her husband, but discovers that the old scamp is as bad as the boys. A plan is made to catch the three culprits and they are followed by the three women on their next expedition.

The boys and the old man take bouquets and different roads to the dancer's home. Here, on the point of presenting the orchids, she introduces them to her husband and six children. Disgusted, the lovers return, only to find that their women-kind have seen the whole performance and, making the best of a bad job, they decide that the old friends are the best and with rather forced smiles offer the bouquets, which are this time accepted.

FOR BETTER OR WORSE (June 23).—The cast: Jabbs (Walter Stull); Pokes (Robt. Burns); His Pal (Robin Williamson); Mrs. Gothrox (Helen Gilmore); Her Maid (Ethel Burton).

Jabbs, the Chief, and Pokes, one of the members of the local police force, are both suitors for the hand of Ethel, the maid at the home of Mrs. Gothrox. While Jabbs is calling on Ethel they hear somebody at the door and, fearing the return of Mrs. Gothrox, Ethel locks Jabbs into the closet. To her dismay, it is Pokes at the door, and refusing to listen to Ethel's entreaties that he remain outside, the doughty policeman enters the kitchen, where he partakes of the repast set on the table for the Chief.

Mrs. Gothrox having died, Ethel receives from her late mistress a legacy which causes Pokes and Jabbs to press their suits with still greater ardor. Taking advantage of his position as Chief, Jabbs discharges Pokes from the police force and wins Ethel. Later, when Jabbs and Ethel are having their new home renovated, a strike of paper hangers is called, and the men employed by the newly married couple join the strikers, leaving the house in an unfinished condition.

Pokes, now broke and out of work, is pressed with a pal into service as a strike breaker and sent to finish the wall papering job at Ethel's house. Here Pokes and his pal succeed in papering the room according to their ideas of paper hanging, but in a fashion which would hardly be approved of by interior decorators. When Jabbs, who is now a poor henpecked husband, and Ethel return from a shopping trip they are horrified to see the condition of their once beautiful home. Filled with rage, when he recognizes Pokes, Jabbs chases his former rival and his pal around the room, out of the window and into the water trough beneath.

BETTER HALVES (June 29).—The cast: Plump (Babe Hardy); Runt (Billy Ruge); Mrs. Plump (Florence McLoughlin); Mrs. Runt (Ray Godfrey).

Plump and Runt are benedicts, but their "benedictives" are of different brands. Little Runt is the boss of his house. Fatty is nothing more than a jelly fish in the hands of his wife. Shopping one day, Plump helps a damsel in distress by tying her bootlace and is caught by Mrs. Plump. Sherman's famous remark might by aptly applied to the ensuing dispute.

Runt, rescues Plump and after the pair have imbibed a little refreshment, the latter is inflamed by his little pal's sarcasm and resolves to cast off the shackles of slavery and assert himself. Full of his newly-found courage, they repair to their home, only to find that in their absence Mrs. Plump has likewise educated Mrs. Runt and successfully proven to her that woman should be the boss of the house. But Plump and Runt are averse to their demands, and in the end they win out.

FOR VALUE RECEIVED (June 30).—The cast: Pokes (Robt. Burns); Jabbs (Walter Stull); Ethel (Ethel Burton); butler (Robin Williamson).

Circumstantial evidence is not always conclusive and it is sometimes wiser to wait until sufficient proof is collected before one jumps to a conclusion. If Ethel had done this when she discovered her sweetheart, Jabbs, with his arm about a young lady in a public cafe, she would have learned that her fiance was only trying to caress her. Instead of listening to an explanation, Ethel tells Jabbs that the engagement is at an end and that she will marry the first man whom she happens to meet.

After several rebuffs she finally discovers Pokes, a tramp, who has been chased by a dog through the window of Ethel's house and into her kitchen, where he is making himself at home. Ethel places her proposition before Pokes, telling him that she will give him a good salary to marry her and to be her husband in name only. Pokes, thinking of the good food and easy money, consents, but balks when it comes to shaving and taking a bath. However, through the cajoling of Ethel's maiden aunt and the assistance of the butler, Pokes is finally cleaned up and looks fairly presentable. The possession of so much money turns Pokes' pocket, and his first thought is for a long drink to quench his thirst, so he sends the butler for a supply of liquid refreshments. The aunt catches him in the attempt and throws the beer away.

Nothing daunted, Pokes makes a second and even a third attempt, but each time the aunt interferes so that poor Pokes is almost dying for want of his beloved beer. Finally, in a last desperate endeavor, Pokes thinks of a scheme whereby the butler, with the aid of a hose and funnel, can supply the cherished drink. The scheme almost succeeds until the last minute, when the entrance of the aunt and one of her old admirers spoils the well-made plans of Pokes' and ends in the deluging of aunt and her sweetheart.

On the night of the wedding, Jabbs reads of the coming marriage ceremony and makes a last effort to have Ethel listen to his explanation. Ethel, now too willing to be convinced, listens to Jabbs' pleadings and renews the engagement. The problem of what to do with Pokes confronts the happy lovers until Jabbs suggests that rather than disappoint the assembled guests they substitute Auntie and Pokes for the bridal ceremony. Pokes, who has been imbibing rather free in the interim, does not learn of the substitution until the last moment, when he raises the wedding veil and there discovers the aunt. In despair, he falls through the window, rushes back to his old haunts in the freight yards and leaves Jabbs and Ethel to the tender mercies of the minister.

LUBIN.

NO PLACE LIKE JAIL (June 26).—The cast: Michael Finnigan (Davy Don); Finnigan's wife (Patsy DeForest). Adapted and directed by Edwin McKim.

Michael Finnigan is locked up for attacking Patrick Brogan of the police force. Mike has been making love to Brogan's girl. Finnigan writes a note asking his wife to secure his freedom. The turnkey passes it on to Brogan, who is glad to deliver it as he wants to reveal to Mrs. Finnigan her husband's disloyalty. Mrs. Finnigan, reading the note, decides that her hubby is better off where he is and she shows it by tenderly embracing Brogan, who at first forcibly resists her, but is soon conquered.

Finnigan makes his escape from the jail, clothed in a suit of stripes. Going home by the way of the woods he runs across a clergyman asleep under a tree. He relieves the sleeping man of his attire, leaving the parson in his B. V. D.'s. Arriving home Finnigan sits down on the back steps to regain his wind after his fast run and to adjust the stolen trousers which were much too long. Mrs. Finnigan, sitting by the window on Brogan's lap, spies him. She is perplexed as to what she should do, but an idea comes to her and she orders Brogan to carry it out. He obeys and as Mike enters the kitchen he lets go a demolishing blow, with his club on the top of Finnigan's head. He falls to the floor, Brogan picks him up and places him over his shoulder. Before leaving, Mrs. Finnigan proposes an elopement with Brogan, as soon as he has returned the "sleeping" husband to the cooler.

Finnigan scales the jail-yard wall, proceeds home, and discovers Brogan in citizens clothes, with a suit case at his side. A pretty nurse-girl passing by flirts with Brogan. He follows. Finnigan vacates his hiding place, dodges around Brogan and the girl unnoticed and makes off with a suit of clothes from Brogan's suitcase. Mrs. Finnigan is leaving by the front way. While hunting the house over for his wife he discovers the note left by her. It proclaims that she has eloped with a handsome, noble protector and that she has become tired of living with a jail-bird. He writes his answer on the opposite side, announcing his suicide. Mrs. Finnigan sees Brogan with the nurse and goes back home to destroy the note she left. Brogan finds Finnigan trying to drown himself and places him under arrest. The judge disgusted with seeing Finnigan again orders him to be kicked out. The force carry out the judge's wishes, at the same time returning to Finnigan the suit that he had on when he made his first visit. He then proceeds homeward.

When Mrs. Finnigan discovers the note she goes down to the lake and finds only the clothes he left on the bank and returns home again, weeping bitterly. She darkens up the house, lights a few candles, drapes her supposed dead husband's picture in mourning and invites a few neighbors in, who really sympathize with her. Finnigan enters the house unnoticed. He takes an old sheet and places it over his head, quietly walks down the front stairs and into the parlor among the mourners. They rush from the house. His wife crouches up in the corner of the room terrified, as he gradually approaches nearer. He taunts her and makes her promise never to marry again. He removes the sheet, explains it all to her and then rushes into her outstretched arms.

OUT OF THE FLOTSAM (Two Parts—June 27).—The cast: Bob Harrison (L. C. Shumway); Frances Buckley (Dorothy Barrett); Gerald Baker (George Routh); Henry Buckley (Melvin Mayo). Written by Tom Gibson. Directed by Wilbert Melville.

Henry Buckley, president of the Winton State Bank, through an unlawful act he did to save the bank from failure, is dominated by his cashier, Gerald Baker. He submits to Baker's control to spare his daughter, Frances, from the disgrace exposure will bring. Baker learns of a large inheritance to come to Frances upon her wedding day and uses his power over Buckley to compel him to use his influence to make Frances become his wife. Buckley refuses, but Frances, learning what exposure will mean to her father, gives her consent.

Baker takes money from the bank vault with which to speculate. The market goes against him. As the wedding day approaches Frances sickens of her intended sacrifice. Her fear of Baker overcomes her desire to shield her father and she determines to run away. Disguised in male attire she tries to "beat" her way as a hobo on a freight train. She is thrown off by the brakeman and her ankle injured. Bob Harrison, one of a band of crooks, wants to break away from the gang and tries to live an honest life. He runs across Frances, whom he takes to be a bok. He befriends her, and discovering her sex, determines to care for her until she is able to be about. He tries to secure honest employment with this end in view but is unable to.

Baker, through Frances running away, is unable to cover his embezzlement, and plans to have the bank looted. Bob overhears the plans and determines to take advantage of them. To delay the crooks he sets the clock in their hangout back half an hour and goes himself to make the raid. In this he is successful and returns with the money to Frances. She knows it is stolen money and pleads with him to return it, but he is firm and will not listen to her pleading and goes away with the money. Frances is heartbroken and returns to her father. The crooks arrive at the bank, discover that it has already been looted, and are captured. They think that Baker has double-crossed them and tell all they know. Baker is apprehended and thinks the crooks have double-crossed him. No one knows where the money is or who looted the bank, but Frances and her loyalty, in spite of the acts to the contrary to Bob keeps her from telling. Bob is brought to a realization of his better self through thoughts of Frances and he determines to return the money. He locates the bank's president's home and arriving there finds Frances. He is willing to give himself into the hands of the law, but Frances, already loving him, prevails upon her father to interfere. He does and Bob is given his chance to make good.

THE RETURN OF JOHN BOSTON (Three Parts—June 29).—The cast: Gordon Edwards (George Routh); Arthur Williams (Millard K. Wilson); Mrs. Fred Bates (Adelaide Bronti); Edith Bates (Golda Madden); Fred Bates (Jack Byrne). Written by Millard K. Wilson and James Douglas. Directed by Jack Byrne.

Gordon Edwards is an unsuccessful writer, until a friend suggests a solution; use a nom-de-plume, for when editors see his name on a script they immediately return it without reading it. So he sends, under the name of John Boston, another script, and this is purchased. Under the name of John Boston, he does extremely well. One day crossing the ferry, he sees a man about to commit suicide, stops him, finds he is a clerk out of work by the name of Williams, takes him to his home, and makes him his secretary. Williams, who has been sworn to secrecy as to the identity of John Boston, really knows more of the business affairs of John Boston, than does Gordon Edwards, the real "John Boston."

As Boston's fame increases, the publishers send him an invitation to a fashionable reception, and urges him to accept it. Hating society, Gordon Edwards coerces Williams into impersonating John Boston. John Boston, in the person of Willims, is a social hit. He meets and becomes attracted to Edith Bates, and upon Miss Bates telling him she was leaving to spend the summer at Coronado, Williams suggests to his employer Edwards, that they also visit the resort.

There Edwards meets imformally a girl, whose hobby is painting, who gives her name as Mirian Lee, but who is really Edith Bates. A love affair develops, and Edwards proposes. She puts off her answer until the next day. That night when she gets back to her hotel, where Williams is waiting with her father and mother. Her father receives a telegram calling them back to the city and she is forced to leave without seeing Edwards. From the city, she writes Edwards a note, telling him how it occurred, but Edwards, after a vain search for "Miriam Lee," leaves also for the city, and Edith's letter is returned to her. Meeting a friend who is going to the war as a correspondent Edwards decides to go with him, instructing Williams, his secretary, to attend to the social duties of "John Boston."

On the battlefield, Edwards is wounded and left for dead. Reports of his death are published in the papers and Edith Bates reads them and is nearly broken-hearted, but Williams, as John Boston, makes a rapid-fire courtship and Edith, strongly urged by her mother, and believing Edwards dead, accepts.

On the day on which they are to be married, Edwards, who has been picked up and nursed back to health, arrives in America and stops at a bank to cash a check. They inform him he has not enough balance to meet the check. Remembering having had fifteen thousand in the bank, he realizes something is wrong. He investigates and finds that Williams has taken the money. He is shown a newspaper by the cashier announcing the marriage of John Boston and Edith Bates to take place that afternoon. Realizing his secretary's duplicity, he resolves to stop his marriage to the girl, whom, of course, he does not imagine could be Miriam Lee. He arrives at the house as the couple are at the altar. He faces Williams, and the latter breaks down. Then Edwards turns and sees "Miriam Lee" before him. She is holding out her arms to him, and, realizing that she believed him dead and that she still loves him, they are in each other's arms as the picture fades.

EDISON BUGG'S INVENTION—(July 1)—The cast: Edison Bugg (Raymond McKee); the chief (Babe Hardy). Written by Epes Winthrop Sargent. Directed by Jerold T. Hevener.

The chief of the Tyretown Fire Department has a bunch of pinochle players for a crew; they get so much interested in the game that he has to go up and remind them that the alarm has been sounded. Edison Bugg gets an idea. He rigs up a counterweight and ropes all the chairs. When he presses a button the counterweight is released and the chairs are jerked from under the pinochle players. It works fine and Edison gets his sweetheart to bring her friends down to see it perform. She comes with a whole bunch of girls. The other firemen find out and poor Edison is crowded into the discard, even with Rose. The iron enters his soul. He presses the button. Coming on the scene of chaos they pounce on him and beat him up, but there is an interruption. The chief has been smoking under the counterweight. They go to his rescue and once more Edison gets his reward.

UNDER A BARREL (On same reel as foregoing).—The cast: Tramp (John Edwards); chief of police (Willie Higgins); chief of fire department (Speedy Smith); bartender (David Roseborough); coquet lady (Mattie Edwards). Written and directed by Will Louis.

Shine, a tramp rising from his downy bed, and making his toilet from nature's fountain, feels like a drink, so he repairs to the nearest saloon. Being short of the price he begs the saloon keeper for the love of humanity to please oil his insides. In response to such an appeal he is thrown out on his ear. But there is more than one way to get a drink free, so he finds his way into the cellar of the saloon and with the aid of some tools, he manages to make first class connections to the liquor barrels of the saloon above. Now finding that he is unable to dispose of all the stock at hand, he invites two of his cronies to participate. After taking several champagne baths, they had a quiet little smoker. That proves to be their downfall, for the smoke, issuing from the cellar window, attracted the attention of the fire department. A general confusion takes place in which the suffragettes honor the tramps for destroying the liquors in the saloon.

THE FOOL (Two Parts—June 25).—The cast: Hugh Hardy (Ben Wilson); Lola, his wife (Jean Stewart); Toots, their child (Lois Alexander); Ruth Lane (Edna Hunter); Reggie Travers (Anthony Merlo). Written by William Addison Lathrop. Produced by Ben Wilson.

Hugh Hardy, who works in a factory at night, struggles in the attic of his tenement home by day in order to perfect an invention. He cares nothing for wealth himself, except to gratify his wife's craving for luxury and pleasure. As he is about to start for the factory he finds Toots, his four-year-old daughter, talking to Ruth Lane, the girl who lives across the hall. Ruth is a student of social welfare and writes on kindred subjects.

The moment that Hugh is gone Lola, his wife, gives Toots a hasty supper of bread and milk and then burries the child to bed. She then dresses herself in stunning evening attire and leaves for the white light district, where she meets her lover, Reggie Travers. Under the influence of wine, time passes quickly, but Lola believes herself to be perfectly safe, as her husband is at work in the factory. Unfortunately, about ten o'clock that evening something goes wrong with Hugh's machine at the factory, and he is relieved for the night. At home he finds Ruth attending to Toots, who became alarmed on account of a bad dream. Ruth tells Hugh that she met Lola going out and Hugh wonders what has become of her. Ruth returns to her apartment across the hall and, after getting Toots asleep, Hugh goes up to his attic room, where he becomes so interested in his invention that it is nearly three o'clock before he looks at his watch. On coming downstairs he is amazed to find that Lola has not returned. He prepares to retire.

Shortly afterward Lola returns with Travers in a car. Lola endeavors to enter her apartment, but finds the door locked. Hugh flings open the door and Lola steps up to him in a semi-intoxicated condition. He points to her elaborate gown and she says defiantly: "Yes, these things are mine. They weren't bought with your money. You don't make that much in six months. You may guess bow I got them. I am through with this poverty—through with you. Good-by!" Thereupon she flounces out of the door with the intention of leaving Hugh forever. She goes straight to the apartment of her lover, who receives her with open arms.

Ruth takes charge of the deserted child, and Hugh becomes more and more impressed with the fact that they would have a hard time to get on without her, but he refrains from making love to her, as he has not sought to obtain a divorce. Meanwhile Travers begins to tire of Lola. One evening Lola is sitting in the apartment Travers has provided for her. Later Travers staggers into his apartment. He has been dining with another woman. Lola pours out the vials of her wrath upon him. Then she pleads with him for forgiveness, but he tells her that he wants to get rid of her. She leaves him. Visions of her child come to her. She turns her steps to her former home. Finding the door open, she reaches the bedroom. Toots awakens in her crib and cries out in fear. Ruth comes running in from across the hall and sees the child struggling to get from the arms of her mother. Ruth takes the child in her own arms and soothes her.

Realizing the hopelessness of her case, Lola commits suicide. At breakfast the next morning Hugh unfolds his paper and reads that a woman who has been found drowned has been identified by her wedding ring as the wife of a factory workman. He is shocked at Lola's death, but time brings surcease of sorrow and, as the days go by, he succeeds in perfecting his invention. The patents for his machine are duly granted and three captains of industry approach him with a view to purchasing all rights for it, telling him that he may make his own figure, as the machine will do the work of fifty men. Hugh asks the capitalists what will become of the fifty men and their families after they have put his machine in operation. The capitalists are unable to give him a satisfactory answer and Hugh has visions of the misery and starvation that will be caused by his labor-saving device. Thereupon he picks up a sledge hammer and demolishes his machine. Ruth looks at him with love and admiration. The capitalists depart, muttering "The fool." After their departure Ruth and Hugh speak of their love for each other.

THE TOY SOLDIER (June 27).—The cast: Toy Maker (Hal De Forrest); Toy Soldier (Martin Ferrari); Englishman (Signor Zanfretta). Written by Raymond Schrock and Dwight Cleveland. Produced by Clem Easton.

A toy maker has invented a toy soldier which he sells to a gentleman who has four sons. The toy soldier is to be sent that night. A new workman is very much impressed by the different toys displayed in the shop. He falls asleep and dreams the following dream:

In putting the toy soldier through his tricks he breaks him, and to appease the furious toy maker offers to take the place of the toy soldier until the necessary repairs are made. In a wooden box and dressed in the clothes of the toy soldier the workman is delivered to the home of the purchaser. There he is forced to do all the tricks performed by the toy soldier.

That night in trying to locate the pantry he discovers burglars entering the house. Still posing as the toy soldier, he is able to outwit the burglars and take their weapons from them. He then calls the household, who take the burglars in charge. They forgive him for his deception because of this service. In a short time a cable is received with the information that the real toy soldier is repaired and on the way. Unfortunately he wakes and finds it a dream.

THE STING OF CONSCIENCE (Three Parts—July 2).—The cast: First period. Gavin McDonald, aged 40 (Sydney Ayres); Anne, his wife (Luella Maxime); Hale McGraw, of the N. W. M. P., aged 35 (T. V. Henderson); Abbie McGraw, his wife (Dixie Carr). Second period. Gavin McDonald, aged 70 (L. M. Wells); John, his son, aged 25 (Sydney Ayres); Hale McGraw, inspector of the N. W. M. P., aged 70 (T. V. Henderson); Abbie, his daughter, aged 20 (Doris Pawn); MacPherson, of the N. W. M. P. (Harry Archer); Cherry Mellotte (Carmen Phillips).

Gavin McDonald of the wilds of the North had fallen in love with a girl from the city. After their marriage the wife persuaded her husband to give up his wild life and to enjoy the luxuries of civilization. The father's heart was set on raising his boy in the North. He had recognized the mockery of society and had often pleaded with his wife to return with him to the wilderness. She preferred the life of the city.

Hale McGraw, of the C. N. W. M. P., and his wife are friends of the McDonalds. McGraw begins to neglect his own wife and show attention to McDonald's. McGraw and McDonald's wife indulge in a love scene. Later they elope, and when McDonald learns of their act he takes his son far from the abode of women and raises him in a masculine world. McGraw and Mrs. McDonald arrive in a distant city and they realize what they have done. They determine to return and right the error, if possible. Mrs. McDonald finds her husband gone with the baby to parts unknown. McGraw's wife refuses to forgive him for the part he has played. Some time later McGraw's wife dies, leaving to his care her baby girl. He, unable to bear the sight of familiar places, gets transferred to the far North and takes charge of the post.

Far among the mountains McDonald sees his boy grow through childhood to early manhood. He is known among the trappers and traders as "John o' the Mountains." He has never seen a woman. One day in reading a magazine he sees pictures of women. He is captivated by their beauty, and the father, coming upon him, tears the magazine from his hand. John is sent to the post with the annual catch of skins and realizes quite a sum of money from their sale. He also meets Cherry Melotte, one of the inmates of the dance hall and becomes infatuated with her. She is tired of the life she leads and tries to steal the money from John, but he catches her and throws the money in her lap. Returning home, he runs into a fight between one of the N. W. M. P. and a gang of timber thieves. He brings the wounded policeman to his father's cabin. When old McDonald sees the uniform he refuses him any assistance and his son cannot understand it. The wounded policeman reaches the headquarters and turns in a report. McGraw, who has charge of the district, gathers his men together and sets out in pursuit of the bandits. Abbie, McGraw's daughter, has grown up with her father in the wilderness. She begs him to take her with him and he consents.

McDonald has told his son why he is so bitter against the M. P. It is because his wife eloped with one of them, and the boy learns why he has been kept from the sight of all womankind. Soon afterwards McGraw and his party arrive at the cabin to ask John to guide them to the haunt of the timber thieves. He meets Abbie and there is a mutual attraction between them.

and, although the father protests against his son's going, the boy is unable to resist the opportunity to be near the girl. They all reach a deserted cabin and the girl is left there, while the others set out to capture the thieves. There is a fierce battle and the leader of the thieves, seeing his men getting the worst of it, takes refuge in flight. He returns to the cabin and finds the girl. He determines to take her with him. But John, who has been watching the cabin, enters and frustrates the bad man's plan. He and the thief have a battle and John proves to be the better man. Flushed with his victory, he claims the girl as his own, won in a man-to-man fight. He is just about to carry her away when Cherry enters the cabin. She is on her way to the city, and feeling gratitude to John for the money he has given her, she tells him of the mistake he is making and he lets the girl go.

Old McDonald had followed the officers and comes upon the scene to find McGraw wounded. He has recognized the officer before, but kept the knowledge a secret. McGraw begs for water and McDonald is about to refuse when his better nature prevails and he eases the last moments of his old enemy. McGraw then tells him that his wife has always been faithful and still awaits his return. He also tells of his own wife's death and begs McDonald to care for his girl. The story ends as McDonald leaves to search for his wife. John's guardianship proves acceptable to the girl and together they build bright hopes for the future.

MUGGINS (June 30).—The cast: Jeanne (Gretchen Lederer); Seth Thorne (Norbert Myles); Muggins (Elizabeth Janes); Fred Bradley (C. Norman Hammond); Marcia (Adele Farrington). Scenario by Fred Myton. Produced by Clifford S. Elfelt.

Jeanne had been accustomed, all her life, to have whatever she desired. Seth Thorne, a man whose chief asset was a healthy body and a great longing for outdoors, had entered her life. She was attracted by his strong ways, and the two were soon married. Jeanne's sister, Marcia, a rich widow, had vigorously protested against the match.

At the time the story opens Jeanne is beginning to feel vague stirrings of dissatisfaction. Seth is still a dreamer and only works their little farm enough to get an existence out of it. Muggins, their child, is very much in love with her father and he slights his work in order to play with the child. After a particularly hard day Jeanne tells Seth that she cannot stand the poverty any longer. Her mood softens when Seth tells her that he would do anything in the world to please her, but that it seems impossible for him to make money.

Marcia decides to pay a visit to Jeanne. She sees Jeanne's dissatisfaction and pleads with her to come back to the city and enjoy the happiness which she is entitled to. Seth learns of the new arrangement and is dazed by the loss of both Jeanne and the baby. Marcia tells Seth that he has had his chance to make them happy and failed. She contrasts the life that Muggins will lead left on the farm with the many advantages she would have in a wealthy home in the city. Seth realizes the truth of what she has said and consents to let them go.

Jeanne takes up the gay life she lived before her marriage. A young doctor admires her very much and the two are together a great deal. Little Muggins is left in care of a nurse and has every conceivable toy to make her happy, but thinks more of the plain doll that her daddy made her than she does of all her new things. Her mother tells Muggins that she has no father. Jeanne is angry because the child persists in playing with the doll and throws it out the window. Muggins is put to bed and the nurse leaves to carry out a flirtation with the butler. The child misses her doll and slips out of the house to look for it. She becomes tired and, lying down in the grass, falls asleep. The searchers find her asleep, wet and bedraggled.

The days have been sad ones for Seth, and unable to tolerate it any longer he sets out for the city. The exposure has resulted in sickness to the little one. Her mother still leaves her to the nurse and her condition becomes serious. Seth, knowing that Jeanne and her sister would probably refuse to allow him to see the child, decides to sneak into the house. He prowls about until he locates what he thinks is Muggins' room, but is seen by one of the gardeners, who shoots at him. The shot strikes him in the neck and he falls among the shrubbery. The man thinks the intruder has left and Seth steathily makes his way to the window of Muggins' room. The nurse has left the room for a few minutes and Seth finds the little one very still. He takes her up and finds that she is delirious and calling for her daddy.

The young doctor and Jeanne are together, when Jeanne suddenly feels that she must go and see the child. The doctor offers to accompany her, and the two go up to the room. Seth sees them and places the child back in bed. He and Jeanne look at each other, while the doctor examines the child. Seth starts to go away, but his wound has made him very weak and he falls to the floor. Jeanne realizes that after all Seth means a great deal to her and goes to him. The doctor takes charge and realizing that Jeanne can never be his, he leaves them. A short time later the patients are both back home at the old cabin and the child is on the road to recovery.

THE MONEY LENDERS (Two Parts—July 1).—The cast: Alice Murray (Marie Walcamp); John Murray (E. N. Wallack); Jack Howard (Lee Hill); Hickman Bruce (L. C. Shumway); Bud Dorgan (Marc Fenton). Scenario by F. M. Wiltermood. Produced by Henry McRae.

John Murray, a division superintendent on the West Coast Railroad, is in serious financial troubles, as he has borrowed several thousand dollars from money lenders, has lost the funds in speculation, and is unable to pay back the borrowed amounts. His creditors appeal to the railroad officials and they notify Murray that unless he soon pays his debts he will be dismissed from his position as superintendent Murray has a daughter, Alice, just budding into womanhood, and she is an enthusiastic automobilist. On one occasion she barely averts a collision with a railroad train. The engineer of the train, Jack Howard, sees Alice's carelessness and admires her good looks. Hickman Bruce, an attorney, has long admired Alice and plans to win her as his bride, but she does not like him. Bruce meets Murray and the attorney tells him that all debts will be settled if Alice can be made to marry him.

Two shippers of explosives meanwhile, Messrs. Lytell and Brown, visit Superintendent Murray and persuade him to agree to send a trainload of explosives over the railway, secretly, as the shippers desire to evade the interstate laws. Lytell and Brown agree to pay Murray $10,000 for his work in sending the train through. Murray agrees. Bruce is attorney for Lytell and Brown and they turn over to him the agreement signed by Murray, in which document he agrees to bill the explosives as fruit. Murray tells Conductor Bangs to handle the train and pays him for his share in the matter. Bruce realizes that if the train succeeds Murray will have enough money to free himself financially and thus be able to keep Alice from him. So he employs two thugs, Bud Dorgan and Whitey Hale, to blow up the train. This is done successfully and Engineer Howard and Conductor Bangs narrowly escape death. Engineer Howard kills Whitey Hale but Dorgan escapes.

Murray, greatly alarmed over the investigation which is being conducted to fix the cause of the train disaster, visits Lytell and Brown and demands a return of the agreement, but they tell him that Bruce has the contract. Murray then asks Bruce for the agreement, but Bruce tells him that he will return the contract to him only on one condition—that he compel his daugther, Alice, to marry him. Murray confesses to Alice and she resolves to use strategy in trying to get the agreement away from Bruce. She calls on Bruce and manages to get the keys of his desk.

That night Dorgan invades Bruce's office bent on revenge for not receiving his money, and while he is there Alice creeps in and begins searching the place for the agreement. Bruce appears, surprises Alice and they struggle, their figures being silhouetted on the window blind. Engineer Howard, passing below, is alarmed and runs to the place. Dorgan shoots Bruce dead. Dorgan escapes. Howard runs into Bruce's office, sees Alice with a revolver in her hand and takes the pistol from her. She runs home with the agreement and gives the document to her father. The police find Howard in Bruce's office with the revolver in his hand and arrest him as the slayer of Bruce. Murray and his daughter read the papers the next morning and see Howard's portrait, with an account of his arrest.

Alice then determines to confess everything, as she believes herself guilty. She sets out in her auto and meets Dorgan. Dorgan, trying to get out of the path of Alice's auto leaps in front of a street car and is fatally hurt. Dying, he confesses that he slew Bruce because he would not pay him for blowing up the train of explosives. Alice goes east to try to borrow money from relations to aid her father. She meets Howard, who is on his way to take over a rich legacy just bequeathed him. They make the trip together and Howard asks Alice to become his bride, to which proposal she agrees.

GOD AND THE BABY (June 28).—The cast: William Rock (Malcolm Blevins); His Wife (Marjorie Ellison); Celia, their daughter (Zoe Durea). Scenario by Calder Johnstone.

William Rock, assistant cashier in a wholesale durg company, and his wife live happily with Celia, their little daughter, who is an invalid as the result of an accident. A well known physician advises a warmer climate, but Rock has been unable to get ahead enough to take the necessary trip. The doctor insists that the change is imperative. The privilege of advancing money to employees has been abused and the company has issued a drastic order refusing to advance money under any consideration.

William sees his wife's anxiety for the little girl and decides to make an appeal to the head of the firm. He does so and the manager tells him that they cannot make an exception in anyone's case. William is heartbroken, and that night when he returns home finds the child is much worse. To ease his wife's mind he tells her that he has a friend who has promised to let him have the money the next day. The little child, hearing the discussion, writes a little note to God, begging Him to arrange for the trip. That night William finds the note tightly clasped in her hand. The appeal strikes him to the heart and he determines to get the money if he has to go to jail for it.

It is part of William's daily duties to carry the deposit to the bank. The next day the cashier delivers to him the portfolio containing the money and he conceals it among his clothes. He stops at a 'phone booth and tells his wife that they can start the next day. He turns up a deserted looking alley, and is attacked by two thugs, who take the portfolio from him. The attack is witnessed by several people and a crowd soon gathers. William is taken back to the store and all gather about him. The portfolio is missing, but the manager discovers the money in William's pocket, and when he comes to, he thinks that his plot has been discovered. He hears the manager telling someone that Wiliam's forethought was very good, and that his hiding the money has saved it for the firm. As an expression of thanks, the manager gives William $500 and William hurries home to tell the good news to his wife and child.

TWICE AT ONCE (June 29).—The cast: The Girls (Margaret Joslin and Marcia Moore); Ernie (Ernie Shields); Janitor (Harry Todd).

Can a young man become engaged to two ladies at once? Ernie was convinced that one could not before he got into the predicament himself, but unfortunately through some unlucky incidents he found himself in this identical situation. Also unluckily, one of the ladies was rather husky and very demonstrative in her affections. He thought he might elude this lady through the help of the janitor. The idea was all right, but the execution of the plan was all wrong, and Ernie and the janitor found themselves in very unpleasant circumstances. Also the janitor got mad at Ernie in a very impolite moment. Then the fat fiancee got mad, the other girl got mad, the cops got mad, and a mysterious gentleman in a black hat got mad. In fact, every one got mad and the result was that there was almost a murder, almost a suicide, a couple of asphyxiations and a hari-kari. Nothing turned out as anybody had expected, and a perfectly inoffensive spectator fell off a high building, into the bargain.

NESTOR.

THE BROWNS SEE THE FAIR (June 26).—The cast: Henry Brown (Neal Burns); Mrs. Brown (Stella Adams); passenger (Betty Compson).

Harry Brown is given a vacation—the first one in years. He decides to take his wife and children to see the San Diego Fair. The wife has a lame back and is always complaining. That night they give the youngsters a bath in anticipation of the trip.

The next morning everything goes wrong. They have only gone a short distance when Stella discovers that they have forgotten the baby's bottle, so Neal and the baby return for it while the others wait. After looking all over the house for the bottle he finally finds it on the sink. He starts out once more, but forgets the baby, so Stella has to return for it.

They arrive at the station just as the train is pulling out, but with the assistance of several onlookers they are helped on board. Neal leaves Stella to mind the children and goes into another car, where he starts a flirtation with Betty, but this only brings trouble, for Stella comes in and takes him out by the ear.

Arrived at the fair, they start in to see the sights. Betty's sweetheart is one of the concession men. Neal is anxious to enter some of the concessions, but Stella refuses. He finally manages to break away and runs in to Betty. He invites her to have some ice cream with him, which she does, but one of the children, who has wandered away from his mother to ride on the merry-go-round, discovers his father and goes back to tell his mother on father.

Meanwhile the concessionaire has discovered Betty's duplicity and starts out after her. Stella also starts after her husband. They chase each other through the fair grounds. Stella discovers an officer and solicits his aid. They finally catch Neal, and Stella insists upon starting for home immediately, in spite of his protestations.

L-KO.

PIRATES OF THE AIR (June 28).—The cast: The proprietor (Fatty Voss); the head waitress (Alice Howell); the waiter (Phil Dunham); the bartender (Bill Bevan); secret service man (Joe Moore).

The proprietor of the Crowing Rooster Inn was a bad man, but he went one too many when he stole the airship model from the War Department, for they were on his trail immediately. The head waitress discovered the workshop where the proprietor was having the model duplicated and she was bribed not to say anything about what she saw. She started out with the bribe money to buy some gewgaws for herself, but she got in the road of a passing auto.

Unfortunately, the auto contained the young Secret Service agent. He rescued her and took her to the Crowing Rooster Inn. There he tried to get her to tell about the aeroplane in the garret. She refused and went her way, but she had a terrible dream in which she tried to secure the model with the assistance of the Secret Service man and some local cops. She awakened after a perilous trip through the air, accompanied by the Secret Service man chasing the bandits who had escaped in a fast aeroplane.

POWERS.

SAMMY JOHNSIN, MAGICIAN (Cartoon by Pat Sullivan—June 29).—Sammy's mother is making flapjacks while Sammy is fishing in the pond. She refuses his request for some when he arrives home. He finds an announcement of a magiciau's show and dreams that he has magic power. He conjures the flapjacks out of the frying pan into his mouth. He makes the duck lay him three eggs. They fly in the air and burst, letting out full grown ducklings. The pig is made to dance on his tail. Sammy conjures a dog until it is small enough to be swallowed by a frog in the pond. A pelican eats the frog. A lady artist is frightened by a big snake, but Sammy charms the serpent and it rolls away like a huge hoop. The pretty artist then kisses him, but he wakes to find that the caress comes from the tongue of a big cow.

THE CHILDREN'S PARADISE (On same reel as foregoing).—This picture shows how the children of the New York lower East Side live, eat, play and sleep. The dangers to which they are exposed in street games are graphically illustrated. The gutter games, which are all they have in the way of amusement, are shown. The over-crowded conditions of the districts are shown, and the noise is suggested so vividly that we can almost hear it. Children are seen sleeping on the fire escapes close to the elevated.

The contrast comes when the weakly city children are taken by the Christian Herald to the Christian Herald Home at Nyack-on-the-Hudson. Three thousand enjoy a ten days' outing there every year. They are bathed and given fresh clothes on arrival. They are then free to play where they will. They have enough to eat for the first time in their lives. They are provided with swings, see-saws and other forms of amusement which are safe and good for them. They are shown reveling in big dishes of ice cream. The picture closes with a group on the lawn waving flags.

SUCH IS LIFE IN CHINA (Hy Mayer Travelaugh—June 30).—This is a combination of Hy Mayer cartoons and travel pictures which go to make up a travel comedy. Architecture typical of China is shown, a pagoda, a street scene, with soldiers marching through an arch. Cartoons show how Europe taught China to hold the gun, and how China learned to drive the white man out of his country with the European gun. Cartoons caricaturing the fashions follow.

The jinrikisha is contrasted with the auto. The children are shown with their living toys, birds, fish, etc. A cartoon shows that a very good boy may some day have a rhinoceros. Market scenes and restaurants in the open air follow. Trades, the shoemaker and barber, are illustrated, with comic comments in the form of cartoons.

Chinese theater scenes come next. The interiors of the theaters are shown and the strange antics of the country traveling troupes. The music reminds Mayer of his janitor turning on the steam. The first Chinese skyscraper is shown. When the Chinese cut of their queues they freed themselves from backwardness and bigotry. A smiling Chinese face closes the picture.

JACKALS OF A GREAT CITY (Two parts—June 27).—The cast: Leila Hughes (Stella Razeto); Her Grandmother (Jeanne Hathaway); Tom Duane (Harry Carey); Clay Wimburn (Hayward Mack). Written by Harvey Gates. Produced by E. Lee Saint.

Leila Hughes is the sole support of her aged grandmother. Tom Duane, a young contractor, has become acquainted with Leila and finds much to admire in her. Aggressive with his men, Tom becomes timid and embarrassed in the presence of a woman. He has visited the house several times and the old grandmotner approves of him as a man, but not as a lover. One day she calls him to task for his timid advances and shows him a page from her diary in which she has written that she wished her lover would take her by main force and marry her. Tom believes this to be Leila's writing, and the grandmother does not tell him that it is her own diary.

Leila has another admirer in the person of Clay Wimburn. Clay's independence appeals to her to a certain extent and she finds pleasure in his company because he treats her more like a companion than a woman. Wimburn is connected with a gang of white slavers. They are clamoring for another girl. Clay has begun to love the girl, and although he has told the gang of his find, he decides not to let them have her. One evening Clay invites Leila to attend a dance with him and she promises. Shortly after Tom calls at the house and she tells him of the date with Clay. Tom upbraids Leila for going with another man. She flies into a rage and Tom determines to use force. He secures a marriage license and going to Clay's room, he forces him to telephone to Leila to meet him at a certain place. Leila thinks that this is part of the arrangement for the dance and promises. Clay is bound in his room. Tom goes for a minister to marry them.

The white slave gang have been notified that this is the night Clay will get the girl and they have a taxicab with their own driver to see that Clay carries out his part of the bargain. Tom gets into this taxi and is driven to the appointed place, where Leila is waiting. She thinks it is Clay and jumps into the car. The driver, having his own orders, takes them to the headquarters of the gang. When the taxicab arrives at the house both Tom and the girl are hustled inside before they can see what is happening. Lelia thinks that it is a plan of Tom's to force her into marriage and she tells the men that she will not marry Tom. They give her the laugh, and upon the arrival in the lighted room discover that Tom is a stranger, and attack him. He is overpowered. Leila takes one of the men's revolvers and turns out the lights and when the lights flash on again the window is seen to be open. The chief believes she has fled, so he orders two men to go up the fire escape, while the others are sent below to cut off her escape.

Leila then comes from her hiding place in a davenport and finds Tom unconscious. When Tom revives he requests Leila to marry him. She threatens to have him arrested for his joke. While they are talking, the police, who have been detailed to raid the joint, come in with their prisoners, and Tom, hearing footsteps, hides. The officers then tell Leila that she must accompany them, but Tom comes from his hiding place and holds them up. Two of the gang return and attack the officers and Tom and Leila escape in the confusion. She takes him to her home to have his bruises dressed. Tom is astounded when he finds that the diary he has based his hopes on is her grandmother's. Tom starts out dejectedly, but Leila asks him timidly if the license he has secured won't be good the next day. He can hardly believe his ears, but tells her that the best way to find out about the license will be to give it a trial.

JOKER.

BASHFUL CHARLEY'S PROPOSAL (July 1).—The cast: Charley (Charles Conklin); the widow (Gale Henry); Heinie (William Franey); Lilly (Lillian Peacock); Rev. Mr. Fish (Milburn Moranti). Written and produced by Allen Curtis.

The widow lives in a houseboat near one of the beaches. Charley is her devoted lover, but his bashfulness prevents him from proposing. She has a daughter, Lilly, who is visiting in a nearby town. She accepts Heinie subject to her mother's approval. The mother cannot see it and wires her daughter that she cannot marry the young man unless he shows her $5,000. She orders the girl home. Heinie says that he has a brother living near the widow's houseboat and that he will accompany Lilly home so as to be on the ground.

Heinie and Charley are very much alike, in fact, the only difference between the brothers is in the way in which they wear their mustaches. Charley tells of his difficulty in proposing to the widow and Heinie offers to propose for him for $5,000. Charley accepts and Henie clips his mustache to correspond with Charley's.

Rev. Mr. Fish has decided to go fishing and takes his Bible along to keep him company. He stops near the houseboat and casts his line. Heinie arrives at the houseboat and is greeted fondly by the widow, who believes him to be Charley. Heinie starts his proposal, but before he gets half way through the widow accepts and embraces him. This is too much for Heinie, but the widow, seeing the minister nearby, calls him to the boat to marry them at once. This does not suit Heinie at all, and he takes refuge in flight.

Running to the upper deck, he discovers Lilly. She does not recognize him at first, but he explains and they embrace. The preacher and the widow search for the missing bridegroom. He is discovered in the arms of Lilly. The widow tries to make him marry her, and Heinie again flies. He persuades Lilly to elope with him, and arriving at the mainland, they search for a justice to perform the ceremony. The widow grabs the minister and takes him to land also, expecting to catch the fleeing bridegroom and make him marry her.

Heinie and Lilly find a justice and the ceremony is started. The widow and the minister, seeing them from the distance, make a short cut and run into Charley. The widow still believes that it is Charley who bas caused her anguish and insists that he marry her. This just suits Charley. Heinie and Lilly return to the house of Charley, but find that Charley and the widow have followed suit. Heinie demands the $5.000, which Charley pays.

LAEMMLE.

THE HUMAN CACTUS (Two Parts—June 29).—The cast: Henry Roylance (Douglas Gerrard); Dr. Smead (Rupert Julian); Evangeline Dugan (Elsie J. Wilson); Mr. Dugan (Doc Crane). Scenario by E. J. Clauson. Produced by Rupert Julian.

Henry Roylance, an eminent sociologist, has written a book on his pet theory, and he and Dr. Smead, an intimate friend, have been discussing the book. The doctor calls him to task for several of his theories. The doctor insists that ladies and gentlemen are born and not made, and to end the controversy Roylance cites the example of the transformation from the spiked wild cactus to the cultivated spineless cactus. In spite of this evidence of the power of cultivation Smead declines to agree with him. So Roylance determines to prove his theory by selecting a specimen from the lowest walks of life and making a perfect lady out of her.

In one of the lower alleys of the city lives Evangeline Dugan. Her father is a typical loafer; her mother a ragpicker, while Evangeline sells flowers on one of the street corners. Her affections are bestowed upon one Jimmie O'Toole, a tough. Jimmie pretends to reciprocate, as it enables him to work the girl for money. Roylance and Smead find Evangeline. They try to talk with her, but when they become inquisitive she refuses to speak to them. One of the gutter snipes nearby volunteers to show the two men where the girl lives and they decide to ask permission from the girl's parents for their experiment. Dugan and his wife are quarreling as usual, but he sees their evidence of prosperity and becomes cringing and servile. Roylance makes his proposal to take the girl, and Dugan pretends that Evangeline is their sole support and speaks tearfully of the affection in which they hold Evangeline.

Arrangements are finally made and Evangeline is taken to the Roylance home. Mrs. Roylance does not like the idea of having the street urchin brought into the house. Roylance overrides her objections, however. Resentful and stubborn at first, Evangeline finally blossoms out into a beautiful woman. Roylance, winning her confidence, finds her an apt pupil, and at the end of a year she is admitted to be externally a perfect lady. According to his agreement, Roylance returns the girl to her parents and she finds the contrast almost insupportable. She again meets Jimmie, now a dope fiend, and shudders at the fate she has escaped. Her father and mother sneer at her ladylike maners, but the younger sister tries to imitate her ways. When the father finds she has no money he angrily upbraids her for returning to live on them.

Roylance and Smead talk over the experiment, and Smead is forced to admit that his friend's theory has been proved. He asks Roylance what he is going to do with the girl, now that he has made a lady out of her, and Roylance is at a loss to answer. Smead tells him that the girl can never live the old life now, and that unless she is given some assistance the experiment will be a crime instead of a success. Evangeline is on the point of being cast out when Smead arrives at her house and is met by Dugan. Evangeline is surprised to see him and he tells her that he has come to tell her something he had forgotten. Not willing to take him into the squalid room, Evangeline suggests they take a walk. The girl presses Smead for an explanation and he finally tells her that he has always insisted that they could never make a lady out of her. He confesses that he not only believes it now, but he hopes she will undertake the job of making a gentleman out of him. She accepts and the two start their plans for the future.

BASEBALL BILL (Chapter One—July 2).—The cast: Bill (Bill Mason); The Girl (Peggy Coudray); Pinpoints (O. C. Jackson. Written and produced by Billy Mason.

It is the night before the big championship baseball game between the two village teams. Bill is the star player of the Town Picks and they are depending on him to win the game. Bill is in love with one of the girls in the village and naturally tells her of his hopes of winning the game next day. The girl's father and Bill cannot get along and the father, meeting Bill that night, orders him off the place. An opera troupe has visited the village, and when they depart Pinpoints, their manager, is left stranded in the town. While Pinpoints is wandering about the village he sees the notice about the championship game the next day.

Bill's father runs a confectionery store and Bill is kept pretty busy the day of the ball game. The father cannot see the sport in playing ball and refuses Bill's request to get off. One of the women of the town phones an order for ice cream and Bill is sent to deliver it. Meanwhile the two teams have arrived on the field and Bill's absence is noted. Matters are finally straightened out and the game is started. The captain of the Town Picks sends one of his men to locate Bill. Pinpoints attends the ball game and notes that the Town Picks are being beaten. The boy sent by the manager finally locates Bill, who has had a breakdown and the ice cream is nearly melted. The woman who has ordered it arrives on the scene and the two boys take refuge in flight. They arrive at the ball park and Bill enters the game. With the addition of their star players the Town Picks give their opponents a merciless beating and Pinpoints proposes to Bill that they go to one of the large towns, where Bill will have an opportunity to develop his ability.

In order to carry out this scheme Pinpoints takes up a collection from the merchants and tells them what a wonderful advertisement it will be to their town to have it known that Bill came from there. They arrange to leave next day. Bill decides to make one more effort to win his girl. Together they set out for the minister's. Pinpoints, fearing to lose Bill, follows him. The girl's father learns of the intended elopement and makes all haste to the minister's. Bill's father, too, gets wind of the affair and hurries to swell the crowd. The different parties arrive as the ceremony is just beginning and Bill, seeing all is against him, again takes refuge in flight. Pinpoints grabs him and rushes him to the station. The train is just pulling out, but the two succeed in catching it and leaving their pursuers behind.

PEGGY AND THE LAW (June 27).—The cast: Peggy (Edith Roberts); Stanley Rose (Harry Benham); Mandy (Nellie Slattery); Judge Harkness (Frank Smith); Sheriff Perkins (William J. Welsh). Written by William Addison Lathrop. Produced by George Ridgwell.

With the death of her grandfather Peggy Sanford is left with a heavily mortgaged home and Mandy, a faithful servant. Judge Harkness, an old friend of the family, calls and tells Peggy that Stanley Rose, a city chap, has foreclosed the mortgage. Soon afterwards Stanley Rose calls at the office of Judge Harkness and requests him to take the necessary steps in the matter of the foreclosure. The judge is in a quandary as to what to do, but finally says to the sheriff: "We've known Peggy since she was a baby, but the law is the law, and you've got to put her out." The sheriff and his deputy have to perform their disagreeable duty.

Mandy exclaims: "Jess' lemme see somebody put ma honey out." The sheriff and his deputy have scarcely left when Stanley Rose arrives in person and Peggy comes demurely in to face him. Stanley has imagined Miss Sanford to be a tall old maid, probably too mean to pay anything she could avoid. He smiles pleasantly and says: "I asked for Miss Sanford, the tenant here. I suppose you must be her niece." Peggy explains that she is the only Miss Sanford, and the one against whom he has set the mighty machinery of the law in motion. Stanley assures her that the lawyer must have made a mistake, and says she must remain with him. Neither he nor Peggy give any thought to the question of propriety and they spend a delightful afternoon roaming about the place. That evening Mandy announces that it is bed time. "Run off to bed, honey," she says, "Ah found a place in de barn fo' the gemman to snooze." Peggy protests at, this, but Stanley insists that he intended to sleep there and Mandy makes him as comfortable as possible.

The next day Stanley realizes that his stay at the house would occasion gossip, so he goes to Judge Harkness and requests him to draw a lease in favor of Miss Sanford, as he is going to board in the village. Meanwhile Peggy tells Mandy that they can't stay there. Armed with a lease, Stanley starts back to the Sanford homestead, where he finds Peggy in the parlor surrounded by her most treasured possessions, including the cat, which she intends to induce him to sell to them. Stanley hastily exhibits the lease and Peggy, in her excess of joy, BLIND MAN'S BLUFF Two Parts—June 30).—The cast: John Livingston (Matt Moore); Jane Reynolds (Jane Gail); Mrs. Patter-Jones (Nellie Slattery); Butler (Howard Crampton); Matty (Matty Rupert); Andy (Andy Clark). Written and produced by Matt Moore.

Jane Reynolds, tired of society, sees an advertisement in the paper requiring the services of a young lady to take care of a helpless blind man and decides to apply for the position. Meanwhile John Livingston, a wealthy young bachelor, is induced by two young boy acquaintances to take a ride in their new auto. They are riding down the hill when they hit a tree, causing a general spill.

Mistaking John, who has on a pair of black goggles, for the blind man to whom she is going to apply, Jane assists him to his feet and walks with him to the address specified in the advertisement. John tells her she is leading him to the wrong house, as he lives next door. Thinking that there is a mistake in the address, Jane leads him to his own house. The butler is put "wise," and John continues the deception by wearing the goggles.

Jane takes care of him until one day she catches him reading a paper. Horrified at the deceit practiced on her, she upbraids John bitterly and leaves. Later the two boys are out in the woods shooting. After one of their random shots they hear a cry of pain. It comes from John, who has been shot by their carelessness, the shock causing total blindness. Not knowing what to do, the boys go to Jane and tell her what has happened. She hurries to John and again leads him home—only this time he is really blind.

The doctors are called in and they advise an operation. After the operation they tell Jane they won't know the result until morning. Jane remains in the hall all through the night and in the morning she goes at once to John's room and there she finds him already dressed. It is apparent that the operation has proved a success and as she leaves Jane says: "You won't need me now; you can see." The two boys who were the innocent cause of all the trouble have been waiting on the porch all night, and they see Jane as she leaves the house. A few moments later, when John comes out in pursuit of Jane, the boys realize the situation and after some difficulty succeed in bringing them together.

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURE.

ADVENTURES OF PEG O' THE RING NO. 7, "THE WRECK" (Two Parts—June 12).—Dr. Lund is being taken away to the police station by the detectives, although in their hearts they very much doubt the terrible accusation which Peg has made against him, that he is the head of the counterfeiting gang. In the circus train Peg recovers, and is shocked when she learns of her terrible mistake, made while under the influence of her strange and dreadful inheritance. At the station house Dr. Lund, Jr., successfully convinces the secret service men that he knows nothing about the counterfeiting gang, and there being no evidence against the gang itself, most of its members are permitted to go. Dr. Lund, Sr., and his wife, although each is working separately, are still bent upon getting Peg's letter which Flip has carried these many years. Each start out to get it in their own way, and go to the circus train to see what measures they can make. While here the gangs accidentally meet and join forces.

In the meantime Peg's pet pony, which performs a little act in the circus, has been hurt, and the trainer puts it into the stock car. After the circus performance that afternoon she goes to the car with young Dr. Lund, who has returned to her after his experience with the detectives, to see the pony. This is the opportunity which the ruffians have been waiting for, as they feel that it gives them an opportunity to get rid of Peg in a way to leave no trace. They suddenly shut the door of the car and lock it, and cut off this car from the rest of the train. Slowly they push the car from the siding on to the track, and on to a trestle, in the face of the oncoming accommodation train. Inside the car Peg and Dr. Lund, Jr., feel the car being pushed out on to the main track, and finally force an entrance in one end of the car through a window used for air. They get out on to the roof of the car in time. Seeing the accommodation train rushing upon them at full speed, and the engineer trying vainly to put on the brakes, Dr. Lund takes Peg in his arms and leaps off the roof of the car into the stream below, as we fade out.

PEG O' THE RING (Episode No. 8—Outwitted"—Two Parts—June 19).—The cast: Peg o' the Ring (Grace Cunard); Dr. Lund, Jr. (Francis Ford); Dr. Lund, Sr. (Marc Fenton); Mrs. Lund (Jean Hathaway); Marcus, the Hindu (Irving Lippner); Dr. Lund's Man (Jack Ford).

After their perilous leap into the water, Peg and Dr. Lund manage to scramble ashore. They are pursued by Marcus and his men, and they climb up onto the railroad trestle and, entering a shack, try to barricade the door. The gang breaks in, however, and a fight ensues, during which Peg makes her escape and jumps into the automobile which Marcus has left outside the shack.

Flip, meanwhile, is mourning the death of Peg, whom he imagines to have been crushed in the wrecked car. Mrs. Lund goes to the circus and talks to Flip. Dr. Lund's man has succeeded in obtaining a job as a trainer with the circus and he has the letter. He sets out to take it to his employer. His auto is chased by two bicycle cops who want to arrest him for speeding. Peg, in Marcus' auto, is also chased by the cops, who accuse her of going seventy miles an hour. Dr. Lund's man reaches the doctor's home, and stands talking to the doctor. He is just about to give him the letter when Peg, who has overtaken him, rushes in and seizes it. She goes out and is given a summons by the two cops. She asks one of them to be kind enough to keep the letter until she asks for it, which he does.

Young Dr. Lund, who has been guarded by two of the gang in the shack, overcomes one of them by a trick and leaps out of the window into the sea to go to Peg. He is shot in midair by the other, and is washed ashore, helpless and apparently drowned. Mrs. Lund, who is still on the track of the letter and thinks that Peg has it, pretends to be the girl's friend and says she will send her home in her car. She hides the men who are in her pay in the car and induces Peg, by fair words, to enter it. Peg is overpowered by the men and taken back to the shack.

Dr. Lund has jumped from the window and been shot and Peg is at the mercy of the gang. Mrs. Lund appears at the shack and Peg rashly threatens to tell the police that Mrs. Lund is the head of the counterfeiters' gang. She says that she refrained before out of consideration for the young doctor. Mrs. Lund tells her not to worry, as she will not get out of the shack. The men threaten her with ar evolver, trying to make her give up the letter, but Peg informs them that she has given it to the police. The men then tie Peg to a post in the shack and leave her. Some rats, in climbing about the shack, upset a box of matches and the flimsy wall are soon on fire. Peg is left in this terrible situation as the episode ends, with her champion, young Dr. Lund, lying apparently drowned on the beach below.

THE GENTLE CONSPIRACY (Two Parts—June 19).—The cast: Mrs. Ridgley (Louise Lester); Jessie Ridgley, her daughter and Mollie, motherless daughter of "Society Red" (Vivian Rich); John Ridgley (George E. Periolot); Bob Fillmore (Alfred Vosburgh).

Jessie Ridgley pines for the broader opportunities of city life. Her mother has been blind since the birth of Jessie. John Ridgley, the father, shields the mother in every way possible. Jessie rebels and claims they do not understand her. Her father pleads with her to remain, and her blind mother, getting an inkling of the situation, declares that she could not survive the shock if Jessie left. The mother's fear of the city is increased by the fact that Jessie's aunt disappeared in her youth in the same manner and has never returned.

Despite the efforts of Bob Fillmore, son of a wealthy neighbor, to restrain her, Jessie departs for the city. Various excuses are made to the blind mother to explain the absence of Jessie, but they fear the result of the shock when she ultimately discovers the truth. It happens that Society Red, a crook, has a motherless daughter, Mollie, whom he compels to aid him in his nefarious calling, much against her better nature.

The crooks attempt the robbery of Ridgley's house and are caught hy the detectives whom Ridgley has hired to find Jessie. Mollie is also captured, and, noting her strong resemblance to Jessie, Mollie is passed off on the blind mother as her real daughter, Jessie.

The crook, Society Red, gets a long prison term. Later Jessie is killed in an auto accident in the city and Mollie permanently takes her place in the Ridgley family. In time Bob falls in love with her and they become engaged to marry.

Sickness overtakes Society Red in prison. He makes a death-bed confession that it was he who married Jessie's aunt and it transpired that Mollie's resemhlance to the family is hecause she is really the neice of the Ridgleys. The gentle conspiracy is maintained and the knowledge of her real daughter's death is kept from the blind motber.

JERRY'S BIG HAUL (June 30).—The cast: Jerry (George Ovey); Hank (George George); Josie (Claire Alexander); her father (Jefferson Osborne); landlady (Janet Sully); butler (Rohert Kenyon); 1st cop (Gordon MacGregor); 2d cop (Harry Jackson). Directed by Miton H. Fahrney.

Jerry is unable to pay his rent and after the landlady has made her 'steenth demand he shows no uneasiness but smiles as she turns away. A moment later Jerry is confronted by the husky husband of the woman, who immediately starts action to throw the non-paying roomer out of the house. As they wrestle all over the room, Jerry hacks Hank close to a window and in a flash tbe top-heavy is flying through the space to the street below.

Two cops see Hank land on the sidewalk and then see Jerry laughing from a wiudow above. They hurry to the scene, assist Hank and then decide to "get" Jerry. One guardian of the law enters Jerry's room but is sent sprawling to the floor by a well directed blow and remains prone in a semi-conscious condition as Jerry wraps a blanket about his head. Jerry tries to make his escape from the room but is cut off by the arrival of another policeman, Hank and the landlady. He rushes hack to the room and hides. The stunned cop recovers and starts for the door, only to he knocked flat hy a rolling pin brought down on his head by the landlady who helieved that it was Jerry coming out.

During the uproar which follows, Jerry makes his escape and finds a haven in the park. He comes across pretty Josie, who is brooding because of the rude attentions of a strange man, and Jerry consoles her. Friendship ripens and Jerry is invited to the young woman's home. He gets in had there when he strikes the young woman's father during a mix-up with the hutlers, and while attempting to get out of the path of the infuriated father, he comes across two crooks who are about to blow the old man's safe. Jerry hides and awaits results.

Hank has followed Jerry and as he is prowling around the house, Jerry sees him. Suddenly there is an explosion and a strong box containing a large amount of money flies through the air and lands in Hank's hands. The crooks, frightened, disappear. The police are attracted and as they arrive at the scene, Jerry grabs Hank and the money hox and calls for help. Father, Josie and the cops arrive and Jerry turns Hank over to the police, as the would-be safe blower, and he gallantly hands the treasured strong box to the father. As the innocent Hank is taken away, Jerry is summoned by the gleeful father, who seats his daughter on one knee and Jerry on the other, to join their hands while he indicates he will give his consent to their marraige and likewise access to the box containing the wealth.

A KING O' MAKE-BELIEVE (Two Parts—July 1).—The cast: Neil Stuart (Crane Wilhur); Rufus Flint (Joseph Hazelton); Abner Flint (John Oaker); Hope Hathaway (Mae Gaston); Susie (Pearl Elmore); Mose, Neil's colored valet (O. Biglow). Directed by Robert B. Broadwell.

Hope Hathaway, motherless and fatherless, has been afflicted with a spinal disease that has prevented the use of her limhs since childhood, confining her to an invalid's chair. On his death hed Hope's father, a prosperous New England farmer, had left his daughter and her inheritance to the guardianship of his legal adviser, Rufus Flint, and had expressed a wish that she would one day marry Rufus' son, Abner. Thus he aroused the selfish ambitions of Rufus Flint and his son, who possessed the prosperous Hathaway farm. Hope is protected from their constant persecution and efforts to force her into a distasteful marriage with Abner by her faithful old colored nurse, Susie.

In the nearby village a moving picture company is working, producing a romantic drama that is to feature the famous moving picture star, Neil Stuart. While the company is lunching, Neil goes for a canter over the country roads, attired in his King's costume and riding the beautiful white charger that he uses in the picture play. In search of water to quench his thirst, he comes upon Hope as she sits in a wooded grove near the Hathaway farm, dreaming over her latest romantic novel. The hero of her novel, as he is pictured in the hook, is identical with the character of the King, for which Neil is costumed and to Hope it seems as if her hero lover had stepped in the flesh from the covers of her book to confront her. Discovering Neil's presence on the farm Rufus and Ahner attempt to expel him, but they meet with unexpected resistance and are driven away themselves.

The next afternoon the moving picture company start for the city and Neil decides to pay a farewell call to the little dreamer in the invalid chair. Finding a ready sympathizer in her hero, Hope tells him of Rufus and Ahner Flint's persecution and he gives the old colored nurse his telephone number with instructions that she should call him in case of her mistress' need.

Soon after, Rufus decides to hring matters to a speedy climax. He is a Justice of the Peace himself, so he plans to marry Hope to his son hy force. They lock Susie in the harn by a clever ruse and after procuring a license proceed to perform the ceremony, but Susie escapes, phones Neil that Hope is in trouble, and he, true to his word, hurns the road in his car to the Hathaway place. He arrives too late to prevent the ceremony and Susie tells him that Ahner has already started off with Hope on their wedding journey. Incensed at the outrage, Neil gives chase in his car and overtakes Ahner and his unwilling bride. Ahner's horses run away and the coward jumps to save his own life, leaving the crippled girl to her fate. Entrusting the steering wheel to his chauffeur, Neil leaps to the running board of his car and succeeds in stopping the runaway horses. Abner's leap for life results fatally to him, for his father finds him dead at the edge of the road.

Neil takes Hope to his mother's home and soon hy the magic of love and sclence a wonderful change is wrought. A famous specialist restores to Hope the use of her limhs and in the arms of Neil she finds her Land of Heart's Desire.

BEAUTY.

THE HOUSE ON HOKUM HILL (June 21).—The cast:—A. Archemis Edger Por (John Sheehan); the Hero of Story (John Sheehan); the Girl of Story (Carol Halloway); the Maid (Carol Halloway); the Butler (John Steppling); Gracco (John Steppling); Henchman (Dick Rosson); Valet (Dick Rossou); P. J. Dorgan of Story (John Gough).

A. Archemis Edger Por was an author, not by nature, but by contract. Alley and Street, the publishers, had just written him a letter informing him that unless his stuff assumed more originality and came in more promptly, they would have to caucel his contract, which called for one story a week. So Archemis was up against it for an idea. With a mumbled oath, he went to a secret panel in the wall and took out his "idea machine," an affair with a crank, which, when turned, would cause words to appear in the four slots. These words "sometimes" would give him an idea for a story. After two disastrous and humorous turns Archemis got a combination he liked so he sat at his typewriter and commenced churning out "The House on Hokum Hill." And as he wrote his mind visualized the action for the mechanics of the story.

The House on Hokum Hill was a mysterious affair. A weary traveler caught in the storm requested shelter from the wild eyed individual who lived there. He was granted entrance. An old man, seemingly under a spell, sat huddled in the corner. Two mean looking individuals stood in the background. Suddenly to the side there was a slight movement. A door opened and the weary traveler caught a glimpse of a beautiful girl, but the wild eyed individual quickly thrust her back and suggested that the weary traveler go to his room.

The two mean looking individuals escorted him there, and then locked him in. The weary traveler wondered, and tried to fathom the meaning of the mean old man, the beautiful girl and the wild eyed villain. Soon he heard sobbing and crying and put his ear to the floor. He heard the girl plead with the villain and beg him to desist. Then the traveler realized the purport of it all. The feeble old man was Dorgan, the millionaire; the girl was his daughter; and the villain was Gracco, the crook hypnotist.

So the traveler decided to rescue the girl and her father. He went quickly to the window, crawled out upon the drain pipe, and braving the storm slid to the window below. He assured the girl of his friendliness, so she left him in. But while they were bundling the old man up for escape, they were heard by the villain, who sprung a trap letting the girl and the traveler into a dungeon. The villain takes care of the old man and laughs as he sets a motor in motion. Slowly the ceiling of the dungeon draws down upon the unfortunate ones. It seems nothing can save them, but * * * Here Archemis is stuck for an ending. He cannot devise a means to save his heroine and hero. He rushes to his idea-machine, but it fails him. Archemis goes out of his mind and raves. Soon he has the solution. He resolves that he shall save them! So with sword and tomahawk he rushes out to find the House on Hokum Hill. He is taken in charge by two guardians of the law who realize that the poor thing is out of its mind and they lead him away. So we learn how A. Archemis Edger Por went out to extricate his heroine and hero from a predicament into which he had written them, but from which he could not "write" them out.

THE DAY'S WORK (June 25).—The cast: Willoughby Hubbard (Orral Humphrey); Bess Hubbard, his wife (Lucille Ward); Kathleen (Mollie Shafer); Mr. Merrill (Joe Massey); Mrs. Merrill (Madeline Fordyce).

Willoughby Hubbard is an author, with long hair and high brow. He is an unpractical man attempting to write practical advice for practical people. The picture shows how ingloriously he fails. His wife is an extremely practical woman who has never been able to square herself with her relations for marrying the author.

As the story opens he is carrying a package of proofs to his table and shuffles them out of order. Before he can get them rearranged in order, he hunts for a match, notices that the clock has stopped and starts to look for the key. While so engaged he upsets a plaster bust, the gift of his wife's Aunt Mildred, breaking it. His wife rushes in to have him button up her back and in an absent-minded way he hands her the broken bust, throwing her into a fit of tears.

Just here a messenger arrives with a telegram informing them that Aunt Mildred is on the road, coming to spend the afternoon. The maid brings the glue to mend the bust, and hurly burly immediately begins to place the house in readiness for the aunt's visit. Poor Willoughby spills the glue on his proof sheets, notices about the same time that the hat rack is leaning and needs repairs, starts to fix that, remembers the cast, goes back to it, goes away to wash his hands, forgets to do it, and starts struggling again with the hat rack. The entire reel is full of just such incidents, one closely following another rendering the house a perfect bedlam of excitement and disorder by the time Aunt Mildred arrives.

Finally as the guests arrive and are shown into the library and the water is trickling down like rain, the irrepressible Willoughby caps the climax by remarking innocently "what a damp fall we're having." The whole ceiling is precipitated on their heads and the scene closes with Willoughby sitting disconsolately on the cellar steps, and settling gradually down pulling the cellar door down above his head.

MUTUAL MASTERPICTURE

THE ABANDONMENT (American—Five Parts—June 15).—The cast: Dr. Edmund Stewart (E. Forrest Taylor); Benson Heath (Harry Von Meter); Emily Thurston (Helene Posson).

Dr. Edmund B. Stewart, a talented young physician, is bending all his energies to the building up of a reputation and practice. He is engaged to marry Emily Thurston, an heiress, reputed to be wealthy. Miss Thurston's father and the circle in which they move, congratulate Emily on a match with such a talented and successful man.

Emily does not agree in the opinion. Though she loves Stewart devotedly, she suffers the breaking of many social engagements because of Stewart's loyalty to his practice, and her injured pride constantly rebels. In one of these moods, Benson Heath, an idler, who has recently lost heavily in the stock market, takes advantage of Emily's wounded dignity, and induces her to break off her engagement with Stewart and become engaged to him.

The announcement of the marriage is the final blow to Stewart's seriously overworked constitution. On the advice of his physicians to seek the open for his health, he takes to the country. Despairing of relief from his secret sorrow, he notices two tramps apparently happy, and, tearing off collar and tie, plunges into a monadic career on the open road, a king among them all. Later he joins the tramps who relieve him of the balance of his money and leave him in reality a tramp.

Six months later, Thurston dies leaving no fortune, to Heath's anger and disgust. Heath pases a check on an overdrawn account, gambles the money and slips away with Emily to avoid arrest. They turn up at a lonely house in the West. While Heath is absent one day, a bunch of tramps pitch camp near Emily's home. Two tramps enter the house to ramsack and steal. They hear Heath returning, drunk, and they hide in a closet. Emily takes the bottle away from Heath. He turns upon her in fury. The tramps open the closet door slightly and gaze in horror at the scene. As Emily is being slowly choked to death, one of the tramps rushes out of the closet, struggles with Heath, whose gun is discharged, and Heath falls dead.

The tramps flee. The sheriff catches them. Stewart rushes up from the camp, turns the dead man over, recognized him, identifies Emily, who is still in a faint, and to prevent her arrest by the sheriff and not knowing the circumstances, he takes the blame for the killing. She recovers from the faint, declares that Stewart is not the man who was struggling with her husband, recognizes him, then falls into his arms and while he is being released by the sheriff sobs out her real love on his shoulder, while the sheriff retires in the conviction that the dead man got only what he deserved.

Percival Cadwallader Perkins was so bashful that whenever a woman would look at him he would blush like a beet, and this brought the "Happy Family," the cowboys of the Flying U, to calling him "Pink."

Seeking real atmosphere, the Climax Motion Picture Company comes to the West. In search of some strays, Pink from a distance sees a woman struggling fiercely with a man, and dashes to the rescue. He tears the man from the girl, and kicks him down a small bluff. And then he finds that he has interrupted the filming of a moving picture scene. Jackson, the director, calls Ruby, the leading woman aside, and tells her to make love to Pink and keep him hanging around, that it would be a good thing to have him working in the pictures.

Ruby certainly succeeds so well that in a short time Pink proposes to her. She, too, has fallen in love, but she tells him that she is already married, but that her husband had treated her so brutally that she left him.

A stage-coach hold-up is arranged. But two crooks overhear their plans and conclude to take a hand themselves. The stage is stopped, and the passengers get out and line up, all thinking it is but a movie stunt. From a distance Pink watches, his cue being to rush in when a shot is fired. But when he makes a run towards the scene, a bullet from one of the men clips his ear. He rides to them, and furiously upbraids them for using real cartridges when they are only supposed to use blanks. For reply, one of the crooks knocks him down, and grabbing Ruby, they throw her into the stage, and the driver is ordered to move along.

Down the road a little farther the moving picture company is waiting. But the stage passes them on the run, and then it develops that a real hold-up has been perpetrated. Inside the stage Ruby is held by one of the crooks, who unmasks, and she recognizes her husband. While on the top of the stage-coach the other crook and the driver are in a fierce fight. Pink and the cowboys give chase to the stage, which is fast approaching a broken bridge. Pink manages to pull Ruby from the stage just as it goes over a cliff. The crooks are both killed, and now that she is free, Ruby gladly consents to marry Pink.

VOGUE.

RUFFHOUSE (June 20).—The cast: Head Nurse (Alice Neice); Popular Nurse (Madge Kirby); Star Patient (Arthur Travars); New Patient (Rube Miller). Scenario written by Thomas Delmar. Produced by Rube Miller.

A policeman tries to kiss a nurse girl and pushes the baby carriage away. The carriage rolls down the street and hits Rube. Then he goes to the hospital. When he regains consciousness he finds an awful looking nurse at his bedside. He starts to leave the hospital, but stops when he sees Madge, who is attending to Art, the star patient. Rube tries to get the attention of Madge and angers Art. This starts a fight which takes the whole hospital force to quiet.

In the meanwhile the porter of the hospital gives one of the patients a drink of an antiseptic wash, then laughs at his spitting it out. The patient attacks him, and when he is rescued by the doctors, to protect himself, he blames the whole thing on an innocent party.

This causes the innocent party to be ordered out of the hospital. He, smarting under the injustice of it, returns with a bomb. Rube takes it away from him and puts it under Art's bed. Art sees it and throws it back at Rube. The bomb is finally forgotten by Art and Rube when they start to fight, but the bomb soon explodes and blows up the ward.

THE IRON MITT (June 25).—The cast: Bill (Paddy McGuire); Boggie (Ben Turpin); The Iron Saw (Jack Gaines); The Multi-billionaire (Ed Laupie); His Daughter (Rena Rogers); The Detective (Arthur Moon).

Montmorency Jones, a multi-billionaire, receives a warning from the Iron Saw, which states that unless the Octopus fifty-fifties his fortune, and lets his evil pursuer marry his daughter, he can expect naught but vengeance from the Iron Saw.

Frightened, the billionaire confides in his daughter's sweetheart, Moon, who is a young detective. He swears he will capture the Iron Saw, and with this purpose in view he leaves the house. Jones and his daughter, Rena, then go to collect rents from their property, and while receiving them from the janitor in the hallway of a dingy building they own, they hear a fight in a room. This fight is taking place between Bill and Bloggie, who are washing and playing solitaire respectively.

Jones, incensed because he got the worst of it from Bloggie, orders him off the premises and turns him out homeless in a cold, cruel world. Bloggie swears he will revenge himself, and when Moon is chasing the Iron Saw and his tools, Bloggie steals a bottle of fluid which he thinks is whiskey, and drinks it. This fluid is what has caused the Iron Saw to change his hand into so deadly a weapon, and taking like effect on Bloggie, he resolves to use his transformed hand in wreaking vengeance on Jones.

He gets into the house to learn that Bungling Bill has been hired as a butler to protect Jones. Underneath the dining room table Bloggie performs while Jones and Rena are at dinner, with Bill getting the worst of it. The Iron Saw escapes from Moon, and comes to the house after Bloggie has been discovered. Seeking refuge in Jones' bedroom, Bloggie saws off the combination lock and hides in the safe. Bill finds the fluid, thinking it is whiskey, drinks some, only to have Bloggie lose his deadly weapon and Bill assumes it.

Bill is thrown in the safe, and with his iron saw starts to saw his way out through the back, when the original Iron Saw gets the fluid and drinks it, with the result that Bunglin Bill's hand is caugbt in the crack of the safe he has been sawing. Events follow in which the safe has to be dynamited by the police to release Bill's hand. While preparing to do this, they decide to throw Bloggie in that he might experience the rising sensation of being dynamitcd. The safe is blown up, but the two lovable rogues escape with only bruised anatomies and tattered clothes, while the Iron Saw is captured. Bill and Bloggie are seen speeding away in the distance.

THE SECRET OF THE SUBMARINE (Episode No. 4—Two Parts—June 12).—The cast: Lieut. Jarvis Hope (Thomas Chatterton); Cleo Burke (Juanita Hansen); Olga Ivanhoff (Hylda Hollis); Hook Barnacle (George Clancy); Satsuma (William Tedmarsh); Gerald Morton (Lamar Johnstone).

This chapter opens with Lieut. Hope and Cleo accosting Dawson, owner of the auction room, standing before his once flourishing business watching the building go up in smoke. As Hope is copying the list of bidders of the books from notes in the hand of Dawson, the auctioneer points out Satsuma to them as one who obtained a copy. Without further delay Satsuma jumps into a waiting taxicab. Hope, Cleo and "Hook" follow in another car, tracing him to the home of Stephansky, a bomb maker.

Meanwhile, Olga, the Russian spy, and Gerald Morton, who, like her, seeks the secret of the submarine, are speeding toward Stephansky's home. Satsuma manages to get through the traffic jam while Hope and Cleo are halted by the policeman. However, through "Hook's" strategy, they manage to get away. Olga's intoxicated driver, turning a corner, plunges his machine into the car in which Morton is a passenger. The occupants face each other.

Hope and Cleo manage to get away from the traffic policeman. When Satsuma arrives at Stephansky's, he sees Olga and Morton entering. He hides in the shrubbery. Hope and Cleo drive up in a few minutes. Morton sees them through a window. Olga recognizes Stephansky as one of her aides and exchanges signals with him. Morton, begging to be hidden, confesses to Olga he is after the secret and—the girl. She secretes him and instructs Stephansky so that when Hope and Cleo knock at the door she is told to return alone that night.

She goes alone to the house and is immediately seized and efforts made to make her reveal the secret of the submarine. Morton and Olga, having perused the books purchased by Stephansky, have failed to find the secret therein. They believe Cleo knows, so Morton, masked, enters the room, and he and Stephansky bind Cleo, place her in a cellar and tell her she will remain a captive until she discloses the secret.

Hope and "Hook" go to Stephansky's. The lights are extinguished and the lieutenant, his suspicions now confirmed, breaks in the door. Stephansky leaps upon Hope and Morton seizes a bomb. Stephansky grasps Morton's wrist. The bomb falls through the secret door in the floor and into the cellar where Cleo lies bound. There is a terrific explosion and the house is blown up.

THE SECRET OF THE SUBMARINE (Episode No. 5—Two Parts—June 19).—A few seconds before the bomb hurled by Morton, fell into the cellar where Cleo lay bound, she was dragged to safety through a secret passageway by Hook, who had been prowling around on the outside. Cleo and Hook find Lieut. Hope just recovering consciousness. Olga and Gerald escape uninjured. Stephansky is killed. Satsuma witnesses the explosion. Hope, Cleo and Hook make a quick examination of the book which Stephansky had purchased. While it was one of the Burke books, it is not the right book. All the conspirators hear this. The next name on the list is that of Mrs. Del Marr, wife of the British Consul at San Francisco. All make haste to reach her. Mrs. Del Marr bought the books for her nephew, who is out of the city, but expected back that night.

Mrs. Del Marr's secretary is Fedor, secret agent in the employ of Olga, who arranges for invitations to Olga and Morton. Lieut. Hope has already received an invitation and Mahlin is among those present disguised as a servant. Olga recognizes the Del Marr home as a former rendezvous of Russian spies. She shows Morton and Fedor various secret passages. One passageway open into the reading den. Hook is prowling around on the outside. Mrs. Del Marr tells Hope and Cleo the books are in her den. The conspirators hear this. Mahlin begins a quick perusal of the books. Olga and Morton from the secret passageway see him and are puzzled by his action.

Mrs. Del Marr, Cleo and Hope start to the reading room. Mahlin hears them coming and jumps behind a bookcase dropping, the two much-sought books on the floor. Olga, from the passageway, turns off the lights in the room. Hope turns them on. Francois, who had been reading in the den, is found unconscious on the floor, where Mahlin laid him low. Mahlin, fearing discovery, dons a black mask. Cleo sees Mahlin crouching behind the book case. She screams and Mahlin and Hope struggle. They fight desperately through the room and out into the hall. A mysterious hand reaches through the panel and gets the two books on the floor. Hope and Mahlin battle down the long staircase into the guests in the ball room.

THE SECRET OF THE SUBMARINE (Episode No. 6—Two Parts—June 26).—Mahlin disappears after the melee in the Del Marr home. Barnacle has the books. Has Cleo won? The suspense is not long, for the books do not contain the great secret. The conspirators set out on the trail of one, Fitzmaurice, who, Hope learns, has gone to Point Sierra Light. He, with Cleo, charters a launch. Olga and Morton, with Sextus, do likewise.

Hook, left by Hope, hides on Olga's launch. Satsuma learns the government has mined the channel. He and Mahlin board the express to make the trip overland. Hope narrowly misses a mine. As his launch reaches the light, he sees a launch following, blown up. This is Olga's launch. She and Morton cling to the wreckage. Hook rides safe on a locker. Sextus is drowned.

Hope learns Fitzmaurice has gone to Santa Cruz Island. He and Cleo promptly follow, despite warnings from the keeper. Satsuma and Mahlin reach the light to discover Hope and Cleo eluded them. Overpowering the keeper, they shut off the light. Hope, out at sea, turning to take his reckoning, discovers the guiding light out.

THE PHANTOM (Ince—Five parts—July 2).—The cast: "Phantom" Farrell (Frank Kennan); Avice Bereton (Enid Markey); Crabbe (Robert McKim); James Blaisdell (P. D. Tabler); Doctor Ratcliffe (Charles K. French); James Bereton (J. Eerney Sherry); Bertie Bereton (Jack Gilbert). Directed by Charles Giblyn.

"Phantom" Farrell was known as one of the cleverest crooks in the world, with a pencnant for jewel robberies. He planned to attend the Bereton ball and steal a famous necklace which the knew the daughter would wear. Chance makes it possible for Farrell to gain admittance to the Bereton mansion before the night of the ball, in the guise of a detective, and it happens that he meets the young woman whom he has planned to rob. Farrell is so attracted by her beauty and winsomeness that he falls in love and decides not to steal the necklace.

At the ball the necklace really is stolen and Mr. Bereton, the owner, immediately asks "The Phantom" whom he knows only as a detective to find the thief and locate the jewels. "The Phantom" has observed the intimacy between Bertie Bereton, the son of the household, and one of the guests, a Dr. Ratcliffe. He finally forces Bertie to confess to him that Dr. Ratcliffe is really a noted race track gambler who has forced him to aid in the theft of the necklace in order to square certain gambling debts which he holds against him.

Dr. Ratcliffe has already made his escape from the house, but "The Phantom" overtakes him at the railroad station and compels him to return to the house where, with the assistance of his valet, he recovers the valuables. In addition, he forces the gambler to give up all claims on the young man.

The arrival of the real detective whom "The Phantom" is impersonating and three others, complicates matters for that worthy, and he would have been caught immediately had not Bertie warned him of their approach. The escape of "The Phantom" and his valet is effected only after a series of stirring adventures, but it is finally accomplished and as the pursuers dash off down the road, "The Phantom" and his faithful valet emerge from behind a hedge and start a long walk back to town. The valet upbraids his master for his weakness in not actually stealing the jewels himself, but "The Phantom" remembers the beautiful girl whom he has made happy by his success in restoring the necklace and he walks along the dusty road perfectly happy with himself.

CASEY AT THE BAT (Fine Arts—Five parts—July 2).—The cast: Casey (De Wolf Hopper); His Sister (Kate Toncray); His Daughter (May Garcia); Hicks (Carl Stockdale); Judge Blodgett (William H. Brown); His Daughter (Marguerite Marsh); Her Sweetheart (Frank Bennett); the Politician (Robert Lawler); Casey's Brother-in-Law (Bart Hadley); the Doctor (Hal Wilson); Casey's Admirer (Frank Hughes). Directed by Lloyd Ingraham.

Casey lives with his sister and works in Hicks' general store and post office. The greatest thing in his life is his love for his little niece. To the people of Mudville, Casey is a hero because of his ability to win ball games for their team. Casey is a slugger of world-wide renown, but off the ball field his uncouth ways deprive him of the friendship of any but a half-wit, who follows him around, and the little children to whom he is a hero.

Casey develops a love for Angevine, daughter of Judge Blodgett, but she is in love with Bert Collins, who has just returned from college and has been engaged as a pitcher for Frogtown, Mudville's greatest rival for baseball honors. In the meantime Hicks takes to robbing the mails. Casey becomes suspicious of him and about the time he finds evidence of Hicks' guilt, a stranger comes to town. The second game of the big series between Mudville and Frogtown goes to the latter because Casey, who has burned his hands at a country dance where he carried out an oil lamp that exploded, cannot play. But the final game arrives and Casey is ready.

Bert is up against it because Angevine's father has told him he must he ahle to show $2,000 before he can hope to win his daughter. He gets his mother to mortgage their home and with the money she lends him, he hets with Hicks on the final game. Just before game time, Casey sends word he can't be there because his little niece has fallen from a tree and is dangerously hurt. Hicks is in despair and rushes to Casey's house, only to be kicked out. In the meantime Frogtown forges ahead and the crowd yells for Casey.

Casey finally consents to go and leaves the half-wit to watch at the little girl's hedside. He reaches the grounds in the last half of the ninth inning. Mudville is two runs hehind; there are two out and two on hase. Casey goes to bat. Just at the moment when the pitcher is getting ready to throw the third strike, for Casey always allowed two strikes to be called, the half-wit enters the grounds. Casey sees him, thinks the little giri is dead and strikes out.

But the little giri is hetter; her father, who has heen away, returns. Angevine is happy with her lover; the town turns on Casey as a fallen hero and with nothing to hold him, he packs his effects in a iittle hundle and trudges down the railroad tracks away from the town that has been his home aif the years of his life.

Mimi, a foundling, is taken from the convent to an inn kept by M. Ducros. At the inn she receives forced attentions from one of the guests, and Rudolphe Durandin, nephew of the wealthy M. Durandin, administers swift punishment. Rudolphe and his uncle quarrel hitterly, owing to the young man's refusal to marry Madame de Rouvre, a wealthy widow and friend of his uncle.

After quarreiing with his uncle, Rudolphe meets some residents of the Latin Quarter of Paris. In their mode of living, he sees his ideal life, and in Mimi, his ideal woman. Rudolphe again meets Mimi, as his neighbor, and falls in love with her. Musette and Marcel, a painter, are separated hy a rich young Viscount, for whom Musette deserts Marcel. Musette meets Mimi and introduces her to a rich young man, but Mimi remains loyal to Rudolphe, although he is lead to helieve otherwise, and in a rage leaves her.

Rudolphe's uncle has learned of his infatuation for Mimi and the uncle writes a letter to Mimi informing her that she is ruining Rudolphe's chances in life. Mimi, after Rudolphe's desertion, still remains loyal to him, helieving that the uncle is the cause. During the progress of a ball given hy Madame de Rouvre, attended hy Rudolphe and Marcel, Mimi, weary and hungry, accidentaliy finds herself in front of her home. She is discovered by Schaunard and encounters Madame de Rouvre, who tells the giri that she will ruin the position of Rudolphe. Mimi runs away, determined to end it all, hut before she can do so, she is taken to a hospital.

Before she has recovered, Mimi recalls what she heard at Madame de Rouvre's, and knows that Rudolphe still loves her. Feeling that life will not he iong for her, she makes her way to the old home where she had heen so happy with Rudolphe. Musette, returing to Marcel, finds Mimi and hrings the four men to see her. Combined, they have sufficient money to buy her the necessary medicine, so each determines to raise the money himself. They also try to please Mimi with a muff for which she has always yearned, to keep her hands warm.

Rudolphe goes to his uncle; Marcel takes his painting to a pawnhroker where he meets Schaunard, who parts with his horn and favorite pipe, while Collins pawns his few heloved books. They raise enough to buy the muff and return to the room, to find Rudolphe and his uncle and Madame de Rouvre, who have repented and are sorroy for their selfishness. Mimi passes away in the midst of her loyal friends with the realization that Rudolphe has always loved her and that her dearest friends gave their little to make her happy at the end.

The RADIUM GOLD FIBRE Is the Screen for You!

The claims we make for Radium Gold Fibre Screens are not vastly different from those made for a score of other advertised projection surfaces—there is, however, a vast difference in the way RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREENS make good.

"The Radium Gold Fibre is the Screen for You" because hundreds of exhibitors the country over have tried it out and found it "the Screen for Them." You don't have to buy merely on the recommendation of the manufacturer—the experience of others before you is an asset in your favor. In most theatres where the projection is worth being talked about you'll find a Radium Gold Fibre Screen on the receiving end.

lionaire owner of the oil field, to a realization of the wrongs imposed upon the workers. She arrives at a time when John Jameson, the millionaire's son, who has glimpsed the light of uplift, is vainly pleading with his father to listen to his plans for the betterment of the workers' conditions. Jane is compelled to force her way into the Jameson mansion during the progress of a bal masque given in aid of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

She accosts William Jameson in his study and, wild with anger and further maddened by the millionaire's gibes, she tries to kill him and is arrested by detectives. Although she and young Jameson have not met, the latter is instrumental in obtaining her release.

Jane goes back to the workers and a secret strike is formed, Jane being the ring-leader. They determine to fire the wells to teach Jameson a lesson. It is at this time that John Jameson, the son, comes to the oil wells to investigate conditions. His identity is not known by anyone except the superintendent.

Morgan, the ring-leader of the workers, is in love with Jane, and on the eve of the firing of the wells he learns of Jameson's identity by breaking into his cottage. It is this same even- that young Jameson, to save the property, goes to Jane and confesses his identity and pleads with her to help him save the property. Jane is in a quandary. She has fallen in love with the man, whom she believed to be a workman, and he with her. Finally, when she goes to the meeting place of the strikers and pleads with them to hold off, Morgan, who has just broken into Jameson's hut, rushes in, and accuses her of being a traitor.

There is a fight. They trample over Jane and rush to the wells. Jane, realizing that they will turn to her unsuspecting lover and try to kill him, drags herself to him and just in time throws herself in front of him as the strikers rush to kill him. However, John Jameson bares himself to the strikers, asks them to listen to him and proves to them that he is there on their behalf. He then goes to his father and forces him to give in to the strikers, and all ends happily.

KERNEL NUTT FLIRTS WITH WIFIE (Vitagraph—June 26).—The cast: Kernel Nutt (Frank Daniels); Mrs. Nutt (Alice Washburn); A Thespian (Henry Kooper). Author, Beryle Caton. Director, C. Jay Williams.

Prunes, prunes, delicious prunes, you are known on all boarding house tables in the wide world, but never before have you been known to be the cause of breaking up a happy home. Just because one of the boarders got two more prunes than himself, Nutt thinks his wife, keeper of the house, is flirting with the roomer, and determines to track her and make sure. Nutt's wife has never seen his handsome face, which is shrouded in shrubbery, so he decides to remove the ambush and expose his visage to the ravages of the merciless winds, in order to further his end. He tells wifie that he is going to another town on business, but really goes to the barber instead. Sans whiskers, he returns to the house, where, unfortunately for his scheme, wifie recognizes him immediately, and determines to turn the tables on him. She starts a flirtation with him, and poor Nutt does not know whether to be happy that his manly beauty has attracted her, or sad that his wife is unfaithful. Then, the star boarder, an actor, is "tipped off" by Mrs. Nutt and decides to help her out. Dressed in a pair of whiskers such as formerly adorned Nutt's countenance, he enters, accuses the real Kernel of flirting with his wife, and kicks him out of the house. Nutt's protests are of no avail, and he must now stay out of the house until he can regain his lost facial adornment.

WINIFRED THE SHOP GIRL (Vitagraph—Five Parts—June 26).—The cast: Winifred Childs (Edith Storey); Peter Rolls (Antonio Moreno); Ena, Peter's Sister (Lillian Burns), Peter Rolls, Sr. (John Costello); Mrs. Rolls (Mrs. Soule); Lord Rayglan (Harold Foshay); Eileen (Marion Henry); Madame Nadine (Josephine Earle); Lily (Clara McCormack); Sadie (Emily Leaske); Megeison (Thomas Mills); Floorwalker (Eddie Dunn). Mr. Van Brunt (Templar Saxe). Authors, C. N. and A. M. Williamson. Produced by George D. Baker.

model, whom he met on board the steamer returning from Europe, is discouraged by his sister, Ena, who is more ambitious for him. Peter is the son of Peter Rolls, the wealthy New Yorker. Ena tells Winifred that Peter is engaged to Eileen, sister of Lord Rayglan, and that he is just trifling with her. Winifred believes her and refuses to speak to him. Before disembarking, Ena gives Winifred a stylish gown which she bought.

In New York, Winifred is working in a stylish modiste's shop. One of the best customers insults her and she slaps his face. Mme. Nadine, the modiste, sees her action, and fearful of losing the customer, discharges her. She tries to get a position in the other shops, but in each case finds herself blacklisted by Madame Nadine.

In sore straits, she moves to cheaper quarters. She meets Lily, a salesgirl in Roll's department store, and the former takes her to Megeison, the store manager to get her a position. The manager, at first says he has no opening, but when he sees what a handsome girl Win is, he employs her. Ena Rolls comes to the store to do some shopping, and sees Winifred against whom she harbors a dislike. She makes various remarks calculated to arouse Win's anger, and when Win resents them she complains to Megeison, who pretends to discharge her. When Ena leaves, he tells her that she may remain and transfers her to another department.

Megeison arranges a party for that night at which Winifred, Lily, a floorwalker and himself are to be present. Megeison tells the floorwalker to escort the girls to the party, but to keep them ignorant of the fact that it is to be held at his house. Winifred dons the dress Ena gave her, the only decent gown she posseses. They start off—but when Winifred sees that she is being taken to his apartment she tries to back out, but she is persuaded to continue by Lily.

Meanwhile, Peter in his hunt for Winifred, gets a clue which leads him to the department store. Here he learns that she has been discharged and is told that Megeison could give him her address. In Megeison's apartment, all drink except Winifred and after a while, she feels sheepish and drinks with them. She catches Megeison trying to "dope" her drink and denounces him. He catches her and tries to kiss her and a struggle follows in which her dress is badly torn, the pieces falling on the floor. She manages to elude him and escapes to another room where she locks herself in. Peter enters and asks for information about Winifred, but Megeison tells him that he knows nothing about her. Then the pieces of Winifred's dress catch his eye and he demands to know the truth. Megeison's valet, who went through another room to admit him, opens the door and Peter sees Winifred within. Winifred shrinks from Peter, thinking he is in league with Megeison, but when she realizes that he really loves her and has come to claim her for his own, she leaves misery behind, and goes with Peter, her suffering relieved in the knowledge of his devotion.

THE PURPLE LADY (Rolfe Photoplay, Inc.—Five Parts—June 19).—The cast: Silas Gilworthy (Ralph Herz); Count Louis Petelier (Alan Hale); Mr. Severn (Howard Truesdell); Detective Rogers (George Pauncefote); Jules Bergere (Guido Colucci); Adelaide Severn (Gretchen Hartman); Mrs. Severn (Mrs. William Bechtel); Mrs. Rogers (Cora Williams); Fifi Melotte (Irene Howley).

The Uplift Society, with Silas Gilworthy at its head, plans to rid the city of the pernicious influence of the dance parlors. The worst of these is said to be the Purple Lightning Tango Parlor, so-called because of its peculiar light effect. Here the famous dancer, Fifi Melotte, is the star entertainer and leading spirit.

Detective Rogers, a friend of Gilworthy's, offers to show him the place and its iniquities, so thinking to aid "the cause," he goes. However, he is an easy victim to Fifi's innocent ways, assumed for the moment, and comes more than once to see her, without the escort of the Uplift Society. The tango parlor is raided, and Fifi and "Uncle Silas," with difficulty, escape a visit to the police court. They "do" Coney Island and have their pictures taken together in a loving pose.

Silas is engaged to the wealthy Adelaide Severn, and their marriage is soon to take place. Adelaide is being besieged by the attentions of a bogus Count, who is a friend of Fifi's. The Count has stolen a necklace of matched pearls and given them to Fifi for safe-keeping. Fifi in turn has slipped the meshbag in which she has placed them in Silas' pocket, fearing the police. Adelaide and her mother see the woman's meshbag on Silas' desk and ask for an explanation. Not knowing what else to do, he tells his fiancee it is his wedding present to her.

Fifi comes to the Severn home, where the wedding is to take place, to demand the return of the bag and blackmail him with the loving picture. Silas introduces her as Mrs. Rogers, the wife of his detective friend who has written she cannot come. But complications follow immediately, when Rogers himself arrives on the trail of the Count, whom he suspects of having the necklace, soon followed by Mrs. Rogers. The necklace is stolen from Adelaide's neck, and the person nearest her, whom Rogers has to lock up for safe-keeping, is his own wife.

Both Rogers and Silas go to Fifi's room in search of the pearls. Fifi screams, the entire household enters, and Rogers and Silas make a hasty exit. Silas tries to hide in a kimono in the closet, and is discovered. But the pearls are in the hem of the kimono, and the Count tries to snatch it after Silas has taken it off. Rogers arrests the Count, confiscates the pearls in the name of the government, and Adelaide and Silas, forgiving and forgetting, prepare to keep step to the wedding march.

PIEDMONT FILM CO.

THE MIRROR OF LIFE (Five parts—June). The story deals with a young boy who is born of rich parents, but who becomes incorrigible through his associates in school. During school recess there is a fist fight for leadership of the band of school boys. Tom defeats the bully and becomes the idol of all the boys. The fact that he is idolized by all leads him into the ways of the underworld. During a sight-seeing trip through the dives, he sees a tough about to strike a girl and goes to her aid, only to find that his interference is not wanted. He is struck in the face by the one he is about to protect.

In the fight which ensues, Tom is arrested. In the meantime Tom's mother receives a letter from her husband, who is in Europe on a pleasure trip, stating that it would be advisable to send Tom to college. The letter arrived too late, however, as Tom is about to be sentenced for his infractions of the law. Tom's associates go to a ward heeler, one who depends on the gang at election time, asking him to assist Tom from going to jail. The ward heeler visits the judge, who drives the politician out of his chambers.

Tom serves his sentence. On his release he is met by "Agnes," who has taken a liking to him and who thinks that she can reform him through marriage. But Tom's liking for the underworld life leads him back to the dives which he frequented before his term in prison. He finds that there is another leader who has taken his place and who has become jealous of Tom on account of the love that Agnes shows towards him.

A fight starts, and Tom and Agnes make their escape when the police break into the place. Agnes' entreaties finally win Tom over to get him away from the crowd and to lead a better and nobler life. Tom finally consents to marry Agnes and to give up his low life. He gets employment in a factory. Meantime Agnes goes to Tom's folks and asks for forgiveness, but the father is obdurate and cannot forget the disgrace his son has brought on the family name. After three years Tom, Jr., is brought to his grandfather and grandmother, who see the likeness in the child to their own son. They finally consent to give their forgiveness to their son.

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS, INC.

THE EYE OF GOD (Five Parts—June 5).—The cast: Olaf (Tyrone Power); his wife (Ethel Weber); Renie (Lois Weber); Paul, her fiance (Charles Gunn).

Before his execution Olaf determines to record his experiences so that the world may take warning. Olaf spent the best years of his life in trying to make an impoverished farm pay living expenses. He and his wife, Ana, lived alone. The wife's sister becomes ill and Ana goes to the house a few miles away to care for her. As she passes the station she is accosted by a stranger, Renie, and her maid, who ask about the trains. Ana tells them there is no train until the morning. The night is stormy and the two women apply for shelter at Olaf's house. This is reluctantly given. He is impressed with the strong personality of Renie. He retires to the attic and gives the bedroom to the women. Renie sleeps in the bedroom while her maid uses a lounge near the kitchen, which is opposite the bedroom. Olaf, who cannot forget Renie, crawls down into the bedroom through a trapdoor. He kisses her and escapes just as she awakens.

Next day the woman and maid leave and the ensuing weeks Olaf spends brooding and thinking of the woman. Another stormy, rainy night comes and two passing travelers beg refuge. Olaf at first refuses them, then, upon being offered liberal pay, consents. Paul, the younger of the two, is the fiance of Renie. He and his companion have a large sum of money and jewelry. Olaf sees the treasure and his soul is filled with greed. The strangers are given the same room occupied by Renie, while Olaf again takes the attic. They are suspicious of their host and resolve to spend the night watching, one sleeping while the other watches the only door leading to the bedroom—from the kitchen. The older man retires, and Paul sits up to watch. Olaf is unable to restrain his passion to possess the money. Paul is suddenly aroused by a pistol shot and rushes into the adjoining room. His partner is sitting up in bed and as he enters a shot is fired. Paul drops seriously wounded. A few minutes later Olaf clatters down the steps just as the hired man and his wife enter from the outside. Ana, at the home of her sister, gets a premonition that something is wrong at home, and, unable to shake off the feeling, hurries to the house. Thus she arrives to find the tragedy.

Paul recovers, but the valuables cannot be located, and the evidence against Paul causes him to be sentenced to life imprisonment. There is nothing against Olaf and he is freed. Ana and her husband return home, but, in a short time, Ana is unable to endure the strain of living in the house, as she seems to feel the eye of God upon her at all times. She leaves Olaf. Left alone at the house, he begins to get uneasy. Frequently he finds an eye staring at him, but can never trace it. Finally he cannot bear the strain, and, going to the attic, unearths the valuables. He determines to see the world. He leaves the farm to his wife and sets out.

Renie is heartbroken over the sentence given her lover, and, believing in his innocence, promises to run down the guilty man. Olaf wanders through many and strange lands. The eye follows him and he is almost frantic with the strain, when again he meets Renie. She seems glad to see him, and invites him to her home. Olaf becomes bewitched by the woman and she plays upon him at her will. Olaf has been kind to the maid on several occasions and one day she gives him a note, warning him that he is in danger. He cannot understand it and shows the note to Renie. She is disconcerted at first, but explains the matter away. Olaf becomes more and more enamored of the woman and she accepts his attentions, secretly despising him. One day, to prove his affection, Olaf gives the woman a beautiful piece of jewelry. She recognizes it as part of the loot which is missing from the murder of Paul's companion.

A little later he declares he kissed her the night of her visit and discloses how he sneaked into the room. She accuses him of the murder and in his surprise he almost confesses. She then tells him she is the promised wife of the man imprisoned. Olaf is taken into custody by the police. The maid, still anxious to be of help to him, shuts off the light at a critical moment and Olaf escapes. He wanders to many places, but the eye is ever following him. Finally, worn and unnerved, he returns to the woman's house and gives himself up. He is taken by the officers and makes a full confession, telling how he slipped into the room through the trap door, murdered the partner and tried to kill Paul, and how he secured the loot and hid it until the matter was dropped.

Renie and Paul are reunited and are happy in their love. As Olaf finishes writing his life story the steps of the executioners approach his cell and he is led forth to pay the penalty of his crime.

SHOES (Five Parts—June 26).—The cast: Eva Meyer (Mary MacLaren); her father (Harry Griffith); her mother (Mrs. Witting); Lil (Jessie Arnold); tough (William Mong). Produced by Lols Weber.

Eva Meyer works in a five and ten-cent store for five dollars a week. At home her mother takes in washing to help support three smaller children and a lazy, beer-drinking, novel-reading, good-for-nothing husband and father. For months Eva has needed a pair of shoes. As the weeks pass the necessity for shoes increases, until finally heavy rains set in and rot what little there is left of her bedragged and worthless shoes, until they are literally falling from her feet.

Eva brings her unopened pay envelope home to her mother every Saturday night, to be, each time, promised that "next week" she should have the money for a pair of shoes. She has set her heart upon a pair that are displayed in a shop window she passes going to and from her work. But each week there is a new and valid reason for postponement—the rent must be paid, the merchants will no longer trust them for food, and the worthless father is still out of work. And all this time she sees the money she has earned go for beer, dime novels and food to satisfy her shiftless parent's desires.

Finally, one Saturday night, she demands of her father that he shall provide her with a pair of shoes. Her only solace is the retort from the man who was her natural protector and supporter that he also needed shoes for himself. Then and there Eva resolves that she shall no longer suffer from sore feet, blistered and splintered from the rough floor upon which she stands behind the counter. One of her fellow-slaves in the five and ten-cent store has introduced her to a cabaret singer, weeks before; but she had steadfastly and indifferently declined his invitations to be entertained.

Eva repairs to her cheerless room in the dreary and stuffy flat; she puts on a clean shirt-waist, lowers her skirt by pinning it around her hips so that her rotten and ragged shoes are hidden, gets carfare from her mother and says she is going to spend Sunday with her girl friend from the store. And Monday night Eva returns home from work with the new shoes upon her feet.

Gentlemen:-

After having made a thorough investigetion of your new model 1916 Motiograph, we have decided that on all our future productions wa will use the Motiograph machine exclusively, being satisfied that it will more than do the work required of it. Kindly ship us 8 machines fully equipped.

I might edd that this equipment is to be used with our next great production, "RAMONA".

Yours very truly,

OUR FORESIGHT MEANT YOUR PROTECTION!!

Ten days after the outbreak of war we received the largest stock of French-made condensers ever shippedinto this country

That's why we are able to offer you now

THE KLEINE WHITE LABEL CONDENSER

at before-war-time prices. Foreign factories formerly engaged in the manufacture of optical goods for the entire world now devote their sole energies to war merchandise for their own countries, thus making possible the distribution of inferior, cheaply made and costly-in-the-long-run-domestic substitutes.

KLEINE WHITE LABEL CONDENSERS are ground from pure optical glass. They do not discolor—no green, pink or purple effects after a brief use. They are the only satisfactory condensers on the American market today. If you are not using them you are not obtaining maximum results from your projection equipment.

CAMERA MEN

The organization of the Associated Film Producers, Inc., offers the greatest opportunity for camera men who can do good work.
Our work is non-dramatic and we are developing special fields wherein capable camera men throughout the United States and Canada can make their cameras very profitable. Send for our booklet on this plan.

DEVELOPING AND FINISHING FILM

A new process enables us to develop film with the dust evil entirely eliminated. Every breath of air that enters our film rooms first passes through water which extracts all dust, and gives you a film as clear as crystal. Our process is strictly scientific and a great advance in film production, it also insures quick delivery.

PROSPECTIVE CAMERA MEN

If you are going to get a camera and make a business of motion picture work we have a plan that is sure to interest you, make you start comparatively easy, and prepare you for a good business.
Send for booklet which will be sent free.

RICHARDSON'S
MOTION PICTURE
HANDBOOK

Published by

THE CHALMERS
Publishing Co.

The third and latest edition of this valuable work has just come from the presses.

It is bigger, better, and more helpful than have been either of its predecessors by the same able author.

In daily touch with practical operators throughout the country by reason of his connection with THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, in which his PROJECTION DEPARTMENT is featured, Mr. Richardson is especially well qualified to deal with the problems which are constantly confronting the motion picture mechanics upon whose skill the industry depends so largely for its healthy growth.

RICHARDSON'S MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK is a carefully prepared guide to perfect projection.

It is an invaluable help to every single individual in the trade who has to do with the mechanical handling of motion picture film.

There are more than 400 Pages of Text and the illustrations—of which there are many—have been especially devised for this particular publication.

"Has Stood the Test"

This is true of the whole moving picture industry.

It is also especially true of the representative paper of the entire industry, the Moving Picture World.

Our readers have found that it always stands for the best interests of the business, which only can lead to permanent success. Our readers have learned that the information contained in our columns is reliable and invaluable in the conduct of their business.

Hence the Confidence, the Esteem and the Respect which our paper enjoys and which we are mighty glad and thankful to find remains unshaken in spite of all the undermining and misrepresentations that have been so persistently employed against us for some time past. We expect to continue along the same lines giving to both subscribers and advertisers the Best and Biggest value in the field, not merely achieving Success, we'll do better, we will merit it.

Power's Loop Setter

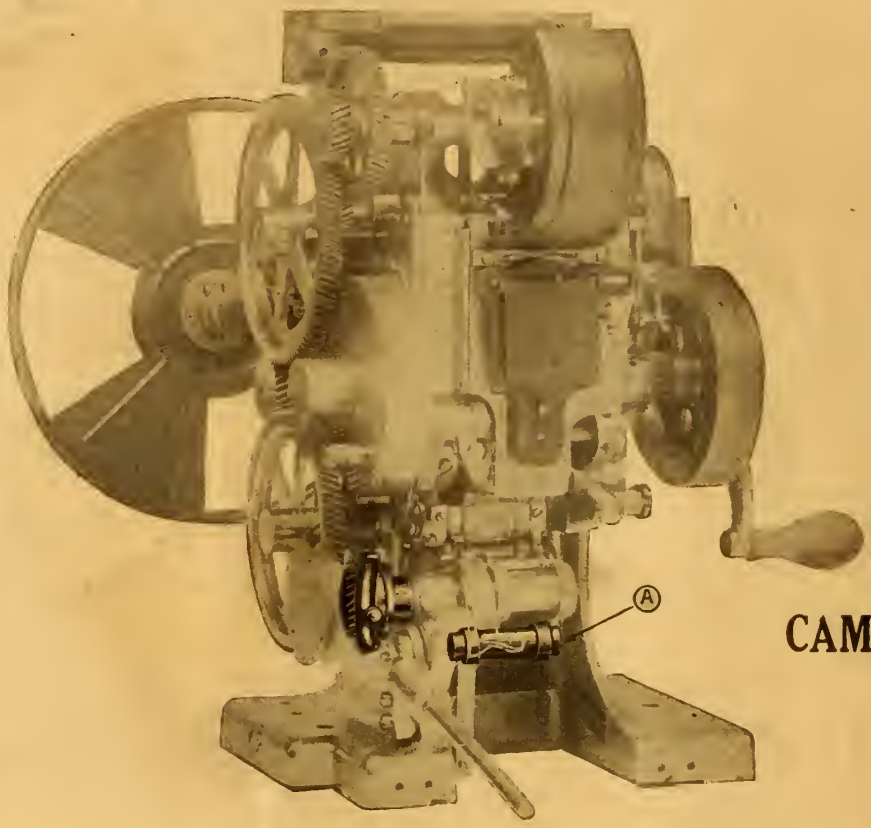
AUTOMATICALLY PREVENTS LOSS OF THE LOWER LOOP

THUS ELIMINATING THE MOST FREQUENT CAUSE OF TROUBLE IN MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION

A DEVICE AS SIMPLE AS IT IS EFFECTIVE

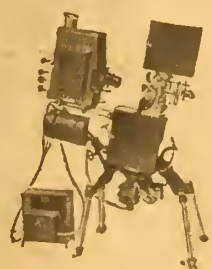


AN EXCLUSIVE FEATURE OF POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH

When the lower loop is lost, the film necessarily rips or tears apart. While making repairs an impatient audience is entertained by a dark screen.

Power's Automatic Loop Setter eliminates this constant source of trouble by continuously maintaining the lower loop.

The loop forms around Roller A. Any slackening of the loop draws the roller upward thus disengaging the take up. The loop immediately assumes normal proportions. The roller springs into its original position and the take up again starts to operate.



YOU SHOULD HAVE OUR CATALOGUE G, WHICH GIVES COMPLETE DETAILS OF MANY EXCLUSIVE FEATURES. MAILED UPON REQUEST

Dear Sir:
There are times when we wish to let a manufacturer know what we think of his production, and this is one of them.
We started last Monday with Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance", and although we anticipated a big business, this production has far exceeded our anticipations, and we consider with the exceptional magnetic power of Miss Burke, surrounded by the magnificent cast and beautiful production, that this will be the biggest success of the season.
With my best wishes, I remain,

THE GRIP OF EVIL

A MIGHTY THEME INSPIRED BY THE CONFLICTING THOUGHT OF THE GREATEST MEN OF THE NATION

PRESIDENT WILSON says:

"The strongholds of evil and wrong in the world are not as strong as they look."

GOVERNOR DUNNE of Illinois says:

"I believe this nation has been progressing toward higher and better ideals and that conditions of society in America, as contrasted with the past, are immeasurably better and purer."

GOVERNOR HUNT of Arizona says:

"Most emphatically, I assert my belief that while evil, as an abstract entity, always has a part of humanity in its grip, the world is, nevertheless, growing better year by year."

MAYOR CURLEY of Boston says:

"Humanity is in the grip of evil! Struggle for a livelihood is more brutal in our day than in ancient times."

SENATOR MORRIS of Nebraska says:

"Humanity, while making progress, greatly improving and reaching a higher state of civilization, is nevertheless in the grip of a great evil."

IS HUMANITY IN THE GRIP OF EVIL?

Your audiences will insist on seeing these pictures so they can determine for themselves the questions on which leaders of thought disagree!

WILLIAM RUSSELL SERIES

Please Your Patrons

There is no surer way of making your theatre highly successful than by giving your patrons what they like.

William Russell is one of the screen's most likeable stars. He is of the type of hero women admire and men favor. His following is extensive.

The American Film Co., Inc., is now presenting him in a series of eight Mutual Star Productions of five reels, each a separate story. The first of these, "Soul Mates," recently released, was so favorably accepted that many additional bookings were received.

The combination of a well liked star with fine vehicles makes the William Russell series a most pleasing attraction to offer.

Popular Stars Are Profitable

The stars to book are the popular ones. They draw the biggest houses.

Helen Holmes is undeniably popular. She made thousands of friends through "The Girl and the Game" serial and is adding many more now with the new Helen Holmes series.

This new Helen Holmes series is an overwhelming success. Miss Holmes' popularity and the all around excellence of the first subject, "Whispering Smith," brought tremendous returns to those who played it and caused other exhibitors to make immediate arrangements for dates.

It's not too late for you to share in this money-making series. Ask your nearest of the 68 Mutual exchanges about the special booking plan. The series comprises five extraordinary productions, each separate and distinct, of five reels each.

Crowds Wait To Curb In Pouring Rain!

QUEEN ANNE THEATRE

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 7, 1916.

Mutual Film Corporation,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

Dear Sirs: We wish you to know of our success relative to showing the first series of "The Secret of the Submarine."

Nearly all day and evening it poured down raining, and, of course, we could imagine the handful of people who would come to see the picture we so extensively advertised, but much to our surprise (by no means is this a joke) the first show was packed and people were waiting to the curb. Now that we have a good beginning on "The Secret of the Submarine," we feel we'll have no trouble in getting the crowds for the remaining series.

With kindest regards, we beg to remain

Yours very truly,
Lawrence Bueche, Jr., Mgr.

Success is pouring in on exhibitors showing "The Secret of the Submarine!" Their letters tell wonderful stories of popular clamor to see the smashing scenes in each chapter! Read the reports reprinted on this page. All cities and towns have literally "upheaved" to view every 40-centimeter sensation!! Imagine crowds standing out to the curb in the rain! What other serial has ever equaled it? Will a serial ever again be written to so enthrall the millions!

More Big Scenes In Chapter Seven

Daring Thomas Chatterton and dazzling Juanita Hansen provide amazing thrills in Chapter Seven of "The Secret of the Submarine," released July 3rd. Lieut. Hope's chase of Satsuma results in a terrific leap of the spy from a dizzy cliff — over a hundred feet into the sea. A shark causes him to let go the books he has stolen in order to escape. Then the cabin, in which Hope and Cleo are sheltered, is hurled into the ocean by a mysterious explosion!! This is a blood-curdling, hair-raising sensation — one of the most astounding climaxes ever screened!!

Gentlemen:

When we opened the Cinema-Concerts at Orchestra Hall, there was considerable time and thought spent in selecting what we believed would be the one best feature to present to our patrons. There were no restrictions -- we wanted the best the market afforded regardless of price or manufacturer.

As you know, our selection for this opening was a V-L-S-E picture. In view of greater success than we had anticipated for our first week, it seems only fitting that we should express to you our satisfaction.

The acting, plot and photography were splendid -- it was great, and we are happy to say we have set up a most satisfactory record on this opening picture.

Many of our patrons said it was the best picture they had ever seen, and all seemed to go away well satisfied.

Trusting that our future business relations will be as pleasant and profitable as the past, we are

Very truly yours,

Regular Vitagraph Releases

"Billie's Mother" Monday, July 3rd.

Billie is another "poor little rich girl," heart hungry for mother love. Billie's mother, a charming young widow, much sought after in Society, forgets that her little girl needs her. The realization of what she herself is losing comes to her when the little girl wanders off to seek love elsewhere.

One part drama featuring DONALD HALL, with Helen Costello and Louise Beaudet.

"When It Rains It Pours" Friday, July 7th.

Bravely she ventures forth in the dead of night, into the pouring rain, to rescue her favorite puppy from the storm. But horrors! She locks herself out and is forced to take refuge in a neighboring house, not knowing that the house is quarantined on account of small-pox. And not only that, but Bobbie, in whom she is particularly interested, is also under quarantine.

Some complications in this one part comedy, featuring MARY ANDERSON, with Anne Schaefer, Reggie Morris and Otto Lederer.

The secret is out!

Everybody calls this little lady "Sunshine Mary," and, indeed, she seems to radiate joy and happiness from an inexhaustible store. This snap-shot reveals her great secret—the source of her disposition. Way out in Golden California you see her, taking her daily sun bath. When she has absorbed all the sunshine in the West, why she just goes into the studio and registers it on a film for the millions.

"When it Rains it Pours" is announced above, but even that doesn't take the sunshine out of the leading lady,

BLUE RIBBON FEATURES

The most rigid censorship in the motion picture industry today is Vitagraph's self-imposed series of seven inspections.

Every Blue Ribbon Feature must pass these tests even before the National Board views the films.

This is why Vitagraph's Blue Ribbon Features are universally conceded to be the last word in feature productions.

This is why the majority of exhibitors are willing to book Blue Ribbon Features without taking advantage of our open-booking system of "seeing the film before renting it."

The name—Blue Ribbon Feature—is their guarantee.

Vitagraph's policy that "each new production must be better than the last" finds its full expression in these Blue Ribbon releases:

Facts and Comments

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD urges the fullest possible attendance of delegates to the National Convention of the Exhibitors' League to open at Chicago on July 11. At present the exhibiting branch in the industry is the only one with a considerable organization. The industry will soon be confronted with struggles and problems of many kinds and there will be need for a strong organization within the ranks of the industry. In the impending battles against censorship in Washington and in various states the aid of the exhibitor is indispensable. This aid can best be given by the organized exhibitor. The whole industry looks forward to the Chicago convention with great expectations. We look for much valuable constructive work.

THE deposit problem is one of the vital questions of the day. The monthly deposit has been an item of discussion on the programs of more than one exhibitors' convention. There is, we are very glad to say, a disposition both on the part of the manufacturer and the exhibitor to listen to reason and discuss the question fairly. No doubt this question will loom large in Chicago. We hope to see it settled in a spirit of justice and equity. Insistence on the monthly deposit as recently pointed out by a prominent New York exhibitor does not always work out to the benefit of the manufacturer. The system as now in vogue threatens the existence of small houses which it would be to the manufacturers' interest to keep going.

OUR friends of the National Board of Review submit to us an imposing array of press clippings which they say "indicate that the character of posters displayed in front of motion picture theaters is very frequently the mainspring from which sentiments for censorship arise." What they have to say on the subject is so well taken that we feel justified in repeating it here. "The point is," they say, "that the publicity department or the person in charge of the posters in going over the photographs for the selection of a scene to be used for a poster is very apt to alight on the so-called 'punch.' Now this scene taken in its proper context in the film may be entirely unobjectionable, but separated from this context may be distinctly objectionable and be a plausible ground on which to judge the picture as a whole." Not merely lots but acres and acres of room for improvement in this situation.

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD on more than one occasion pointed to the pernicious effects of legalized censorship on American films abroad. British statesmen in search of revenue for the prosecution of the war are now coming to the front with tragic alarm about the immorality of the American made film. Read the complaints in a certain portion of the British press and you are bound to recognize the echoes of the litanies of Crafts and Canon Chase. The chorus of denunciation in which some of our own producers joined in Washington in January is reverberating back to us from London in June. The cry against the American film is heard in other European countries, too.

GREAT causes work quietly. Dr. Cocks of the National Board of Review in a recent address before a branch of the Y. M. C. A. called attention to the fact that the motion picture was responsible for the closing of not less than 600 saloons in the city of New York alone. We frequently receive inquiries from religious bodies and temperance reformers as to the effect of the motion picture on the saloon. No adequate statistics exist on this subject, but we all are aware of the decrease in saloons in the very neighborhoods where only a few years ago they were to be found on every corner. This fact alone ought to make the religious people think of the motion picture more kindly. If the films are to be censored out of all entertainment values they will lose their popularity and be much less of a danger to the saloon than they are now.

Big Historical Plays*

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE charm of revealing history through fiction is twofold. Dry facts may be softened or beautified with no less of force and more intensely presented on one hand, while on the other it is possible to seize upon the broad and picturesque background of a great period of history and develop through it some modern motive of powerful influence. The danger of producing a ten-reel drama of history lies first in our lack of authors who understand the fundamental principles governing construction in a large screen story, and second in the fact that a big spectacle of ancient times, while it may be costly, may at the same time be without modern significance.

The ten-reel play without significance becomes insignificant where it should be strongest. People may be curious to see it for a time, especially when publicity methods are well calculated to awaken curiosity, but interest is bound to fade rapidly when it lacks some powerful motive, such as causes people to talk about the production among their friends, giving it the least expensive and most effective advertising in the world. Whatever applies to smaller plays so far as careful and intelligent workmanship in the scenario is concerned applies ten times over in the big historical photodrama.

The present tendency is to devote heavy expenditure to making the large production a sheer spectacle either gorgeous or impressive, a fine art in itself, but a subordinate one. A vast amount of time and money may be expended on what is purely spectacular, and be well expended if results are in line with the story's finest purposes, but the outlay should never be made to the detriment of intensive drama dependent on character development, nor to the detriment of those elements which strongly appeal to the emotions and intellect.

Any play is deadened by a failure of response to the spirit of our people. Some of us may feel a desire to witness a new spectacle—we are all studying the progress of a new art—but none of us care particularly about seeing what has been done to death in other forms. It is on this account that repetition becomes so jarring, particularly where one-reel melodramas and comedies are patched up and amplified by tedious process for five-reel production. We especially look for improvement in a ten-reel story.

Remarkable expansion is visible in the whole trend of American thought. We are breaking down and destroying much that is old in society, politics and religion because they present obstacles to our advancement. We object to being fenced in by any restraint to human progress regardless of its antiquity. The big historical play may become instructive in its settings and costumes, but its educational value will be tremendously enhanced if it points the way to a fuller method of living our lives, to a finer way of giving ourselves expression.

We can well reach back into history and bring to the front certain hurtful influences of other days which hampered human progress, which caused the rays of enlightenment to burn dimly through the ages. We know that it did. We know that there were dark ages after bright flares of intelligence. Those counts of years known as "eras" may be interesting in themselves for purposes of comparison, but the more important of them had a meaning, and that meaning should be brought out in the story. Where care in the spectacle counts most is in the preservation of what gave lasting beauty to this or that era purely decorative.

Two elements are thus of high importance in the ten-reel historical drama, one which emphasizes outward beauty of form, not only in grandeur of mass, ingenuity of device and nobility of design, but in emphasis and contrast by light effects. It must agree more closely than small presentations with accepted ideas of picture composition and afford that sort of pleasure which is felt in contemplating the beautiful in either nature or art. We must be made to feel ourselves under the influence of the historical period shown, through whatever picturesque charm can be attached to that period.

A major part of this artistic treatment may fall to the director and his assistants, but the method of expression is largely made possible by the subject, so the author must have in mind the necessity of providing a story which lends itself to beauty and grandeur of treatment. That esthetic spirit must be evoked when the action is conceived. It may now be seen that big historical plays call for artistic conception by the author and such knowledge of pictorial laws and composition on the part of a director as may afford the right atmosphere and assist materially in stirring the imagination of an audience.

The esthetic treatment is always vital in helping to take the spectator away from what is dull and ugly in every-day life into enchanted realms of the imagination. It carries people away to new fields, but theme, character and story interest must hold them there. The sense of vision may be delighted with what is shown through splendid treatment, but, after all, what enslaves attention in the pictured story, what can be counted on to hold an audience through a presentation of ten reels or more, is some solution of the mysteries of the human soul.

The big drama should emphasize a story involving at least one great characterization and at least two others of supporting strength, and through these, through all their intense human relationships, should pervade an underlying idea or theme of contemporary interest. The subject-idea should offer something worth while after the senses are pleased and the emotions aroused, one leading up to and verifying the other. Therein, rather than in historical verity, lies the secret of lasting success. Who knows whether a lady may look down from her window upon a procession in a Roman street during the fourth century? Who knows if the houses were more than one story tall and whether exterior windows existed?

To accurately portray history might only require ability to gather evidence hidden beneath the dust of old libraries. To impress history and all that it means to us now, and to inspire and entertain is not so much a matter of research as it is an art of presenting man in relation to his epoch, with a suggestion of modern significance behind the presentation.

A danger in big historical plays lies in their large scope, especially when there is insistence upon the spectacular in many unrelieved great scenes. The audience loses that sustained interest which can only be built up through an intimate relation with the principal characters. The fascination of penetrating subtleties of thought and feeling vanishes in the spaces of a great spectacle; hence it should only be glimpsed at intervals between some intense line of close action. In any logical arrangement of ten acts there must be considered three pleasures, the sensuous, the emotional and the mental.

Standards of Stage and Screen

By W. Stephen Bush.

HERE is a question often discussed among film men and among friends of the motion picture generally: How far are the standards of the stage applicable to the screen? I am speaking of standards of taste as well as of morals. It is a very big question and a very difficult one. If the character of the audience is any criterion then it seems to me there always must be considerable difference in these standards of stage and screen.

The audience in the theater of the speaking stage is essentially different from the audience which patronizes the motion picture house. It's a difference both of quantity and quality. The attendance of minors, for example, in the so-called legitimate theater is negligible, while on the other hand the attendance of minors in the motion picture theater is known to be large. A low estimate will place the number of children at the motion picture theater at about thirty per cent.. There are a few big motion picture houses in the principal cities of the country where the attendance of minors is next to nil, but these are the exceptions. We are now, of course, speaking of the average motion picture theater. With these facts before us we cannot see where there is much room for the problem play on the screen of the average motion picture house. The motion picture audience demands to be entertained. Such an audience will easily tire of sex problems. There is nothing more sterile in amusement values than a debate between the advocates of social or sex problems carried on by means of the screen.

We, of course, do not deny but we wish at all times to emphasize the possibilities of the screen as a teaching agent. We firmly believe that the screen is the most powerful weapon for social or political propaganda of any kind. Now, however, we are not speaking of the screen generally, but of the screen in the motion picture house in particular. The screen in the motion picture house ought to be 99 per cent. amusement or entertainment. It ought to pay more respect to the ordinary conventions and decencies of society.

It may be hard to draw a mathematical line, but when in the review of a film we read that "malpractice aids considerably in developing a fitting climax" we feel that there is something wrong. A playwright who has to appeal to malpractice as a dramatic aid is unfit to write for the screen. Visualizing a criminal operation to a mixed audience consisting in part of young boys and girls approaching the age of maturity is damnable. We are very much mistaken if the present statutes are not sufficient to surpress such an exhibition on the ground that it endangers and impairs the morals of minor children. We do not now recollect any play in which an attempt has been made to enact or to even strongly suggest a criminal operation. We have no doubt whatever that such an exhibition could and would be summarily suppressed by the police. If such a scene is objectionable on the speaking stage it is all the more objectionable on the screen.

The worst of such a situation lies in the fact that it furnishes a weapon to the advocates of censorship. It has always seemed to us that the industry owes it to itself to bring the makers of such pictures to condign punishment under existing statutes. If the reformers will not do it we must do it ourselves. It happens in nine cases out of ten that the objectionable film is a product of some man who is but very loosely connected with the industry and who with a free and easy conscience is willing to purvey a little filth for the sake of profit. He is, of course, callously indifferent to the harm which results to the entire industry.

The Truth in Advertising

By W. Stephen Bush.

THIS article and its title were suggested to us by the letter of an old friend and reader of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD who writes to us from a western town complaining of misrepresentations in a classified advertisement in this paper. We cannot, of course, check up every classified advertisement which is offered to us for publication. If a man advertises a motion picture house for sale and in the description of his theater leaves out the fact that there is a two-thousand-dollar mortgage on it the fault is entirely his and wholly beyond our control. We must assume that advertisers are alive to their own interests and none, it would seem, is stupid enough to believe that a little thing like a two-thousand-dollar mortgage on a thousand-dollar house is going to be overlooked by the prospective purchaser.

One man advertised his theater for sale "on account of death of owner." Investigation showed that the owner had been slightly hurt in an auto accident but had completely recovered and was actively managing the house. Speaking of another classified advertiser our correspondent says: "He (the advertiser) gives the population of his town 20,000 the year round 'according to the chamber of commerce.' The 1910 United States census says 5,000 and the School Census of 1914 6,000."

We hope that our readers will help us in running down any misleading advertisement in the classified department or in any other part of the paper. Under recent decisions by the Federal Courts the fraudulent and deceptive advertiser is very much amenable to the law. One court, for instance, has decided that where an article is represented as highly valuable for a certain purpose it is no defense in a prosecution for false advertising to prove that the article advertised actually existed and possessed a certain value.

The tendency of modern times is toward strict truth and honesty in advertising. No business can be carried on with success and no article will ever prove a good investment unless there is value given and confidence created. It is a well-known fact that the big stores or at least most of them are extremely careful about the allegations in their advertising. In all of these stores there is an advertising editor or censor whose duty it is to examine and test every statement submitted.

It strikes us that a strict adherence to facts in film advertising will be welcomed by the exhibitors and will prove a profitable departure. From talks that we have had with exhibitors we know they are inclined to apply a good deal more than just a grain of salt in their judgment of a certain style of advertising.

As a proof of the progressive tendencies in modern advertising and likewise as a proof of the growing intelligence and discrimination of the public we refer to the blows that within recent times have been struck at the patent medicine "industry." Less than twenty years ago the patent medicine had a fearful and wonderful advertising literature. Most of it was fraudulent, some of it frankly so. Today reputable papers have closed their columns to obvious patent medicine advertising . All over the country newspaper publishers are beginning to realize that they owe a duty to their readers in scrutinizing advertisements. From its birth the MOVING PICTURE WORLD has perceived this duty and has tried to perform it.

We thank our correspondent for the information he has given us and we hope that every reader of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD who feels aggrieved by reason of an advertisement he has seen in the columns of this paper will make it his business to write to us and we will try to do the right thing under the circumstances.

Richardson in New England Towns

Projection Man Meets Operators and Managers, Gets the Glad Hand and Talks to Them.

Boston, Mass.

ON the way from Providence to Boston I stopped at the Premier theater, Norwood, Mass., and had a pleasant chat with Manager George H. O'Brien, incidentally toting away seven of his perfectly good dollars in payment for a subscription and a handbook; also I met Operator Merle Hagen and Robert O'Brien. All three drove into Boston later and listened to our lecture. Brother O'Brien has a house seating 725. The operating room contains one American Standard projector and one Powers. Ventilation is ample and the plant excellent, except that the screen is too close to the front row of seats and the picture larger than it need to be. I advised changes on these two points and Brother O'Brien promptly agreed to make them.

At Boston Union headquarters we found Business Agent William Franke and several of the men, and the welcome was warm. The operators turned out generously, and there were more than a hundred of them present; also there was a sprinkling of managers, and State Inspector E. Ryan, who responded very briefly to an invitation from the chairman to favor the assembled multitude with a speech. He brought a laugh by saying, "You've all heard me talk before," which was quite true, he being the chief examiner.

A luncheon was served, after which our talk lasted two hours, and, although it was break of day when we had finished, not a single man left the hall and all listened with very close attention throughout. At the end a unanimous standing vote of thanks was tendered the editor (I'm not much on "votes of thanks," but in this case it was, I thought, significant); after which literally dozens of the men came up, shook hands and expressed their appreciation personally.

The "Doubting Thomases" had been transformed into friends, and were honest enough to frankly admit their error. Considering the short time that was given to preparation (two days) the attendance was remarkable, and the affair highly successful. I feel particularly well pleased to have convinced the Boston men, because they are capable operators who could judge of the merit and value of our work; also they are experienced city men not likely to be easily carried off their feet, or unduly swayed, except by a thing having real merit. We entered that city the subject of more or less hostile suspicion; we left it having the good will of every man present and that was by far the greater portion of the Boston union.

Lawrence.

At Lawrence I found the we're-glad-to-have-you-with-us committee, consisting of Brothers Frank Dowd, Charles Roche, secretary, and Fred Sweet, president Local Union 256, waiting impatiently in front of the Premier theater on the main street of the city, and as soon as the Go Devil had been placed in cold storage and her gasoline heart temporarily stilled, and the projection man partly had made himself presentable, Brother Dermonsky put in an appearance with his gasoline buggy and we were duly and properly introduced to the mill city of New England. And they are some mills, lemme inform you, gentlemen. Standing at one end of the largest, the Pacific, one has to look as far as he can see, and then begin there and look as far as he can again, to see the other end of the buildings. There are 7,000 employees in this one mill (there are many huge mills in Lawrence), and it is said they turn out quite some several yards of cloth each working day. The city and its suburban surroundings are very, very pretty, and the mills are decidedly interesting. I enjoyed the ride.

After dinner, in company with Brothers Roche, Dowd, Sweet and Wood, using Brother Wood's car this time, we visited the Premier, Empire, Broadway, Victoria and Star theaters.

At the Premier, James F. Toomey, manager, the picture was excellent and this in spite of the fact that the operating room was off center so that one machine set 12 feet to the left of the center of the screen. Operator Frank J. Dowd informed me that no special pains had been taken to correct this condition, which proves that there are queer things in projection. By all rules the definition ought to have been decidedly bad on one side or both, but, while not very sharp it was at least fair, and this too in spite of the fact that the picture was unnecessarily large, considering size and depth of the auditorium, and the throw only about 60 feet. Brother Dowd is a man of ideas, therefore a real operator, a man who uses his brain as well as his hands. In front of the screen, about four feet away, he has stretched across the stage an upright strip of black cloth which is about one foot high, and this acts as an arrester of all reflected light. It is a most excellent scheme and is invisible against the black border of the screen. In the operating room a skylight opens directly into the air above the roof, and the rheostats set right up in the skylight opening so that all heat generated instantly passes away. The machines are Power's, one Six A and one Six B. Rewinding is by motor, but is done at unnecessary speed, as I pointed out to Operator Dowd, who promised to change that item. On the floor are rubber mats. Dowd said that prior to putting them in when he stood on the asbestos floor he had much trouble with sore feet, due to perspiration, but that the rubber mats stopped all that. Operators take note. On the front wall between the projectors was a dimmer control which handled all auditorium lights left burning during the show, a very good stunt, it seemed to me, since with dark scenes the operator could instantly reduce the auditorium lighting, thus accentuating the brilliancy of the screen, or rather producing that effect.

The Empire, a large new, beautiful vaudeville picture theater, R. A. Ward, manager, seats 3,000. George L. Davis is an operator. The projectors are Power's Six B's. The operating room is well equipped, but is too small and is (usual architect's blunder) located about 40 feet above the screen on a 106 foot throw, with the usual unavoidable distortion which is the inevitable accompaniment of such installations. Brother Davis has glass in his ports and ample ventilation, but the rheostats are directly under the lamphouse, where they give the operator the full benefit of all the heat they generate. The room is so small, however, that there is really no place else to put them. It is amazing how tremendously economical of space architects become when they reach the operating room. The gallery, or upper balcony, rather, is reached by escalators, rather a novelty. Manager Ward is a most affable gentleman, and one who is willing to have faults pointed out, as well as listen to praise of the good things.

The Broadway is managed by F. W. Demara; James Frizzell is operator. The theater seats 1,500. The walls of the operating room are too light in color as is the case with practically all Lawrence operating rooms, and as the little, piffling six-inch observation port is used, the work of Lawrence operators is sadly hampered. In addition to this all the men had at least one incandescent light burning, and that operates to make it still more difficult to deliver uniformly high class projection.

At the Victoria John F. McGuire is manager and F. D. Sweet operator. One American Standard and one Power's Six A is in use. The screen illumination here was very good, and the light tone very pure. The rheostats are located outside the operating room. There was too much light in the operating room. Ventilation was excellent.

Frank Boscketti manages the "Star," and Sam Kapchuam is operator. This house lies in the outskirts, and is the only one not enjoying a supply of D. C. Brother Kapchuam is getting excellent results, however, with A. C., through Power's inductor. The picture is smaller than at most of the other houses, but is plenty large enough. Operating room ventilation is excellent, but ports are very narrow and walls too light. The projection equipment is Power's Six mechanism and Motiograph lamphouse for one and Power's Six for the other.

At 11 P. M. the men gathered in a lodge room, together with some of the managers. The Mayor of Lawrence was present and remained an interested listener to the lecture. He afterwards expressed himself as having learned things which would be of value to him as a public official.

After the talk luncheon was served and the boys enjoyed themselves until after 2 A. M., but Yours Truly was too completely exhausted and too utterly fagged out to stay to the end.

The Lawrence men impress one as a clean, intelligent body who only need a push in the right direction to join the ranks of the progressives, and I have tried to give that push. The operating rooms are clean as a new pin and projection in Lawrence is fully as good as one could expect, considering the handicaps the men labor under.

My lecture in that city was not satisfactory to me, though the men expressed themselves as pleased. The fact was I I had been up until broad daylight in Boston the previous night and then put in all the next day riding and sightseeing with consequent, almost complete mental and physical exhaustion. Never again!

Powell Favors Advanced Art.

President and Director of New Company Aims to Reach the Imagination by Making Pictures Subtle and Impressionistic.

By Lynde Denig.

THE Frank Powell Productions, Inc., inspired, organized and directed by a man determined to work along novel artistic lines in the advancement of photoplays, may well excite interest. After eight years of experience in making pictures—eight years during which he has achieved a number of notable successes—Frank Powell has cut loose and is prepared to test the correctness of ideas at once ambitious and slightly revolutionary. If the ideas are impracticable, he admits that he will have only himself to blame; but at least he will have realized the joy of freedom in artistic expression, something rather difficult to gain when producing for release through the customary channels.

Mr. Powell was in the midst of preparations for his first independent photoplay when he stopped to explain the purposes of Frank Powell Productions, Inc. "We expect to make six pictures a year," he said, "and all will deal with topical subjects, something big and vital in the public life of the time. For several reasons I do not care to announce the nature of our initial picture, which treats of a condition of prime importance that to the best of my belief has never been handled in a dramatic way. Creighton Hale, who is under contract with me for the coming year, and Linda A. Griffith will carry the leading roles, supported by players selected for their suitability to the characters I have in mind.

Frank Powell.

"In this picture, and probably in those to follow, I plan to dispense with a studio and take scenes in whatever neighborhood or building best suits the story. For instance, we will need a courtroom and I have arranged for a day in a Georgia court where the action will be photographed in a setting more natural than one is likely to be built, however carefully a model is copied. A picture made under these conditions is apt to be more convincing because of the indefinable difference between that which is real and a clever, perhaps too clever, imitation.

"The appropriateness of the settings in 'The Fourth Estate' was commented upon, though it was not generally known that I produced the picture in Chicago without using a studio. After finding what seemed to me to be just the right environment, I arranged my own lights and succeeded in getting good photography, the kind of photography that presents a dim hallway or a room as it actually appears to the eye."

Presently Mr. Powell explained more fully his theory of what may be termed advanced photoplay art, which is based on the principles behind all art: a presentation of the meaning of a scene or a situation by placing emphasis on the essentials and subordinating inconsequential details. "The picture of the future will have to please the imagination," he said. "Anyone may snap a photograph of Broadway that will be more full and complete than an inspired painting; but it takes an artist to bring out a dominant human note in a scene that is commonplace because of its familiarity. He appeals to the imagination, arrests attention and stirs new thoughts in those who study his picture. Broadway is revealed in another light; the crowds and the buildings that we see every day have a fresh meaning.

"The same results can be obtained in motion pictures, but not without study and effort. Mere photographic realism, however much it may gratify the eye, is not art unless it strikes deeper and carries a message to the mind. Most pictures suffer from too much detail, over-emphasis and a lack of subtlety. A poet may write a quatrain, which through the power of its suggestion awakens memorable thought, where a page of reportorial description dealing with the same subject would be read and forgotten. To some extent the analogy holds good with photoplays. I believe it is far more effective to work upon the minds of an audience through a series of significant incidents, than to present every action with indiscriminate completeness, leaving nothing to the imagination. My pictures are going to be impressionistic, but they will not be vague or difficult to understand. If a man's mind and imagination can be reached, he is going to be interested and entertained."

According to present plans, a Broadway theater will be engaged for the premiere of each of the Powell productions, after which territorial rights will be sold. The officers of the company are: Frank Powell, president; Frank G. Doelger, vice-president and treasurer; Joseph S. Buhler, secretary; William Barry, general manager. Mr. Powell retains the staff associated with him in the making of such notable pictures as "The Children of the Ghetto" and "A Fool There Was," the production that made Theda Bara famous. Alfred P. Hamberg bears the title of studio manager, while David Calcigani, a photographic expert of the first caliber, will be assisted at the camera by Arthur Boeger and Caesar Ponci. The company's offices in the Times Building are in charge of Mr. Barry, one of the most popular men in the industry and well remembered for his effective advertising on behalf of the Nicholas Power projection machine.

The Photodramatists Active.

Ralph Ince Speaks for the "Story"—He, With Lionel Belmore and Flora Finch, Elected Members.

RALPH INCE, head of the Vitagraph Bayshore studio, was the guest of honor at the last meeting of the Photodramatists, held June 20. The President, Howard Irving Young, having joined his regiment, the chair was occupied by Arthur Leeds.

After a brief but highly instructive paper on "Adaptations" by Mr. Edward Montagne of Vitagraph, Mr. Ralph Ince, the guest of honor, was introduced. Mr. Ince, whose progressive ideas have placed him among the few really big directors, spoke warmly for the story being recognized as the basis of the successful photoplay.

The famous screen comedienne, Miss Flora Finch, was another honored and warmly welcomed guest of the club. Miss Finch made a spirited plea for better comedy. By urgent request, Miss Finch was persuaded to give her inimitable rendition of Lewis Carroll's "Jabberwocky," thus giving the needed "comedy-relief" to the proceedings. Lionel Belmore, well known director, together with Mr. Ince and Miss Finch, were proposed for membership and gladly welcomed by the club members.

The date for the outing to the Vitagraph Bayshore studios is postponed until July 1.

KEMBLE TO PROMOTE LARGER SUBJECTS.

"The Zeppelin Raids on London, and the Siege of Verdun," the war film, marks the first effort of the Kemble Film Corporation to enter the motion picture field as promoters. William T. Kemble, president of that organization, said his concern in entering actively into the distributing of film would limit its efforts to such as would prove worthy of being exploited by master showmen.

"The Zeppelin raid picture is an example," he said, "of what I consider a film should be in order to prove of sufficient interest to a real showman. In the first place, it ran for a long time at the Park theater, New York City, under the auspices of the New York Globe, which paper gave it state-wide publicity."

Mr. Kemble is one of the largest and best-known showmen in Brooklyn, operating the Triangle theater in that city, for which he is the exclusive distributor of all Triangle program releases.

RECORD PAPER ORDER FOR SELIG SPORTS.

One of the largest orders for paper advertising a one-reel subject ever filled has just been sent out by Joseph Partridge, New York exchange manager of the V-L-S-E., Inc., for two of the Keeney houses in New York City.

These two houses have booked the Selig Athletic Series. and for the first release ordered a hundred one-sheet posters each. The two hundred sheets will be thickly placed in store windows, and on billboards in the immediate vicinity of the theaters, advertising the subject. As a concentrated advertising campaign this is said to be unequaled in the film industry.

Kalems for July

Early Releases Bring Thrilling "Hazard" and "Black Magic," a Social Pirate Episode.

KALEM'S schedule for the first week of July will bring the issuing of "Black Magic," for the fifteenth episode of the George Bronson Howard series, "The Social Pirates." The expose of fraudulent Oriental mystics is the task taken up by Mona and Mary in this closing release of the famous series.

Kalem officials report an unusual increase in the bookings from week to week on "The Social Pirates," showing that this production is likely to duplicate the history of the most successful series pictures in thus increasing the earnings steadily for months following the final release.

"Black Magic," which is released on July 3, is followed on Tuesday, July 4, with "The Peach Pickers," a top-notch Ham and Bud comedy, which finds that pair of funmakers getting into all sorts of scrapes through their flirting proclivities. On Wednesday, July 5, "Notch Number Nine," a one-reel Western drama, is issued in response to the demand for Westerns. "The Psychic Phenomenon," a Sis Hopkins comedy, is the release scheduled for July 7.

Helen Gibson comes to bat for her first July issue with one of the most daring feats of her screen career in "The Hazards of Helen." In "To Save the Road," released on Saturday, July 8, Helen risked her life by a thrilling leap from the cab of one engine to the warning ropes strung across the tracks and a drop a second later to the top of a closely pursuing locomotive. A half day's rehearsing and many narrow escapes were encountered before the double-barreled feat could be performed.

CLAIRE McDOWELL JOINS UNIVERSAL.

Claire McDowell, well known as a film actress, especially for her splendid work as a member for a half dozen years of the Biograph company, has joined the Universal Film Manufacturing Company at the Pacific Coast studios. For the present she will appear in general stock. Miss McDowell comes of a long line of theatrical ancestors, and has appeared not only on the legitimate stage but in many of the big productions before the camera.

Miss McDowell is known as ""The girl of the people," and plays all parts from heavy emotional to light comedy.

NEPHEW OF SOTHERN JOINS METRO.

Harry Sothern, who plays the part of Abraham in the Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne production of "Romeo and Juliet," and assists Leander De Cordova in the technical direction of the production, is a nephew of E. H. Sothern. He played in Mr. Sothern's company for seven years.

SULLIVAN TO NOVELIZE "CIVILIZATION."

C. Gardner Sullivan, the author of Thomas H. Ince's screen spectacle "Civilization," now playing at the Criterion theater, is undertaking a difficult task in the novelization of his now famous photoplay.

Points Out Significance of $100,000 Offer

Adolph Zukor, President of Famous Players Film Company, Intends It to Mark New Era for Screen.

THOUGH the record-breaking amount of the total offer itself is the most striking feature of the announcement made by the Famous Players, that it will pay $1,000 each for 100 photoplay ideas, making an expenditure of $100,000 for material—President Adolph Zukor is inclined to think the monetary consideration is only incidental.

"Though it is true that no other company has ever made such an offer since the beginning of the photoplay industry, still I do not consider that to be a particularly significant fact," declares Mr. Zukor. "The chief point to my mind is that it marks the first big effort of a producing concern to get into direct contact with the foremost writers of our day. Hitherto the larger concerns have devoted themselves chiefly to the adaptation of the successful plays and novels of the greatest authors. In the vast majority of cases, the negotiations for the rights to these plays and novels were obtained through arrangement with the different agencies representing the writers.

"Inasmuch as the $100,000 offer is extended only to authors of recognized ability and the offer is in no sense a contest, but a simple business proposition that we will invest the lump sum in one hundred photoplay ideas that we believe to be worth $1,000 each to us, we expect to interest the foremost litterateurs of the day. As for the screen itself, I have every confidence that the results obtained by this revolutionary step will mark a new era in the quantity of quality feature photoplays."

NEW "MUSTY SUFFER" SERIES BY KLEINE.

George Kleine announces for release June 21 a new series of "The Mishaps of Musty Suffer" comedies with Harry Watson, Jr., in the title role. This is Mr. Kleine's reply to numerous letters and personal requests from exhibitors who played the original series, and who have thereby educated their patrons to expect a continuation of the comedies.

The new series are ten in number and comprise some weird adventures on the part of "Musty." The general line of production responsible for the extraordinary success of the first ten has been faithfully followed with much logical improvement as would result from a greater familiarity with the work and the laughter-making possibilities of Harry Watson.

In the new series the tramp character is not completely abandoned, but is used as an introduction to the story. For example, in "Blow Your Horn," the eleventh episode and first of the second series, "Musty" acquires a job as messenger boy, thereby exchanging the tramp costume for the garb of the messenger, reverting to type as it were with the vanished position. This idea is carried out in "Showing Some Speed," "While You Wait," "Local Showers," "A Pirate Bold," "Outs and Ins," and others.

D. M. O'Brien was married on June 15 to Miss Myrtle May Perry, of Charleston, W. Va. Mr. O'Brien is manager of the Charleston branch of the Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Company, having opened that office nearly two years ago.

Thrills in New Pathe Serial

Resume of Some of the More Notable Moments in the Fourteen-Chapter "Grip of Evil."

THE same thrills which have made "The Exploits of Elaine," "The Iron Claw," "Neal of the Navy," "The Red Circle," "Who Pays?" "Who's Guilty?" and Pathe's other pictures so successful, characterize "The Grip of Evil," the first release on Pathe's recently announced five million serial programme, which will be shown beginning July 17. Not only are absorbing questions advanced in such manner as to make it a human document, but thrill literally follows thrill in the presentation on the screen of Balboa's production in which Jackie Saunders and Roland Bottomley are the stars.

In "Fate," the first episode, the daughter of a steel magnate, unaware of a strike riot, approaches her father's office in her automobile. A child rushing around a corner falls beneath the wheels. In a moment an angry mob is upon the girl and her chauffeur. Just in time does John Burton, in an intense and powerful fight scene, rescue her from his enraged fellow workers, for no sooner has he lifted her from the car than their efforts to cause an explosion in the gas tank are successful. The machine is literally blown to pieces as the terrified girl realizes how narrow has been her escape from death.

Nothing is more thrilling on stage or screen than a fight in the dark between two powerful and evenly matched men. In "The Underworld," the second episode of "The Grip of Evil," there occurs one of the most exciting fight scenes ever staged for a motion picture. John Burton discovers a burglar in his apartment and the encounter occurs between the two.

A collision between a train and automobile when well managed is as thrilling as anything that can be filmed. In the third episode, called "The Upper Ten," a powerful scene of this sort takes place.

In the fourth chapter, there is seen another fight, this time between John Burton and the employer of a young girl whose attentions have become unwelcome to her.

The fifth episode is called "The Way of a Woman." A thrilling succession of scenes leads to a powerful denouement in which a beautiful, reckless young girl, realizing the hopelessness of her struggle against fate, attempts to drown herself, is rescued by John Burton, and later standing upon the silver-laden table in a gilded lobster palace, cries: "A girl with a soul! How much am I bid?"

Another strong scene which will interest any audience and which is unique in the annals of the screen, was filmed for the sixth spisode entitled "The Hypocrites." In it, a girl is saved from the attack of a bull by the valor of her lover who in a hand to hand conflict beats the powerful creature off.

A thrilling fight, a boat wreck and an automobile accident mark the seventh chapter, "The Butterflies," and form an example of the vivid manner in which the powerful story is presented on the screen in a photoplay which has every element of popular success.

The experiences of John Burton, the leading male character, played by Roland Bottomley, are pictured vividly in each episode giving the complete photoplay the cumulative interest of a serial. On the other hand, Jackie Saunders, heroine of a hundred photoplays, is cast in the principal woman's role in each chapter, giving the play the same advantages as that enoyed by a series in that the spectator, having missed one episode, will not lose the thread of the story.

For "The Grip of Evil" which has been called "A Master Plot in Fourteen Chapters Showing the Real Side of Humanity," President Wilson and others among America's great minds, have been instrumental in suggesting the story.

What each has to say will be of immense value to the exhibitors who show the picture in a town from which he comes or in which he lives.

FORTHCOMING PARAMOUNT RELEASES.

The following is the correct schedule of releases on the Paramount Program for the latter part of June and the month of July:

June 22 (No. 190) Famous Players, "Susie Snowflake," with Ann Pennington; June 26 (No. 191) Famous Players, "The World's Great Snare," with Pauline Frederick; June 29 (No. 192) Pallas Pictures, "The American Beauty," with Myrtle Stedman.

July 3 (No. 193), Lasky, "The Dupe," with Blanche Sweet; July 6 (No. 194), Famous Players, "The Smugglers," with Donald Brian; July 10 (No. 195), Lasky, "The Selfish Woman," with Wallace Reid and Cleo Ridgely; July 13 (No. 196), Pallas Pictures, "Davy Crockett" (as done by Frank Mayo), with Dustin Farnum; July 17 (No. 197), Lasky, "The Dream Girl," with Mae Murray; July 20 (No. 198), Famous Players, "Under Cover," with Hazel Dawn and Owen Moore; July 24 (No. 199), Morosco, "An International Marriage," with Rita Jolivet; July 27 (No. 200), Famous Players, "Little Lady Eileen," with Marguerite Clark; July 31 (No. 201), Famous Players, "When Shadows Fall," with Famous Players cast.

In the issue of The Moving Picture World dated June 24, in error, an advertisement of the Paramount Pictures Corporation was printed in which the foregoing release dates were incorrectly given.

GRAHAM LISTENS TO CHAPLIN STORY.

at a luncheon hour conference in Twenty-third street. Mr. Beck is not drawing a gun, as the picture might suggest. His smile indicates that he is telling Mr. Graham his latest Chaplin story.

RICHARDSON JOINS INCE PUBLICITY STAFF.

Leander Richardson has been engaged by Thomas H. Ince to join his publicity staff as advance man for "Civilization." Mr. Richardson left Thursday night for Chicago to exploit "Civilization in the "windy city" in addition to J. L. Barnard and Lou Housman.

Motion Picture Educator

THE INSTALLMENT EDUCATIONAL.

A PECULIAR habit of many exhibitors is that of showing a good educational in sections although the subjects never lend themselves to such divisions. A "What Happened to Mary" method cannot under any circumstances be applied to an educational picture, if the subject is more than one reel it is better to leave it out, altogether, than to show one reel tonight, and another tomorror, each reel without the other is absurd, and an offended taste cannot but result. These methods also have an injurious effect upon the use of the educational pictures as a whole; the public is not always "wise" to the way the educational picture is being abused instead of being used, as a result they criticize the use of the picture unjustly and the exhibitor begins to reject it, forgetful of the fact that rightly placed pictures will do for the program in the future what it has done in the past, and it becomes a serious question if the wrong uses of the educational and topical pictures is not responsible for the present dullness.

INAUGURATION OF SPECIAL RURAL PICTURE SERVICE.

In Washington on Decoration day the Bureau of Commercial Economics gave an exhibition of pictures suitable to the day at the base of the Washington Monument. The screen was surrounded with what is called the largest laurel-wreath ever made, so that the pictures were framed by this wreath. In addition to the pictures of the occasion, others descriptive of the pleasure spots and points of interest found in all the great National Parks of the country were shown. The director of the movement writes: "This inaugurates the service of the bureau in the park and rural districts, it is hoped thereby to benefit those whose locality and circumstances prohibit them from seeing what nature has done for their comfort and enjoyment. There are large numbers of people who cannot go to the picture houses, neither can they see these American beauty spots for themselves, to such these pictures will be a most welcome revelation."

The rural communities generally are those to whom the Bureau of Commercial Economics wishes to be most serviceable, having the two-fold object of relieving the monotony of life, and the impartation of knowledge otherwise unobtainable. In a letter commending this course Sir Wilfred Laurier recently wrote: "Anything and everything which can dispel ignorance and promote and enlarge education as the moving pictures are doing, is by far the best agency for the peace of the world, and higher civilization."

Mr. Francis Holley to whom we are indebted for the account of the doings of this bureau, is also actively engaged in encouraging the development of a similar work in Latin-Amcrica, with the laudable object of spreading a knowledge of American industries and travel, with the natural expectation that a closer union of friendship will also result, and the enterprises of this great Republic appreciated.

NOTES.

Indianapolis boasts of preparing for the building of the largest trade school in the country, the cost of the same is being spoken of in scven figures; our interest in this lies in the fact that the moving picture will have no small part in the plans, nowhere can the teachings of the pictures be more valuablc than in such an institution and they will doubtless be used and appreciated to thc fullest possible extent.

A Brooklyn clergyman is taking a course of lessons on projection so that he may become expert in the use of the moving picture machine which he intends to instal in his church. A special feature of this minister's idea is that of educationalism, rather than attraction. It is well known that his church needs neither advertising or attractive features to popularize it, the advantages of the teaching and illustrating powers of the pictures are the reasons for their adaption in this instance, entertainments by means of the pictures are to be remote, the advantage of Bible teaching and general religious training are the principles actuating the clergyman and his people. ## WELCOME, N. E. A.!

While this issue of the Moving Picture World is still the latest obtainable on the news stands, the many departments of the National Education Association, meeting this year in New York City, will begin their annual series of programs. To my fellow members of the association, who may cast a glance at this page, I wish to extend greetings and an unofficial welcome to the motion-picture opportunities you cannot fail to find here in the city of first releases.

Ever since, nearly three hundred years ago, Comenius blessed little children with his Orbis Pictus, progressive educationists have been striving to convey ideas to the minds of struggling learners more clearly by means of visual aids to instruction. As the remote result of a wealthy race horse fancier's odd interest in the movements of his horses' legs, we now have in the field a veritable army of experts, cameramen, travelers, actors, scientists, all eager to supply for our use the most marvelous educational tools the genius of man has yet invented. But, as Mr. Edison has wisely pointed out, these magical aids are not likely to be forthcoming in satisfactory quantities until we educationalists first get ourselves together and arrive at some practical basis upon which the film producers can afford to turn out the reels we prefer.

Can we not "get together" somehow? I think we can, and I believe we shall soon make at least a beginning of a movement toward such a practical basis as the film producers consider essential.

At any rate, Mr. Educationist, you should take advantage of your opportunities in the field of visual education while here in New York. Of course you will "see" the city, but it would be unwise to fail to see such educational films as may be viewed at the leading picture theaters, Rialto, Strand, Broadway, Stanley, and many others farther removed from Times Square. And be sure to see also some of the greater films now running, first, "Macbeth," then at least one of the stupendous battle films. If you are genuinely interested in the problem of using visual aids in education you will of course attend the meeting at the American Museum of Natural History on Friday, July 7.

A CLASSIC MYTH FILMED.

"Altogether lovely" is the verdict we should express upon the myth of Diana as embodied in pictures by Pluragraph (distributed by Unity) and shown at the Strand last week. The plot adheres closely to the story as originally told in the Latin of Ovid's Metamorphoses, Fable Three in Book III. All Latinists should hail this film with delight, for it will charm everyone—including both pupils and teachers, and those unfamiliar with Latin lore. To be sure, there are a few passages of uneven excellence in two rcels, but these lapses do not appreciably detract from the fine effect of the whole. Such films might be presented more effectively, in schools at any rate, if supplemented with slides showing the ancient and modern works of art that have been inspired by the myths involved.

EDUCATIONAL PARAGRAPHS ON HOUSE PROGRAMS.

Mr. Rothapfel of the Rialto theater, is a believer in the educational part of his program. In some other theaters educational reels are merely tolerated as time-fillers (to make the program come around just right every two hours), but the Rialto printed leaflet frequently contains a feature paragraph which Mr. Rothapfel has had prcpared with special reference to his educational number. Instance, the Pompeii travelogue shown last week was the occasion for a two hundred word encyclopedic article on that "city of the dead." Certainly such thoughtfulness for the mental culture of his patrons ought to appeal strongly to those of the better class. Mr. Rothapfel tells me that he plans to have the music played during the showing of educational subjects also related to their respective themes, folk songs and other national melodies are to be featured. In this matter all theaters may well adopt certain well established principles, especially the one suggested by the term "correlation."

ECHOES AND SIDELIGHTS.

My recent proposals as to a co-operative service of educational films are eliciting many interesting responses. Although the Moving Picture World, having generously given the school interests the opportunity of gaining information about the plan, may at almost any moment discontinue the practice of allowing such propaganda in these columns, I venture to call attention to certain impressive features found in letters I have recently received.

A dealer in projection equipment in the Middle West writes:

"We find our greatest obstacle in selling projectors to schools and churches is the almost prohibitive cost of film service. The high schools in this city are equipped with machines but they are used very seldom, owing to the high rent charged for films."

In similar vein writes a minister from a different quarter:

"The price we have been paying makes the cost too high for us to maintain indefinitely."

The inference is plainly that if schools and churches are to use films widely and increasingly, we must find a common denominator—a type of service which will be acceptable to entire circuits of like institutions. That is precisely what I am trying to do.

This echo from the northwest gives hope and fervor:

"Your proposition takes hold of the whole movement in a big way and I am wondering if we are too far away to share in its benefits. We should like you to consider the advisability of our representing your service from this point for a considerable area in this region."

No. You are not too far away. The service is likely to reach all the way from Maine to California. No subscriber will be too remote, provided other members are clustered close about him so that each program (five reels) may be run about a dozen times each week, i.e. twice daily. So go right ahead and enlist all the co-members you can secure on the basis of the condensed contract printed in the May 27 issue of the Moving Picture World. Send me the addresses of those you consider especially likely prospects.

A leading clubwoman in a big Western city writes:

"Your plan when completed will surely meet a crying need. There is now in course of incorporation here a Motion Picture League, which will be in position to help greatly in getting your message out and contracts in."

Such coworkers are indeed priceless in such an enterprise as ours. But so thorough-going is the principle of economy I am applying that even such prime co-operators must be asked to comply with the suggestion in my June 10 article (see p. 1886) about sending a quarter or a dollar. The printing of the detailed contract is being delayed temporarily, pending the arrival of a larger number of said remittances. The total number of responses received is very encouraging, but there are still many who are laboring under the delusion that this enterprise is to be financed by others than the prospective circuit members. On the contrary, it seems essential that from start to finish the funds needed shall be contributed by those who hope to have the use of the films. If, therefore, you have any intention of co-operating in such a movement, now is your chance. Begin.

METRO PLAYERS MAROONED BY STORM.

Marooned all night on one of the smaller of the Thousand Islands, near the lonesome Canadian mainland, while a terrible storm raged, was the harrowing experience of nine members of the Metro-Yorke company of players, headed by Harold Lockwood and May Allison, according to word just received from them at the Metro offices. The captain of the boat that carried the players to the island refused to venture back in the violent storm, which continued throughout the night. A lean-to, fashioned of heavy branches and small pieces of canvas, was rigged up by Mr. Lockwood and Lester Cuneo, to protect the feminine contingent, while the men sought refuge under the trees.

It was shortly after daylight before a cruiser sighted the distress signal on the shores of the island, and went to the aid of the group. Several members of the party suffered from exposure. All were suffering from hunger and thirst.

Terry Ramsaye

PHOTOGRAPHS of Editor Terry Ramsaye of Reel Life are scarce, but Hopp Hadley (also of the Mutual) having developed a sixth sense which enables him to locate photographs of the most camera-shy stage celebrities, managed to dig up this excellent likeness of the Mutual's popular publicity manager.

Terry Ramsaye.

Terry Ramsaye's newspaper activities had made him famous in the Middle West long before William Randolph Hearst took advantage of his clever pen, which was not many moons before President John R. Freuler captured the active Ramsaye brains for the Mutual Film Corporation. Since that time magazines and newspapers have found news value in Mutual publicity stories to an extent which has made the Mutual bills for paste and scrapbooks increase like an advance agent's expense account.

Terry Ramsaye's stories of Charlie Chaplin have even found their way into the editorial columns of responsible metropolitan dailies which, among other things, has resulted in the publicist carrying $230,000 worth of canceled Chaplin checks in his inside pocket. It seems that a certain newspaper ridiculed the idea that Chaplin received $10,000 a week salary. The following morning an office boy of the daily appeared before the city editor with the news that a man wanted to show him $230,000. "Bring him in! Quick!" shouted the editor, who, after he had examined the checks in speechless wonder, offered Mr. Ramsaye the freedom of his columns for "anything you want to say about the matter."

A born newspaper man, Terry Ramsaye loves a "beat." That's one reason why he slipped out of town for a few hours recently and came back with beautiful little Betty Shannon as his wife—and they kept the important news to themselves for some time, too!

SAM SPEDON TO REPRESENT VITAGRAPH.

Sam M. Spedon, besides taking care of the transportation of producers, exhibitors and others of the motion picture industry on a special train which will leave New York for Chicago on Saturday, July 8, for the Sixth National Exposition and Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, will also go in the capacity of "official representative" of the Vitagraph Company.

Mr. Spedon will look after affairs for the Vitagraph Company, which has contracted for an elaborate booth at Exposition Hall and will meet Vitagraph's many friends who visit the show. He will see that they are given a handsome Vitagraph souvenir as a remembrance of the occasion.

TWO VITAGRAPH-G. F. SUBJECTS FOR JULY 3.

A comedy and a drama, each a single reel in length, are Vitagraph's offering on the General Film Program for the week of July 3. The former, "When It Rains, It Pours," is from the Hollywood studio and features Mary Anderson, and the latter is entitled, "Billie's Mother," with Donald Hall and Helen Costello. On the same reel as the latter is "A Tour from Bergen to Bandak," which shows some beautiful scenes in the highlands of Norway.

FROLIC FOR OHIO LEAGUE MEN.

Members of the Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League are going to forget release dates, reformers and house receipts for one day at least in the near future and go on a real frolic. George W. Heinbuch of the Superior theater, is chairman of a committee which is arranging for an outing. Other members of the committee are S. F. Deutsch and S. H. Barck. The operators' union is to be invited to participate in the affair the date of which has not yet been set.

CHICAGO CONVENTION AND EXPOSITION.

There Will Be a Chaplin Day, a Mary Pickford Day and Francis X. Bushman and Griffith Days at the Exposition, from All Appearances.

APPLICATIONS for space have been coming in steadily every day for the past week from producers and of moving pictures and manufacturers of machines and accessories, and the exposition at the Coliseum, Chicago, from July 12-18, promises, without doubt, to be the greatest in the history of the industry. Louis H. Frank, manager of the exposition, announces that visitors to the Coliseum will have an opportunity to learn the progress of the moving picture business from the earliest time to its present position as fifth among the industries in the United States.

In addition to the great number of trade exhibits furnished by almost every firm interested in the moving picture business, entertainment of varied character will be provided for those who make the rounds of the exposition. There will be dancing afternoons and evenings in the Coliseum annex, where a complete moving picture studio will be constructed, and where fans and all interested in moving pictures will have an opportunity to see photoplays produced. There will also be a small theater in this annex in which pictures made at the exposition will be shown on the screen a few hours after their production. In addition to the photoplays produced during the convention daily topicals of convention happenings will also be shown on the screen.

Moving picture fans will have a chance to get acquainted with many of the leading photoplay stars, certain days having been set aside for the reception of these distinguished visitors. Through the courtesy of President Freuler, of the Mutual Film Corporation, it is pretty well assured that Charlie Chaplin will be one of these visitors, although Mr. Freuler qualifies this by the statement that he cannot afford to have Mr. Chaplin in Chicago unless his work on the Pacific Coast is far enough ahead, so as not to interfere with release dates. However, as Mr. Chaplin has been notified that his presence is requested by the many thousands of moving picture fans who will attend the exposition, it is likely that he will work night and day so as not to miss the opportunity of seeing his numerous admirers for at least one day during the exposition.

Francis X. Bushman has wired the exposition management that if arrangements can be made he will visit the exposition on a certain day set aside specially to enable him to become acquainted with his many followers. Mary Pickford, too, will be in Chicago, if it is at all possible to make arrangements. It is her wish to do so, and her management will do all in their power to enable her to be present for Mary Pickford day.

It is also promised that David W. Griffith will be here for a day set apart specially for him. Many other well known directors will be present so that the Coliseum, where the exposition will be held, will be a great reception room from the opening of the doors until their close after the big ball that is now being arranged for by the committee in charge.

On reflection, it appears that the time of the convention and exposition, from July 10-18, will be very suitable for exhibitors throughout the country, as thousands of them take their vacations during that month. Every exhibitor should make it a special object to attend the convention and see the exposition, as both promise to put all previous conventions and expositions in the shade, and to be well representative of the remarkable growth of the moving picture industry.

CALL FOR OHIO GET-TOGETHER.

Northeastern Division Instructs President to Invite All Exhibitors to Attend Meeting in Mansfield.

Ohio exhibitors affiliated with the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America will hold a state meeting in Mansfield, July 6 and 7, if the request of the Cleveland exhibitors to President La Motte Smith of Alliance is carried out. At a meeting of the Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League in their headquarters in the Republic Building a few days ago, it was voted to request President Smith to issue a call for a state meeting in Mansfield, July 6 and 7, at which time delegates to the national convention in Chicago might be elected and instructed.

Cincinnati exhibitors as members of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce have been corresponding with Cleveland exhibitors relative to a state get-together meeting to be held in Cincinnati. Cleveland exhibitors have declared that if such a meeting is held, it should be at some point in the state more central than Cincinnati.

PENNSYLVANIA CONVENTION OPENS.

Good Attendance from the State and Neighboring Territory—Addresses the Chief Feature of First Day's Program.

Pittsburgh, June 26.

THE Fifth Annual Convention and Exposition of the Motion picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania opened Monday morning in the Moose temple, Pittsburgh, with a good attendance of the trade from throughout the state and neighboring territory.

The convention was called to order at 11 o'clock by State Vice President G. W. Sahner, of Pittsburgh, who introduced City Solicitor J. M. Irons, representing the mayor, who was unable to be present. Mr. Irons in welcoming the convention to the city paid an eloquent tribute to the screen and confessed himself an ardent devotee of the motion picture. State President Ben H. Zerr, of Reading, responded in a few well chosen words, expressing his esteem of Pitsburgh and its hospitality. Fred J. Herrington, national president of the league, made a brief address. He was followed by W. Stephen Bush, of the Moving Picture World.

At noon a recess was taken and the visitors were entertained at luncheon, after which there was an automobile tour of the city. Inspection was also made of the handsomely arranged exhibit hall, where the leading exchanges and supply houses and manufacturers occupy booths.

The convention reconvened at 3 o'clock, being called to order by President Zerr. The attendance gradually increased during the day and numbered about three hundred. At the second session Mr. Bush delivered the principal address of the afternoon, speaking on the subject of "Organization."

The appointment of committees concluded the session, which was adjourned until Tuesday morning. For the remaining days of the convention an interesting program is to be carried out, and what is expected to be the greatest gathering in the history of the Pennsylvania league will come to a close with a banquet and cabaret in the English Room of the Fort Pitt Hotel, Wednesday evening.

VITAGRAPH-V-L-S-E FOR JULY 3.

The winning combination of a Blue Ribbon Feature and a Frank Daniels comedy is again seen in Vitagraph's releases for the week of July 3 through V-L-S-E. "The Conflict," the five part feature for the week, features Lucille Lee Stewart. Huntly Gordon, Jane Mortimer, William Lyttel, Jr., Frank Currier, John Robertson and Richard Turner make up the balance of a capable cast. Ralph W. Ince produced the picture. Alice Washburn and Ethel Corcoran support Mr. Daniels. C. G. Baker wrote the scenario.

MEETING OF OKLAHOMA'S EXECUTIVE BOARD.

The Executive Board of the Oklahoma Branch, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, convened at 10 A. M., June 30, at the Lee Huckins Hotel, Oklahoma City, Okla. It was a special meeting of the board to take up unfinished business that left over from the February meeting. Ways and means of assisting the Chicago convention were also discussed. A party will be made up, composed of delegates and visiting members, to go to Chicago.

Chicago News Letter

By JAS. S. McQUADE.

Monster Booster Meeting in Chicago for the Coming Convention and Exposition.

IN response to a personal letter sent out by Alfred Hamburger to forty men engaged in the exhibition and distribution of moving pictures, in Chicago, a meeting was held in Parlor M of the Hotel Sherman on Tuesday morning, June 20, thirty-eight out of the forty invited being present. The object of the meeting as outlined in Mr. Hamburger's letter was to stimulate interest in the approaching national convention and exposition in July.

More particularly, the business of the meeting was devoted to discussing plans and arrangements to insure the great success of a big mass meeting of Chicago exhibitors to be held in the Colonial theater, on Wednesday, June 28.

Mr. Hamburger occupied the chair, and in a brief address gained the hearty interest of all present in the plan originated by him. He stated that the purpose of the meeting was to form plans and to arrange a program for the great get-together meeting to be held in the Colonial. He explained that the theater had been placed at the disposal of exhibitors through the kindness of Aaron A. Jones and that the meeting will be held from 10 o'clock A. M. until 1 o'clock P. M.

"It is necessary that the people connected with this industry should be brought into closer harmony," said Mr. Hamburger. "We should do everything in our power to remove the friction which exists, I am sorry to say, between many theater men. We want to create a friendly feeling between the distributing end of the industry and the exhibitors.

"If we can only work along the lines that every man is a man of his word, and that Mr. Exchangeman's word, or an exhibitor's word, is as good as his written contract, it will be a pronounced step in the right direction.

"We cannot expect to have an amalgamation of the two interests at once; but we can hope for some of these good-fellowship meetings, and I should like to see Mr. Theaterman propose to Miss Filmdom and after a while we will have a wedding and everyone will be happy.

"It will be a pleasure to have any suggestions from those present on the ways and means of conducting the special meeting at the Colonial. The paramount issue is the coming national convention. It is the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. It is our convention. It is a Chicago convention, and I am sure we will make it reflect credit on our city and on the motion picture industry."

M. A. Choynski, proprietor of the Newberry theater, reminded those present that William J. Sweeney deserved all the credit for bringing the convention to Chicago; but that the burden of getting the money, which is always the keynote of success, had been chiefly borne by L. H. Frank and himself.

"Most of the large film concerns have responded liberally," he said, "but we want to impress upon them that after buying space their duty is only half performed. We want their moral support, and we want their offices to assist in promoting this exposition and convention. If we get their cooperation we shall have a great success.

"We cannot hope to get recognition from the powers that be, if we act as separate units, but it is our own fault and misfortune if we act this way. I trust that the great get-together meeting at the Colonial will serve to unite us in one great body and thus enable this convention to have a lasting effect and to take its place as second to none, thus far, in the history of our business."

After various suggestions and motions made by exchange men and exhibitors it was finally ordered by those present that Chairman Hamburger, Mr. Sweeney and F. M. Brockell be given the power to appoint twelve other members on a committee of fifteen, this committee to outline a program for the mass meeting at the Colonial and to send a letter to every exhibitor in Cook county cordially inviting them to attend.

Exchangemen also will act as a body to bring the exhibitors out en masse, and Business Agent E. D. Miller of the Chicago Moving Picture Machine Operators, Local 110, I. A. T. S. E., will also assist in making the meeting a record breaker for size and enthusiasm.

The following exhibitors and exchangemen were present at the meeting: H. Schoenstadt, R. O. Proctor, H. S. Stronge, Fred Schaefer, Julius A. Alcock, William J. Sweeney, M. S. Johnson, Robert R. Levy, M. A. Choynski, L. H. Frank, F. J. Flaherty, Harry Leonhardt, J. E. O'Toole, Alfred N. Cohen, Adolph Powell, Alfred Hamburger, W. D. Hildreth, Hal Johnstone, H. L. Lieberthal, R. L. Jacoby, I. Van Ronkel, Martin J. Quigley, George M. Laing, James S. McQuade, J. L. Friedman, E. C. Jensen, J. Cooper, F. M. Brockell, W. K. Hollander, S. M. Frankland, B. N. Judell, George Henry, H. A. Spanuth, C. A. Bunn, F. W. Hartman, F. Bartholomae, E. D. Miller and A. Zilligen, Jr.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Lubliner & Trinz, lessees of the Biograph, Vitagraph, Paramount, Knickerbocker and South Shore theaters, each with a capacity of about 1,000 people, recently leased the West End theater, at West End avenue and Forty-eighth street, which will be opened Sept. 15. The seating capacity is about 1,500.

Thomas H. Ince, the producer and director of "Civilization," and Victor L. Schertzinger, musical director of the presentations that are to be given in Chicago, arrived in the city Friday, June 23, and will remain here until the opening of the big spectacle at Cohan's Grand opera house, on Friday, June 30. The opening date, which was originally announced for Sunday, June 25, has been postponed until the date mentioned.

The opening of "Ramona" at the Auditorium, on Monday, June 19, was a big success. All the photoplay critics of the daily press have written in glowing terms of the picture and its presentation. Kitty Kelly in the Tribune says of it: "'Ramona' is a careful, thoughtful production, stamped with an artistic sincerity in its making and presentation. There is rich music in the accompaniment of the great orchestra, and quaint colorful melody in the songs of the people in the sets. It is something worth while for Chicagoans to see."

Edwin F. Weigle, the Tribune's famous war picture cameraman, has returned to the city after spending seven months with the armies of the Central powers, six weeks of which were passed in the first line trenches on the western and eastern fronts. He brought with him 7,000 feet of war film, which will be exploited shortly. These pictures are said to be unusually thrilling, and their presentation will be awaited with considerable interest.

W. E. Keefe, personal representative of D. W. Griffith, came on from Los Angeles to Indianapolis a short time ago, where he welcomed an addition to his family. He passed through Chicago Wednesday, June 21, on his way back to the Griffith studios.

The Colonial theater, now becoming famous for its numerous changes of programs, will again return to the moving picture fold on Wednesday evening, June 28, when Charles Urban's production, "How Britain Prepared," will be shown for the first time in this section. A large orchestra and special features are also announced on the program.

The calling out of the militia in Illinois has affected the positions of several men high in the city's departments. Second Deputy Superintendent of Police M. L. C. Funkhouser was called to Springfield, where he is attached to the quartermaster's general staff. First Deputy Herman F. Schuettler has been appointed by Chief Healey to take temporary charge of Second Deputy Funkhouser's office. This, of course, will include the censorship department.

While attempting to take a moving picture of an anti-American demonstration in Juarez on Sunday, June 18, Nicholas McDonald, a cameraman for the Selig-Tribune, was arrested by Mexican soldiers and deported, according to a dispatch from El Paso, Texas. Customs' officials had stopped McDonald's automobile at the American side of the international bridge, warning him that it was dangerous to visit the Mexican town. Ignoring the warning, McDonald evaded the Mexican customs' official at the Mexican end of the bridge, and carried his camera to the plaza. As he started to turn the crank, Carranza soldiers surrounded him, prodding him with their rifles and shaking their fists in his face. He was placed under arrest and marched to the bridge.

"What did they say to you?" McDonald was asked by an American customs' official.

"It sounded like 'murtos gringo,'" replied McDonald.

"Murtos los gringoes," repeated the customs' inspector. "Why they were shouting to kill you."

"I am glad I could not understand it," replied McDonald. "It was a shame to spoil that picture!"

All who have seen Al W. Filson's fine character acting in various roles in Selig photoplays will be glad to learn that he has been re-engaged by William N. Selig. Mr. Filson's first work under his new contract will be the title role in "The Old Man Who Tried to Grow Young," under the direction of T. N. Heffron.

The following programs have been announced at the prominent downtown theaters in Chicago for the week beginning Sunday or Monday, June 25 and 26:

Studebaker—Kitty Gordon in "The Crucial Test" (Brady) and the eighth chapter of "Gloria's Romance" (George Kleine), called "The Mesh of Mystery."

Fine Arts—Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle will dance merrily into their fourth week in "The Whirl of Life." An added attraction will be the first of a new series of Harry Watson comedies entitled "Blow Your Horn."

V-L-S-E theater—"Sherlock Holmes" (Essanay) is continued for another week. It will be supplemented by a Hitchcock comedy and a Hearst-Vitagraph Weekly.

Strand—Douglas Fairbanks in "Flirting With Fate" (Fine Arts), a travelogue and the Universal Weekly.

Orchestra Hall—Pauline Frederick in "The World's Great Snare" (Famous Players); a Paramount-Bray cartoon; the travelogue, "Constantinople," and a war picture entitled "The Soldiers of the World" (Swastika). Dan Beddoe, the famous Welsh tenor, and Miss Mildred Brown, violinist, will be the soloists.

La Salle—Eighth week of "The Little Girl Next Door" (Illinois vice film). It is announced that 300,000 people have already seen this film.

The Emerald Motion Picture Company of this city gave a trade showing of the first episode of the "Tom & Jerry" comedy series, at 10:30 A. M. Thursday, June 22, at the Bluebird Exchange. As advertised elsewhere in this issue, the first release of "Tom & Jerry" will be made on June 26, to be followed with one episode a week thereafter, for ten weeks. Each episode is in two reels.

ORGANIZING ROAD COMPANIES FOR "RAMONA."

The W. H. Clune interests of California, whose cinema-operatic spectacle "Ramona" was their introductory attraction, have just completed a booking and producing organization for the purpose of sending "Ramona" companies into every state of the Union. New York offices, with H. F. Matthews in charge, were opened this week in Suites 1 and 2, New Amsterdam theater Building, where will be laid routes for twelve companies to be operated through eastern territory, several of which will play throughout the summer.

John J. Holland, who has general direction of all tours, arrived in New York a few days ago and immediately set about organization of additional orchestras and working crews for companies to be started early in the fall.

Nearing End of "The Iron Claw"

"The Cave of Despair" Opens Pathe Program for First Week in July—Another Picture in "Who's Guilty?" Series.

BEGINNING July 3 the Pathe company will release "The Cave of Despair," the next to the final chapter of "The Iron Claw." In this episode Margery Golden (Pearl White) takes a note which she finds Davy writing and discovers it contains a mysterious direction for opening a certain boulder on the side of a hill. Later, while on a walk, she encounters the sinister Legar, "The Iron Claw," and, following the directions on the paper, opens the boulder and takes refuge in it. The Claw and his henchmen follow her, two of the latter meeting sudden and sensational death in the mysterious cave. Margery, backing away from one of Legar's men, is cornered on a shelf in the rock, and is seemingly on the point of death, when "The Laughing Mask" appears, and she learns the true identity of "The Laughing Mask"; but she does not share her secret with the audience, which must wait for the next and final chapter, called "The Triumph of the Laughing Mask."

Following "The Cave of Despair" comes "The Weaker Strain," the latest chapter of the "Who's Guilty?" series, featuring Anna Nilsson and Tom Moore. This, briefly is the idea of "The Weaker Strain": If the wife of a young man, just climbing toward success in his profession, is gifted with an unusually splendid voice; and if she can add to their income by singing in public; and if the husband believes that it is his duty to support his wife and her duty to be content to live within his income—is the wife justified in deciding on a career for herself? This is the motif of a theme worked out with dramatic intensity in this chapter.

"Luke's Washful Waiting" is the title of a one reel Lonesome Luke comedy for release in the week of July 3. A Goldberg Cartoon Comedy, "Nutty News" by "the guy who made laughing a national daily habit" comes next. The film starts with this injunction: "Before looking at this picture, please check your brains at the box office."

"Across the Malay Archipelago" is the title of a split reel scenic and educational picture following the Goldberg cartoon. "The Kinkajou," on the same reel with "Across the Malay Archipelago," shows the kinkajou, a carnivorous animal of the raccoon family, which is found in the wooded regions of Mexico and as far south as Brazil. Two issues of the Pathe News wind up the Pathe program for the week of July 3.

Chaplin Loses "Carmen" Suit

Appellate Division of Supreme Court Affirms Order in Favor of Essanay.

CHARLES CHAPLIN has lost his last card in his legal fight against the Essanay Company and the V-L-S-E, which he sought to restrain from exhibiting the burlesque on "Carmen," in which he was starred, and that feature comedy will continue to play to crowded houses throughout the country. The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court was the tribunal to rule against the comedian this time, it having handed down a decision affirming the order of the Supreme Court in favor of the defendants.

Chaplin now finds himself face to face with a half-million-dollar suit brought against him by the Essanay Company. According to the wording of the suit, Chaplin agreed, in July, 1915, to aid in the production of ten two-reel comedies before January 1, 1916, for each of which he was to receive a bonus of $10,000 over and above his salary of $1,250 per week. Four of these were never completed, it is charged.

EDISON MAKING FIVE-REELERS.

The fact that a series of superb five-reel productions, in which many famous stars of the legitimate stage are being featured, is being made at the Edison studio in Bedford Park, N. Y., is arousing interest among exhibitors. The inquiries received at the company offices indicate a steadily growing interest in the series and a tendency on the part of exhibitors to be thoroughly informed as to the nature of the pictures in anticipation of their release.

At the present time no information regarding the channel through which the pictures will be marketed or the dates on which they will be released is being given. It can be announced only that the pictures are being made without any reference to meeting release dates or maintaining a definite output and that, for this reason, an exceedingly high artistic standard is being reached in each production. While the Edison company will be glad to furnish any other information regarding the work that is being done in the Bedford Park studios at the present time, no announcement regarding the disposal of the pictures in the five-reel series that is being made will be forthcoming at the present time.

ANOTHER ALL NIGHT PICTURE RUN.

J. A. Quinn Does It Again With Vitagraph's "Preparedness" or "Battle Cry of Peace."

Owing to the large crowds that were unable to secure admittance to Quinn's Empress during the week of June 12, and to the requests from business men who were unable to attend the regular performance, J. A. Quinn staged an all-night performance of "The Battle Cry of Peace" on the 17th. Mr. Quinn was the first manager to give a midnight show on the Pacific Coast. His first "early" performance was staged at the Superba theater, where he established a record run for "Damaged Goods." Starting at 10:30 o'clock in the morning, "Preparedness" was shown continuously to 11 P. M. Sunday night.

Wires from numerous exhibitors who have heard of the remarkable success of the staging of "Preparedness" here keep coming to Mr. Quinn, requesting engagements at their theaters as soon as the run at the Empress is through. Mr. Quinn, however, has made no definite plans for the showing of the spectacle in other cities.

Especially interesting were the scenes of the big parade, and this is another instance of the enterprising method of Quinn, in whose brain originated the idea of holding a preparedness week in film during the week in which the preparedness parade was to be staged.

LAEMMLE'S COMPANY IN PREPAREDNESS PARADE.

The Universal, as usual, was on the job when the great preparedness parade was held. Manager M. G. Jonas of the publicity department never fails to take advantage of any great event, and so this time the Big U was well represented. Miss Marie Walcamp of the Universal studios was accorded the honor of being the Columbia of the parade.

A feature of the parade was a "Spirit of 1916" group, composed of Victor Potel, Miss Marcia Moore and Ernest Shields. Marching behind a huge banner bearing the inscription, "The Spirit of 1916" was Potel garbed as Uncle Sam, pointing the way to the training camps. On one side of Uncle Sam walked Shields, carrying a suit case inscribed "To Citizens' Training Camp," and on the other side of Uncle Sam marched Miss Moore carrying a suit case inscribed "To Women's Training Camp."

MONROVIA FILM COMPANY SOUSED.

That popular but inane sport known as "rocking the boat" came near to making a tragic ending to several members of "The Daughters of the Don" company of the Monrovia Film Company, when scenes were being made at San Pedro harbor last Wednesday.

Returning from a vessel anchored in the outer harbor, the party of actors and cameramen were in a launch and rowboat that were being towed. Hal Cooley, playing lead in the production, elected to make the trip toward shore in the rowboat. Festive spirits among the rowboat passengers persisted in the rocking stunt until it was capsized by the seas from a passing tug. Fortunately everyone in the boat was able to swim, and a good ducking was all that resulted from the accident. The immersed ones were taken aboard by a passing launch.

STEWART HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

Daniel H. Stewart, a motion picture actor, narrowly escaped death when his horse slipped on a steep mountain trail near Santa Monica. The horse fell backward down the mountain side and was killed. Stewart jumped from the saddle.

LOS ANGELES FILM BREVITIES.

"The Jesse L. Lasky Company," said Cecil B. DeMille, "has no intention of employing any other studio than the one in Hollywood, where it has a most complete and efficient plant. The Lasky Company has no intention of releasing its photodramas through any other organization than the Paramount Picture Corporation for many years to come.

"Realizing that these many statements of our being absorbed by other concerns and releasing through other organizations than that of the Paramount have been very disturbing, not only to the photodramatic producers but to the exhibitors as well, I wish to make the above statement as emphatic as possible."

Harry Williams, sparkling songster and Keystone scenarioist, was the guest of honor this week at the Saturday night conclave of the Pals Club. Harry arose and warbled some of his most famous songs including the official Pals song and "I'm Afraid to Come Home in the Dark," as well as the one about the shade under a certain Pippin tree—oh yes, and that war song about being a long way from the trenches at home.

"God's Country and the Woman," the Nell Shipman feature film made in Bear Valley last winter and which nearly cost the lives of all concerned during a big snowstorm, will have its first showing at the Superba theater early next month.

James W. Horne at the Kalem is busy this week on the third episode entitled "The Oil Field Plot." This story will contain an oil well fire, a gusher and the explosion of a well which are actual scenes and not fakes. It was necessary for Mr. Horne to take his company to Taft, La Brea, Sherman, Fullerton and other localities for these effects and settings. Marin Sais is featured in this production.

G. E. Jenks, formerly a member of the Universal's western scenario staff and well known in Los Angeles photoplay circles, this week joined the Signal Film Company forces, where he is to work with J. P. McGowan in the preparation of scenarios for the Helen Holmes features.

"Flying A" Director Edward Sloman has put unusual effects in his picture "Dust." In it he has a night scene, taken in the rain, of a rapidly moving automobile with the passengers in close-up effect, and with lightning flashing in the road. It is a striking combination, and is so realistic that it should be a sensation when the picture is seen.

In Glendale at the Kalem studio Director James W. Horne has finished the second episode of the "Girl from Frisco" series entitled "The Turquoise Mine Conspiracy," scenes of which are located at Randsburg. The mine scenes were taken around the Yellow Astor Mine and its properties. Marin Sais is featured in this series and is supported by True Boardman and a company of such well known players as Frank Jonasson, R. E. Bradbury, Ed Clisbee, Barney Furey and others. A special train was chartered to take the company, horses and props to Randsburg. Nothing was too much for the citizens and officers of the town to do.

Director Hal Roach of Rolin Phunphilms took a two-day vacation and went up into the mountains to fish. He returned to the studio Monday morn with "60 feet of fine water stuff," namely, a mess of speckled beauties. Roach says he wants to do "water stuff" of this kind all the time.

Winifred Westover, a newcomer in screen circles, plays with De Wolf Hopper in his first two-reel Triangle Comedy. She is the daughter of Clyde Westover, the well known fiction writer and vice-president of the San Francisco Press Club. Chester Withey is the director.

The Ince studios are again busy, with the return of three companies from distant "locations." The directors who have "come home" are Reginald Barker, Charles Giblyn and Walter Edwards. Barker climbed Mount Baldy in the interests of the current Frank Keenan vehicle; Giblyn visited San Diego for scenes in the Louise Glaum story, and Edwards went to Monterey as director of the Dorothy Dalton-William Desmond production.

President S. S. Hutchinson has a new story direct from the "Flying A" studios in Santa Barbara.

When Juainta Hansen joined the American she had just recovered from an attack of appendicitis, and looked very thin. She soon started to fatten up, and when President Hutchinson visited the studio, he happened to hear two stage hands talking about her while a third was working on a set a few feet away, "She's sure gained weight since she started in on this serial" (meaning the submarine serial), one said to the other. The third overheard it, and being a lanky with a hankering for heaviness himself, he asked "What kind of a cereal is it? I want to try some of it." And the genial president thought that it was too good to keep and now the joke is spreading all around studio circles.

"Twenty-four Hour Smith," as the new manager of the Garrick theater is called, is indeed a true hustler. He lets nothing get by him. With the new Mutual comedies featuring Charles Chaplin, and all the latest features, his program is a real magnet for the hundreds of Broadwayites who frequent the screen houses. Mr. Smith runs an orchestra for all there is in it, not time, but quality and originality.

Here's a new one from "P. A." McGaffey of the undermentioned studio:

"Miss Marie Trainor, a beautiful young society woman of Missoula, Montana, who is riding on horseback from that city to the Lasky studio, Hollywood, wires that she has arrived safely in Spokane. She is doing from fifty to sixty miles a day. En route she is telling the citizens of the towns she visits the glories of Missoula and the merits of the Lasky productions."

Most everyone in Los Angeles seems to be tapping out scenarios and now Oscar Apfel, director-general of the Fox studio, has chosen Henry Christeen Warnack's five-reel drama, "Through the Flames," in which he will star William Farnum in the last picture in which Mr. Farnum will work before going to the eastern studios and to his summer home. Mr. Warnack, who is dramatic editor of The Times, has put a big and gripping story in "Through the Flames."

At the Vitagraph Rollin Sturgeon's company is back from a boat trip to San Diego, on which they finished the remaining scenes of his feature production.

The town enjoyed the visit this week of Eugene H. Roth, one of the film magnates of San Francisco. He was accompanied by his wife, and they spent a day at the Thomas H. Ince plant at Culver City. They were astounded at the magnitude of the new quarter-million dollar studio. According to the well known showman, who controls the Portola and Market Street theaters in San Francisco, Triangle plays are becoming more popular daily with his patrons. One of the big factors in the pulling power of the Griffith, Ince and Sennett productions, he declared, is the aptness of the titles. "Every exhibitor," said Mr. Roth, "will agree with me when I say that the title should be one of the most important things to be considered by the producer. It plays a most important part in deciding a person whether to go in or stay out of a theater. For the Triangle, I can say nothing but words of praise for its titles. I have found them big magnets and I feel certain that, as wonderful as the plays themselves are, the titles have had a lot to do with the box office receipts."

Vola Smith, the Universal player, is happily returned from two weeks in faraway mountains, where she was featured in five one-reel Universal pictures, under the direction of Clifford Elfelt.

Last week during the illness of Art Acord, the "Buck Parvin" of the Charlie Van Loan series, Ashton Dearholt took his place as lead in several "Mustang" pictures made at the American studio. This is not all Ashton did, either. He took pretty little Helene Rosson, also of the "Flying A" and "went and got married," which news will surprise many friends of the popular couple.

Manager Whiting of the Rolin Phunphilms discovered a new angle on the deep interest of picture fans this week when he asked to use a handsome home on the boulevard. The owner said he could use it for pictures, but he would have to promise to tell when and where the picture could be seen, and to leave $20 to show his good faith. Whiting left the twenty, but asked the man why. The householder said he had often allowed picture men to make film there, but that they never kept their promises of telling him where the scenes could be seen when released. Whiting has the $20 on deposit and is getting no interest, but the setting was worth it, he says.

As the first step toward the subsequent enlargement of the Signal studios, Director J. P. McGowan has vacated the residence on the company property which he has been occupying and removed to a larger residence just opposite the studio. While no date has been set for the opening of the additional grounds for studio activities, it is planned to remove the house and add the grounds to the studio lot, thus increasing by one-third the present area.

These are indeed busy days at the L-KO laugh-thrill factory, where Pathe Lehrman is turning out comedies that are truly funny. While visiting the studio this week we met a number of the players and our old friend, Abe Stern, who gave us a couple of pictures which we reproduce herewith.

At the L-KO Laugh Factory.

The upper insert shows a real steam locomotive crashing into a genuine street car on the main line of one of the local railroads. The frailty of the boulevard vehicle was shown by the manner in which the heavy steel locomotive reduced it to a mass of twisted steel and splinters.

The lower print shows Billie Ritchie in "A Bold Bad Breeze," a one-reeler that is surely full of fun and thrills. These cops are holding Billie over the edge of a real downtown building, and the scenery shows its actual action.

James E. Smith and his bride, who was Miss Rose C. Richter, were host and hostess recently at the Athletic Club at a wedding dinner, from the guest list of which a dozen all-star casts could have been parceled out. The bridegroom is head of the film assembling department of the Fine Arts studio and the bride has been his assistant for several months.

The guests at dinner included D. W. Griffith, Mae Marsh, Fay Tincher, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Bitzer, Miss Lillian Gish, Miss Constance Talmadge, Miss Lillian Talmadge, the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. M. Smith; his brother, W. Smith, and Mrs. Smith; Frank Woods, Eddie Dillon, the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Richter; Christie Cabanne, Miss Agnes Richter, J. C. Epping and Miss Mazie Radford.

The Helen Holmes Company has completed arrangements for a trip of several weeks to the mountains north of Eureka. They will leave the studios about the middle of July and travel north by auto to Eureka, where they will remain for six to eight weeks making exterior scenes in the production of a feature.

"Whispering Smith" Leads Mutual July 3

Helen Holmes Story is Followed by Bill Russell's "The Highest Bid."

MUTUAL for the week of July 3 presents two additional five-act Mutual Star Productions, in which Helen Holmes, of the Signal studios, and William Russell, of the American company, are the featured players. The first of these, adapted for the screen by Frank Hamilton Spearman and directed by J. P. McGowan, who also appears in the role of Whispering Smith, will be released July 3 under the title of "Medicine Bend." Of the various railroad stories written by Mr. Spearman, no other, in all probability, presents such a wide variety of thrills and intimate knowledge of the complex details of railroad life as does "Medicine Bend."

Second of the Mutual Star Productions, "The Highest Bid," featuring William Russell, will be released July 6. This was adapted for the screen by J. Edward Hungerford from the story of the same name by Arthur H. Gooden. The story is based on love and high finance, the scenes of which stretch all the way from Wall street to the Sierras.

"The Hidden Face," Mutual's three-act offering of the week, featuring Iva Shepard and Alexander Garden, will be released July 6. It is a mystery drama.

The two-part offerings of the Mutual for the week are three interesting subjects, first of which, "Killed by Whom?" with Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh in the chief roles, is released July 3. "The Taming of Wild Bill," July 7, is the Mustang two-part offering. Jack Richardson, familiar "heavy" of Mustang-Mutual dramas, is the hero. Margaret Gibson is featured as the star of "The Good for Nothing Brat," a two-act Centaur-Mutual, released July 8. William Clifford and various members of the David Horsley contingent of players appear in her support..

"The Chaser Chased," featuring Rube Miller, for release July 4, and "Hired and Fired," with Ben Turpin, to be released July 9, are the Vogue-Mutual releases for this week. Beauty offerings include "Billy Van Deusen, Masquerader," featuring Johnny Sheehan, John Steppling and Carol Halloway, to be released July 5, and "The Gink Lands Again," with Orral Humphrev. for release July 9.

"A Merry Mixup" with George Ovey, is the Cub release. It will go to the public July 7.

A number of interesting subjects in connection with the call to arms of the National Guard and scenes along the Mexican border are included in Mutual Weekly No. 79, for release July 5. "See America First" also goes to the public the same day, while various topics of interest are pictured in Reel Life, the Mutual Film Magazine in pictures, for release July 9..

HEARST MAN WITH PERSHING IN MEXICO.

Tracy Mathewson, of the Hearst International News Pictorial camera staff, at the time of the massacre of Americans by Villa at Columbus, New Mexico, was the first "movie" man to arrive upon the scene. Having filmed the stirring events in and about Columbus, he immediately filed his application for permission to accompany General Pershing's expedition. Meantime other cameramen had arrived. but Mathewson was the only one allowed to go with the troops.

Mathewson's camera caught the boys in khaki in the act of crossing the border, and as the expedition moved farther into the land of "manana," Mathewson was along with them.

Troops F and H, U. S. Cavalry, Breaking Camp in Mexico, Photographed by Mathewson.

The first camp was made a few miles within Mexico and he obtained an excellent "shot" of this. No event of interest escaped the eagle eye of Mathewson's camera, as with dogged persistency he followed each movement of the troops.

Paramount Prospectus for July 10

Dustin Farnum Will Be Seen in the Famous Old-Timer, "Davy Crockett."

WALLACE REID and Cleo Ridgely will be featured in the Lasky production, "The Selfish Woman," the first of the two five-reel features to be released by the Paramount Pictures Corporation for the week of July 10. It will be released on Monday. Thursday's feature will be from the Pallas studios—"Davy Crockett" (as done by Frank Mayo) with Dustin Farnum as the star.

A. B. Reed's drawing "The Wild and Woolly West," in the Paramount-Bray Animated Cartoons, "Beautiful Bavaria," in the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel-Pictures, and the Paramount Pictographs will be the three short reel subjects rounding out this program.

Hints and "don'ts" for vacationists planning canoe trips are attractively presented in this release of the Pictographs, which includes among other features "Table Manners" in the "Better Babies" series; "System" in a feature showing correct business methods; "Birds;" "Speeding Up the Mail" and "Typhoid vs. Leucocyte," a battle of germs caught by the cameraman.

A thrilling and picturesque drama of western cowboy life is the "Wild and Woolly West," the Paramount-Bray Animated Cartoon drawn by A. B. Reed. Riding on top of a hurricane the hero has an opportunity to indulge in many screen antics, not the least of which are the shooting up of a train and the robbing of the station safe. Romance also has a place in the plot.

"Beautiful Bavaria" is a continuation of the "before-the-war" glimpses of European beauty spots which Burton Holmes is giving his screen audience in the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel-Pictures.

"Mitch" Lewis Heap Big Chief

MITCHELL LEWIS, who plays Kahoma, the Indian, in Viola Dana's first Metro production, "The Flower of No Man's Land," can speak the Ute language fluently and knows some of the Onondaga language. He has made a specialty of Indian parts, and has lived among the Indians in various parts of the country. He has also played African headsmen, Chinamen, and everyday American types. His father was Welsh and his mother Bohemian.

Mitchell Lewis.

Mr. Lewis was formerly in the United States Navy. He was on the Wasp in Cuba and Porto Rico during the Spanish-American War. Later he went to the Flagship New York and was schoolmaster in the naval training school at Newport. He has medals for bravery in action.

Leaving the service he joined the cast of William Collier's play, "Would You for Five Million," in which George Parsons and Isabelle Urquhart played, and then went into "The Chinese Honeymoon." He was in the all-star cast of "The Two Orphans," in which James O'Neill, Louis James, Clara Morris, Sarah Cowell Le Moine, Jameson Lee Finney and Elita Proctor Otis appeared. For three years he was with William Faversham in repertoire. He followed Theodore Roberts in "The Squaw Man." Going to London, he played with Lewis Waller and with Fred Terry, and returning to America, was featured in the "Drainman" in a road production of "The Servant in the House."

Mr. Mitchell's motion picture experience has included "The Million Dollar Mystery." "Zudora," the film production of "The Girl I Left Behind Me," the police sergeant in "Stop Thief," and Bully Bill in the Lockwood and Allison Metro production, "The Come Back."

Lasky Script Department Remodeled

Head of Producing Company Announces Policy of Co-operation with Writers.

By Jesse L. Lasky.

RECENTLY I went on record with the statement that the art of motion picture producing was not advancing and gave as the reason the scarcity of good material for stories; in fact, I laid the blame for this lapse of progress entirely on the shoulders of our novelists, dramatists and scenarioists who are providing the material for the present-day photoplays.

Since the wide publication of this article less than a month ago I have been deluged with letters from authors and writers and others connected with the motion picture industry, many of them agreeing with my views of the matter, but the majority laying the blame for the lack of suitable dramatic material back on the producers and on myself as one of the producers.

The motion picture columns of many daily papers and some of our trade papers also took exception to some of my statements so that I am moved to not alone defend my position, but I want to show if I can that the Lasky Company, at least, does more than criticise a deplorable fact, but is taking every possible means to remedy the existing state of affairs. The controversy is based on the following arguments: I claim the art of producing on the screen is hampered by the lack of good material and the fact that our authors are not rising to the occasion. My critics, on the other hand, claim that the fault is with the producers; that we do not recognize good material when we see it and if we do recognize a good story then we quibble over the price so that the poor author is not encouraged to continue his writing. They futher state that good ideas submitted to a scenario department are often returned to the writer by the department later to appear disguised in a different form and produced under another title.

One very able writer and critic writes me:

> It takes months, instead of weeks, to write a strong, original and vital story in such carefully revised scenario form as will do away with costly editing after visualization. There is a vast amount of creative work involved and a lot of skilled craftsmanship besides. Yet all this labor must be handed over without consideration of any sort, without protection from wholesale stealing or retail peculation, not to the reputable producers themselves, for private examination and secret consideration, but to a department of responsibility wholly unknown. Every week I am asked by authors about the responsibility of producers.

What can I reply?

The concluding paragraph of a very able answer to my article by Epes Winthrop Sargent, of the Moving Picture World, is worth quoting. Appealing to the producers he writes:

> Come out in the open and buy and pay for stories. Give the promising writers a chance to see how things are done. Follow their scripts until they no longer have to write in to inquire if the current release is their story or one like it, as has been done in the past, and it will be found that the supply will equal the demand when there is a real and genuine demand backed by checks.

Recognizing that there is some truth in these statements, the Lasky Company on June 1 established a scenario department along new and original lines, and through this department we hope to answer every one of the above criticisms by doing away with as many of the evil conditions existing between the producers and authors as is humanly possible.

First, we guarantee that all material submitted will get quick consideration and if it is not acceptable we will return it to the author with a very carefully written, constructive criticism, in which we will endeavor to point out the reasons why the story, in our humble opinion, was not worth purchasing. If, on the other hand, the story contains an idea or even a situation worth developing, we agree to collaborate with the author and to help him develop his story to a point where it is in such form that we can pay the author a good price for material that under ordinary conditions would have been returned as being not good enough for production.

After a practical experience of over two years at our coast studios, during which he wrote some of the most successful Lasky photoplays, we have brought to New York to head the department, Hector Turnbull. Mr. Turnbull has been persuaded to give up writing himself and to lend all his time to the encouraging and assisting of other writers. We intend to appeal to men at the top of their profession who in the past would not take the trouble to study this new art with care. We want to co-operate with the men who write good stories or who have not yet established their names in the literary field; in fact, we ask every writer experienced and otherwise to get in touch with our department. We are willing and ready to pay well for ideas submitted in ordinary synopsis form—and by trained continuity writers, many of them formerly successful dramatists, we will take these stories and preserving all their dramatic qualities, construct them into the final complete scenarios.

Universal Program for July 3

Includes Subjects Featuring Bosworth, Rawlinson, Wilson, Mary Fuller, Baggot, Carey and Moore and Jane Gail.

THE program of the Universal Company for the week of July 3 is headed by an adaptation for the screen of one of the most famous plays of the late Clyde Fitch. "The Way of the World," cleverly adapted for the films and presented as the twenty-third Red Feather, with a splendid cast headed by Hobart Bosworth and Dorothy Davenport. It was directed by Lloyd Carleton, and marks the beginning of a week of noteworthy offerings.

On July 4, Herbert Rawlinson appears in a delightful Gold Seal comedy, "They Wouldn't Take Him Seriously," in which he is supported by pretty Agnes Vernon. On the same day Ben Wilson, directing himself and Edna Hunter, follows Rawlinson with an excellent Rex domestic drama, "The Head of the Family." There is a sparkling Imp comedy called "The Clever Mrs. Carter," with Edith Robertson and Harry Benham.

For July 5, Mary Fuller appears in "Behind the Veil," a Victor two-reel drama, in which she plays twin sisters, of similar appearance, but widely different character. On the same day there is an amusing L-Ko Komedy, with Fatty Voss and Harry Coleman, called "A Gambler's Gambol." The program is completed by the Animated Weekly.

July 6 brings the popular favorite, King Baggot in a very remarkable Imp two-reeler, "The Man Across the Street." Baggot plays a double in this with consummate skill. A juvenile comedy, "The Wishing Lamp," is provided for the younger members of the audience, and the performance ends with a comedy, "The Janitor," which was directed by the Universal's new producer, Wallace Beery. He plays the main part himself.

"The River Goddess," a typical Matt Moore and Jane Gail comedy, is the Imp offering for July 7. This has the unusual twist and the surprise at the end which we are accustomed to look for when the names of these two players appear on the program. Following this comes an allegorical drama, entitled "Any Youth," written and produced by Allen Holubar. A real Nestor comedy with Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, called "Double Crossing the Dean," rounds out the day.

July 8 brings an adaptation for the screen of another of the celebrated Peter B. Kyne stories, from the Saturday Evening Post. This is called "The Committee on Credentials," with Harry Carey. It is in three reels. On the same day comes the first installment of the famous travel pictures of the expedition of Doctor Dorsey. The first installment is "Sports of the Rajahs in Mysterious India." A typical Joker comedy, "An All Around Cure," with Gale Henry and William Franey, complete the day.

Sunday, July 9, is marked by one of Cleo Madison's society dramas, in which she directs and plays the lead herself. It is "A Dead Yesterday," and she is supported by Hobart Henley. The week finishes with another L-Ko, "Getting the Goods on Gertie," with Reggie and Dave Morris and Gertrude Selby.

CONVICT WRITES FILM APPRECIATION.

From "The Star of Hope," the monthly publication of New York State's four prisons, comes the following authoritative view from the pen of No. 11958, of Clinton Prison:

"If any doubt exists in the minds of those carping puritans opposed to motion picture comedies and dramas in prisons and who do not believe they benefit inmates, let them visit Clinton, interview the boys and learn from them the moral lessons to be derived from the pictures. The puritan will be the first to set up the holler, 'Give them more, every night in the week, and twice on Sundays.'"

This critical appraisement of the motion picture appeared in the course of an extended appreciation and expression of gratitude for the program of Kalem pictures furnished the inmates for a recent holiday show. Ham and Bud and Sis Hopkins were among the funmakers who received warm praise from No. 11958. "We received mental and physical exercise," he declared, "for when we weren't giving vent to explosive laughter we were shaking our sides with glee."

MISS WOODRUFF PLAYS LEAD IN "JAFFERY."

Eleanor Woodruff is to play the lead in the new photoplay, "Jaffery," by William J. Locke. For several years she has played leads with the Vitagraph and Pathe, and now finds herself in her biggest part, playing opposite C. Aubrey Smith in the Frohman Amusement Corporation's production of Locke's greatest novel.

Release of June 26th Gives Remarkably Satisfactory Illustration of Boxing, Billiards and Wrestling.

By Lynde Denig.

THE Athletic Feature Film Series, being produced by the Selig Company in twelve single reels, was launched on June 26 with a picture bound to interest the general public as well as sporting enthusiasts who make a study of boxing, wrestling, or billiards. Subsequent reels, to be released at weekly intervals, will introduce the foremost exponents of every variety of sport that at all lends itself to pictorial treatment.

Mike Gibbons, until recently champion middleweight boxer; Koji Yamanda and Albert Cutler, the billiard experts, and Dr. B. F. Roller and Frank Dalkus, wrestlers, are introduced in the initial release, which is unquestionably one of the most satisfactory athletic pictures ever made. Photographically it is flawless and the scenes are so arranged that an audience gains an intelligent idea of what proficiency means in the sports illustrated.

Opening the reel are scenes showing Mike Gibbons in training, followed by a spirited bout revealing the speed the science that have made him one of the marvels of the ring. More remarkable, because more unusual and difficult to picture, is the exhibition of billiards given by Yamada, the Japanese champion, and Cutler of Boston, long ranked among the leading players of the world. The camera was placed close to the table so that with each shot the movement of the balls might be readily followed. After each man has been given an opportunity to present his style of game there is a startling display of trick shots that appear quite impossible to the novice. The match between Dr. Roller and Frank Dalkus is exciting in itself and instructive in giving close views of the great variety of holds used by trained wrestlers.

In connection with the release of the Selig Athletic Feature Film series the Selig company announces that simultaneously with each film issue there also will be released to the newspapers of the United States a signed feature article in either proofs, plates, or mats. These feature articles will not exceed three quarters of a column in length and will be copyrighted and will bear the author's signature. Joe Stecher, the wrestling marvel, writes the first installment. Hundreds of newspapers have asked for exclusive service. But one newspaper in each city will be served. J. H. Herman, Selig Company, Chicago, is handling the details.

REGULARLY SOUSED IN CORCORAN TANKS.

With the bathing season at hand A. J. Corcoran, New York City, is deriving considerable satisfaction from the fact that such prominent players in motion pictures as Billie Burke, Edmund Breese, Anita Stewart, William S. Hart, Marie Doro, Mary Pickford, Lillian Gish, "Fatty" Arbuckle, Lew Fields and Joe Weber are being quite regularly soused in film form in the developing tanks which he makes. He says they always come up smiling for the screen and in no way seem to mind the duckings which they are given.

The Corcoran line is becoming popular and is being used in the trade by such firms as the Universal, Pathe, Thomas A. Edison, Inc., and also by the United States Government at Washington.

PATHE CLUB TO HAVE OUTING.

The Pathe Club, under the presidency of J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, has become active. It has a membership of about one hundred and twenty-five, which includes well known men in and out of the industry. A steamer has been chartered for July 23 and an all-days outing will be enjoyed at some point up the Hudson or on the Sound. Athletic contests and various games have been arranged and a number of attractive prizes put up.

The officers of the club are J. A. Berst, president; P. Brunet, vice-president; P. A. Parsons, secretary, and G. Bardet, treasurer. The board of governors include the above and M. Ramirez-Torres, F. H. Knocke, G. A. Smith, A. Rousseau and F. C. Davidson.

TRIANGLE ISSUES HOUSE ORGAN.

The first issue of Selling and Management, the official house organ of the Triangle Film Corporation, has just come from the press. "Selling and Management" is an attractive eight-page magazine and is devoted exclusively to matters of interest to all those engaged in any capacity with the Triangle company.

Figman-Robertson Comedies for Metro

Two Well-Known Players Will Produce Comedies for Weekly Release.

MAX FIGMAN, foremost comedian, and wife, Lolita Robertson, who has proved an excellent foil for him in so many notable screen productions, have been engaged by Rolma Film to make a weekly one-reel comedy feature which will be released on the Metro program. Mr. Figman and Miss Robertson have already begun work on the first comedy of this series called "Love Me, Love My Dog." The scenario is by C. Doty Hobart. The Figman-Robertson comedies will be a worthy addition to the popular one-reel subjects which Metro recently added to its program of big features. These new features include the Metro-Drew comedies, starring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, and the weekly Metro Travelogue. Other one-reel weekly features will be added in the near future, but Metro is not prepared to make a definite announcement as to their characters and the stars who will appear in them.

Mr. Figman enjoyed a successful career upon the speaking stage before he went into motion pictures. He was playing in the all-star cast of "Fine Feathers" when Jesse L. Lasky induced him to sign a contract for the starring role in "The Man on the Box," which marked his debut in the silent drama. He has appeared in many big features since that time. Mr. Figman was born in Vienna, and comes from a family of artists. His first public appearance was in amateur performances at the Philadelphia Drawing Room, in company of the famous Drew, Barrymore and Davenport families. Augustin Daly saw him act at one of these performances and engaged him professionally to appear with his famous company in New York.

He was successful from the start and later was associated with A. H. Palmer, Charles Frohman, Harrison Grey Fiske, and other noted managers of that day. He was later starred for seven years under the management of John Cort.

Miss Robertson hails from California and her first stage experience was with the Alcazar stock company in San Francisco. Later she played with Henry Miller in "The Great Divide," in "Brown, of Harvard," and had the leading feminine role in Margaret Mayo's "Commencement Days," produced by Max Figman and John Cort. She also played with Mr. Figman in "The Substitute," and then became Mrs. Figman. She has made a decided success since she went into motion pictures. Mr. Figman directs his own pictures, and is assisted by C. P. Huntington.

Joyce Fair

JOYCE FAIR is happy. She's been a real honest-to-goodness leading lady—has taken a "growed-up" part which required far more than merely playing with dolls and just being cute. Essanay's twelve-year-old star has been given an opporunity in a full-fledged ingenue role and the cleverness with which she handled it has multiplied her possibilities on the screen. She appeared as a girl of eighteen years in "The Chimney Sweep," a two-act Essanay just completed.

Joyce Fair.

The play is a delightful story of "puppy love," starting with two children of perhaps twelve or thirteen years of age and ending with their real love affair at a grown age. The homeless little chimney sweep falls in love with the little lady of the mansion and tells her about it, only to be chased away by her irate governess. Some years later, as the adopted son of her father's best friend, he is one of her suitors. He reveals himself as the former little chimney sweep and she accepts him.

Joyce's performance in the part of the grown girl was a surprise to all persons at the Essanay studio. However, her several years of stage and picture experience have developed her talent beyond her years and enabled her to delightfully interpret an ingenue role.

AUSTRALIAN NOTES

FILM censorship is being widely discussed in motion picture circles and in the press.

The Presbyterian General Assembly was held in Sydney this week. The minister of a large city church stated that he was convinced that Sydney was the wickedest city in the world. He went on to say that pictures were a source of evil and should be censored. He also added that one night he disguised himself in a slouch hat and went to a play (he did not give its name) and came away disgusted. That gentleman must be trying to get a soft billet as film censor.

J. D. Williams, well-known in the picture world both here and America, in a letter to the Sun newspaper, suggests that the best way out of the censorship difficulty is to form a voluntary board of film censors, all expenses to be paid by the manufacturers and exchanges. He adds in his letter that some of the pictures shown in Australia had not been passed by one of the two boards mentioned above, and this was one of the chief causes of the censorship movement.

Most Sydney newspapers have taken a stand against the formation of a board, and what Mr. Black, chief secretary, will eventually do is a matter of conjecture.

With a view to popularizing recruiting and giving it the prominence in the public eye which it deserves, the New South Wales Recruiting Committee has prepared a complete set of films showing in detail the daily routine and work of Australian soldiers in the making. The first film of the series shows the enrollment of recruits, and the subsequqent training at the Liverpool (N. S. W.) camp. The second series deals with the work of the artillery, with maneuvers in rough country. The signalling corps, field wireless operators, field telegraphists and telephonists are also shown with all their apparatus.

The ninth Triangle program shown this week in Sydney was made up of "Honor's Altar" and "The Conqueror," both Kay-Bee features, and "His Auto Ruination," a Keystone comedy.

The Ince subjects were good dramas, though very slow moving. This, however, seems to be a characteristic of most pictures coming from the Santa Monica studios. This is not liked by Australian audiences, who want good, quick action, and plenty of it.

Perhaps that is the reason that the Triangle-Keystones are so popular. "His Auto Ruination" ends up with a big chase in which several autos take a prominent part.

Australian Feature Films, Ltd., one of the biggest exchanges in Sydney, has secured sole rights for the Sis Hopkins series of Kalem comedies. This exchange started little less than a year ago, handling only Paramount features and releasing one a week. Their releases this week—the biggest yet—were: "Chimmie Fadden Out West" (Lasky), "The Seven Sisters" (Famous Players), the first two "whirls" of the "Mishaps of Musty Suffer," entitled "Hold Fast" and "Look Out Below," and a Paramount-Bray cartoon, "Colonel Heeza Liar and the Pirates." The exchange is now regularly releasing two Paramount features per week.

"The Birth of a Nation" Sydney season finishes on Saturday next, when the Theater Royal will reopen with Fox features. The first of these will be "The Two Orphans," featuring Theda Bara and Jean Southern. A continuous performance will be given from 11 a. m. till 10.30 p. m. This is a new departure for the Royal, as before the "Birth of a Nation" only two performances were given daily.

Australasian Films, Ltd., has secured Australian rights for the "Mutt and Jeff" cartoons, by Bud Fisher. The first of these was shown in Sydney this week at the Colonial theater, and has received many favorable criticisms.

The Co-operative Film Exchange, which has branches in all the capital cities of the commonwealth, announces that it will shortly release the Universal serial, "Greed," released as and known in America as "Graft."

A good number of features were screened in Sydney this week, including the following:

"The Blindness of Devotion" (Fox), presenting Robert B. Mantell and Genieve Hamper to Australian audiences.

"Seven Sisters," a very acceptable Famous Players release, with Marguerite Clark ably portraying the leading role.

"The Long Chance," a Broadway Universal feature, with Frank Keenan.

"The Frame-up," from the same studio as the last named. This is not as good as other pictures by Universal, as the subject is not suitable for children's entertainment.

"The Devil's Toy," a splendid Equitable drama, with Adele Blood in the leading role. This is considered by critics to be the best this company has produced since "The Warning."

"Rosemary" (Metro), with Marguerite Snow.

"The Little Dutch Girl," featuring Vivian Martin in a pleasing role.

The Fox production of "The Nigger" is being screened in Melbourne this week under the title, "The Curse of a Nation."

Other features showing in the Australian capital include: "Daphne and the Pirate" (Fine Arts), "Aristocracy" and "A Girl of Yesterday" (Famous Players) and "The Chalice of Courage" (V-L-S-E). The second Triangle program at the Majestic consisted of "The Coward" and "A Submarine Pirate."

"The Birth of a Nation" starts its Melbourne season (limited to two weeks) on Saturday next, the 20th inst.

Adelaide, S. A., has been well catered for with feature pictures lately. The Triangle plays are now very popular, "Between Men" being the leading attraction on this week's bill. Fox and Metro features are screened at the Royal under the J. C. Williams, Ltd., management, current showings being "The Celebrated Scandal" and "The House of Tears."

"Britain Prepared" is also having a very successful season in Adelaide. The big patriotic picture has been drawing record crowds to the Town Hall for some weeks.

The B. S. Moss five-reeler, "The Salamander," an English production "Jane Shore" (released some time ago in America as a Mutual masterpicture under the title, "The Strife Eternal") and "A Girl of Yesterday" also prove good drawing cards.

HEARING ON DETROIT ORDINANCE.

Before the Ordinance Committee of the Detroit Common Council, Tuesday morning, June 13, at which appeared G. Spencer Trask of the Mutual and M. S. Bailey of the Universal, there was a hearing in reference to the proposed new ordinance regulating and governing the construction and operation of film exchanges. Mr. Trask and Mr. Bailey made it plain that the film exchanges favored the ordinance in many respects, but that they did not favor some of the clauses for the reason that they were not only unfair but unreasonable. Detroit film exchange managers do not object in the least to a sane ordinance—in fact, they favor it because it is just as much for their protection as it is the general public. Mr. Trask said it was only right that film exchanges should be situated in fireproof buildings and the inspection room and the partitions be fireproof. The hearing was put over. Meanwhile, a new and more reasonable ordinance may be introduced into the Council.

A local real estate firm has made overtures to a number of film exchange managers to the effect that they will build a fireproof film building at Wayne and Larned streets if there is sufficient co-operation in the proposition. It is understood several exchanges have assured the real estate firm of leasing space in such a building, if constructed at once.

LOU-TELLEGEN WITH LASKY COMPANY.

Announcement was made this week by the Jesse L. Lasky company that Lou-Tellegen, who recently went to the Lasky studios at Hollywood, Cal., with his wife, Geraldine Farrar, will again appear as a star in a photoplay production, entitled "The Victory of Conscience." This production will be released on the Paramount Program in August and marks the third appearance of Lou-Tellegen before the camera. His two other photoplays, both made by the Lasky Company last summer, are "The Explorer" and "The Unknown."

"THE FADED FLOWER" BOOKED IN ADVANCE.

Though it is not expected to be ready for release until the first of July, "The Faded Flower," the Ivan play which is now in process of filming, is being eagerly sought for first run showing by leading circuits in New York.

It is the first all-star cast picture to be made by the Ivan Film productions.

The Photoplay Writer's "Place"

By Epes Winthrop Sargent.

REMARKS Motography with smug satisfaction: "Some time ago an editorial of ours stating that 'Making Films is a Publishing Business,' brought forth an idea from a writer of scenarios." Painful as it is to waken Mr. Mock, the article on "Those Darned Synopses" in the June 10 Photoplaywright Department was not inspired by his lucubrations because these had not been seen by this writer, but Mr. Mock's reply is foolish where it is not patronizing and he winds up with the surprising remark that: "No doubt the free lance scenario writer must be taught his place and kept in it or he will think he is the whole thing." It is graciously conceded, however, that the free lance should be fed a check at intervals and otherwise be treated as a human being if the supply of original material is to be continued.

We are grateful to Motography for this permission to live, but it would be far better for the business in general if papers devoted to the true interest of trade should line up in an effort to improve the stories instead of attempting to curry favor with directors already too well satisfied with themselves.

The Photoplaywright article, it might be explained, said that it was as foolish to purchase synopses only instead of full continuities as it would be for the publishers of the Saturday Evening Post to maintain a staff of tame writers to develop the plot outlines of Irvin Cobb and other writers. It was pointed out that originality of thought as well as originality of idea was required, and that in default of literary style the manner in which a theme was developed must be depended upon to give originality of treatment that could not come from work done by two or three studio employees. This peeves Motography to this retort:

> Of course our correspondent's argument is defective right at the outset. A free lance author can prepare a story for any magazine that scarcely needs the touch of a blue pencil before it goes to the public. It is almost impossible for a scenario writer to prepare a scenario that can be directed and filmed as it is written. The film director is a more important link in the chain than the magazine editor, whose chief function is purely selective.

This is the same old benighted bunk; the same propaganda that the director must be all-supreme and the script writer the last person to be consulted. Away back in the days when Motography was the Nickelodeon, a little group of film editors educated the present-day staff writers. Taking the likely raw material they taught them to write scripts that could be followed to the letter with excellent results. Men like Emmett Campbell Hall, Bannister Merwin, Louis Reeves Harrison and others were initiated into the mysteries and found no difficulty in writing stories that could be produced as they were written. And the Hall scripts were unlike the Merwin scripts and both differed from the Harrison style and the Adler style and the Peacocke style. What has been done can be done again, and it was the point of the story that it should be done if production is to be raised to a level that will hold present patronage and make new friends.

And against this point is brought forward the time worn argument that "scripts cannot be produced as written."

And why not?

What is there to prevent the creation of a class of authors who can produce scripts that may be staged precisely as written?

Are we forever to suffer from the whisker-draped theory that a director must change a script?

It is as possible to create a new and intelligent class of directors as it is to take promising new writers and train them. Given writers who turn out scripts that are mechanically and artistically correct, the director has only to realize in action the actions written into the script and get practically the story the author wrote instead of his own perverted version. It can be done, but not until manufacturers realize for how long they have virtually been the slaves of their own incompetent employees.

The sole reasons for changing a properly written script are two; the inability of the director to comprehend the author's ideas, or his lazy dodging of a little trouble now and then. There are no other reasons why free lance authors cannot turn out absolutely producible scripts if given proper training. The mistakes the author makes are minor ones. The changes now made are those required to adapt the script to the director's own ideas. They are not required by the script, but by the director.

One reason for this is that the author writes a story and the director demands a play, because he is recruited from the stage and not from the literary ranks and knows only the tricks of the theater and not the art of the author. It is precisely because scripts are changed that so many of the present-day writers are so insufferably tiresome, and it never has been the contention of this writer that the present grade of story does more than touch upon the edges of the stories that might be obtainable were a higher grade of author encouraged to write; not the literary stars with big names, but the men who write good stuff; who have not yet made their names and would be attracted to the business did manufacturers really pay for scripts what they advertise their willingness to pay.

To this Motography gives assent in the following paragraph when it points out that, "the free lance writer will have to be offered better co-operation and more consideration than he is getting, or the flow of good stories will go back to the magazines and the pictures will find themselves short of adequate material."

There is sound sense here, and yet the author will not and cannot get either co-operation or consideration until the director is made to realize on film the story of the author and not his own version of what he thinks the author's idea is. No intelligent editor who has worked on the floor with the directors will contend for a moment that the average producer really is competent to interpret the ideas given him. While he was with the Lubin company Lawrence S. McCloskey built up the finest staff of writers ever on one pay roll and then went out and educated the free lances to supplement their work, and yet the Lubin stories were often poor because the direction and the cutting nullified the work of the script room. The directors contended they could not follow scripts and make good stories, and it was simple enough to prove the point by laying down on the job. The script editor should have more than a "selective faculty." He should be made fully competent and then his department should be made paramount. The staff writers are merely ex-free lances who now have regular jobs. It would be possible to create others and hold them free lances that only their best work might be purchased and so only their best work done.

Motography says: "The best films we have today are made from novels and magazine stories. There are hundreds of exceptions to that rule, of course, but spread over a year it holds good. So much of the original stuff is poor that it pulls the average away down."

Precisely, and the reason that so much of the original stuff is poor is that it is done from an incomplete synopsis by an incompetent reconstructor, for even when the continuity of action is sent it is ignored in a majority of the studios.

The script writer must be taught his place, but he must be given that place and not be held to the mere capacity of literary tout. It must be required of him that he give a full continuity of action thoroughly practicable from the point of production and containing a good idea and original treatment. Then the photoplay writer will be content with his place and do the work that will again raise the standard of films. Until the promising writer no longer sees the two and three reels of three years ago fattened into the five reels of today, until he can get an adequate realization of his idea instead of a mutilation, the right sort of author will not engage in the business of script writing in appreciable numbers and editors must perforce take the synopses of the students. It is only a year since an editor was refused permission to advertise that he would pay not less than $50 a reel for any idea accepted. His employers held that there were good ideas to be had for less—ideas good enough, at any rate. Keep the author in his place, but tell the manufacturer what that place is.

ARTHUR LEVEY TO OPEN EXPORT OFFICE.

Announcement is made that Arthur Levey, well known to the trade and who recently resigned from the Australasian Films, Ltd., will shortly open an office for the exportation of American films to Australasia, India and South America, besides handling commercial agencies for these territories. Mr. Levey at the time "state rights" were in vogue maintained an office in the Candler Building, through which he handled many of the most prominent foreign features, among them "A Message from Mars," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "World, Flesh and the Devil," "Harry Lauder Comedies," etc., besides doing a general export business and import business with England. Mr. Levey has a most comprehensive knowledge of conditions in foreign territories and should insure the success of his venture.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Using Space.

SUPPOSE that you buy a barrel of apples for two dollars and find that eighty per cent. are rotten. Does it take you long to decide that a barrel of sound apples costing eight dollars is a hetter investment? The two dollar apples work out at ten dollars a barrel. On the other hand, were the prices reversed, you would be foolish indeed to pay ten dollars for a fifth of a barrel of sound apples when for two dollars you can get an entire barrel. Figure your advertising on the same lines. It is not what you pay that counts. It is what you get for what you pay. A five dollars newspaper advertisement may be a waste of five dollars where a ten dollar space might be worth fifteen. A two dollar advertisement in one paper may be more costly than the same squares of space in another medium costing ten dollars. In one case you get nothing, in the other you get more than you pay for. For that matter the conditions may be reversed. A ten dollar advertisement may bring no results and the two dollar space in another paper crowd your house, because one is the general daily, which is widely circulated and which reaches but a small percentage of your patrons while the other may be the charge for insertion in a locality sheet, with ninety per cent. of the readers possible patrons of your house. In one city a certain downtown house spends nearly $200 weekly in advertising and finds that it pays. Another house pays fifteen and loses every penny, because it uses the same organ as the other and yet appeals to only a few possible patrons. The only way to make advertising pay is to buy what will show a profit and nothing else. Too many exhibitors try newspaper advertising without studying advertising and declare that it does not pay hecause they have done nothing to make it pay.

And remember that it is cost per patron and not cost per line that should be the basis of calculation. Figure out that a certain percentage of those who will read your advertisement can be made patrons. Now figure out the number of these prospects your advertisement will reach. The locality sheet may be cheaper than the regular paper and yet be so poorly edited that it is not read at all. Normally the locality sheet should be best for the locality house, even if the rate is smaller, but this does not always hold good and every angle should be studied before newspaper advertising is attempted.

Free Taxis.

A. J. Merrill, who used to run houses in Miles City, Mont., is waking up Evansville, Ind., with his western ways. Lately he had Pavlowa and to take care of the anticipated crowd he ran a midnight matinee with 11.45 P. M. as the starting hour and sent home in taxis such of his patrons as lived within the twenty-five cent limit. He does not tell what the admission prices were nor what the cabs cost, but the idea is there for other hustlers now that Mr. Merrill has found it.

Wants to Be Fixed Up.

Earl B. Raifstangér, of the Mahaiwe, Great Barrington, Mass., writes that he has followed this department for some time but comes in for a first visit because he is now getting out a program that he thinks needs some fixing up, though he cannot see just where. The sheet is an eight pager 5½ hy 8½, wire stitched, white stock and black ink. Most of his trouble is more a matter of type than copy. The printer has only a keen desire to fill his pages with type. He does not see that white space might be helpful and does not realize the relative value of the lines. The front page is an excellent example of what is meant. The house title runs in a severe gothic where a slightly ornamental face would be better. It is hard and unyielding. The name of the town follows and for a third line "In the heart of the Berkshires" in another black and unlovely type face. It looks more like the label on a shipping case than the heading for a theater program. Make the printer show what he has and take the prettiest letter that is clear and readable. Cut down the top line to read merely Mahaiwe News, set the name of the town in a smaller type and the catchline in a smaller size of the type used for the house name. Change the heavy rule to a lighter line to enclose the volume number and date, getting something not larger than a half point. This will make the heading. Below this is a sketch of the theater reproduced in half tone. It is light in color value and still further faded by a heavy "The Most Beautiful Theater in Western Massachusetts" set in two lines below. This line should be one ten point, light face line. Below this come the names of the lessee and manager. These are too large in the present face and should be dropped to a twelve point, upper and lower caps. Below this, in turn comes a heavy announcement of matinee and evening performances and just below that again the same thing but statlng that the features start at those hours. It is practically a repetition. The Matinee and evening lines may be kept in, but a much smaller line should add "The feature is shown at the opening of each bill at the hours indicatcd above."

Removing the black type will give more llghtness to the page and permit some white space to be used to relieve the present congestion. The idea is not to use all of the available space, but to get a good display. This should be explained to the printer if he can grasp the idea. Otherwise take his type samples from him and tell him what to use. Inside the pages run to thirds, the middle third giving the program. Tbe three panels are held together with double rule and all three look alike. The program should be framed in solid two point rule and the rest of the outline should be completed with one point or smaller. This will be no trouble after the first week. If this is not done, let the double rule border lie as it is and use solid three point across the column to separate the program from the advertisements. It would be effective in either case to underline the dated days with one point rule cut to fit or the type can be spaced out to fit the rule if tbe printer is lazy or short of rule or both. An effort should be made to differentiate the ads from the program by the employment of a special type face for the play titles; one that is not used in any advertisement if the type cases can stand the strain. The back page, which is used for house talk, should carry a headline as at present, but the matter would be better set two columns to the page. It will be easier to read. These changes should improve the appearance, and we should be glad to see the new version.

Steve Did.

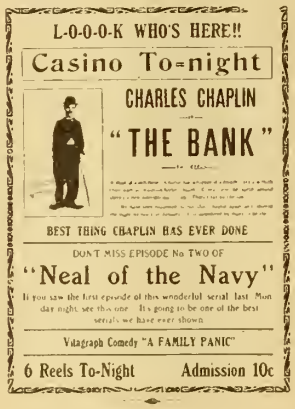
Soon as we asked Steve Farrar for some of his throwaways on white paper, he sent in a lot, and we are reproducing a couple to show his general play of layout. Steve, who runs the Casino, Eldorado, Ill., is seldom, if ever, guilty of getting out throwaways that run all type lines clear across. He has used up eleven cuts of Ritchie and fourteen of Chaplin since the first of the year, but he gets one cut on most bills and the rest carry two.



As he wrote some time ago, he is playing in part to a patronage of miners, and finds that the throwaway will do better work for him than newspaper advertising, so he supplements the latter with the former and gets both classes. Generally the tbrowaways are either pink or green, but always he gets away from the formal composition and tries to get a snapper line for an attractor. The throwaway does not admit of much artistic effect. It is good in its class when it attracts attention and can be grasped at one glance. These small reproductions will eliminate the hard-to-read lines, and still you'll find that the essentials are all in type large enough to be read even in this size and still get the idea over. It is an excellent plan to have a reducing glass on your desk. When a job comes in use the glass until you cannot read smaller than twelve-point and see if the rest, by itself, tells a story. If it does, then the handout paper is properly planned. If you cannot get the house, the date and the attraction, it is wrongly built. Just because it is a cheap job, do not feel that you can waste the money you pay for it.

Changed.

The Cumberland, Brooklyn, announces that its kid matinees will he given on Friday afternoon instead of Saturday morning and that it will work in with the Mothers' Association of the nearest Public School. The opening is set for after school hours. This is a new idea ,and may presently lead to a succession of performances after school hours. One show a week for the children seems rather too little.

Doubling.

The Lehigh Orpheum, South Bethlehem, Pa., is now sharing its program with the Lorenz in the same town, the same program of film also being shared. This being the case it might be as well to give but a single announcement to the subject and then add that it will be seen at the Lorenz on certain days and at the Lehigh-Orpheum on other days. As it stands the four subjects that constitute the week's offering are first programmed on two pages for the Lorenz and then repeated in slightly different order for the other house, a waste of nearly two pages that might better be given to film and house talk or to a more attractive presentation of the subject. With such a program it would probably work best to give each subject a page, with cuts where possible and at the top show the days on which it will play each house. This will give a full page instead of a third of a page to each release and yet take little more space than is at present used for the duplicate programs.

Took a Hint.

Y. M. C. A. booklets are not quite in line with Advertising for Exhibitors, but the Coatesville, Pa., Y. M. C. A. sends in a very neat booklet entitled "Preparedness, a four act Pictograph, produced by the Young Men's Christian Association Film Corporation. Continuous Performance." "Act I." is Physical Preparedness, with five "scenes" dealing with the Gymnasium, and with Education, Recreation and Religious Training as the other acts, all being very evidently suggested by the Paramount Pictographs which form one of the features of the program at the institution's Auditorium. It includes a good reproduction of the Auditorium where a real picture show is given daily except Sundays.

Tientsin.

Three samples come in from the Arcade, Tientsin. The most ambitious is an eight-page booklet for Spartacus, printed locally. It carries eight cuts, not quite suited to the stock, and a well written story. It also announces the starting of the Broken Coin serial. Evidently The Black Box made good. A second sample is a four-page herald for Satan, an Ambrosio film, in which the cut work is better done, and the third is a one-sheet for The Night Riders of Petersham, a Vitagraph, the bill also including a Kalem, a Keystone, a Powers and an Essanay. The Arcade is doing splendid work.

Chips from Carpenter.

George Editor Carpenter in Real Reels gets warmed up to his work in a recent editorial on decency. It is too long to reproduce in full in this department, much as we should like to do so, but the opening and closing paragraphs give the gist of the story and are worthy the serious thought of every exhibitor:

> Look back and try to name one man who specialized in suggestive and near-obscene pictures who has made a permanent financial success of his chosen line of endeavor.
> For a time he made money in spots, but in the long run he lost out. About the only thing he accomplished was to hand the motion picture industry a large and vivid-hued eye. His suggestive ads in the newspapers and the spicy billboard matter kept decent people away from not only his own but other theaters in his town.
> In every city and town of America there are hundreds of good solid citizens who never enter a motion picture theater because they have not studied the motion picture situation and in their ignorance are afraid of witnessing an off-color photodrama.
> This virgin field is an undeveloped gold mine. Yes, there are scores of people in your town who have never entered a motion picture theater. They would be steady patrons once their minds were disabused of the idea that motion pictures are cheap tawdy imitations of the stage and photo-dramas are one and all crammed full of sensational climaxes, mawkish sentiment, suggestive situations and impossible plots presented in the dark for the special benefit of mashers and all such cattle to be encountered in the typical motion picture dump of ten years ago.
> Photoplays like "Tess of the Storm Country," "Wildflower," "The Goose Girl," "The Eternal Grind," "Audrey" and many others will be playing return engagements in your town to big business, when the white-slave-eternal-triangle-assignation-house brand of film has been buried deep in chloride of lime.

Just as a matter of interest try and think of the plays your own patrons have asked to have repeated. What were they? And yet at the expositions lately we asked three editors what they were using and the invariable reply was that they were only to purchase sex stuff, only. If stupidity were a capital crime there would be crape on a lot of studio door handles.

Just in passing, George Editor is getting more than two dollars worth of good out of his copy of Picture Theater Advertising. How about you?

From England.

T. H. Davidson, who has not been a visitor lately, sends a handsome booklet for the newest British and Colonial film, Fatal Fingers, a not over happy title for a corking good mystery story by William Le Quex ("Q"). The booklet cover is a dead black lettered in red and inside are eight pages of cuts on plate paper with another eight on laid paper for letter press. It is an unusually good example of press work and a credit to the Davison agency that in happier times did uniformly good work.

"Some" Evangelist.

Robert A. Jennings sends in a card, handsomely printed, booming his feature program. It is printed in green on cream, and is ahead of the usual Jennings printing. He adds the explanation that this is to offset the effect of a recent revival campaign in which the hired evangelist made the statement that a person who bought a ticket to a motion picture show bought a ticket to hell. This is in line with the Billy Sunday stuff. If you lie hard enough you are bound to get some attention, but it is a nice sort of evangelist who will hand out broad statements like that. And the funny part of it is that some people have fallen for the bunk; which accounts for the feature program card. He adds that a Chautauqua comes next and wonders what other exhibitors have experienced. We know one exhibitor who used to close his house Chautauqua week, and got solid with the Chautauquans. And we know another man who took his machine out to the Chautauqua and let them use his stereopticon for illustrating the lectures, after which he gave a short program of film and cleaned up a profit in addition to getting credit for helping out. It seldom pays to fight the Chautauqua. Either work in with them or mark time. With the ever increasing catalogue of educational films and picturized books it might be possible to get in with the lecturers and run a post-Chautauqua course.

About Right.

The last issue of the program for the Victoria, Buffalo, is the best and hits us about right. It would be a good plan to hold to the present cover design.

Booming Bluebirds.

W. R. Patton, of the Rex, St. Anthony, Idaho, sends in a letter and some samples. He writes:

> Herewith for your criticism and comment, if it seems worth it (and even more, if it isn't worth it), a little effort to effectively introduce Bluebird to this village of 1,250. I might add that I am adding Bluebird to World, they being against Triangle and Metro.
> The five teasers were distributed one each day for five days before the opening, and the herald with the saddlebacked folder gotten out at the local shop will be distributed early on the showing date. Perhaps you will notice, as I do now that I have time to look it over more carefully (being a sideline, the picture advertising doesn't get the carefully thought-out attention it ought to have), that I have doubled up on a couple of adjectives, but I hope the less critical reader will not find fault with that. Saddlebacking the folder on was an afterthought, when some Bluebird cuts I expected to use on the first page did not arrive, and this idea was with a view of getting the advantage of the Bluebird on the herald just above the folder.
> I also enclose a copy of a dodger sort of house organ I get out. The opening editorial is directed at the wholesaling done by my opposition, who has been running from eleven to fourteen reels for 15 cents. The idea, of course, is nothing new; but how about the tone?
> I enclose my check for $2 for Picture Theatre Advertising, and trust you will see that it properly reaches the business office. Your Advertising for Exhibitors is of immense help, even though a good many of the ideas and stunts are beyond the reach of a field where five hundred heralds or dodgers will reach every house in the territory—and then some.

That P. T. A.

Mr. Patton will find much in Picture Theatre Advertising that can be worked even in a town where 500 heralds will cover the clientele. It was planned largely for the small town man, but planned to give the same help to the city manager as well. Most of the stuff is small town stuff because most of the really good stuff comes from the small town managers. Much that appears in the department is not altogether suitable for the small town as it stands, but much of this, even, can be adapted to the 2,000 town. At that, Mr. Patton does not seem to be in immediate need of help. He knows his way about already.

His first example is a set of five cards. These were started on a Friday and were given out one a day, skipping Sunday, to include Wednesday. All are printed in blue on white stock. The cards are about two by four and in order they read:

> The Bluebird is a great problem.
> The Bluebird, you know, means happiness.
> The Bluebird's flight is bringing it nearer.
> Watch for the Bluebird.
> Tomorrow you'll see the Bluebird on Bridge street.

This was followed with a four-page folder into which is wire stitched a Herald for The Great Problem, so placed that the blue bird, at the top of the sheet, shows above the smaller folder. On the folder the first page announces that "The Bluebird is here. The third page shows you where." The second tells what Bluebirds are, the third gives the first title and tells it is at the Rex. All of the pages are framed in one-point rule and below the rule on the third page in four-point type runs:

> There's one page yet—
> Turn over—

This leads to the underline on the back page. The folder is very neatly done, and such little things as the neat mortising of the rule have been as carefully looked after as the greater matters. For that, the use of saddle instead of flat stitching tells a story. Probably it cost more, but it permitted the entire offering to be read, which is not possible when flat stitching is resorted to.

The regular advertising is Rex Reels, a one-sheet nine by twelve, with a program in the centre and a column of talk on either side. In the program the times of showing are given as well as the prices, generally ten cents. Here is something that others will welcome.

> COULD YOU EAT ELEVEN POUNDS OF BEEFSTEAK?
> Beefsteak is a first-class thing—in its place. And in reasonable amount. A nice thick porterhouse, browned just right, or even the old fashioned "round" that you smear all over with flour before you drop it into the sizzling pan, will make you feel like everything's all right and that walking is good healthy exercise, anyway, and you don't really need an automobile.

But if you sat down and stuffed yourself with about eleven porterhouses, or eight or nine pounds of "round," you'd be ashamed to look at a steer for a week, and feel like people who made a practice of eating beefsteak were easily satisfied in their tastes.

Same way with pictures. If when you come into The Rex I stuffed you for three hours and a half with the best "porterhouse" class of pictures money could bring here, I would expect you to go away so full of pictures—and weariness—that for a week you would feel like you wouldn't give a nickel to see the Battle of Gettysburg "picturized" with all the original actors in the cast.

The Rex, ninety-nine times out of a hundred, gives you your money's worth; and that's all it means to give you. There is no desire to stuff you so full that you will become a photo-dyspeptic, because that would be a detriment to your own sense of pleasure in coming, and it would be bad business for The Rex, for the simple reason that you wouldn't come so often.

The Rex runs five reels, which is about all the normal person wants at one time. The Reels comes out regularly "If the Manager has time," but Mr. Patton adds that his patrons know that he has another business that is a pretty full job for one man, by itself.

To Popularize Triangle.

Philip Wright Whitcomb, of Hepworth's, writes that he is giving most of his time to the Triangles, at present, which means that Triangle will receive unusual publicity in England. Francis H. Waters will look after the straight Hepworth work under his direction. It is not an easy matter to do press work in England just now. Paper is so scarce that newspapers cannot order freely and paper that used to sell for 1¼d. a pound now brings 3d. and is going up. That beats out our own recent 30 per cent. We shall watch with interest for the new Triangle stuff.

Another Exchange Organ.

The Monarch Feature Film Co., of Kansas City, comes into line with a house organ, evidently a weekly. It is on a light cream stock, plated paper, with good press work, but the cuts are a little too coarse in screen to show up well on the paper used. It is well laid out, with the front page for announcement and the other three for descriptions of releases.

Changed.

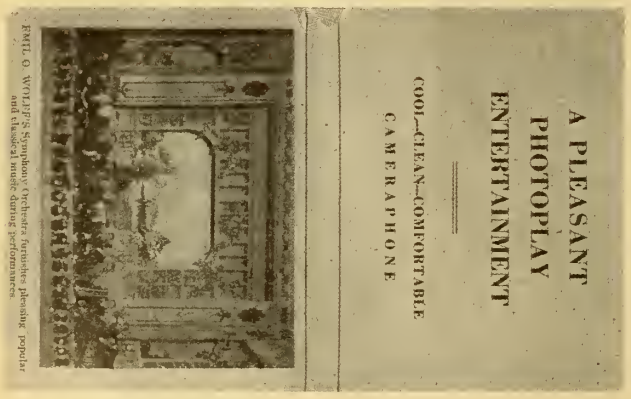
The Cameraphone, East Liberty, which is a suburb of Pittsburgh, has used a vest pocket for so long that it is almost a shock to see it come out with a six by nine four-pager on white paper instead of the familiar colored stock. It gains more room for announcement, and offers a novelty in its front page. This is folded so that the top half is first seen, looking as though it might be a page six by four and a half.



It is a change from the customary forms, but the front should be dated and so should each of the three program sections. The other size was compact and handy, but this can be made to work harder.

Little to Say.

W. A. Ayres sends in a program for the Sunnyside, Portland, Oregon, and asks for comment. There is little to be said. It is a four-page 5 by 7 on colored paper, the color being changed weekly. Color does not help a rather poor set of cuts and the stock is too soft to take ink well, but apart from this it does as well as the job can be expected to do, and more might be spent with no particular improvement. About the only real comment is that there is comparatively little text for some of the days, one page, for example, consisting merely of the date, design cuts for two serials and the titles of the particular instalments, with the addition of "Also two comedies." Here text would have been better than non-illustrative cuts. For that matter, type is better than cuts whenever the cut does not print up well, and some of these cuts are guessing contests. You wonder whether the printer is working from the metal or using the back of the cut to smear the ink on.

Scotts.

L. J. Scott, of the Kansas City V-L-S-E, sends in another batch of material for comment. We hope that some day Tom North gets the idea that he would like to send in stuff, too, even if he has his own paper.

One of the samples is the program of the Willis Wood, Kansas City. This is printed on good stock mostly with cuts to suit the paper. They should feature their announcement that autos will be cared for while the patron is in the house. At present its only distinction is that it is printed in smaller type than the rest. The paragraph could be moved over the front page with profit. The sheet announces a two-week engagement of The Ne'er-Do-Well at that house, so the entire issue is given to the single feature, which makes it more of a herald than a program.

The next piece carries a note from Mr. Scott, in which he makes the suggestion that perhaps A. W. Simon, who runs the Colonial, Alwa, Kansas, must be a printer as well as a manager, as he cannot see how such a job can come out of a 1,010 town. That may be the answer, but there are a few—a very few—artist printers in the small towns. We still mourn May's Print Shop, down in Alabama. Anyhow, this is a booklet for The Rosary. The cover carries Cloister type for the title and a smaller face at the bottom for the house, town and date. In between is a cross made up of six-point rule that does not show a single one of the ten joints. It's so well done that only at one point, where the right hand arm of the cross is formed of a bit of rule cut a hairline too short can it be proved that it is rule and not a cut. This is printed in brown on cream. The page is 3⅜ by 8¼. The cover encloses an eight-page in brown on white, coated paper, though no cuts are used. Each page is bordered and the text is merely the running story of the subject with cast and a back page announcement of prices and times of showing. It is a job in a class with the best printing of the de luxe advertisers and the printer can pat himself on the back. It is a good job from every point of view and excellent advertising, as advertising, for this sort of film, which does not lend itself to sensational handling. If this is a regular stunt we would like to get on the mailing list.

The Royal, Le Mars, Ia., offers a program for the month, a four-page by six that offers a clever middle page layout that is both simple and telling. It is a pity that it will not reproduce well. We would appreciate a copy in black on white paper some time if they hold to that form. In effect it is two paneled pages with strips that go half way across the two pages, top and bottom and across the intervening space, as though these strips had been pasted over the complete pages, though it has, of course, been done with rule. The top line runs down an inch or so between the two pages. It lists the features for the month and the back page announces the policy for the other days, the Mary Page on Wednesday and a general program to complete the list.

The Empire, Storm Lake, Iowa, uses a four-page 8 by 11, on cheap news. It gives three pages to the running program, the date and then a story for each subject, with the back page for the turnovers where the story runs out of its normal allowance of a column to a day. It would be a better scheme to run a full program in the middle column of the first page, the other stories as they fall, with a line to connect them with the day and a little house talk.

The Orient theater, somewhere in Iowa, contributes four card strips for The Battle Cry of Peace. It is matter set newspaper style in column width, presenting the salient features of the film and the questions the production raises. They are of different colors to permit them to be readily distinguished. There is good copy for a quarter page advertisement, but it is set country printer style, straight lines across the space.

Sending Photographs.

Will those who are good enough to send photographs please add to their courtesy by getting them here in good shape? This morning we received an excellent photograph, clean cut, good color and the proper glossy paper. It was even cloth backed. Probably the prints cost in the vicinity of a dollar each—BUT the print was ruined for reproduction by being sent folded in an envelope. A five-cent mailing tube or a ten-cent photomailer would have landed the print here in good shape.

Working Along.

The Lyceum, Monticello, New York, is working along on its Moto-photogram, though a paper with a title like that has an awful tough time just trying to live. The latest is a twelve-page sheet 8½ by 10½, printed on common news, but fairly well printed as to cuts. Its greatest drawback is side stitching. For this an unusually deep margin has been allowed at the ridge, but the stitching is done 23/32 from the edge and you either have to hold the paper gingerly or tear it apart. Even at an added cost it should pay to saddle stitch. If this is not done the stitches should be moved closer to the back. But with any form of side stitching the pages open badly, and the general effect is one of irritation. For the greater part the matter is well prepared and we think that presently Monticellow will have a real paper, in spite of the handicapping name.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Inquiries.

Questions concerning the writing (but NOT the marketing) of photoplays will be replied to without charge if addressed to the Photoplaywright Department and accompanied by a fully addressed stamped envelope. Questions must be typewritten or written with pen and ink.

Questions as to the financial standing of concerns or the probable markets for specific or certain styles of stories cannot be answered.

In no case and under no circumstance will any manuscript or synopsis be handled and if sent will be returned without reply.

A list of addresses of producing companies will be sent if the request is made direct to the publication office, but not where request is made to this department.

Please Note.

WILL readers of this department please note that William A. Brady is running the World Company contest. If you want to know about it, write to that corporation and not to this department. No reply will be made to any question bearing on this or any other contest.

Special Chances.

Lately a good friend told us of a chance to land stuff if we could fit a certain star. We passed the hint up. The style of script is not one that would sell elsewhere if this particular producer turned it down and the prohabilities that any given story would please both the star and the man who passes on the scripts were too remote to make it profitable to essay a sale. It never pays to write to one Indivldual star, hut, on the other hand, do not get the idea that your story can be played by only one person. Lately an author wrote in great distress. He has a story that only one man could possibly play. That man, it was reported, was about to return to the drama stage. The author did not know what to do. We told him to write the story and send it anywhere. If John Smith can play a certain part, there is no particular reason why John Jones cannot make good in the same part, even though he is not the precise type. This does not apply, of course, to stories calling for certain physical peculiarities, but even here the rule is less rigid than would be supposed. If it is a type of story that is being made by more than one studio, then any studio making that type of story can find a player to fit the part if the story is worth while. You would hardly expect Eddie Foy to shine in a part suited to John Drew, but there are other players who can play Drew parts, not so well, perhaps, but well enough to please. Don't get too short a view of your script. Don't write for one man. Write for a certain type of character and hroaden your market.

A Sold Synopsis.

Only in one particular has the original Harris synopsis heen changed. His title was "The Road to Nowhere" and Caprice was called Flower. "Grandpa Edmunds," "Dean, City Chum of Jacks" and "Mr. Edmunds, Jack's Father," have been changed, as will be noted, and Aunt Susan has been added. Mr. Kellette notes:

The story is by Clarence J. Harris and the script was written from this synopsis, so it is safe to presume that there was meat enough in the idea to build a good five-reel script from it. Mr. Harris also wrote a script so that Director Adolfi got the benefit of his ideas, but we incorporated many changes in the presentation of his story, BUT STUCK TO HIS ORIGINAL STORY, which can not be called "Changing" his theme. We presented it in a different manner than he pictured it, made the continuity perfect, and he can recognize his story when he sees it on the screen.

Now, go on with the story:

An original photodrama by Clarence J. Harris.

THE STORY.

Dave Talbert, a hig-souled, lazy mountaineer, lives on Hardscrahhle Mountain in a forhidding environment, with his daughter Caprice, a girl of 16, innocent and lovable. The home is the center of great happiness, the only possible cloud being the marked attentions of Tim Baker for Caprice, rather encouraged by Dave, hut feared hy Caprice, who does not understand the meaning of his intention, nor his manifestatoins of cruelty, evidenced by his ruthless destruction of one of Caprice's hird friends who had just flown from a nest of eggs to a clothesline where Caprice was giving it attention when Tim knocked it off the line.

The happiness of the home ends as Tim's sister Maria marries Dave, and with the incoming of the stepmother, with her instinctive hrutality, the heart of Caprice hreaks and she turns her eyes to the mountains, longing for the happiness she hopes to find heyond them. Caprice finds herself the possible means of grave trouble, but bears the cruelty of Maria rather than make Dave unhappy, but quietly plans to go away.

Conditions grow tragical, culminating in physical abuse by Maria, and when Caprice finds that her beloved rag doll had been thrown into the yard her reserve force comes to her aid and she climbs out of the window to her doll Lucinda and to freedom.

In the woods, some distance from the home of Caprice, lives Thomas Edmunds, a retired New York business man, in a hunting lodge he had built to be near the simple life. He loves to be with the birds and the flowers and wander in the great silent places of nature, and between Edmunds and Caprice has come a great friendship. She now turns to him with her little aching heart and her doll and her worldly helongings, to find that the lodge is locked and "Uncle Tom," as she calls him, is away on his wanderings. Caprice continues down the old turnpike road that leads over the mountains, for there lies the city and to her youthful imagination, happiness and surcease from sorrow. Aunt Susan lives there, and Aunt Susan always loved Caprice.

Jack Edmunds, nephew of Uncle Tom, with a group of joy-riders, is on his way to the hunting lodge to bring Uncle Tom some new books. Jack's life has heen spoiled hy wealth. He had never worked and had always a general allowance, and his friends were "fast" and he always paid the bills. The visit is his first one. The road is very rough for automobiling and his friends—Dick Deane, Cora Linton and Gracie Beaumont, object to continuing, and one of them discovers Caprice coming down the road as the chauffeur stops, undecided which road to take to lead them to the lodge. A signpost, broken near the bolt that holds it, reads—

ROAD TO NO

To the joyriders it meant nothing. But Caprice informed them that "the road leads to nowhere, that it had been throwed up these many years, and no one ever traveled it." Deane, in a spirit of jest, stoops to pick charcoal from where a fire had once been built, and wrote under the "NO" "where," that the sign might read "Road to Nowhere." Deane is struck with the girl's heauty and attempts to kiss her and Jack prevents the insult, pushing Deane back to where the laughing girls are kidding Jack on his new mash. Jack learns from Caprice that his uncle is away from the lodge and he asks her to show him where the lodge is. She does, taking the hooks to deliver, and as Jack rides away with the party love has entered her heart and all thoughts of running away has vanished. She must stay to deliver the hooks to Uncle Tom.

When Uncle Tom returns from his jaunt he finds Caprice waiting for him. He learns the cause of Caprice's misery and strongly advises against running away, and tells her a story of "The Key Flower," how a little girl in wretchedness was visited by a good fairy, who told her that she did not have to go away for happiness; the key to happiness was right by her as a flower, and he told her that the key was her purity, innocence and goodness. The girl of Uncle Tom's story found the key, which opened at once to her a wonderful world right where she was and where the prince found her. All was well, but like so many little girls, she did not realize the value of her key, she lost it through the cunning of an evil prince, and her life and beauty faded into its former wretchedness.

Caprice turns back home and is found at night by her father, who tells Maria that he is all that Caprice has made him, big-souled and generous, and that if Caprice and the rag doll cannot find happiness in the old home, it were better that the family should dissolve and each go their own way. Maria cunningly wins Dave over hy claiming that Caprice's injury was an accident and that she really loved her stepchild.

In the meantime Jack and his pals, stopping at a roadhouse for rest and refreshment, carry their joy into a late hour. Jack is haunted by the memory of the little mountain girl and becomes disgusted with his aimless life. He carries the remembrance hack to the city with him and finds that Uncle Tom has returned to look after a business propotition for his brother. Jack wants to return to the mountain country, declaring that he realizes he has been traveling along the road to nowhere, and that he has found nothing thereon but tears, sighs and hell, and Uncle Tom gives him his key to the hunting lodge.

Projection Department

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost) will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 144.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Theatre managers looking for high class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

How do you figure the candle power of an incandescent lamp? What is the standard candle power?

Roll of Honor on Question No. 137.

Sorry, boys, but there ain't no such animal. For the first time even Friend Smith has failed. Wilson Hays, Barton, Md., came nearest to it. Question 137 was an innocent looking one, but was calculated to only be answered correctly by he who thinks. Hays got it right, all but one point. He failed to observe that whereas the 1½-inch spot was under consideration, only that portion of the spot covered by the area of the aperture would be available at the screen. I worded that question that way purposely just to see how many of you would be "on the job," and caught the whole works fast asleep at the switch.

Answer to Question No. 137.

By F. H. Richardson, New York City.

The Question:

Given a 16-foot picture what is the relative light intensity of a 1½-inch spot and the light on the screen? How much more light would you need to project a given size picture 100 feet than 50 feet?

The Answer:

Area of circle 1.5 inches in diameter is 2.25 square inches and, taking Martin as authority that the spot brilliancy is 500 C. P. per square inch (variation of amperage would change this, but not alter the principle involved) then the total C. P. of the spot would be 2.25 x 500 = 1125 C. P. But inasmuch as the aperture is only (use old figures for convenience) 11/16 x 15/16 of an inch in area, or about 7/8 of a square inch. Therefore, we would only have available 7/8 of 500 C. P., less the loss in the film, loss in the objective lens and approximately 50% loss at the revolving shutter. And the relation of total screen brilliancy to the total spot brilliancy would be as above indicated. The relation as to C. P. per square inch of surface would be a different matter, since we then would only need to consider actual area of aperture, actual square inch area of screen, make the loss deduction and divide the first by the second to get the relative percentage of brilliancy.

As to part two of the question, always assuming the distance of arc from condenser to remain unaltered, and that the objective lens is large enough in diameter to cover the light ray, there would be no appreciable difference, the revolving shutter being supposed to cut the same percentage of light in both cases.

Film Inspection.

Robert Dauphinee, Lincoln, Nebr., says:

> I am very greatly indebted to you for finding out for me the effect of using a 60 cycle compensarc on a 133 cycle circuit, as it sets at rest a long standing question which has troubled me very greatly. I am not in Lincoln, Nebraska, as stated in the department, but in Lincoln, Maine. (Apologies, old man. Sorry to have located you so far from home. Ed.) With regard to Mr. Tinker's letter relative to the handling of film by Maine operators, I wish to say that I, for one, do realize that a film is a valuable piece of property, and try to treat it as suggested. I personally inspect every film before it is shown, not because it is my duty to do so, but because I am interested in seeing the show run smoothly, and a smoothly running show is my only reward. I really believe the exchanges in our state are now trying to keep their films in good condition. I know for a fact that only two years ago the films from a certain exchange were in the most deplorable condition. I have often spent from two to three hours on five reels trying to put them in at least a partly presentable condition, whereas now I rarely have to spend more than half or three-quarters of an hour on the same number of reels. I also believe that operators are trying to better conditions in this respect, basing my opinion on the small number of misframes which occur, as compared with what used to be. Some operators, it seemed, used to make patches without the slightest regard for framing, and one would hardly dare take his hand off the framing lever long enough to adjust the light. Now, however, a misframe is a rare occurrence, which shows that operators are learning, and moreover are putting their knowledge into effect. I would like also to say that it is entirely safe to assert that this knowledge, in most cases, comes from studying the Handbooks and the projection department of the Moving Picture World. Of course there is still room for improvement, but that improvement will come as time goes on.

Yes, Brother Dauphinee, I agree with you that whereas there still is much to be desired, the improvement has been very great, and this department believes that it is entitled to a large measure of credit for that improvement, because it not only has itself led the fight for better inspection in exchanges, and better care of the films by operators, but its editor has personally, and in the most effective way, taken up the matter with the large producers, such as the Universal, Metro, General Film, Mutual, etc., and has interested them in a campaign of agitation among the managers of their exchanges. I trust you will find the third edition of the Handbook to be all you hoped it would be. There have now been a very large number of the books distributed, and we have yet to receive the first letter of criticism. On the other hand we have any number of enthusiastic letters of praise for the third edition of the book.

Projection Speed Regulation.

A. H. Estes, Orangeburg, S. C., sends in the following clipping, asking if it is not the limit.

> I am very much in favor of having some means of regulating the speed at which films should be projected. It is not fair to the man who makes the films, or the owner of the theater to have this item at the mercy of the "operator." It is of vital importance. Today most machines are run by motors. It seems to me that it would be a simple matter to have some of our great technical men devise a speed regulator, and have this device attached to all machines. I would be very much in favor of having the speed of films regulated by law, if necessary. If a manufacturer spends thousands of dollars on a great production or an artist gives the greatest work of a career to the films, it is not fair to allow some eighteen dollar a week man ruin it. It isn't fair to any of the parties concerned, and surely not to the exhibitor, who does not know what is happening, because it causes patrons to stay away from his theater.

Well, it is one kind of a limit anyway. The Film Review, from which this clipping was taken, has got hold of the dilemma all right, but the trouble is it has grabbed the wrong end. The Review bewails the fact that some "$18.00 a week man" may ruin one of the big productions by not running it at the proper speed. For the benefit of the Film Review let me say that this department has been preaching that identical proposition for years, but the remedy is not a speed regulator. If any speed regulators are needed it is on the camera. The cameraman is the one who makes the "bull" in the matter of speed to start in with, and this department long ago suggested a speed regulator for cameras. No, the remedy is not a regulator on the projector, Mr. Film Review, but the elimination of the eighteen dollar a week man you are complaining of. It is, as you suggest, utter nonsense to place an eighteen dollar a week man in charge of the projection of a $50,000 production, but to place a speed regulator on would be jumping out of the frying pan into the fire, because of the fact that due to errors in camera speed it is absolutely necessary to high class work on the screen that the moving picture machine operator watch the film action closely and vary his projector speed in order to remedy the variations of camera speed. I would, however, thoroughly agree with one thing, and that is a regulation which would absolutely prohibit and prevent the running of any projection machine at a greater speed than 75 feet of film to the minute.

Powerline.

The Nicholas Power Company is putting out an oil which it particularly recommends for use in oil well of the intermittent movement of Power's machines. This oil is known as "Powerline." It was selected for this particular service by the Nicholas Power Company after tests of many different lubricants. Inasmuch as the proper lubrication of the Power's intermittent is a very important matter, I would suggest and recommend to all operators of Power's machines that Powerline be used exclusively in the intermittent. A pint of it will last a long time.

Union Men Read This.

From a union president for whose ability I have a great and abiding respect, and whom I consider as being one of the best union officials in these here United States, bar none, comes a letter, extracts from which read as follows:

> We are both working for the cause—to make the operator self-respecting, to the end that he may command respect; competent, so that he may command the salary he is deserving of; efficient, so that the union slide will be synonomous with "Grade A Work." My labors are limited, while yours are unlimited, and you have proven yourself, during the past eight years, to be not only the friend of the union operator but of every operator, and ALL should be grateful, but ——??
> I am now being daily importuned to reconsider my determination not to be a candidate for re-election, but there are others who have some claim upon me, and when I tell you that I have been practically recording secretary, business agent and legal advisor, besides taking care of my duties as president, you will see that the past year has been no sinecure. To arise each morning not later than 8:30 and get around to the different theaters trying to settle trifling disputes which should never have been, ever mindful of the fact that I must report for work at 1 p. m. And then, when my day's work is over, to sit up and answer the local's correspondence, seldom "hitting the hay" before 3 a. m., and all this for the munificent salary of two dollars per month. Don't misunderstand me. I am not mercenary. I have given freely of the best that is in me with no hope or wish for reward, for which I have no regrets. I merely cite these things, however, as showing how utterly absurd labor organizations are in the matter of material reward for labors performed. From the foregoing you will see that being leader of Local —— is sometning more than a pastime. My heart is with the boys. I believe thoroughly in unionism, and shall in the future, as in the past, do all in my power to further the interests of the local. I think, however, and I believe you will agree, in view of the foregoing, tbat I am entitled to the rest I am so much in need of. In closing, I want to assure you that I stand ready at any time to be of any assistance possible to you, or to the cause we are both laboring to benefit, and to convey to you may very best wishes.

I would like to tell you who this president is, for he is a REAL president. He's the livest kind of a live wire. If every union in this country had one or two men like him at its head it would not be any time at all until conditions would be improved by fully 50 per cent.

I would like particularly to call your attention, however, to the sentence in which he says: "Trying to settle trifling disputes which never sbould have been." In the vernacular of the street, the brother said a whole mouthful there. How very, very much of the energy of unions is consumed in "settling disputes which never should have been." I value the friendsbip of men of this kind above perhaps any other thing wbich has come to me through my activities as editor of the projection department and author of the Handbooks. This is the type of men I am proud to know, and to merit their esteem and friendship I would do much. In looking over the field I can mentally pick out men of this kind at various points. They stand out like kernels of red corn in a mass of white grain; you recognize them by their first letter, or at the first meeting, and you seldom get fooled. They are the real spinal column of the profession and of the operators' organizations. Given one or two of this kind of men, and you will find the union a very active progressive body; lacking such men the union has an up-hill row to hoe; its progress is slow and the road it treads will be full of ruts, stones and rough places.

Why Do They Laugh?

R. J. Richardson, Clifton Heights, Pa., asks:

> Will you tell me why so many operators laugh at that lens table? I have them come out from Philadelphia to look at the way I have things rigged up, and some have been men from the local, too. I have, on account of the small lens opening, one lamp placed 30 inches away from the machine, working on A. C. First one will say: "You are losing light that way and wasting current. Don't see what good it does." And the next one will make some other equally foolish comment. Next to tbis machine I have a Six A, with which, because of the lamp rods and stand, I cannot get my lamp in the right position to accommodate the objective lens. The field is not clear. When I show them this I get no comment, only they think, I, or rather you, are wrong, for they know I am using your tables. Taking your theories with the practice I seem to get the laugh. This is not only from operators but from some managers as well. But when I offer to make the test and show them with their own machines the reply is: "Oh, it's too much trouble. That is only theory, anyhow," or something of that kind. Where I am in charge of the machinery and have full privilege to fix things the way I want them, and I know they are right.

My dear sir, do you realize that when Columbus claimed the world was round he was laughed at and called a lunatic? Ask these same operators and managers WHY the table is wrong, and insist on an answer. What will you get? Nothing! Because they don't know. They don't understand the proposition, and therefore since it is new to them and not understood by them, it is, perforce, nonsense. Five years from now, however, these same men would no more think of lining up their optical systems by guess than they would think of jumping off Brooklyn Bridge. I don't claim that the table is absolutely right; in fact, it is not absolutely right. It would be altogether too much to expect that it would be. All I have ever claimed for it is that it's a big step in the right direction, and the best thing we now have. These same managers who laugh are probably paying light bills which could be very materially reduced. Let the managers who laugh go into the constructing department of any large institution, yes, and into tbe operating department of any large institution, and see what part "theory" plays in its affairs. The man who rejects theory is—well, I don't like to say he is a fool, but that term, while offensive, is the one which perhaps fits best. As a matter of fact, I am myself not absolutely positive that the projection machine of the future won't in some instances have as much as 30 or 40 inches between the condenser and the film—and I am not sure it will, either. There are questions which are extremely complicated, but which have got to be solved, and this department will eventually solve them. Meanwhile don't let tbose who laugh worry you in the least. Remember the old adage: "He laughs best who laughs last," and content yourself, as I do, with the knowledge that you and I, my brother, will have the last laugh.

From a Well-Known Actress.

When you boys up in the operating room watch the shadow form of Rose Tapley, of the Vitagraph forces, flit to and fro on the screen, you may know that you look upon one who, besides being a most capable artist, is one of the most earnest, charming and thoroughly womanly women in the whole moving picture industry. And here is a letter, or an article, as you like, which she has written for the department and asked me to publish. It is a pleasure to do so, and to know, and let you know, that there is at least one of the leading artists who realizes and recognizes the important part the man up in the fireproof room plays. Read what Miss Tapley has to say, and then, if you wish to thank her for the interest she has voluntarily shown, you can send her a short note, addressing: Rose Tapley, care Vitagraph Studios, East 15th Street and Locust Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. But don't expect a reply, because Miss Tapley is a very ousy woman, and could not possibly do that. She does not know that I am going to suggest your doing this, but it strikes me it would be a nice thing to let her know that you appreciate her thoughtfulness and kindness.

> The motion picture industry has advanced so rapidly within the last few years that it is no longer a venture, but one of tbe important factors of this country's wealth. Immense monied interests have become convinced of the permanency of the industry, and are beginning to realize the immense influence it has and the tremendous power it wields in the affairs of men. This being true, it behooves each one in any way connected with it to do his or her share in the production and development of better pictures.
> The motion picture operator has sometimes forgotten how vitally he is a part of the whole, and how important a part he is of that whole. It is to him that I would make an appeal. After the manufacturer has spent freely of his money, his brains, bis time and the art of his artists, and has completed a beautiful, interesting or instructive picture, everything then depends upon the operator as to whether that picture is a success or a failure. He is the man behind the reel, unseen, but nevertheless the silent factor who can make or mar it by judicious, intelligent, conscientious handling of the reels or by a careless, slip-shod metbod which results in breaking the film, scratching it, or by running it too quickly or too slowly, thus quickening or dragging the action until the story and work is absolutely ruined, and the work, thought, and money expended by the manufacturer goes for naught. Think of this, Mr. Operator, and then make up your mind to do your part in this great work.
> The day is coming when your branch of the industry will be recognized, and there will be a great sifting of the fit and tbe unfit, and in that day merit and intelligence will surely come in for its reward. Be one of the ones who help to construct, and not a destroyer.

Making a Ground.

James Alexander, St. Genieve, Ark., asks:

> Will you kindly instruct me as to the best, cheapest method of constructing a permanent ground? Is a plate buried in cbarcoal best?

No. A plate buried in powdered charcoal only makes an efficient ground when buried ten feet deep, and that involves an unnecessary amount of labor. Plates buried a less depth have been found to develop as much as 250 ohms resistance, which makes it of slight value. A three-quarter or one inch galvanized iron pipe driven ten feet into the earth is found, by test of 250 such pipes, to average a little less than 16 ohms resistance, meaning by this that the test was taken across two such pipes driven a short distance away from each other. This would not take into account the possible resistance between the ground and point of contact with the opposite polarity when the ground is in actual use, but if we start with an unnecessarily high resistance at the permanent ground, then the effectiveness of the whole thing is very largely lowered. The ten-feet-deep galvanized pipe is cheap and altogether excellent unless you can get contact with the pipe of a water system, and even then the driven pipe may be best because of tbe fact that it goes deeper and, being driven, makes very firm contact with the earth and the wire may be soldered to it, and you can't solder tbe ground wire to a water pipe, therefore, even though perfect contact may be had at first, oxidizing of the copper is apt to set up high resistance at this point later.

From the Tri-City.

The operators of Davenport, Ia., and Moline and Rock Island, Ill., who have heretofore been incorporated in Local 85, have been granted a separate charter, and have set sail under the title "Local Union 433, I. A. T. S. E., and M. P. M. O." The union, by its secretary, Fred O. Slenker, writes as follows:

> Enclosed find copy of article we have prepared and had printed in local labor and city papers. We believe it will help to impress upon theater managers and the general public the fact that we are alive and on the alert to better our conditions and to improve projection. We send this article because we believe it may interest you, and that you may be able to use the same in our esteemed projection department. The officers and members of Local 433 tender best wishes to yourself and the department.

The article in question is too long to be quoted in full, but a condensed synopsis reads as follows:

> We, the moving picture machine operators of the cities of Davenport, Ia., and Moline and Rock Island, Ill., take this method of making known to the public that we now have a direct charter with the I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O. of U. S. & C. Prior to March 1 we were members of Local 85. In withdrawing from that body to take up our new charter we have none but the best and kindest wishes of and for our parent local, which now becomes our sister local, No. 85. It is our intention to co-operate with the various labor bodies of the Tri-Cities to the end that the principles of unionism may be advanced. We expect soon to display union slides and cards in the theaters employing union operators. Theater patrons, as a general proposition, have but little idea of the ability an operator must possess in order to put on a show which will attract and hold a steady patronage for a theater. To the average observer moving picture operating seems simple, and something which requires but little experience. As a matter of fact, however, it is a very complicated craft, or profession. To become a really first-class, high-grade operator requires years of study and experience. This fact would be more readily understood could the public but see the wide and varied range of electrical apparatus, including motor generator sets, mercury arc rectifiers, transformers, fuses of various types, and the various kinds of switchboards with which the operator must be familiar, to say nothing of the intricate optical system and mechanics of the projector. He must thoroughly understand not only the practice but the theory of projection, which is in itself no small study, particularly in view of the fact that different theaters present widely differing conditions which demand in each case a special treatment in order to get the best possible results. Up to a comparatively short time ago but very few had any faith whatever in the permanency of the moving picture business. Under this condition it naturally followed that little attempt was made to improve, and apparatus was comparatively crude and simple. During the past few years, however, it has become a settled fact that the motion picture has a place as a permanent and hugely popular form of amusement. As soon as this fact was determined, manufacturers began to improve apparatus, and some of the largest electrical concerns in the world began to invade the moving picture field, putting forth apparatus of various kinds, all of which added immensely to complications in the operating room. And it was then the operator turned to the study of projection of better pictures. It was then he began to learn there was something more to operating than merely splicing a film and setting a pair of carbons. It was then that moving picture theaters costing huge sums of money began to appear, and with their appearance came the demand for better work in the operating room. It was then operators began to organize to better their conditions, and today a large percentage of the competent operators of this country and Canada are members of the I. A. T. S. E., M. P. M. O., of U. S. & C.

> Our membership, of course, ranges from men of comparatively short experience to men who have been operating for years, and through the organization the younger men are able to secure the benefit of the counsel of the older, more experienced operators, and thus they and theater managers are directly benefitted. Local Union 433 wishes to impress upon all exhibitors who heretofore have not employed union men that it is distinctly to their interest, both financially and otherwise, to do so. The members of Local Union 433 propose to put on the best projection possible. We expect the best possible results on the screen from our members, and propose, so far as lies within our power, to excel in results on the screen. We therefore respectfully request the public to support us by patronizing such theaters as employ union operators. By so doing you are assured of seeing as good projection as can be put on by an experienced operator, always taking into consideration, however, the relative efficiency of the equipment he is working with.

> To all members of organized labor we offer our co-operation and good-will, and to the theater-going public we extend the respects of Moving Picture Machine Operators' Protective Union, Local 433, I. A. T. S. E., & M. P. M. O., of U. S. & C. Theo. J. Garretson, president; C. C. Derr, vice-president; Fred O. Slenker, recording secretary; Oscar E. Moody, financial secretary; Arthur R. Brock, treasurer; Hugo E. Thoensen, business agent; Henry C. Thoensen, guardian; Fred R. Parker, W. H. Myers, H. S. Gould, delegates to Tri-City Trades and Labor Assembly.

Crap Game and "Chicken."

From Cleveland, Ohio, comes the following, and I might as well say right now that its not from Howard Codding. I mention this because it is well known that Codding and I are personal friends, therefore, I presume, without this statement as a prelude the "element" referred to would suspect him.

> With regard to your visit to Cleveland, the level headed men appreciated your talk. There is, however, an "element" in this city which positively refuses to listen to "shop talk," as they term it, after leaving the operating room. Their mind is concentrated to a great extent on crap games and "chicken," than on the art of projection. I wanted very much to meet you while you were in Cleveland, but circumstances, already explained, prevented my doing so, and I know you will pardon my absence. You can take it from me if I don't find an operating job that pays more money before long I am going to hit the E. E. game. I have been offered some good positions lately, but operating seems to have a fascination for me; however a married man cannot live on "fascination" here in Cleveland. With regard to the American Projection Society: I should very much like to see it elect a Standarization Committee and lay down the law for size of operating rooms as well as some other things. The American Institute of E. E. rules are obeyed by manufacturers and builders. I see no reason why the same could not be accomplished in our line of work. After examining the Handbook I find only one technical error. I think its on page 11. It says that an alternating current flows in all D. C. armatures. You should have added: Except in Homopolar or Antipolar machines. The General Electric and Westinghouse have built these machines as large as 5,000 K. W., and they may be more developed in the future, owing to high speed of the steam turbine.

I suppose the "element" referred to will do some raving when they read this criticism. Well, we "should worry." Operators of this kind are not a credit to the profession, to themselves, or to the moving picture industry. They should confine their endeavors to the gentle art of manipulating a No. 2 shovel, or driving a team of mules. That sort of work don't require much thought; its not necessary to "talk shop" after hours if you are a dirt shoveler or a teamster, but men of brains who receive good salaries and are recognized as expert mechanics are always glad of the opportunity to "talk shop" at any time, provided they can learn something by so doing, and that is practically always. Presumably "talking shop" includes study, and of course you cannot study projection and shoot craps at the same time; neither can you study projection and at the same time indulge in the fascinating pastime of "chicken" hunting. But remember this: it is neither the "chicken hunters" or the crap shooters who will raise operating up to the level of a well paid trade or profession. They can, of course, get some salary advance through the power of organization, but the manager knows he is not paying the increased salaries for increased ability, therefore he is strenuously opposed to the increase. The man who not only belongs to his organization, but does credit thereto by studying and endeavoring to improve, is the chap who can demand an increase in salary and produce a sound argument as to why that increase should be paid. The crap shooting chicken hunters aren't filling the forty and fifty dollar jobs, and what's more they are never likely to do so. The element spoken of constitutes a misfortune, not only to the local, but to the moving picture industry in the city of Cleveland.

Now, Mr. Crap Shooters, it is not going to do you one particle of good to get mad and rave about this. You may get just as angry as you want to, and call the editor every name you can think of, but away down in the bottom of your souls you know I am telling the even and exact truth. I know that the city of Cleveland and the Cleveland local contains some corking good men; men whom I am proud to know, and whose friendship I consider it an honor to have, but I also know that the element spoken of exists in that city.

Silent Reader.

C. E. Adams, Salina, Kans., says:

> Have been a silent reader of the department for some time. Have never mustered courage enough to contribute before, but if space permits will now introduce myself as an operator from good old sunny Kansas. Have been operating motion picture machines for the past six years. Was previously an electrician, therefore can claim to be a graduate of the school of experience, having served a year's apprenticeship under a competent operator. Am at present running two 1916 Simplex motor driven projectors, using 50 amperes A. C., through two Bell & Howell rheostats, projecting a 12 foot picture at 104 feet, and I am getting results. I thoroughly agree with you with regard to Illinois's letter concerning the hiring of competent operators and the salary paid same. It really is amusing the way some managers express their ideas with regard to the operator.

Welcome to our city, Brother Adams! Don't you mean Bell & Howell economizers—you said rheostats. A. C. through rheostats is rather a wasteful proposition. If you haven't economizers (transformers) and are going to continue using A. C. I would recommend that you get them. You will get better results for a good deal less money.

Wanted.

James Herrick, Jr., member I. A. T. S. E. Local Union 297, P. O. Box 1105, San Diego, Cal., wants to get an old Vlascope or Poloscope head. Must be cheap and in good condition. Anyone who has one of those old mechanisms and wishes to dispose of it should communicate with Brother Herrick. I, personally, have not seen either one of them in years, except a Selig Polyscope which Mr. Nicholas Power owns, and which he would not part with, as it is somewhat in the nature of a curiosity, here in the east at least.

Interesting.

Ralph W. Martin, Los Angeles, Cal., says:

I am taking particular pains to reply to Friend Solar's letter in issue of May 20th, because, as you say: "This matter is intensely practical if it can be reduced to a working rule," and I think I can come pretty close to furnishing that rule.

It is rather unfortunate in relation to Friend Solar's letter that some of my further articles on chromatio and spherical aberration were still unpublished at the time of his writing. However, I think the practical point at issue centers about Solar's statement: "As to the complete combination of red and green into white, as shown, under the conditions given, it is an impossibility." I cannot agree at all with the above statement, and as a proof of my original claims, refer to my unpublished article dated May 2nd, entitled "Loss of light by spherical aberration." Here will be found a practical method which will enable the operator to locate, by direct inspection, that section (Sec. AA) of the condensed beam, where the light approaches nearest to white, and which should consequently be placed at the aperture.

Defined in general terms, it is near the circle of least confusion, or the "sharp spot," and is located several inches nearer the condenser than is the true crater focus. (Also see Handbook, p. 130).

It is also practically the narrowest section of the condensed beam, but the method, as fully explained in the article referred to, is offered as a means for accurately determining its position.

Of course if spherical aberration is not present, as assumed in the article of issue Feb. 19, then the circle of least confusion must coincide with the true crater focus, which is the desideratum of a perfected condenser system. I think my new article will also make clear the other points in optics which friend Solar touches upon. It is also interesting to note, page 596 of "Optic Projection," by Gage & Gage, an explanation of chromatic aberration which agrees precisely, as far as it goes, with my chromatic analysis as printed in the new Handbook.

I certainly wish to thank Brother Solar for his criticisms, for it is things just like this which stir up the animals and enable us to bring matters to a practical solution.

You know, gentlemen, I am becoming more and more convinced that there is a possible very great improvement to be made in the condenser of the moving picture machine, and Friend Martin's articles are the ones that have gone a long ways toward convincing me of that fact. I am going to have a motor generator set put in, and fix up a much more elaborate testing station than I had before. Its a lead pipe cinch, so far as I can see, that the plano-convex condenser and the meniscus-bi-convex condenser can never be made to supply the demands of practical projection under all conditions. As I now see the matter there are certain more or less valid objections to objective lenses of large opening. I am not as yet thoroughly and completely convinced as to just how valid these objections are, but there unquestionably is considerable advantage in comparative small objective lens diameters from the point of view of the revolving shutter, and possibly the definition of the picture on the screen. With present condensers it seems to me to be utterly impossible to use long focal length objectives with small diameters without tremendous waste of light.

I am becoming convinced that what we need (whether we will be able to get it or not is something else again), is a condenser which will give us a crater location about 3 inches or 3½ inches from the back surface of the rear condenser lens when a 1½ inch spot is in focus between 20 and 30 inches from the condenser. Given this condition we could use a long focal length lens of comparative small diameter without light loss. That is all I want to say at this time, except that Friend Martin suggests the possibility of using two menicus-bi-convex, and a lens having one plano surface and one concave surface, the concave surface of this lens to be next the arc. I would not wish to comment on this scheme, more than to say I don't believe a lens having a thin center and a thick edge could be successfully used next a powerful arc lamp. It seems to me the comparative rapid expansion and contraction of the thin center would either break the lens or warp it out of shape. More than this I don't want to say at this time. But I would like very much to have Brothers Martin, Griffiths, Armstrong and Deutsch to concentrate on that proposition. It seems to me we certainly do need an entire new form of condenser. Whether we can get one that is practical or not remains to be seen, but the fundamental proposition ought to be a long conjugate foci point in front and a short one behind, with a crater position not more than 3½ inches from the rear surface of the rear lens as the maximum, the front point to be, as I have said, made different lengths by changing lenses, maintaining the rear point constant. Can it be done and be done with lenses which will stand up under the service required without excessive added glass thickness? It cannot be accomplished with present condensers, that seems certain.

Make a Stab—Interested.

From Maryland comes the following:

It is surprising that more operators do not take advantage of the questions and answers. I for one certainly appreciate their educational value. One has only to make a stab at answering to immediately become interested, and in a short time has the "habit." I would like to know what is wrong with the operators in Alleghany County, Md., also in Mineral County, West Virginia. I have spent time and money trying to do something, but up to date have been unable to accomplish anything in the way of organization. Cumberland, Md., supports six houses, Frostburg three, Midland one, Mount Savage one, Lonaconing two, Westernport one, Barton one and Luke one. At the latter the manager is the operator. Piedmont, W. Va., has two, as also has Keyser, W. Va. These houses run evenings only, with the exception of Cumberland, where there is a matinee. Oh, yes, by the way, Luke and Barton, and one house in Piedmont run in the afternoon. All the shows are making money, and could well afford to pay the operator at least thirteen dollars a week. There are not enough theatrical workers in any one town, except Cumberland, to form a local, and Cumberland local 258, I. A., recently got stung by taking Hagerstown workers under her wing, with the result that the local now does not want to have anything to do with anyone outside of Cumberland. My own suggestion would be for the theatrical workers of Frostburg, Lonaconing, Piedmont, Westernport, and Keyser to combine and form a local of their own. I would advise operators in this section to study a little, buy a Handbook, and take a try at the questions in the department; also take pains to produce a better picture. There is only one way to get what we want, and that is by producing good results on the screen. I know that we have good projection in all the towns named, and have been told that Frostburg, Westernport, and Piedmont have better shows than many houses in Baltimore, Washington and Annapolis. I don't like to butt in, but most emphatically managers in the towns named could give their operators a raise of fifty per cent and still make lots of money. I am not aiming at any particular manager, or any particular town, since they are all pretty much alike. Managers in this section seem to be more or less organized, or at least on fairly good terms with each other. My contention is the managers should pay for value received, and they are now receiving value they are not paying for. I am strongly in favor of extra value for extra pay.

The brother does not say what operators in this section are receiving now, but most emphatically a theater that won't allow the manager to pay his operator the sum of thirteen dollars a week has no business with an operator at all. We cannot ask excessive salaries for operators in small towns, but in these days of high cost of living certainly no one can claim that the modest suggestion of Maryland, $13.00 a week, is anything even faintly resembling excessive. As to organizing the towns along the lines suggested, why I don't know whether its feasible or not. If this territory is within the jurisdiction of Cumberland Local 258, then it is not a question whether Local 258 "wants" to organize the men or don't want to. Its up to the local to do it or else relinquish all claim to the territory and let some one else organize the men. More than this I would not care to say until I have heard from others in that particular neck of the woods. Theater managers in the towns named must remember that they cannot reasonably expect high class service in the operating room if the operator has to work for a song and sing the song himself. If we pay a cheap price we cannot reasonably expect anything but cheap service, and cheap service usually means poor service.

A Great Help.

R. Prom, proprietor Star theater, Milton, North Dakota, writes:

I am new in the game, and the Handbook certainly is a great help. I would like to improve my picture and want to get advice as to just what should be done. I have a Powers Six, in good repair; a screen coated with DD screen paint, upon which I project a picture 11 feet 2 inches wide at 59 feet 6 inches. The back focus of my lens is 3¼ inches. Aperture of lens is 1 7-16; distance from front condenser to aperture plate is 13½ inches. According to the tables in the Handbook I should use a lens with an aperture of 2.144 inches and use two 6½ inch condensers. Am now using a 6½ next the arc and a 7½ in front, these being recommended by the Kleine Optical Company. After consulting the tables I tried to get a lens with a 2 inch diameter, but could not get one which would project as large a picture as I have at the same distance.

Due to the little disturbance over in Europe, Brother Prom, we have got to take what we can get in lenses these days, and, I suppose, be darned glad to get them. Optical glass is extremely hard to get. I think the only practical thing for you to do, so far as your objective be concerned, would be to get your lamphouse back as far as you can and keep a 1½-inch spot in focus at the aperture. I think in your case a meniscus-bi-convex would give some improvement. I would suggest that you write the Minneapolis branch of the Laemmle Film Service, and tell them you want a meniscus-bi-convex condenser which will give you a 1½-inch spot in focus at the aperture with 20 inches between the center of the bi-convex lens and the film. I should also like to have your report on this proposition after you have tried it. It will place your arc somewhat farther away from the lens but, on the whole, I think, you will get better results. As to the screen paint you mention, why I don't know anything about it.

Standard Film Measurements.

(Adapted from the standards computed by the engineers of the Bell & Howell Camera Company, Chicago, Ill., and used by nearly all manufacturers of motion picture machinery.)

The necessity for accuracy and uniformity in film perforation has been recognized from the beginning of the motion picture business. It is no less necessary that all motion picture apparatus be built in conformity with certain definite standards of construction. It should be possible to use film prepared by any perforator in any camera—to pass it through any printing mechanism without delay or difficulty—and to handle it successfully in any projector. That is to say, there should be set up a definite universal standard of film perforation to which the film movement mechanism of all motion picture machinery should be made to conform. The adoption of such a standard would substitute order for confusion in the manufacture of motion picture machinery. It would go far toward perfecting the mechanics of the motion picture industry, thus opening the way for new artistic triumphs. And it would simplify the tasks and lighten the burdens of the manufacturer of films—the maker and exhibitor of motion pictures.

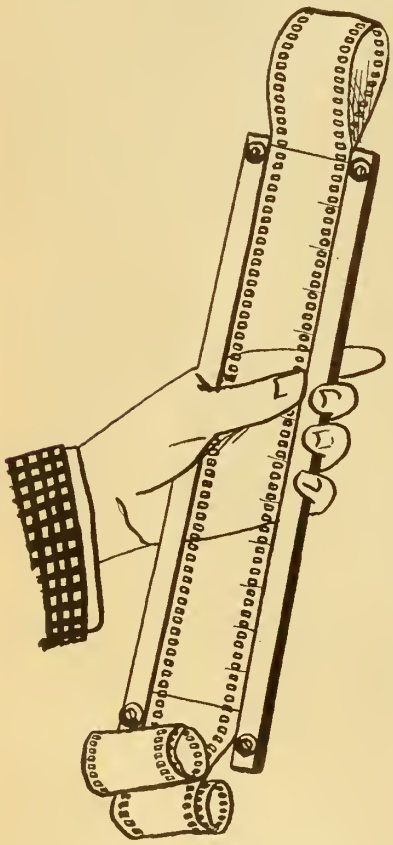

Fig. 1.—Standard Film Perforation Test Gauge.

The absence of definite universal standards for the construction of motion picture machinery made necessary the design and adoption of a standard film perforating gauge. The gauge is made of two bars of steel arranged in parallel and held equidistant from each other by parallel steel links. Between the bars are two strips of plate glass, one of which is fastened in the frame by means of a spring clip engaging the beveled ends of the glass plate while the other is held in place by the thumb. Each of the strips of glass carries on one of its margins a scale graduated to one full picture space for the purpose of determining the correct perforating gauge length.

With this device it is possible to test the accuracy of perforations as to uniformity of spacing, marginal gauge and transverse alignment. When testing the uniformity of spacing the parallel bars are opened as wide as possible. The film is laid upon the lower glass plate and folded so that the celluloid surface is inside the fold. The upper strip of glass is put in position on the film, where it is held by the thumb (see cut). The bars are so placed as to contact the film margins snugly at all points, thus bringing the edges of the film in parallel. The gauge should then be held toward the light and the upper layer of film so adjusted over the lower that the smallest possible opening will appear in the perforation spaces. Any variations in the perforations creating an imperfect register will then be readily apparent.

The standard film perforating gauge was adopted only after long experience in building of motion picture machinery and the handling of film. In setting up a standard of measurements it departs from earlier standards only where it is necessary to do so in order to take into account the physical changes to which the film is subjected.

It is accepted as settled that the maximum shrinkage of motion picture film is .0937 inches per foot. Painstaking experiment warranted the conclusion—fully established by later experience—that a gauge length of 11.968 inches for 64 holes would insure the accuracy of perforation necessary to perfect results and at the same time make due allowance for shrinkage of the film.

The following computation shows why we adopt 11.968 inches instead of

12 inches as the standard for a perforating gauge measuring 64 holes:

Assuming the outside diameter of the sprocket wheel in all standard projecting machines to be 15/16 inches or .9375 inches, then;

The diameter of the sprocket being .9375 inches

The circumference of the sprocket is 2.94525 inches.

As standard motion picture film has an average thickness of .0065 inches the pitch diameter of the sprocket will be found to be .9375 inches plus .0065 inches, or .944 inches.

Pitch circumference is 3.1416 x .944 or 2.965704 inches. Circular pitch equal 2.965704 divided by 16 (the number of teeth to be found on the sprocket) or .1853—plus inches.

The standard perforating gauge being 11.968 inches for 64 holes and the maximum allowance for shrinkage of film being 3/32 inches or .0937 inches for 64 holes, therefore 11.968 inches less .0937 inches or 11.8743 inches is the average length of shrunken film measuring 64 holes.

The pitch of the film or length per hole is 11.8743 inches divided by 64, or .18553 inches.

Pitch of sprocket, .1853 plus inches
Pitch of film, .1855 plus inches

The drawing shows the measurements by which the gauge is established; width of film over all 1.375 inch; width of film over all on perforation 1.219 inches; distance (width) center to center of perforations 1.109 inch; distance (width) inside to inside of perforations .999 inch; width of perforation .110 inch; distance (width) center of perforation to margin of film .133 inch; distance (width) outside of perforation to margin of film .078 inch; length of perforation .073 inch; distance (length) between perforations .114 inch; distance (length) center to center of perforations .187 inch.

"The Illumination of the Field of a Photographic Objective."

The above is the title of a reprint of a paper by H. C. Lord that appeared in Volumn LXXVI, No. 3, of the Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society. This paper, with its illustrations, is a valuable and instructive one, containing formulas that can be applied over a wide field. Mr. Lord advises that he will be glad to send copies of this paper gratis as long as the supply lasts. All that is necessary is to address a request to H. C. Lord, Director, Emerson McMillin Observatory, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio; and, while Mr. Lord does not ask that it be done, our readers can hardly do less than enclose a stamp with their request in order that his kindness may not be made too burdensome.

Professor Lord is the author of a book on "The Making of a Photographic Objective," which was reviewed in the department last February.

The science of optics is the foundation and corner stone upon which rests the structure of photography, and no earnest student of the craft can ever learn enough in that too much neglected branch of his profession.

Music for the Picture

Musical Setting for "The Purple Lady."

Released June 19th by the Metro Pictures Corporation.

Suggestions prepared by S. M. Berg (By special arrangements with G. Schirmer, Inc., Music Publishers, New York).

THIS "Musical Suggestion Cue Sheet" is not designed to solve every possible musical requirement of the film, but is intended as a partial solution of the problem—what to play for the picture. It has proven to be of great assistance to the leader, not only by relieving to a degree the tedium of rehearsals, but by assisting materially in overcoming those conditions encountered when the film is not available until the hour of performance.

Musical Suggestion Cue Sheets can be obtained (free of charge) by managers from their local exchange in advance of the date of release. This will afford to the progressive leader an opportunity to acquaint himself with the general character of the film drama he is to portray with his orchestra.

Together with the suggested music at the title or descriptive cues where it is to be played, the tempo or characteristic is given so that the leader can select or substitute any or all of the numbers from his own library, thereby avoiding any financial outlay though still carrying out the interpretation.

The timing of the picture is based on a speed of 15 minutes to a thousand feet. The time indications will help the leader to anticipate the various cues which may consist of the printed sub-title (marked T) or a described action (marked D). For instance: 13 T "A nickel" is a sub-title and is printed reading matter on the screen. But 37¼ D "When Silas arrives" is a description of action.

The "Uplift" Society visits the Purple Cafe and here Silas Gil-,worthy its leader, who is engaged to Adelaide Severn, meets Fifi, a dancer in league with "Count" Peletier, a jewel smuggler. Silas, infatuated, returns the next evening and takes her to Coney Island. Afraid of detection she slips a smuggled jewel into his pocket and forgets about it. Next day, discovering the jewel gone, she and the "Count" follow Silas to the Severn country home where his wedding is to take place. Numerous complications arise that finally result in the capture of the two thieves and the reunion of Silas and Adelaide.

This picture is a comedy. The music selected is for the purpose of keeping it bright and enhancing the comedy action.

Note particularly: Scenes of dancing in restaurant from 6 to 22 where tempo of dancers should be followed.

Time schedule: Five reels (about 4,650 feet), 70 minutes.

A New Motion Picture Music Series.

Beginning with this issue and from time to time hereafter we will present on our music page Mr. Walter C. Simon's latest idea of music for motion pictures. Mr. Simon has devoted many years to the writing of music for motion pictures, and was the pioneer composer of incidental music for same when he composed music for the Kalem productions. The first incidental music ever printed for motion pictures was Mr. Simon's composition for "Arra Na Pogue," an Irish drama released by Kalem. Since that time Mr. Simon has been trying to improve his method of writing music to accompany pictures and that he has succeeded has been proven by the fact that scores of pianists and orchestra leaders throughout the country use his music every week.

A difficulty lies in the fact that an orchestra cannot play correctly for every motion picture owing to the very quick changes of scenes. Now the question arises, can an orchestra play correctly for every picture even with an especially arranged score? They could if the picture was rehearsed a number of times, but even then it is very difficult to synchronize with the picture. In proof of this the writer was at a performance of "Cabiria," which had already been playing a few months at the Knickerbocker theater. Owing to the fact that at that time there was no organ to cover the pauses it was evident how many times the orchestra was obliged to wait for their "cue." It is evident that music that would fit every scene has been a long felt want. With the music reproduced on the following page it will be possible for an orchestra leader or individual player to change from a waltz to pathos, one step to Mexican and a hundred other changes instantly!

In order to use this music to its best advantage it is advisable to start with No. 6, and to seque to any other staff when necessary or at discretion of performer, and alternately play No. 6 waltz or one step about every sixteen or thirty-two measures. Any movement becomes monotonous when played too long, so advise these changes. For pizzacotto effect in No. 4½ play only large notes staccato with both hands in unison an octave apart. For march effect in No. 9½ play treble clef as written and in the bass clef only the large notes and chords with the stems turned upward. This installment of music is one page and when the series is complete the reader will possess a complete set of music for any picture.

Largest Auditorium for Billie Burke

Contracts Signed for Showing of "Gloria's Romance" at Ocean Grove—Serial Pronounced Great Success.

BILLIE BURKE and "Gloria's Romance" are going into what is said to be the largest auditorium of its kind in the United States—the Auditorium at Ocean Grove, N. J., which has a seating capacity of over 10,000. Dr. G. L. D. Tompkins, of Asbury Park, is managing director of the Auditorium and when one considers that Dr. Tompkins ordinarily offers his patrons such attractions as John McCormack and other operatic stars of similar magnitude, it is easy to see that he thinks highly of the new George Kleine motion picture novel, for he has signed for the picture the largest single day contract written by a film exchange manager in the United States, the contract having been written out of George Kleine's New York exchange.

The previous success reported from cities and theaters where "Gloria's Romance" is running have been far exceeded within the past week or two by new reports coming in from various exchanges. Just as samples of the enormous success that Billie Burke is scoring one might cite a few reports like those which follow:

Charles M. Thall, manager of the Kleine offices in Minneapolis says: "The pre-service engagements of 'Gloria's Romance' at the New Palace theater, Minneapolis, and the New Princess theater, St. Paul, have created new records in point of attendance at both houses. It is a fact that both the New Palace and the New Princess have been showing to sold-out business every day with this production. H. J. Lego, of the Majestic in Ft. Dodge, Ia., reports his city has the Billie Burke craze and the large capacity of his theater has been taxed to the utmost at every performance of 'Gloria's Romance.' Frank Bryant, manager of the Plàza theater at Waterloo, Ia.; J. Miloslowsky, of the Palace theater in Des Moines, Ia.; James Granger, of the Strand theater, Cedar Rapids, Ia., and A. K. Pay, of the Colonial in Sioux Falls, S. Dak., all enthusiastically endorse the phenomenal box office value of Billie Burke in the Rupert Hughes motion picture novel. On Lake street, a retail thoroughfare in the residence district of Minenapolis, the downtown success of 'Gloria's Romance' is reflected in the bookings at the Calhoun, Lyric, Rialto and Garrick theaters. Towns of from one to five thousand population are meeting with equal success in the showing of the picture. Summy Brothers, of the Star theater, Spencer, Ia., report an attendance equal to one-third the entire population of their city at every performance."

Harry Scott, from the Philadelphia office of George Kleine, reports: "Representative exhibitors such as Stanley V. Mastbaum, of the Stanley Company; Alexander Boyd, of the Arcadia theater; C. Stamper, of the Tioga theater, Philadelphia, and the Burbank and Conover theaters of Germantown; H. Effinger, of the Leader theater; J. Delmar, of the Jefferson theater, and numerous others are unanimous in their expressions of approval regarding the increased business on Billie Burke nights, as well as the general satisfaction with which 'Gloria's Romance' is received by their patrons. In Baltimore, E. J. Rosenstein, of the Strand theater, has doubled his receipts. In Atlantic City the Colonial and Bijou theaters have increased their business from 100 to 150 per cent. on Billie Burke days and the same applies to M. E. Comeford's circuit of theaters in Scranton, Wilkes Barre, Pittston and Carbondale. We have not received one complaint on 'Gloria's Romance' and the smaller towns are signing up contracts daily at prices far exceeding any rentals that have heretofore been paid."

W. A. Ratz, of the Indianapolis office, says: "H. A. Keine, of the Keystone theater, reports his busines increased steadily each week. He is running four days a week and says that if the business on the other three days of the week could compare favorably with the Billie Burke days he would have no worry for the coming summer months."

George Hines, manager of the Auditorium at South Bend, Ind., writes Manager William H. Jenner, of the Kleine Chicago office: "If you want any references of the drawing power and qualities of Billie Burke in 'Gloria's Romance' tell exhibitors to write to me."

GAUMONT'S "NEW ORLEANS" SHOWN JULY 19.

In Gaumont's "See America First" series, it was announced that New Orleans, La., would appear in No. 43, issued as a Mutual picture July 5. This will not be released until July 19, and Mobile, Ala., will be shown July 5. All the places of historic interest and of scenic beauty which distinguish this charming Southern city will be shown.

That the Blind May See

THE National Drama Corporation, in pursuit of a purely eleemosynary plan to shed the light of drama into the lives of the sightless, has found a unique way of utilizing the stage behind the screen, which is usually waste space when a photoplay holds the boards. At the Liberty theater, New York, where "The Fall of a Nation" is enjoying an extended run, there is often an audience behind the screen of which the spectators in the front of the house now nothing. Moreover it is literally an "audience," because its members cannot see and must rely entirely upon their sense of hearing to gain some idea of the picture which portrays "The Fall of a Nation."

Flora MacDonald.

This is conveyed mainly through the descriptive music which Victor Herbert composed especially to suit the action, scene by scene, and characterize the principals of the play through typical themes, or leit motifs. Secondly, this musical impression is reinforced through verbal description by a young woman who was one of the principals in the photoplay.

Thus there is the unique spectacle of the photographic likeness of Flora MacDonald in the character of Angela Benda, enacting some of the most thrilling and pathetic scenes of the picture play, including the battle in which her screen spouse is killed, and the subsequent war in which she leads an army of Amazons to avenge his death and win freedom; while behind the screen Miss MacDonald, in dress and manner more like a teacher than an actress, explains the action of the photodrama to an interested audience of blind people from various institutions.

Miss MacDonald does not have to see the picture as she describes it, because she knows both it and the score by heart, and with every change of theme in the orchestra she can tell exactly what scene is on the screen. Her talks are entirely informal, but Mr. Dixon has asked her to write out a lecture to be used the same way in other cities where the film is shown.

Clara Kimball Young for Chicago

July 14 Set Aside by Committee in Special Honor of Popular Screen Star.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG will not only attend the Chicago Convention, but the committee on arrangements has set aside July 14 in her honor as Clara Kimball Young Day. The promoters of the convention were particularly eager to have Miss Young visit Chicago, and when, through the intercession of Jones, Linick & Schaeffer, the Chicago partners of Lewis J. Selznick, the popular star's promise to appear was obtained, the committee at once decided to accord her signal distinction.

Plans are being laid to make Clara Kimball Young Day one of the biggest affairs of the week. The star will address the convention in the morning, speaking in behalf of bigger, better and cleaner pictures. In the afternoon and evening she will hold a reception, meeting all the attending exhibitor delegates and their families as well as the general public. Handsome souvenirs are being prepared for distribution throughout the day.

Miss Young will be escorted to and from Chicago by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis J. Selznick, Albert Capellani, director general of her producing company, and E. R. Schayer, the publicity director.

BILLY QUIRK VISITING IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Billy Quirk, president of the Screen Club, has gone to Pittsburgh to play a short season in the leading moving picture houses of Pennsylvania.

"Who's Guilty?" for Church Benefit

Two Thousand Persons Give Ovation to Leading Players in Pathe Serial.

THAT the successful photoplay of the future will be as in the immediate present, one with something bigger than a plot, is seen by the fact that the Pathe series success, "Who's Guilty?" produced by Arrow, coming under that category, is not only creating intense interest on the part of motion picture theatergoers but also among educators, ministers and those whose task it is to mold the minds of Young America.

When an audience of more than two thousand persons packed Loew's theater, in New Rochelle, to the doors on Thursday evening, June 15, at prices ranging from two to three dollars, there was an indication as to the extent of the popularity of "Who's Guilty?" and those who play in it. The occasion was a performance for the benefit of the Blessed Sacrament Church, the feature of which, by special request of those in charge, was the personal appearance of Miss Anna Nilsson and Tom Moore, stars of "Who's Guilty?". It was because of the belief on the part of the members of the large Catholic parish that "Who's Guilty?" is a photoplay worthy the attention of every man and woman that Miss Nilsson and Mr. Moore were seen.

At each mention of them, or the series in which they appear, there was spontaneous and enthusiastic handclapping, and when they finally stepped upon the stage after the introduction of Howell Hansel, of the Arrow Film Corporation, the applause was deafening.

The same intense interest was shown by the audience as has been manifested by the Rev. D. J. Bradley, of Highland Avenue Church, Cleveland, concerning which the Cleveland Plain Dealer recently published the following:

"'Who's Guilty?' the Pathe series of photo novels, has so impressed the Rev. D. J. Bradley of Highland Avenue Church that he will use them as the topic for his sermon tomorrow night. 'I approve of the "Who's Guilty?" series,' said Mr. Bradley, 'because they make the people think. The picture also gets away from theatricalism, which is a good thing.'"

Eva Tanguay Makes a Picture

"I Don't Care" Girl Will Be Seen as Energetic Eva in Five-part Comedy.

Eva Tanguay, America's foremost comedienne, has just finished her initial film production, a five-reel comedy, entitled "Energetic Eva." In the role of "Energetic Eva" Miss Tanguay has originated an entirely new characterization, and it is safe to predict the famous comedienne will add new laurels to her popularity. Miss Tanguay has surrounded herself with a competent staff of well known members of the moving picture world.

Eva Tanguay has the distinction of being the only vaudeville star who played in New York City for three consecutive years, playing twenty-two return engagements at the Colonial theater, twenty-seven return engagements at the Alhambra theater, New York City, and twenty-five return engagements at the Orpheum theater, Brooklyn.

With the unusual record of Miss Tanguay as an attraction it is only fair to presume that the release of Eva Tanguay Films will prove of interest to all exhibitors.

V-L-S-E WILL PAY ITS SOLDIERS.

Demonstrating that the film industry is second to none in the country in the matter of patriotism, Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the V-L-S-E, announces that such of its members who answer the President's call to Mexico will receive full pay during absence and that positions will be awaiting them when they return.

The Big Four Company goes further and announces that their opportunities for advancement will not be impaired by their absence. The announcement affects Big Four employes in twenty-four cities throughout the United States.

ALICE II VISITS VITAGRAPH.

Two "Sweet Alices" were in the machine that drove into the Vitagraph yard the other day—Alice Joyce, the popular screen star who is working in "The Battle Cry of War," and Alice II, who is but six months old.

Little Alice had only come down for the ride, however, and was soon dispatched home with her nurse, much to the disappointment of the various players who gathered about the machine performing all sorts of tricks for the baby's amusement.

Good Triangles for July

"Casey at the Bat" Is the First on a List That Includes Keenan, Fairbanks and Hart.

TRIANGLE releases for July promise much. A novelty and an exceptionally high-class crook play start off the month, and during the weeks that follow a galaxy of stars will be seen in a number of photoplays that represent the best of the motion picture art. As a decided novelty in the world of moving pictures, the screen version of "Casey at the Bat" in which De Wolf Hopper, who made the poem famous and endeared himself to millions of baseball fans at the same time, is starred. Impartial observers have declared "Casey at the Bat" to be the best vehicle that has thus far been prepared for Mr. Hopper's appearances on the screen. Frank Keenan, in his long career, has played many parts—and well—but it is extremely doubtful if he ever played a part better fitted to him or that he fitted better than that of "Phantom" Farrell in "The Phantom." This is a crook play of the highest type.

The following week a typical Fairbanks story will be released. It is called "Flirting with Fate," and it is not exaggeration to say there is a laugh a foot in the film. "The Deserter" is a thriller that settles once and for all—if there really was ever a doubt—the right to count Charles Ray one of the Triangle's strongest stars. The story is laid in and about an army post at a time when Indian uprisings were still the feared and expected.

Another picture that is certain to excite far more than passing interest is "The Eye of the Night" in which William H. Thompson is seen in a sympathetic role that will make the picture one that will be eagerly sought.

Among the end-of-the-month pictures is a powerful William S. Hart subject, "The Captive God," that is certain to prove a sensation. Other releases include "The Little Schoolma'am" and "The Payment," both representative of the best on Triangle's program.

Margaret Anglin for the Screen

Prominent Actress Will Appear in Eight Subjects Under Direction of Arthur Voegtlin.

THE Margaret Anglin Picture Corporation has been organized with offices in the Times Building, New York City. It is understood the famous actress whose name is borne by the company will be seen in eight subjects. The making of these will not be permitted to interfere with her stage work. The first release is promised for September. Arthur Voegtlin will direct Miss Anglin, with the assistance of Livingston Platt, who will be technical director. One of those more prominent in the formation of the company was James Shesgreen, for the past four years manager of Miss Anglin.

James D. Barton is president of the company, Mr. Shesgreen, first vice president, Mr. Voegtlin, second vice president, Irving J. Dittenhoefer, secretary, and Edward W. Fuller, treasurer.

PRESIDENT HORKHEIMER IN NEW YORK.

H. M. Horkheimer, president and general manager of the Balboa Company, familiarly known to the film industry as "the human bullet," arrived in New York last week from Long Beach, Cal., where his studio is located. Asked for an expression about the unsettled condition in moving picture activities, Mr. Horkheimer facetiously said: "The more the other fellows fight, the better things are for us. We hate peace, anyhow; so let 'em scrap." Mr. Horkheimer will be at the Balboa Company's headquarters in the Mecca Building for several weeks before returning to the Coast. He is accompanied by H. O. Stechhan, his personal representative, who also has been in charge of Balboa's publicity department for the past year.

WALTER J. NEWMAN MARRIES.

Walter J. Newman, manager of the Chicago plant of the Newman Manufacturing Company, Cincinnati, manufacturers of brass poster frames, easels, railings and other theater fixtures, surprised all of his friends on June 11 by marrying Miss Ella Hockbaum, a Chicago girl of prominence. The wedding was a quiet affair at the Hotel La Salle, and after the wedding supper the bridal pair left for the East on their honeymoon.

E. C. Newman, brother of Walter, and who is connected with this firm, has left for New York City, where he is to wed Miss Henrietta Cohen on July 2.

Complete First Ivy Close Subject

"The Girl and the Tenor" Is Announced by Kalem for Release on July 28 Through General Film.

WITH the announcement that "The Girl and the Tenor," the first Ivy Close comedy, had been completed, Kalem also makes public the news that their subjects would be released on the regular service of the General Film Company. All the Ivy Close pictures will be in one reel length, issued every Friday, starting with July 28, the date of release for "The Girl and the Tenor."

Scene from "The Girl and the Tenor" (Kalem).

The comedy had its first private showing to Kalem officials last week. The Kalemites were enthusiastic over the prospects for the subjects featuring Miss Close.

"Both because of the beauty and ability of Miss Close and because of the strength of the supporting cast and the stories," declared William Wright of the Kalem company, "I feel certain that exhibitors will give a strong welcome to the Ivy Close comedies. Our fondest hopes have been exceeded by the results shown in 'The Girl and the Tenor.'"

Henry Murdock, one of the features of the Sis Hopkins comedies, will be seen in strong parts in the Ivy Close productions. In the first subject he is seen as the famous tenor Signor Bologna, whom Ivy, the daughter of a theatrical magnate, is seeking to sign for a contract. The opposition of a rival manager and the jealousy of a signor's wife bring on a train of laughable adventures that work up to a whirlwind finish.

Among the other screen favorites seen in "The Girl and the Tenor" are William McKay, Arthur Albertson, C. D. Peruchi and Mary Taylor-Ross.

LOOK OUT FOR FORDS.

The Magazine Program Company, which has been supplying exhibitors for more than a year with book programs, writes that one W. A. Graham, representing himself to be employed by the Ford Program Service of Worcester, Mass., has been calling on exhibitors in the vicinity of New York City with copies of the M. P. Company's book and representing that his company will supply the same thing at prices varying from fifty cents to a dollar a thousand. Various victims complain that they have paid in advance for the service and have seen no programs. The Magazine Program Company asks that all exhibitors be warned and adds that their own terms are payment after delivery and that no one is empowered to collect in advance for them, to guard against a change of tactics on the part of the swindler. It is absurd to expect an eight-page book program with a two-color cover for a dollar a thousand, but evidently the attractiveness of the price has blinded many to the need for caution.

AVIATOR SMITH IN FILMS.

Samuel M. Krellberg, treasurer of the National Cinema Syndicate, has just received a cable from Japan that Art Smith, the loop the loop artist, who was seriously injured last week while looping the loop in Japan, is on the road to recovery. Pictures of Art Smith in his death-defying attempts at looping the loop at the San Francisco Exposition will soon be released as part of the serial of the Panama Pacific Exposition which the National Cinema Syndicate are marketing through the world.

Stock Idea for Bluebird

Players Selected According to Suitability, Irrespective of Past Performances—Coming Productions.

RELEASED by their own decision, from the necessity of centering their efforts upon the exploitation of "stars" and individuals, Bluebird Photoplays are preparing to back their national advertising campaign with a series of plays that will stand the "acid test" they will invite the public to administer to their future productions.

Scenarios especially written to introduce the talented leading men and leading women of the Bluebird organization in roles for which they are best adapted will frequently assemble in the same cast two or three players who have previously been stars under the previous policy.

This is, in effect, a return to the old dramatic stock system when the parts were assigned to the players best adapted to the best interpretations—when the "second woman" frequently played leads and the "character man" sometimes found himself the adoring lover. In the old days the play depended upon for the best general results—and Bluebird is returning to the original system for greatest efficiency.

Rupert Julian, Francelia Billington and Louise Lovely, who have been individual stars in earlier Bluebirds, will appear in "L'Abbe Constantine." Others in the company will be George Berrill, Douglas Gerrard, Zoe Du Rae and Elsie Jane Wilson.

Another future Bluebird made from a popular novel will be Robert Leonard's production of "Little Eve Egarton." Herbert Rawlinson will be introduced to fanciers of Bluebirds as leading man, and Ella Hall will be leading woman. These two players were selected solely because they were better suited to the parts than any other available players, further advancing the Bluebird policy of building up the play, regardless of other publicity considerations.

When "By Fate's Decree" is presented, Dorothy Phillips will be introduced as a new Bluebird player because her talents best adapt her to the leading role; when "Wanted a Home" is released Mary MacLaren will be the central figure in the story because Phillips Smalley, the producer, decided that this pretty girl was the one who could best play the part, and for the same reason J. Warren Kerrigan was cast to play the lead in the five-reel story F. McGrew Willis has written to carry "The Beckoning Trail" as its title.

The plays mentioned in the foregoing list will be released during August and September, but the exact dates have not been fixed. They will succeed the following subjects already announced: "Broken Fetters," July 3; "The Love Girl," July 10; "The Grasp of Greed," July 17; "The Silent Battle," July 24; "The Secret of the Swamp," July 31.

METRO WILL PAY ITS SOLDIERS' SALARIES.

Richard A. Rowland, president of the Metro Pictures Corporation, announces that any persons employed in the company, in any capacity, who are connected with the National Guard, will be paid full salary while away from their duties in the service of Uncle Sam, and their positions retained for them until their return.

Among those who have already answered the call in Metro offices are Howard Irving Young, scenario writer at the Metro-Rolfe studio; Alexander Duane, in the publicity department, and Percy Scofield, chief carpenter at the Metro-Rolfe studio. Both Young and Duane are members of the Seventh Regiment, while Scofield is in the Fourteenth of Brooklyn.

Merritt Crawford, managing editor of the Pictures Magazine and associated with Arthur James, is a former member of the Seventh Regiment. He recently joined the depot battalion of the regiment and was ordered to report at the armory. As a member of the reserve he will assist in the recruiting work, do guard duty at the armory and drill new recruits.

APPOINTMENTS IN V-L-S-E.

W. C. Brandon, manager in Atlanta, Ga., for the V-L-S-E., Inc., announces the appointment of F. P. Bryant, formerly with Pathe and Fox, to a position on the sales force of the Atlanta office. Mr. Bryant will travel the territory in North and South Carolina formerly handled by Mr. Simpson. Mr. Simpson's home is in Meridian, Miss., and he is being transferred to that state and Alabama, with which he is more familiar. Mr. Bryant's home is in Charlotte, N. C. He knows all the exhibitors in North and South Carolina and is considered one of the best posted men in that territory.

C. A. Meade, Dallas manager, announces the appointment of A. W. Plues to a position on his sales force. Mr. Plues will travel Texas territory formerly handled by W. B. Nelson.

Metro Summer Activities Increase

Irene Fenwick, One of the Newcomers to the Program—Bushman and Bayne in a Two-Reeler.

METRO'S summer activities include a most extensive program. In addition to the elaborate screen production of "Romeo and Juliet," with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in the stellar roles, and the most pretensious feature ever offered on the Metro program, several new stars and directors have been engaged and newly arranged one-reel weekly features from an interesting section of the new program. A special attraction in the nature of a booster for summer business is the two-reel subject, "A Virginia Romance," in which Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne are starred. This is the first time that these two popular stars have ever appeared on the Metro program in a feature less than five reels in length.

Among the new stars now at work on Metro productions is Irene Fenwick, who recently joined the Metro forces. Emmy Wehlen, the dainty and gifted young star, who made her debut in motion pictures on the Metro program last season in "When a Woman Loves," has begun work on another five-part feature, the first of several she will make at the Metro-Rolfe studio. George D. Baker, who was directing at the Vitagraph company until a few weeks ago, has been engaged to direct the Wehlen features.

Harold Lockwood and May Allison are at work under the direction of Henry Otto, who is a recent addition to the Metro directing forces, making the final exterior scenes at the Thousand Islands on "The River of Romance," a five-part production which will be released July 17. Mr. Lockwood and Miss Allison, with a strong supporting company headed by Lester Cuneo, will leave for California in ten days or two weeks, where the Metro-Yorke company has taken over a big studio.

Mabel Taliaferro has just begun work on another five-part feature, the first of six big productions which she has contracted to do for Metro.

Mme. Petrova is working at the Popular Plays and Players on the final scenes of "The Eternal Question." This production was delayed on account of the continued rainy weather. While waiting for fair weather Director Perry N. Vekroff, also a new comer to the Metro fold, began work on the interior scenes of another production. This is called "The Secret of Eve."

Edmund Breese will also begin work within the next week or so on another production at the Popular Plays and Players studio. His picture will be an elaborate picturization of a gripping poem by Robert W. Service, the "Kipling of the North."

Charles Horan, who has just completed "The Quitter," with Lionel Barrymore in the starring role, is now at work on the scenario of "The Upheaval," which will be put in production within a few days with Mr. Barrymore in the stellar part.

Max Figman and Lolita Robertson, who recently joined the Metro forces, have been engaged to make one-reel comedy features. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, who have been making single reel comedy features for Metro, have been away on a two weeks' vacation in the Adirondacks.

Another interesting short length feature which is now a regular offering on the Metro program is the Metro Travelogues. They are quite different from other features of this character, and are being obtained at considerable expense.

KALEMITES ANSWER CALL TO ARMS.

Twenty-one of the Kalem employees in the office and factory at the Twenty-third street headquarters responded to the militia call issued last week in preparation for duty on the Mexican border.

Immediately on learning of the mobilization order Mr. Wright, of the Kalem Company, took steps to discover the number of militiamen on the Kalem roster and to assure them that the company would grant leaves of absence with their positions protected for whatever period necessary. The factory force was quickly reorganized so that the loss of the score of men created only temporary disturbance in the schedule of work.

IVAN TITLE NOW "THE PASSION FLOWER."

Having completed the script of the first all-star cast Ivan production, Ivan Abramson, its author and director, has decided that "The Faded Flower" does not entirely fit with the character of the story. So he concluded "The Passion Flower" would be better descriptive of the drama. The new Ivan feature will be released July 10.

Bert Williams Comedies in Demand

Star of Ziegfeld Follies in Two-Reel Biograph Comedies Being Booked Through General Film.

SINCE the first announcement of the Bert Williams comedies by the Biograph Company there has been such a flood of inquiries, requests for bookings and exclusive bookings at the various General Film Company offices that Gus Mohme of the Biograph Company left for Washington on June 21 for a special trip to the exchanges and will visit the General Film Company branches in the following cities: Washington, June 22; Pittsburgh, June 23; Cincinnati, June 24; Chicago, June 26 and 27; Milwaukee, June 28; Minneapolis, June 29; Omaha, June 30; Denver, July 1; Kansas City, July 3; St. Louis, July 4; Indianapolis, July 5; Detroit, July 6; Cleveland, July 7; Buffalo, July 8.

In a letter received a few days ago Mr. Mohme writes in part as follows: "The advance bookings already received on the first Bert Williams comedy remove all doubt as to the drawing possibility and popularity of Bert Williams, both from the exhibitors' and public's viewpoint. Exhibitors are keen to realize the value of this great comedian's reputation with the Ziegfeld Follies, and after seeing the first comedy screened, are fully convinced of a hearty reception by the public. Have received several large offers for exclusive pre-release bookings—all for a period of one week—and while the offers represent substantial sums, none have been accepted at this time, they being held until being passed in New York. This, to my mind, bespeaks the confidence these exhibitors have in Bert Williams as a drawing power. There is no question that each print will be booked solid for a long period before the date of the first release—which is July 24."

Ralph T. Kettering

RALPH T. KETTERING, who has as many friends and boosters in the Chicago newspaper field as any other press agent in that town, has been delving into authorship without the red fire usually attendant upon such efforts. As publicity manager of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, among the largest film exhibitors and theater owners in Chicago, Mr. Kettering has won the favor of the moving picture critics of the Chicago dailies and of Sunday editors by his straightforward and square dealing.

Ralph T. Kettering.

Now comes the information that London is boosting a playlet called "Which One Shall I Marry?" in which Clifford Alderson and Maxine Hynton, English players of Drury Lane renown, are starring. Upon its first production in England last month, at the Royal Hippodrome, Liverpool, it was received with great favor.

But England is not the only country it has captured. In Australia it is making a great hit. Last season New York took to it like a duck to water, and Chicago saw it at the Majestic and McVicker's theaters and voted it splendid. Until the present moment Mr. Kettering has modestly remained in the background. This is not the first Kettering sketch to see the light of day, but it is probably the most successful.

METRO-YORKE PLAYERS HELD AS SPIES.

The entire Metro-Yorke company headed by Harold Lockwood and May Allison were recently caught in the spy dragnet thrown about the border line between the United States and Canada. The group were released, however, after Canadian Secret service officers had satisfied themselves that the Metro-Yorke outfit harbored no spies. The company was in the Thousand Islands at the time, making the exteriors for "The River of Romance," a new five-part feature.

Dixon Outlines Selling Plans

"The Fall of a Nation" Booking Offices at 720 Longacre Building Hum With Activity.

WITH metropolitan engagements of "The Fall of a Nation" already in progress and Chicago and San Francisco to be entered in July, the selling plans of the Dixon-Herbert spectacle are being rapidly developed. Thomas Dixon, director-general of the National Drama Corporation, wired his representatives from the Coast:

"Reserve large cities only for premier productions of 'The Fall of a Nation.' In view of the crisis in our international affairs I desire speedy presentation of my patriotic film everywhere. State right buyers and exhibitors controlling chains of theaters will be welcomed. Victor Herbert's original music can be supplied. Pictorial paper from the H. C. Miner Lithograph Company is ready. Shall be in Chicago June 26 and then return to New York to forward work of putting the play within reach of the millions of Americans."

Pursuant to these instructions, quick arrangements were made to open the booking offices of "The Fall of a Nation" at 1480 Broadway, New York, on June 26. Edmond V. Giroux, for many years manager of the Northwestern theatrical circuit, was selected as booking manager. The exploitation campaign in careful co-operation with the purchasers of the film already greatly exceeds the gross advertising done in the first two months of "The Birth of a Nation." First class productions of the music spectacle are now being operated by the corporation to capacity business at the Liberty theater, New York, and the Auditorium, Los Angeles, in addition to which the Illinois theater, Chicago, will be opened on July 3, and the Cort theater, San Francisco, on July 17. Several other of the big cities, where runs affect a big contiguous territory, will likewise be covered by special productions.

The writers in the Publicity Department, aiding the State Right buyer or exhibitor, include Henry MacMahon and Wallace M. Powers, late of "The Birth of a Nation" and Triangle staffs respectively; Willard Holcomb, former motion picture editor of the Dramatic Mirror; Julius Hopp, an expert in foreign-language publicity, and E. D. Price, a veteran Klaw & Erlanger press man who is covering Chicago. The services of these writers are at the behest of the exhibitor for forceful advertising copy and novel ideas in news stories.

Victor Herbert, the distinguished composer of "The Fall of a Nation," is putting the finishing touches to a condensation of the musical score suitable to small orchestras.

MEXICAN TROUBLE HITS SOME TEXAS HOUSES.

Motion picture exhibitors have been hit by the troubles along the Mexican border. C. A. Clegg, manager of the Dallas, Tex., branch of the Mutual Film Corporation, has wired J. C. Graham of the New York office that many of the exhibitors who depended upon Mexicans for their patronage have closed their theaters because of racial feeling, while others are only showing pictures two nights a week.

The decrease in business has been a blow to the motion picture interests in that section and as there is no relief in sight many will have to suspend entirely.

"CIVILIZATION" CELEBRATES HALF-CENTURY.

"Civilization," Thomas H. Ince's feature photodrama at the Criterion theater reached its fiftieth performance on Sunday night, June 25. The sixty men, women and children who take part in the pantomime preceding the picture celebrated the first month's highly successful run by a party back stage after the performance. An elaborately illustrated souvenir program is now being prepared for the hundredth performance.

PREPAREDNESS PICTURES STILL AT LYCEUM.

That vivid, impressive, timely and entertaining series of motion pictures, "How Britain Prepared," a graphic visualization of how Kitchener went about it to recruit, train and equip an army of 5,000,000 volunteers in eighteen months, still attracts large and enthusiastic audiences to the Lyceum theater. Meanwhile duplicate films are being shown in Boston, and last week Chicago and Providence were added to the list. A lively demand for the pictures comes from the South and West.

C. A. KRACHT GOES TO MAIL.

C. A. Kracht has severed his connection with the New York Globe and will continue in the same line of work for the Evening Mail.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week of June 25 at New York's Best Motion Picture Houses.

"The World's Great Snare" at the Strand.

Pauline Frederick in the screen version of E. Phillip Oppenheim's novel, "The World's Great Snare," was the feature at the Strand theater for the week of June 25. The Oppenheim story tells one of the Wild West in the days of the gold fever, and is filled with thrilling scenes and dramatic incidents. In this photoplay, Miss Frederick has a role of a dancer in a miner's cafe. The plot concerns itself with an Englishman in search of a lost fortune and the devotion of the dance-hall girl for the English Earl. Supporting the star are Irving Cummings, Ferdinand Tidmarsh, Frank Evans and Riley Hatch. The picture was produced by the Famous Players Company, under the direction of Joseph Kaufman. A Max Figman comedy called "Microbes" was another feature of the program. Other pictures were a scenic and a Mutt and Jeff comedy.

The musical program for the week, aside from the overture and incidental music, included Bruce Weyman and Miss Autumn Hall.

Douglas Fairbanks at the Rialto.

"Flirting with Fate," a Triangle production, with Douglas Fairbanks in the stellar role, headed the Rialto bill. Mr. Fairbanks impersonates a struggling artist, crossed in love. The situations are all extremely funny. The topical, educational and scenic pictures contained novel features. Regina Vicarino, M. De Freer and Arthur Aldridge were the soloists.

"Susie Snowflake" at the Broadway.

Ann Pennington, the celebrated little Ziegfeld "Follies" star, made her motion picture debut in the Famous Players production, "Susie Snowflake," at the Broadway theater. There is something irresistibly appealing about "Susie," and Miss Pennington has caught the charm of the little dancer who scandalizes her maiden aunts and sets a whole town agog when she brings her Broadway ideals into the community. But there is a lot of real character and unswerving loyality in "Susie," as she proves when she is put to the test.

The usual weekly news, colored scenics, educational studies, short comedies and cartoons round out the bill.

Eighty-first Street Theater Program.

At the Eighty-first Street theater, four Triangle pictures were shown. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday Mae Marsh and Robert Harron in "The Wild Girl of the Sierras," and the Triangle-Keystone comedy, "Ambrose's Cup of Woe," were on the program. Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday William S. Hart in "The Apostle of Vengeance," and the Keystone-Sennett comedy, "Hearts and Sparks," furnished the picture portion of the entertainment.

Lasky Announces Script Winner

Announcement has been made by Professor V. O. Freeburg, who started last winter a class in photodramatics in Columbia University, that the prize play contest under the auspices of the Jesse L. Lasky Company had been concluded. The producing firm had selected as the best of more than a score of photoplays submitted, one entitled "Humility o' Hedford," by Dr. R. Ralston Reed, a physician of Morristown, N. J.

When the class was first organized last autumn Samuel Goldfish in a letter to Columbia University offered the co-operation of the Lasky Company in conducting a contest for the best photoplay written during the initial year of the class. William C. De Mille, a Columbia Alumnus, several weeks ago read the manuscripts which were submitted.

Mr. Lasky expresses his belief that with the success of Columbia University's Photodramatic Department, other universities and colleges throughout the country will follow Columbia's lead. It is likely the Columbia University-Lasky contest will become an annual feature. No details of Dr. Reed's play were made public beyond the fact that the story is one of Colonial witchcraft.

EDWARD SMALL ENTERS AGENCY FIELD.

Edward Small, for a number of years one of the best known of vaudeville agents, and who enjoys the reputation of being among those who do business along absolutely legitimate lines, has extended his activities to the film industry.

Mr. Small has made arrangements with several well-known screen artists to become their special representative, this in addition to the artists he manages in the legitimate and vaudeville fields.

Hot Weather--Good Pictures

V-L-S-E Program for July Is Calculated to Draw Crowds Into Cool Theater.

DEVISED to aid exhibitors to combat the hot weather, by providing them with productions of such strength as to draw the public inside their theaters, despite the heat, the Big Four has compiled a program of July releases of exceptional merit.

Of the Vitagraph offerings, "The Conflict," released July 3, featuring Lucille Lee Stewart, is a compelling drama of a battle of hearts and wits by two women, one rich and the other poor. Robert Edeson, Naomi Childers and Bobby Connelly are featured in "Fathers of Men," released under the "V" banner on July 10. It is a story of a family feud that arose when one man stole the wife of another.

Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno will be seen in "The Tarantula," on July 17. The Senorita falls in love with Teddy Steele, who trifles with her love. She learns, too late, that the woman always pays. But fate places in her hands a terrible instrument of punishment and she leads him to his doom. Anita Stewart is to be seen in a new vehicle, "The Daring of Diana," on July 24, in which she is pictured as a newspaper reporter. Admirers of the sprightly Anita will be able to see her at her best in this picture. Even her fellow players marveled at Miss Stewart's interpretation of the young reporter, who displays all the courage, devotion and sacrifice required in the reportorial offices of the larger dailies.

"Hesper of the Mountains," released July 31, presents Lillian Walker and Evart Overton. It is a story of a rich girl who goes West, much to her dislike, but who comes to a realization of the fact that real men are bred there. And from this realization comes the awakening of love. One of the biggest features of the year will be offered by Lubin in "The Light at Dusk," on July 31, featuring Orrin Johnson, the well-known Broadway star. Vladimir Krestovsky deserts his wife and baby in Russia, and, coming to America, becomes a big factor in steel world.

Selig has produced a splendid picture, "The Prince Chap," that is certain to be universally popular. It will be released on July 24. An array of stars is presented in "The Prince Chap," in which Marshal Neilan, the director of the production, returns to the screen. Scenes for this picture were taken in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. Associated with Mr. Neilan in its production are Mary Charleson, Bessie Eyton and George Fawcett.

"According to the Code," which features Lewis S. Stone, Marguerite Clayton and E. H. Calvert, will be offered by Essanay on July 10. Basil Breckenridge, a broken, chivalrous gentleman of the south, is attacked on the street and is arrested for assault with intent to kill. In the judge he faces, he recognizes a rival captain in the war, who stole his wife and daughter.

GAUMONT PROGRAM FOR WEEK OF JULY 9.

For the second week in July the Gaumont company will have only single-reel releases. Sunday, July 9, brings "Reel Life" No. 10 to the screen. This time the Mutual Magazine in Film, as this reel is called, will show the work being done by the New York Association for the Blind. Since "Reel Life" always contains three divisions, No. 10 will also show how anthracite coal is mined in Pennsylvania and how bituminous coal is sometimes mined on the surface with a steam shovel in the southwest.

As Glacier National Park provided so many interesting views for the cameraman of the Department of the Interior, the Gaumont company found it necessary to release these in two parts in its "See America First" series. Wednesday, July 12, the second part will reach the screen. Among the pictures will be McDermott Lake, Iceberg Lake, where the sun only shines twenty minutes during the day, and Blackfeet Glacier. There are over sixty glaciers in the park. On the same reel with "See America First" is always one of Harry Palmer's Kartoon Komics.

The third Gaumont single-reel to be released during the week is the Mutual Weekly, giving latest news of the world.

GOLD KING SCREEN AT CHICAGO CONVENTION.

The Gold King Screen Company will be well represented at the sixth annual national convention in Chicago. President Jones, special representative E. W. Green, and R. B. Morris, manager of the publicity department, will be on hand to welcome the visiting exhibitors at the Gold King Screen booth. A souvenir will be given each visitor who registers at the booth.

Brady Studios Looking Ahead

Paragon and Peerless Forces Have Completed Summer Releases and Are Now Working on Those for Autumn.

HAVING completed the productions which will be released during the summer, Paragon and Peerless studios of the World Film Corporation, under William A. Brady's direction, are busily engaged on the program that will obtain with that company throughout the forthcoming regular theatrical season. Seven companies are engaged at present, with another company assembling to begin work upon the return of Maurice Tourneur from his vacation.

E. K. Lincoln.

Frank Crane, supervising "The World Against Him," has been at Saranac Lake directing E. K. Lincoln, June Elvidge and a large cast. Emile Chautard, who recently completed "Friday the 13th," is in charge of the production of "Nathan Hale," in which Robert Warwick will be seen. Chautard, Warwick and the company, including Gail Kane and Alec Francis, have been at Boston for the past week. Permission was granted the company to work right on Boston Common, which they have been doing each day before large crowds.

Barry O'Neill, who has created "Husband and Wife," is making "The Scurging Way," with a cast headed by Holbrook Blinn, Ethel Clayton and little Madge Evans. Harley Knoles is in charge of the Alice Brady picture, "Miss Petticoats." Mollie King is to begin work on her next production, which has not been named as yet but which will in all likelihood be a story calling for Miss King's appearance as a waif, in which character she has already established herself.

"The Almighty Dollar" has been completed by Robert T. Thornby, with E. K. Lincoln, Frances Nelson and June Elvidge. The policy adopted by Mr. Brady of having two productions on hand for each company now allows for the working in the studio on the second production when continued bad weather prevents location and exterior work.

Thus, during the past two weeks, with the exception of Frank Crane's company at Saranac Lake, the inclement weather has not interfered to a great extent with the regular work at the Paragon and Peerless studios.

MRS. THOMAS LONERGAN DEAD.

Monday afternoon, June 19, saw the passing of one of Brooklyn's brightest women, Mrs. Thomas Lonergan, who was the mother of Lloyd Lonergan and Philip Lonergan of the Thanhouser scenario staff, and of Elizabeth Lonergan, also a scenario writer and newspaper woman. The death of Mrs. Lonergan, who lay in a sick bed for several months past, came as a great bereavement not alone to her children and other immediate relatives, but to the many friends to whom her home was always open, and who found in her gentle and sympathetic personality solace and impetus to greater efforts. In her earlier life the deceased was a magazine and newspaper writer of repute, a profession which she followed both in Chicago and New York. Mrs. Lonergan was buried from her home at 130 Lefferts place, Brooklyn, on Wednesday morning, June 21.

OUTING FOR SIMPLEX SOCIAL CLUB.

The Simplex Social Club, composed of employes of the Precision Machine Company, are making extensive preparations for their sixth annual outing, to be held at Belvedere Park, North Beach, L. I., on July 22. There will be a baseball game, together with other sports, and the entertainment committee has arranged an elaborate cabaret at the conclusion of the day's festivities.

The officers of the club are: E. Hoffmann, president; W. C. Michel, treasurer; R. C. Kneuer, recording secretary, and T. Healey, financial secretary.

"The Flower of No-Man's-Land"

Viola Dana Appears on Metro Program for the First Time —Winsome Star in Pleasing Production.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

RATHER a simple story was selected for Viola Dana's debut as a Metro star—the kind of a story that has been done many times before, but still retains a pleasingly romantic flavor. It is called "The Flower of No Man's Land," written and directed by John H. Collins and produced by the Columbia Pictures Corporation, with an able company of players in support of the winsome heroine. If this photoplay was prepared especially for Miss Dana that the appeal of her personality and her varied gifts as an actress might be revealed, it answers the purpose. Audiences unfamiliar with the previous work of the youthful star will find her pretty, wistful and altogether attractive in a sweetly girlish way, and they will look forward to her next appearance, trusting, perhaps, that the story material provided will be stronger.

Scene from "The Flower of No-Man's-Land" (Metro).

"The Flower of No-Man's-Land" is the poetic description applied to Echo, the daughter of a miner whose father is murdered in the Great American desert. She is reared by Kahoma, an Indian brave, and the instincts of womanhood remain unawakened until she falls in love with a philandering singer who goes west in the hope of recovering his health. Scenes purporting to show the tragedy of a famous Metropolitan opera tenor, who suddenly loses his voice and experiences the agony of standing in the wings while his successor is accorded an ovation, appear to have been modeled after the stage play "The Great Lover," in which Leo Ditrichstein is appearing. Whether the similarity was intentional or accidental the appeal of the deposed favorite is quite effective.

The romance of Echo and her sophisticated lover is short-lived. Back among his friends in the east, Talbot soon tires of his naive little wife, who leaves him on learning that he deserted a woman whom he had married some ten years earlier. Echo finds happiness with an ever faithful westerner, Big Bill, while her Indian foster-father brings the career of the singer to a sudden termination. For the most part the story is well staged, the acting is sincere and there are some pleasing bits of comedy. A defect easily remedied is that of allowing scenes to run longer than is needed for the communication of their meaning to an audience. Duncan McRae, Harry C. Brown and Mitchell Lewis are in the cast.

Cleo Madison to Play "La Tosca."

Director Rex Ingram, who has just reached Universal City from the eastern studios, will film a version of "La Tosca" under the working title of "The Chalice of Sorrow." The atmosphere will be strictly Mexican and special sets are being built for the five-reel production, together with costumes designed particularly for the players.

Cleo Madison will play the featured lead supported by Wedgewood Nowell, Charles Cummings and John McDermott.

"What Happened at 22"

Crook Melodrama With a Number of Clever Turns Is Produced by Frohman Amusement Company for World Film.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

WHATEVER the foundation for the assertion at the beginning of this five-part melodrama, it may be accepted for the sake of the story. The statement is to the effect that in the larger cities certain so-called employment agencies are nothing more than cleverly conducted organizations of crooks who find it convenient to operate as legitimate business men. In the opening scenes of the picture we meet Dave Wilson and his confederate in a fake agency, and learn that Wilson is becoming a bit careless about professional matters because he is falling in love with a pretty, unsophisticated girl from the country. This introduction is fortunate in that it catches the attention, which the subsequent story, as written by Paul Wilstach and directed by George Irving, maintains without a break.

One quality in particular is likely to place "What Happened at 22" above most pictures of a similar character. It is consistently developed, and although frankly melodramatic there is a surface plausibility which gives the happenings on the screen a semblance of truth. Having been introduced as an expert forger, Dave Wilson is given tasks within the power of an accomplished criminal, even, perhaps to the adoption of a disguise that enables him to impersonate one of his victims.

The mechanical workings of the plot are most obvious when the author undertakes to place his chief characters under the same roof by making Wilson a butler in the home of Knowlton while the innocent girl in the case is employed as a governess. The forger knows that Knowlton, a famous criminologist, is engaged in ferreting out the frauds which have baffled the police, and thinks to outwit him by an ingenious plan, which gives promise of a successful termination until the girl springs an unforeseen trap. The denouement is a really clever piece of photoplay construction.

Arthur Ashley, in appearance and little tricks of manner, suggests a man of the type of Wilson and readily alters his personality to suit the character of Hart, an influential business man. Frances Nelson possesses the appeal needed for the role of the girl, whereas Gladden James makes an acceptable lover. The lighting and photography in the concluding reel are worthy of note.

Therefore, when the day came that someone did trust him, and, after his being expelled both from home and from college, gave him a position of trust, when a theft was committed for which he was not wholly responsible he told a lie that ruined his career and plunged him into a despair through which he ended his life.

"Susie Snowflake"

Ann Pennington Makes Successful Screen Debut in Famous Players Five-Part Subject That Makes Splendid Entertainment.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IN "Susie Snowflake," released by the Famous Players on June 22, we have one of those too rare "Sweet domestic stories." It marks the photoplay debut of Ann Pennington, of the Follies. The story has a touch of stage life, and it is just a touch—enough to display the art of Susie as a dancer.

Scene from "Susie Snowflake" (Famous Players).

The greater part of the story has to do with those who live in a small community. Shannon Fife, who writes the script, has drawn some excellent character studies and Director James Kirkwood has made much of his opportunities. Standing out in the support are two maiden aunts of Susie—prim, to be sure, but naturally so, and above all, human, likable, even lovable, in spite of their severe cast of countenance.

The picture is filled with homely touches, of the sort that weave and blend comedy and pathos. Ann Pennington is fortunate in the vehicle that has been provided for her introduction to the screen; and there can be no question that by her interpretation she matches it in appeal. Leo Delaney, former Vitagraph player, is opposite Miss Pennington, while William J. Butler, long time with Biograph, portrays the role of the family man of all work. Here are two fine delineations, as are also those of the aunts, previously referred to, by Marcia Harria and Billie Wilson. William Courtleigh, Jr., is seen as the ambitious but unsuccessful suitor for the hand of Susie.

On the comedy side of this drama very likely the situation that will most strongly "go over" is that where the stage-trained girl is by some of the women members of the village church invited to dance at a coming function. She responds, and as she takes the center of the platform she discards the long coat and swings into the act which had made her so successful on the stage—and in the same attire. What ensues is a lot—and drama punctuates the comedy.

"Susie Snowflake" is a charming picture, and we are not going to spoil it by telling any more about it.

AMONG the not very many basic plots there are one or two that may be counted choice. It is dangerous to speak for that hard-to-gauge spectators. Everybody; but he has been found taking much pleasure from his earliest days in the many variations of the Cinderella, or captured princess story. Here it is again in the Pallas five-reel film, "The American Beauty," in which the rich man's baby is lost and brought up by a very poor family. A princess in disguise—and we are all royal when we're young—she has the hard experiences of the poor and the tears, yet has not only the true heart worthy of the coronet but lives with fate always waiting the chance to bring all the world's good things to her—including love.

One will find the story more and more interesting from first to the last due to the director's carefully constructive approach to the climax and due to his skill in using the homely emotions. It opens with a fire at sea and the upsetting of a boat filled with women and children which is not realistic at all; but all the other incidents the director has made plausible. The rescued baby is adopted by a fisherman, and the scenes skip twenty years. We find her again as a sweatshop worker and her foster mother as a scrubwoman who is giving out under hard work and age. The heroine is discharged from the shop just as her foster mother falls sick and in her place goes to scrub the floors of the artist's studio. He is a better kind of artist and man than some of his associates. How she becomes a model, how he falls in love with her and how she refuses him, because she knows what his mother and the fashionable world would think of her, a mere artist's model, and how, through her picture, the rich parents find her, is a very rough outline of the plot. Its advances and denials are made to spring from the characters of the heroine or of those about her in a very interesting way.

Myrtle Stedman in the double role of mother who loses her baby and of the grown-up daughter, puts her usual sincerity and ability to the picture's advantage. Elliott Dexter plays the hero with pleasing dignity. Howard Davies ably pictures the villain. Adelaide Woods, as the foster mother, also is worthy of mention. The supporting cast carry the short bits of action given to them with credit. The photography is of high grade. William D. Taylor was the director.

the lives of an Indian maiden and the two rivals for her love is always interesting. The action is varied and vigorous, but the situations are never forced. The excellent acting and correct costuming of the cast, with the impresive pueblo for a background, makes this photoplay novel and picturesque. During one portion of the story the scene shifts to Berkeley, Cal., and the bits of college life that are introduced, including a football game in the stadium at Berkeley, were made at the College of California.

The chief's son of the Hopi tribe is attracted by a maiden whose father is the chief of another tribe. The son of the medicine man of this tribe is deeply in love with the girl. The three young people are sent to college, after being forced to take the tribunal oath, which binds them never to marry outside their own tribe. Discarding their striking native garb, these representatives of the First Families of America are seen in civilized garments of the latest mode. During their last year in college the regard which Wa-Ni-Ne-Ma and Set-te-Wa have for each other ripens into real love; but the medicine man's son is equal to the situation. He informs the girl's father of the state of affairs. That energetic chieftain hurries to Berkeley and takes his daughter back home. She is forced to discard her tailor-made suit for a gaily-colored blanket of home manufacture, and is told that she must marry Ni-a-wa-ca. The Hopi gentleman, who has followed her, is no laggard in love, however. He exchanges his clawhammer for the newest outfit carried by the Arnheim of the pueblo, and proceeds to best his rival in a fair fight and no favor, and to run off with the girl. The fight, which starts at the highest terrace of the pueblo and is continued until the ground is reached, furnishes an exciting finish.

Adda Gleason, Alan Forrest and C. E. Van Auker, as the three principals, and W. J. Spencer, A. C. Hilts and Evelyn Page in minor roles, do not suffer by camparison with the real Indians and carry the romantic story forward with ease and skill.

"Flirting With Fate"

Five-reel Triangle-Fine Arts, Featuring Douglas Fairbanks.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

SUPERIOR in many respects to any vehicle Fairbanks has had, "Flirting With Fate" introduces a comical element of fear which would enable the story to stand on its own merits in open competition, whether interpreted by Mr. Fairbanks or not. Of course, he brings to it an element of intense personality which materially helps where there is structural strength and enlivens in moments of weakness, but "Flirting With Fate" comes nearer being a true story than any of those in which he has recently appeared, and it contains opportunity for other members of his company, those who ordinarily support him as merely negative members of a chorus with one active principal. This greater story breadth is of high value in sustaining interest.

Mr. Fairbanks impersonates a poor artist in love with a girl of high society, one of unusual beauty, and he is driven to despair by a combination of misfortunes, including the loss of a much-cherished portrait he has painted of her and, as he believes, the girl herself. He fails in all attempts to commit suicide and hires a professional assassin, Automatic Joe, admirably impersonated by George Beranger, to kill him on sight. The characterization of the professional killer, with his peculiar scruples, constitutes a large enough comedy element in itself to carry over the play. Having received fifty dollars to do the job, Automatic Joe is determined to earn the money, though it be the last act of its kind in his life. His mother's death and the efforts of a Salvation Army officer induce Joe to reform, but he will not let his past reputation suffer, he, the greatest of his kind.

Through overwhelming good fortune the poor artist is nearly driven crazy. The stolen portrait is recovered; a friend lends him ready money; the misunderstanding with his sweetheart is adjusted and he is left great wealth. In spite of it all he must die. He cannot find Automatic Joe, and the great killer has never been known to swerve from duty. He has a hundred disguises, may be any one of the people the artist meets, and he may deal death by pistol, dagger, bomb or poison. The artist engages a correspondence-school detective to guard him and flees from his own employee when he sees him in disguise. His agony of mind grows more and more intense, until he runs at the sight of any one who might be Automatic Joe in disguise. He is finally married, but he is only fairly started on his honeymoon when he is chased by Automatic Joe in the guise of a Salvation Army recruit, and he is finally treed, only to learn that Joe has completely reformed and only wanted to return the fifty dollars.

The story is a winner straight through, admirably constructed, capably handled and interpreted by a notable cast.

"The World's Great Snare"

Pauline Frederick Has the Lead in a Stirring Famous Players Five-Part Production.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THE Famous Players' adaptation of this story from E. Phillips Oppenheim's list results in a stirring story, one that steadily holds the attention throughout. "The World's Great Snare," a five-part subject released on June 22, features Pauline Frederick. Miss Frederick's role is one containing wide sweep of emotion—from the depth of despair to the heights of great happiness. Myra, the dancer of a Montana cafe, emerges from the domination of a besotted overlord; she meets the "one man," and "throwing away the worser part" wins him through the influence of what is best in woman. There has been struggle in the beginning to effect the change from the old order; there is a greater one in the latter part of the story—the renunciation of self, the securing of a document that would raise out of her sphere the man she loved when the price of obtaining it was the reversion to the blackness of the beginning.

The player invests her characterization with a force that makes for illustion, that drives in the story. She alienates no sympathy; she consolidates it. There is excellent support, too. Irving Cummings is Bryan, the man who goes to San Francisco in search of Huntley, the former butler who had betrayed a trust and concealed the identity of his one-time employer's heir. Riley Hatch is Rutten, the San Francisco gambler, smitten by Myra's charms; Ferdinand Tidmarsh is Huntley, the butler turned reprobate; Frank Evans is an old miner, and Buckley Starkey is Skein, who when he shoots Huntley pulls the one thread that unravels these tangled lives.

There is a fight between Bryan and Rutten that makes for realism—they crash through the rail of the box in the dance house to the floor below. This, however, is but an incident on the side of the melodramatic. The whole bulks well because of its story-telling quality.

"Gloria's Romance"

Chapters VI and VII of the Rupert Hughes Moving Picture Novel Grow Interesting After the First Thousand Feet of Chapter VI Is Shown.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

AFTER watching the rapid convalescence of Gloria at the close of Chapter V (as acted by Miss Billie Burke), when Dr. Royce had succeeded old Dr. Fussbudget, as Gloria nicknamed him, I looked forward to Chapter VI for the introduction of something like action.

Well, I was disappointed; for Gloria throughout the first thousand feet is still abed, and for that matter is still confined to her room at the close of Chapter VII. A sick room is a gloomy place at its best, and Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes might have spared the spectator the lengthened ordeal without any detriment to their story.

The saving grace of the last 3,000 feet of these two chapters, lies in the relieving of the monotony by interweaving scenes in which the other chief characters appear, with scenes in the sickroom. This revives interest, which has grown numb, and one begins to strike a new stride mentally as Hope once more seizes the reins.

As a prologue to Chapter VI, the leading characters are again introduced in a novel way, and this, I think, shows good judgment; for some who may have been wearied by the opening chapters, and who may have missed part of the thread of the story, will be able to take it up again, now that the closing scenes of Chapter VII have created such great interest.

A singular instance of double exposure is witnessed in one of the opening scenes in Chapter VII. Dr. Royce is seen in his apartments seated on a chair, with a lamp on the table to his left and behind him a door, the upper half of which is made of panes of glass. The Doctor is in a bitter mood as he sits musing over the rascality of Richard Freneau, who is to be married to Gloria in a few days, although engaged in a scandal with her brother David's wife.

Dr. Royce's utter obsession by hatred for Freneau is so great that it becomes necessary to resort to double exposure to bring Freneau in the scene. Dr. Royce sits facing the camera, his relative position to the lamp and the glass door having been already stated.

In a flash Freneau is shown projected on the glass door behind Dr. Joyce. The latter, as if impressed that Freneau is near him in bodily presence, throws himself backward in his chair and seemingly catches sight of the apparition at the door, which is but a reflection of his mental impression, at the time, of the man whom he hates. Henry Kolker (Dr. Royce), after the first glance backward, keeps his gaze glued to the lamp at his left, as if the apparition were there and not at the door behind him.

Director Edwin is responsible for this careless, inexcusable blunder—this makeshift—that is a disgrace to artistic direction. The whole scene could have been done over again without any serious loss of time.

The plot thickens rapidly in the last half of Chapter VII. Gideon Trask, who was introduced in Chapter V, and who was badly injured in an automobile accident, leaves the hospital and immediately begins a search for Freneau, the betrayer of his only daughter.

Freneau seeks to break the hold that Lois Stafford (David Stafford's wife), has on him. He makes an appointment with Lois to meet her at a monument, at midnight, where each will surrender to the other the tell-tale love letters that have been exchanged. He also makes arrangements to deceive Gloria, by which he intends making her believe that he is out of the city on business, instead of being on a secret tour with Lois, her brother David's wife.

Freneau is seen nearing the monument, Lois having been there awaiting him for some time. But the avenger Gideon Trask is also there hiding in the shadows. And looking down on the midnight scene from a window of her sickroom, through powerful glasses, we find Gloria. She sees the stranger, Trask, dog Freneau's footsteps, and then throw himself with fury on his victim, whom he chokes to death; and then, with the name "Dick!" on her lips, we see Gloria fall unconscious.

"Ham the Explorer."

THE dusky queen of a cannibal island, who combines grace of person with a scant but becoming wardrobe and a mastery of the latest dance steps, as exhibited in Broadway lobster palaces, set Ham and Bud to fighting for her favor during the progress of this lively farce. The lady's royal consort also displays a more than rudimentary knowledge of the arts of civilization, as applied to "rollin' de bones," but Ham is a better player and strips the monarch of his crown, queen and royal robes. He has barely become accustomed to his new dignities and his want of covering for his nether limbs, when he falls a victim to Bud's superior skill with the ivories. A rebellion, headed by the dethoned ruler, threatens to put an end to the laugh-making of Ham and Bud, but "Uncle Sam" demonstrates that he can protect the subjects of this glorious nation, in the most remote part of the world. Whether the finish is intended for a bit of gentle satire is not stated. The reel's amusing qualities are never in doubt.

"The Mysterious Cipher."

The eighty-fifth number of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series exposes a clever attempt to cheat a railroad company, by setting fire to a carload of bogus antique furniture which has been heavily insured. In order to secure the evidence to convict the guilty persons, Helen again risks her life; this time, by lassoing a moving freight car and swinging on to it from the back of a horse. The mysterious cipher refers to a telegram in cipher code, which gives the operator at Lone Point the first clue that a crime has been committed. Homer Eon Flindt is the author of a scenario that has many points in its favor. The agile Miss Gibson shows the same old alacrity in risking her life. G. A. Williams, P. S. Pembroke, Ed Gibson and C. O. Dudley fill the other roles.

"The Psychic Phenomenon."

The ambition of Sis Hopkins to have all the sciences and many of the arts breaks out in a new channel in this one-reeler. She tries her hand at hypnotism and is pronounced a great success until it is disclosed that a sleeping powder can claim the credit for the somnambulistic state of Miss Hopkins' subjects. A clever hypnotist can always be depended upon to make an audience laugh, and in this particular at least Sis's efforts are crowned with success. Henry Murdock bounces about through the reel as if closely related to a rubber ball.

"The Engineer's Honor."

Clearing a good looking young engineer of suspicion of having robbed the express company of a fifty dollar bill is the pleasant task set for Helen in hazard No. 86. The fact that she risks her life in leaping from a speeding auto to a train moving at equal speed adds an extra relish to the affair. The author, Herman Blackman, has devised a good story, and P. S. Pembroke, G. A. Williams and O. Philippi assist Miss Gibson in transferring it to the screen.

for a living. Ella Hall interprets the character of the child well, while Harry Depp as "the boy next door" is also to be commended for his competent work.

The story of the picture, which was written as well as directed by Robert E. Leonard, is not what might be called a big story; its characterization is in part good but one cannot help feeling that Ambrosia's weak willed cousin was fashioned so for the sake of the plot. We live in expectation that at last the "worm" will turn, but it never does, and submits to the hypnotic influence of the Swami, again for the sake of the plot. Allowing, however, that the story has its weaknesses, the production boasts unusual beauty as regards locations and settings and has considerable originality. The pranks of the children in the beautiful grounds of Ambrosia's new home have been staged in an exceptionally pleasing way; and in fact the action of the play is natural and easy at all times. It may be that some of the scenes in the "rendezvous" where the hypnotized girl is taken prior to her discovery by the two children have been overdone. This would be more or less a matter of opinion. Others in the cast are Adele Farrington, Betty Schade, Grace Marvin and Wadsworth Harris.

"The Human Orchid"

The Tribulations of a Defenseless Girl Are Set Forth in Picture Produced by C. C. Field.

Reviewed by Lynde Denig.

NELLIE the beautiful cloak model had no more trying experiences than those devised for the poor, pretty and woefully abused girl who occupies the center of the screen in "The Human Orchid," a five-part melodrama written and produced by C. C. Field and handled by Field's Feature Films Company. It is distinctly a picture for small towns or some neighborhoods of larger cities where crude sensationalism and elementary appeals to the emotions are not unwelcome. There is a certain brutal realism in the acting of several of the scenes; but here the value of the production as a depiction of life ends, for the story is forced and unnatural and unhealthy in tone.

Relying upon the morbid curiosity always aroused by a pictorial revelation of ungoverned passion, Mr. Field takes a young girl for his heroine and makes her the prey of men of all types, until, not unnaturally, she concludes that manhood and brutality are synonymous. First she eludes an attempt to sell her to a white slaver, and after experiencing the usual hardships is rescued by a wealthy and seemingly charitable politician. Supplied with pretty clothes and educated by a corps of tutors, everything progresses very comfortably until the night she accompanies her guardian to dinner and he returns home thoroughly stimulated by wine. No doubt the ensuing scenes will be ranked as the big moments of the picture because of their great unpleasantness and complete abandon.

On leaving this home of wealth Ruth looks longingly at the river, seeing visions of threatening men the while; but instead of jumping in she turns to a young district attorney for aid, only to learn in the end that he is much like her earlier acquaintances. The one true man in the picture is a doctor who once loved her mother. A few inconsistencies in the plot do not materially mar the story, for it cannot be taken seriously at any time. The acting of Irva Ross as Ruth is quite the best thing in the production, and there is a competent supporting company, including Walter Miller, Charles Graham and Howard Hall. Photography varies.

"The Shop Girl"

Five-Part Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature Denounces the Regulation of Social Caste by Monetary Conditions.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE problem of the poor girl, and more often the shop girl, has been many times presented on the screen. The varicolored environments with which she has been surrounded in her home life, companionships, etc., have made it possible to reiterate her story with changing tints that lead to and from the same blood-red center. There is always the filthy mire into which she walks deliberately with the wide eyes of despair, or into which she is lured in her innocence by some fascinating villain; and there is the always good or recently reformed young man who plays the heroic part of the rescuer. We find ourselves interested in spite of repetitions until that nauseating moment when the girl, awake to the danger into which she has strayed, considering it to be the last named instance, struggles with the villain, throws chairs, bric-a-brac, etc., at his head to no avail, and rushes with streaming hair through a side door which happens to lead to a bedroom. Of course "the villain still pursues her," and the girl falls senseless in his arms. What is flashed on the screen beyond this period remains in the hands of the director, and could often be improved by the free use of a pair of scissors.

"The Shop Girl" is an adaptation of a novel by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, and features Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno. In it are displayed some astoundingly beautiful gowns. The object of the story is, presumably, to draw attention to the crime committed by the wealthy social parasite who for purely selfish reasons steps between her poorer sister and happiness. The production has been staged artistically and presents a good moral, which unfortunately is lost to a certain extent in unpleasant suggestion, the only two thoroughly clean types in the picture being Winnifred Childs, the shop girl, and Peter Rolls, the son of pride ridden parents.

Mme. Petrova in Novel Roles.

Mme. Petrova the gifted emotional star of the Popular Plays and Players, appearing in Metro wonderplays, will be seen in several distinct characters in a forthcoming production as yet unnamed. In a brief allegory Mme. Petrova is seen as Eve in the Garden of Eden. Later she appears in a gypsy camp, where several thrilling scenes are enacted. Afterwards she is seen in the role of a Quakeress. The scenes for this part of the production were photographed in a small settlement in Pennsylvania. The production is a distinct novelty and a departure from the type of stories usually shown upon the screen and presenting Mme. Petrova.

"The Seekers"

Five-Reel Universal Production Features Flora Parker De Haven in Story of Religious Community Life.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THE scenes in this five-reel production, written by Olga Printzlau and directed by Otis Turner, gain considerable dramatic strength from the ordinarily quiet nature of the life pictured and the natural development of the story.

The opening scenes spread before the observer the country habitation of a religious sect known as "The Seekers." They are a sober, industrious people, rich in agricultural resources and devoted to the simple form of religion they follow. Paul Byron and Flora Parker De Haven play the parts of two orphans, a young blacksmith and his sister. Charles Mailes appears as a minister and Edward Hearn as the son.

The first incident of consequence to the story occurs when the bank safe is robbed. Some tools from the young blacksmith's shop are discovered at the scene of the crime. He is arrested and sentenced to prison on this circumstantial evidence. The sister, Ruth, goes into the employment of the Rev. Mrs. Mount and in due time an attachment springs up between her and the son, although neither confesses to it immediately. The son, it should be mentioned, is the community sheriff, or constable.

The customs of the people are well set forth and some of the characterizations are mirth provoking. The illusion of a quiet people, living apart from the outer world, is well maintained.

The crisis of the story comes when the brother escapes from prison and the girl shields him from recapture. In this she is discovered by her lover, whose duty it is to arrest him. Later his innocence is established and the truth is made known. The church drawing for the hand of the minister's son makes an amusing feature. Also the silent honeymoon trip, which is only broken when Ruth reveals to her husband that the man she had been shielding from arrest was her brother.

The picture as a whole is a novel and convincing study of community life.

"East Lynne"

Fox Version of the Famous Melodrama Is a Markedly Pretty Picture and Certainly Enjoyable.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE stream of pictures that passes every day has grown to such sweeping dimensions that it takes something out of the ordinary to make any production stand out from all the rest. The story of "East Lynne" is out of the ordinary and any Fox version of that wonderfully entertaining tale must arrest a good share of attention. This reviewer has never seen any picture of "East Lynne" that was so pretty as this and none in which the direction so ably arranged the scenes and progress of the events to get the most of the story's human quality. The picture gives a new interest to the story as a story; for it is not strong on sincerity of emotion, except at one or two places, and at one in particular, that in which the younger of Isabel's children leaves the bedside of her brother, who has just died. Its sincerity stabs the heart with sorrow. Those two children are wonderful.

There is no one in the cast (and "East Lynne" needs a large one) who fails to do creditable work—they are all about equally good. One will notice scenes in which each one of the players hits his or her mark perfectly and scenes in which the player shows that he or she was not quite up to the demands upon him at the moment. The photography is of a high order and the scenes and backgrounds invite enthusiasm. The story is not and can not be made an American story. It is English, aristocratic and mid-Victorian and certainly doesn't fit the references to Boston and New York that this version makes in the letters and subtitles. But many will pass over so slight a fault, since the picture is so filled with excellencies.

Perez Making Fun for Unity.

From the production of big features the Unity Sales Corporation has branched out into the comedy field. The concern is featuring a European comedian called Perez, who is described as the "scream of the screen." Perez in his methods is absolutely different from that of the "rough stuff" favorites. The comedies in which Perez appears are known as "Tweedledum" series. The first two are entitled "Tweedledum Torpedoed by Cupid" and "Tweedledum Plays the Hero." The comedies are being made at the Eagle Studios, Jacksonville, Fla., and contain many novel and startling effects as well as some very funny plots.

Two Mutual Subjects

"Far from the Madding Crowd," Five-Reel Adaptation from the Novel of Thomas Hardy, Featuring Florence Turner.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

IT IS a pleasure to see Miss Turner on the screen, even in a role affording her so little opportunity as that of Bathsheba in "Far from the Madding Crowd." She gives a graceful, dignified and intelligent performance in a part almost destitute of mental revelation and entirely without the charm of subtlety. The novel furnishes scant material, that of a kind about worn out, and its characterizations are poorly calculated to win sympathy, those of a woman unfaithful to the natural dictates of her heart, who marries foolishly a man who acts foolishly, while her honest lover acts the fool from beginning to end. The thin material of which some old novels were made is quickly discovered on the screen, where it cannot be hidden by clever verbiage.

Larry Trimble, the director, has a natural eye for scenic beauty without any discoverable knowledge of picture composition, and he has a habit of thrusting his shepherd dog in on attention to the injury of story interest. The dog is good in a dog play—in one calculated to attract human interest he is de trop. The farm scenes are good and of interest whenever they are characteristically English, but some of the exteriors are chosen without sense of what is appropriate, and distract where there is sore need of some line of suspense to relieve the tedium of mere action portrayal. When it comes to modern directing, Trimble is years behind the times. He fails utterly to bring out the strong emotional revelations Miss Turner exhibited when she became our first veritable star.

"The Highest Bid."

In one-reel days, when there were no "features," the average director took his company out in the wilds and photographed some people chasing up and down on horses for the sake of illustrating the story of a hero who was compelled to leave his girl in the east, where the villain could win her, while he went to the Golden West and stumbled upon a gold mine. Ultimate triumph and embrace in the last act. That was a weekly release, with slight variations, nearly every new producer having a try at it in one shape or another. Its reappearance in "The Highest Bid" is not particularly edifying, though it is very well done by a capable cast.

Scene from "The Highest Bid" (Mutual).

Be it said by way of constructive criticism that a dramatic story, according to all authorities, involves, very much as does the story of our own lives, a struggle of the human will against the restraints imposed by environment, or against other contending influences. The hero who stumbles on a gold mine, or who gambles successfully in Wall street, is merely a product of chance. His struggle is a poor and mean thing in comparison with that of a plain ordinary man who is compelled to earn a living for himself and family. His heroism is on a par with that of a man who inherits a fortune from a convenient uncle or grand aunt. "The Highest Bid" is a story of mock heroics and as such cannot be classed with more plausible ones in which there is some playmaking skill involved, to say nothing of subtle revelation of mind and heart.

General Film Company

A MISUNDERSTOOD BOY (Biograph), June 19.—Robert Harron, Lillian Gish, Lionel Barrymore and Kate Bruce are the prominent figures in this D. W. Griffith reissue. This story of the boy who is always misunderstood is told in the direct entertaining manner of the early Griffith one-reelers.

OTTO'S LEGACY (Lubin), June 19.—That ancient piece of wisdom, "If the brick stays up, she's yours," might have inspired this one-reel farce. In this case, the brick is loaded with Otto's legacy and has many adventures before its owner regains possession of it. The reel is filled with irresponsible but diverting nonsense. D. L. Don is the owner of the brick, and Patsey De Forest plays his wife.

SELIG-TRIBUNE, NO. 49, 1916 (Selig), June 19.—Deming, N. M., Villa bandits executed; National Guardsmen training at Columbus, N. M.; society girls drill for war, Yerba Buena Island, Cal.; Oakland, Cal., enjoys day's outing in new park; President Wilson nominated at St. Louis; forty killed by hurricane at Herber Springs, Ark.; Senator Wm. Stone and Chas. F. Murphy at the St. Louis convention.

STUNG (Vitagraph), June 19.—Stanley Dark is the author and star of this one-reel comedy. The humor of the reel is, by no means a dark secret. A joke-loving married man is taught a lesson by his wife and a friend of the family, and is made to feel the sting of one of his own jokes. Lillian Burns, Templar Saxe and Charles Eldridge take a hand in the proceedings. Wally Van was in command of the acting forces.

THE BEGGAR AND HIS CHILD (Kalem), June 20.—No funnier "Ham" comedy has ever been manufactured. As a director Lloyd Hamilton is a huge success. A review of the picture was printed in the issue of July 1, page 102.

THE PIED PIPER OF HAMELIN (Edison), June 21.—A reissue of a one-reel drama, the story being founded on the celebrated poem by Browning.

THAT LONELY WIDOW (Kalem), June 21.—This one-reel picture is a comedy of complications. Everybody mistakes everyone else for someone else, but their bewilderment makes good fun for the spectator. Ethel Teare, Jack MacDermott and Gus Leonard occupy the center of the screen. S. A. Van Petter wrote the scenario.

SELIG-TRIBUNE, NO. 50. 1916 (Selig), June 22.—El Paso, U. S. Army utilize motorcycles; Columbus, N. M., field manouvers of National Guardsmen; Democratic mule at the St. Louis Convention; eels try to climb falls at Oregon City, Ore.; King Neptune holds sway over surf bathers at Galveston, Tex; Norfolk, Va., U. S. S. Pennsylvania is placed in commission; President and Mrs. Wilson attended commencement exercises at West Point; women post bills, London, Eng.

NEVER AGAIN (Vim), June 22.—Babe Hardy and Billy Ruge lead the fun-makers of this one-reel farce. As Plump and Runt they take a trip to Spain and make the acquaintance of a real Spanish dancer, get in wrong with their sweethearts and are glad to return to America. Up to the usual Vim standard.

HER GREAT INVENTION (Kalem), June 23.—It is a matter of history that curiosity and salt got Lot's wife into a heap of trouble. The same two articles accomplishes the same result for Sis, in this one-reel comedy. Pa Hopkins' daughter tries to improve the present breed of gunpowder, but the attempt is not a success and she only manages to frighten a number of persons out of a year's growth. Sis herself is so badly scared that her pigtails are straightened out in trying to stand on end. No effort is required to laugh at this comedy. Henry Murdock and the usual supporting company do good work. Samuel J. Taylor wrote the scenario.

FOR BETTER OR WORSE (Vim), June 23.—A knockabout comedy of the kind unsually made by Bob Burns and Walter Stull in the characters of Pokes and Jabs. The story has little continuity, but the action is swift and rough enough to give the elementary appeal to be expected in productions of this description.

THE MYSTERIOUS CIPHER (No. 85 of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Kalem), June 24.—A review of this picture is printed in this issue.

THE FABLE OF "THE UNDECIDED BRUNETTE" (Essanay), June 21.—The heroine of this George Ade fable is undecided as to the state of her affections and the way she solves her problem does credit to her common sense. As a disseminator of Advice to the Lovelorn George A. has Beatrice Fairfax lashed to the mast. Wit and wisdom in equal parts run all through the reel.

THE CURFEW AT SIMPTON CENTER (Vitagraph), June 23.—Edwin Ray Coffin has written a capital one-reel comedy scenario and William Wolbert has been equally successful in transferring it to the screen. The fun is wholesome and the situations have not been overworked. Otto Lederer, George Kunkel, Webster Campbell, Jack Mowey and Florence Vidor make a well-selected cast.

TAKING A CHANCE (Selig, June 24.—It's mustang against automobile in this one-reel drama and, as Tom Mix is riding the horse, the nag wins. The theme is reasonably new and Tom keeps things moving right along. Considerable of the business is extra good, and Victoria Froede is again cast for Tom's sweetheart. Pat Chrisman and Joe Ryan are the same old standbys in a Mix scenario.

General Film Company Specials

THE PROMISED LAND (Essanay), June 17.—The dramatic portion of this three-reel photoplay is a dream. A small town belle is loved by the local drug clerk and a travelling salesman. She dreams she elopes with the drummer and is deserted, becomes a nurse and meets her discarded suitor just as he is about to operate upon her husband. At this critical moment, she wakes up and arranges matters with the drug clerk. The picture holds the interest, but loses force by not having a strong climax. Bryant Washburn, Edmund F. Cobb and Marguerite Clayton are a thoroughly dependable trio.

THE REPRISAL (Selig), June 19.—The efforts of a woman to revenge herself upon the man who prevented her marriage with the lover of her girlhood is the theme of this three-reel photoplay. The story depends upon its exposition of character and was written by Elizabeth R. Carpenter. It is a good example of middle class photoplay making, and is well acted by Fritzi Brunette, Jack Pickford, Guy Oliver, Frank Clark, Al W. Fulson and Lillian Hayward. Wm. Robert Daly directed the picture.

IN THE SERVICE OF THE STATE (No. 13 of "The Social Pirates"—Kalem), June 19.—The locale of this instalment of the George Bronson Howard serial is largely on board an ocean liner. A foreign spy, who is trying to escape from the United States with a valuable paper, is followed and captured by Mona and Mary. A review of the picture was printed in the issue of June 24, page 2259.

THE REFORMERS (Biograph), June 20.—A two-reel reissue of a Biograph success in which Mae Marsh, Robert Harron, Charles H. Mailes, Jennie Lee and Walter Miller fill the leading parts. It is a clever satire on the uplifter who minds everyone's business but his own, and is quite as timely as when it was first shown.

THE GIRL AT THE CURTAIN (Essanay), June 20.—The hero and heroine of this two-reel comedy-drama are married with a curtain between them, so that neither one sees the other, thereby showing a sublime disregard for consequences. Fate is kind to them, however, for they meet later and fall in love without knowing the other's identity. A reissue of one of the favorite pictures in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are the stars.

LOVE'S LAW (Lubin), June 22.—A review of "Love's Law" is printed in this issue.

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

BROKEN FETTERS (Bluebird), July 3.—An unusually attractive melodrama in which the majority of the settings are Oriental. The story treats of how the daughter of the American consul at Hong Kong, left an orphan, is adopted by a rich Chinese mandarin, and is afterward lured to America by a "dealer in merchandise and souls." She is eventually freed and married by a young artist. A full review appears on another page of the magazine. A strong cast, headed by Violet Mersereau, appears in the production.

Fox Film Corporation

A WOMAN'S HONOR (Fox), June 12.—A five-reel picture ably made and acted. It is a sensational melodrama, not offensive in any way, and exciting. A longer review will be found on page 100, issue of July 1, 1916.

EAST LYNN (Fox), June 19.—A five-reel version of the famous melodrama with Theda Bara in the role of Isobel. It is an extremely pretty picture and one that makes the story very interesting. A longer review will be found elsewhere in this issue.

International Film Service

HEARST-INTERNATIONAL NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 49, 1916, June 20.—Annual Rose Festival at Portland, Oregon; Turkish infantry go into action; red stone cliffs of Southern Utah; two disastrous fires, San Francisco; interior view of Democratic Convention at St. Louis; fashion section; school children of Chicago show physical training; schooner Virginia wrecked at Salisbury Beach, Mass.; calling the National Guard into readiness for duty along the Mexican border.

HEARST-INTERNATIONAL NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 50, 1916, June 23.—Yacht Mah-Pe wins the Lipton Cup Race at San Francisco; British soldiers fight near Salonika; cultivating cantaloupe in the Imperial Valley, Cal.; Yale and Harvard eight-oar crews at practice, New London, Conn.; fashion section; war balloon sails over Cambridge, Mass.; intimate views of the troopers of the 10th U. S. Cavalry; National Guardsmen leave New York for Camp Beekman; N. J. National Guardsmen at Paterson; night scene in Camp Beekman.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

THE FLOWER OF NO MAN'S LAND (Columbia), June 26.—The initial appearance of Viola Dana on the Metro program is in a simple, pleasingly romantic story presenting the youthful star in the role of a western girl who is reared by an Indian. Her first unfortunate love affair is with a popular singer, who goes west to recover his health. Although the story is not unusual, the picture makes very passable entertainment. A review appears elsewhere in this issue.

Mutual Film Corporation

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 77 (June 21).—Interesting items of this number are the tenth aunual Rose Festival at Portland, Ore.; the U. S. Transport sailing from San Francisco to the Philippines with troops; President Wilson addressing and presenting diplomas to the cadets at West Point; the scene of the $4,000,000 grain elevator fire at Baltimore, Md., aud other events of current importance.

JERRY'S ELOPEMENT (Cub), June 23.—This farce comedy will be found amusing. Jerry is always the same Jerry, doing the same sort of comedy tricks, but his efforts to elope with his pretty sweetheart in the face of much opposition are very funny. Any audience will be pleased with this picture, which is free from any noticeable vulgarity.

THE DAY'S WORK (Beauty), June 25.—Orral Humphrey plays in this comedy the role of an author whose chief hobby, theoretically speaking, is the planning of the day's work. The result of putting his own ideas into practice does not work out as smoothly as one might expect, for Willoughby Hubbard's memory is not to be relied on in affairs of the workaday world, and a leak in the plumbing which he accelerates and then forgets to repair causes untold trouble.

REEL LIFE, NO. 8 (Gaumont), June 25.—This opens with interesting demonstrations that gasoline in cans will not explode, unless the cans become overheated. Then follows a series of instructive views of the street cleaning department of New York City in full operation, giving a fine idea of its varied work. The growth and habits of snails makes a good closing feature.

THE IRON MITT (Vogue), June 25.—A knockabot number, by Robert A. Dillon. This starts out as an amusing burlesque on "The Iron Claw," but the plot finally becomes entirely lost in some meaningless knockabout scenes. This would have been stronger if it had followed the straight burlesque idea, but is fairly amusing as it stands.

A SAFE LOSS (Vogue), June 26.—A knockabout office comedy, by Thos. Delmar. Rube Miller appears as the alert janitor, who spots the crooked cashier and stenographer and saves the boss from losing everything. This has humorous moments, but on the whole is only fairly strong.

WHEN ADAM HAD THEM (Beauty), June 28.—A pleasing comedy number, by Al Santell, featuring John Sheehan, Carol Halloway and John Steppling. The young wife joins the "Serpent" cult, in order to retain her husband's affections. She brings home a pet snake, which has a startling effect. This has considerable novelty and is well presented.

Mutual Film Corporation Specials

A MODERN KNIGHT (Mustang), June 23.—A two-part comedy-drama featuring Art Acord. Nita Davis plays the feminine lead acceptably. The picture will be enjoyed for the swift action which characterizes it as well as for the clean vein of comedy which it contains. The story treats of how a cowboy accidentally breaks into the operations of a moving picture company and makes good. He falls in love with the leading lady, a tragedy occurs later in the holdup of a stage coach when her husband, a bandit, is killed, and she is left free to marry the man she loves.

A SIREN OF THE JUNGLE (Centaur), June 24.—A two-reel number, featuring Margaret Gibson, Wm. Clifford, Harrish Ingraham and others. The bar girl in a South African village is a great coquette. One man kills himself for love of her and she then captivates Cameron, an animal buyer. She deserts him in turn and he vows to have revenge. Later he rescues her child in the jungle and decides to spare the mother because of her happy family life. This features the Bostock lions. The number carries the interest well, and, while not so dramatic as some, contains some very pleasing scenes.

THE FATE OF THE DOLPHIN (American), June 26.—A two-reel story of the sea, by Anthony Coldewey, featuring Edward Coxen, George Field, Lizette Thorne aud Harry von Mater. The plot tells of a tricky shipowner who puts heavy insurance on a leaky vessel and sends it to sea. He attempts to have the hero shanghaied for the trip, but the girl substitutes his nephew by a ruse. The storm at sea is well pictured. The sinking vessel is shown by a studio set, but the illusion carries. This makes quite a strong story of the type.

THE SECRET OF THE SUBMARINE (Mutual Special Feature—American), June 26.—Chapter 6. This instalment is full of exciting adventure. Hook brings the books to Lieut. Hope, but it turns out that they are not the ones desired after all. The next move of all hands is toward Point Sierra lighthouse, where it is believed the desired secret may be obtained. The race to the lighthouse is made through mined waters, in which one launch is blown up, but the passengers saved, with the exception of Sextus. After a struggle at the lighthouse, the light goes out and Hope and Cleo are in danger of being wrecked in their boat on the rocky coast.

TANGLED SKEINS (American), June 29.—Three-part American production with Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh in the leading roles. The story on which this picture is based is a good one, but unfortunately it has not met with the best of treatment. The production contains pastoral scenes of great beauty, and individual scenes that have an appeal. There has, however, been too much film utilized for these individual scenes, such as a cat perched on the limb of a tree, thereby impeding the action of the play without being sufficiently effective. Vivian Rich does some good work, but for the most part the players are uot at ease, and a good deal of the action is forced rather than spontaneous.

THE DEMON OF FEAR (Mustang), June 30.—A two-part production with Anna Little, Frank Borzage and Jack Richardson in the leading roles. The play has been constructed after a haphazard fashion. It presents many beautiful exteriors and the picture will be enjoyed in spots; but, being a story within a story, and with the first part having too slight and ill-balanced a bearing on the second, it cannot be listed as a first-class production.

Paramount Program

THE CLOWN (Lasky), June 19.—"The Clown" is not as good as previous Lasky productions and falls below the average. The story itself is rather inconsistent. Victor Moore, as the clown, always holds the interest of the audience, but might have been cast in a different role where he could display his talents more readily. Florence Dagmar's part could be played to advantage by a more experienced actress. Thomas Meighan is also in the cast, but his part is small. For an extended review of this film see page 105 of the July 1st issue.

BOBBY BUMPS' FLY SWATTER (Bray), July 2.—Earl Hurd has prepared a genuinely clever comedy cartoon in his Bobby Bumps series. An unusual idea is developed with much skill and ingenuity. "Dinner Time in Zooland," the Ditmars contribution to the reel, is a study of rare wild animals that possesses a distinct educational value.

SEEING EUROPE AT PEACE (Burton Holmes), July 2.—As an antidote for the war spirit, Paramount is showing Europe as it appeared to Burton Holmes during his travels of a number of years ago. Some of the most picturesque scenes in this issue reveal the homes and habits of the Wendish peasants. Views of Nuremberg also add to the interest of the release.

PICTOGRAPHS (Paramount), July 2.—The opening article in this issue goes under the head of "Don't Cheat Yourself," and is intended to be a warning to housewives to guard against the tricks of unscrupulous dealers. There is a good illustration of the value of trained police dogs. The Better Babies Department presents youngsters being developed by the Montessori method. Hugo Munsterberg offers a rather difficult memory test.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

PATHE NEWS, NO. 49, 1916 (Pathe), June 17.—In this issue are some interesting views of British soldiers marching through the streets of Paris, attractive sport fashions, the dedication of the Columbia highway and Daria Resta winning an automobile race at Chicago, as well as other items of interest.

FROM KITCHEN MECHANIC TO MOVIE STAR (June 19).—A Goldberg cartoon that will be found amusing, showing how Ammouia Emptydome, a maid of all work, was dismissed from her job and joined a moving picture company. She returned to her former mistress in a blaze of diamonds that overwhelmed the latter individual to such an extent that she proceeded straightway to fade from off the earth. On the same reel with "Japan's Ancient Capital—Nara."

Pathe Exchange, Inc., Specials.

WHO'S GUILTY? No. 7 (Arrow), June 19.—This number, entitled "Truth Crushed to Earth," lays bare the harmful influence of persistently disbelieving and punishing a child that has told the truth. The picture shows how a boy who has been treated thus in childhood grows to manhood with the belief that, no matter how innocent he may be, he will always be the suspect in case of offense. A well-produced picture, interesting and entertaining.

THE IRON CLAW, NO. 17 (Feature), June 19.—"The Vanishing Faker" is the title of this episode of the series. In this Davy is banished from the Golden Household, but later turns up to save Margery from another attack from the Legar gang. The episode is an interesting one.

GOING STRAIGHT (Fine Arts), June 4.—An old story of a reformed crook's temptation, but well played and fairly interesting.

THE BUGLE CALL (Kay-Bee), June 4.—A story of military life, with Willie Collier, Junior, in the leading role. Sure to be popular with women and children all over the land.

REGGIE MIXES IN (Fine Arts), June 11.—A comedy melodrama with Douglas Fairbanks in a role well suited to his genial interpretation of character and athletic ability. Full of adventure and movement.

THE SORROWS OF LOVE (Ince), June 11.—A tragedy of love resulting from the weak character of a nun who twice broke her vows. Its principal merit lies in picturesque backgrounds and artistic treatment.

Universal Film Manufacturing Company

A BUSTED HONEYMOON (L-KO), May 24.—A comic number, featuring Alice Howell, Ray Griffith and Fatty Voss. This is done in low comedy style and the treatment is rough, though not extremely so. It makes a fair number of the eccentric type.

STORMING THE TRENCHES (Powers), May 27.—A juvenile number, featuring Irma Sorter, Gordon Griffith and some other mischievous youngsters. They get into a city ditch and have a war with vegetables as ammunition. Not strong in plot, but an interesting study of juvenile activities; will probably appeal mostly to children.

GAMBLING ON THE GREEN (L-KO), May 28.—Reggie Morris, Gene Rogers, Dave Morris and others appear in this eccentric comedy. Paw and Maw visit the park and Paw flirts with Reggie's girl. There is some amusing small business, though scarcely enough plot and action to make an unusual subject. This is fairly strong.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 25 (Universal), June 21.—A Washington, D. C., parade; aftermath of cyclone in Jackson, Miss.; funeral of Gen. Gallieni in Paris; fire in San Francisco; West Point parades and graduation; rowing races at Poughkeepsie; Mexican mobilization and other features are included in this entertaining and instructive number.

BASEBALL BILL (Laemmle), July 2.—A rapid-fire number, in which the grocer's clerk runs away and becomes the hero of a baseball game. The opening scenes are full of meaningless, jerky action. Later the idea becomes clear and a fair amount of humor develops. This would have been stronger if certain unnecessary situations had been cut out.

THE CLEVER MRS. CARTER (Imp), July 4.—This number, by Catherine Carr, features Edith Roberts and Harry Benham as newly-weds. The husband flirts and the wife, to cure him, invites his "friend" to the house for a week. The cure works. The comedy is only fairly strong in development, but contains a pleasing idea.

THE HEAD OF THE FAMILY (Rex), July 4.—A number by Wm. Addison Lathrop, featuring Ben Wilson, Edna Hunter and others. The young husband, to cure his discontented, butterfly wife, takes her to the woods. The scheme proves a good one. This is enjoyable in a scenic way and has a convincing combination of romance and common sense. An entertaining subject.

A GAMBLER'S GAMBLE (L-KO), July 5.—A knockabout comedy number, in which the leading character is a gambler with a portly wife, impersonated by Fatty Voss. She breaks up a poker game. The closing scenes are very rough and do not get quite the humor a less violent handling would have achieved. Still this will amuse some observers.

THE WISHING LAMP (Big U), July 6.—A pleasing juvenile subject, in which a rich boy and a poor one exchange places for a day, by virtue of an Aladdin's lamp. Both return to their former stations in a happier frame of mind. This is entertaining and well presented.

THE JANITOR (Powers), July 6.—A comic number, by Willie Beery, in which an acrobatic janitor furnishes the chief amusement. He is almost killed in the elevator and nearly falls from the tenth story window. The fight of two men on the flag pole, on top of a skyscraper, makes a good feature. This has a number of laughs in it.

THE RIVER GODDESS (Imp), July 7.—A comedy number, by J. Grubb Alexander, featuring Matt Moore, Jane Gail and others. Two men meet beside the river, where each has seen the vision of his lost love. They relate their stories, and it appears that the girl turned them both down for her chauffeur. The settings and general development are attractive, but the humorous idea is too slight to get over very strongly. An average number.

ANY YOUTH (Victor), July 7.—A morality story, by Allen J. Holubar, who also plays the leading role. This shows, by means of double exposure, the good and evil sides of a young man's nature in conflict. The devil and the saint are pictured in continual struggles. Dorothy Phillips plays the girl, also having two natures. This is slight in plot, but awakens thought and is fairly strong.

AN ALL-AROUND CURE (Joker), July 8.—A domestic comedy, by Wm. H. Farmer, featuring Chas. Conklin, Gale Henry, Wm. Franey and Lillian Peacock. This concerns the affairs of Mr. and Mrs. Gronch and Mr. and Mrs. Nag. The small business throughout is diverting and the characterizations are funny. A characteristic number.

SPORTS OF THE RAJAH IN MYSTERIOUS INDIA (Powers), July 8.—The first of the Dorsey Expedition pictures. This gives some remarkably interesting views of India's minarets, mosques and the famous temple of Golconda. Also the tombs of kings and ancient imperial cities. Royal sports with wild animals, including an elephant fight and a clash between wild boars and a leopard, are shown. The photography has something of the hazy effect peculiar to films taken in tropical countries, but is generally satisfactory. A good educational subject.

GETTING THE GOODS ON GERTIE (L-KO),—July 9.—A burlesque detective story, featuring Dave Morris, Reggie Morris and Gertrude Selby. The eccentric situations and trick photography get up some humor, though the production is one of only fair strength.

Universal Film Mfg. Company Specials

THE LEAP (Universal Special), June 26.—Ninth episode of "Peg o' the Ring." In this instalment Peg escapes from the burning cabin and the scene shifts to Mexico. The circus is entirely surrounded by the enraged natives, and Peg and the others battle with them in a stirring gun fight. There is plenty of action in the Mexican scenes, of a sensational character. Some of the scenic effects are very pleasing.

THE WAY OF THE WORLD (Red Feather), July 3.—A strong five-reel drama, from a play by Clyde Fitch, featuring Dorothy Davenport, Hobart Bosworth Emory Johnson and others. The story moves off slowly, but with constantly increasing interest. An interrupted christening, in which the jealous husband claims another is father of the child, makes the chief scene. This proves highly dramatic and is presented with conviction. The offering as a whole is well handled and tells a story of love and political intrigue. A satisfying subject.

THEY WOULDN'T TAKE HIM SERIOUSLY (Gold Seal), July 4.—Herbert Rawlinson and Agnes Vernon appear in another successful comedy number, written by Ben Cohn. The young man has a habit of proposing to pretty girls on sight and they never take him seriously. He finally succeeds in winning the one he really wants, but not until she has sounded the depths of his real nature. This has attractive settings and is a clever comedy of the better type.

THE MAN ACROSS THE STREET (Imp), July 6.—A two-reel number, by Robert T. Hardy, featuring King Baggot as a young traveling man who returns home to find his wife, portrayed by Edna Hunter, wearing fine gowns and disporting herself with a gentleman friend. The husband makes up as the friend, calls on the wife, and kills her in his anger. The friend is then found guilty of the crime. There are some strong dramatic features to the fore part of this story and the situation is an interesting one. The bit of "studio" fooling at the close rather minimizes what had already been shown. The drama itself is the strong feature.

THE COMMITTEE ON CREDENTIALS (Bison), July 8.—A strong three-reel Western subject, based on a story by Peter B. Kyne. Harry Carey, Joe Rickson and Olive Fuller Golden appear, together with a large cast of cowboys and towns-people. The fall over the cliff, made by Joe Rickson, is extremely sensational and the shooting scenes previous to that are well put on. The action of the first two reels is slow, but the climax is very strong. A good offering.

V-L-S-E, Inc.

WINIFRED, THE SHOP GIRL (Vitagraph), June 26.—A five-part production featuring Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno. The picture is an adaptation of a novel by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, and attempts to present the crime of regulating social caste by monetary conditions. While the production is for the most part an attractive one, the scenes in the apartment of the manager of the department store, where he attacks the innocent girl, are extremely nauseating. A full review of this production will be found on another page of this issue.

World-Equitable

WHAT HAPPENED AT 22 (Frohman), June 26.—Arthur Ashley and Frances Nelson are the featured players in a very well-handled melodrama, written by Paul Wilstach and directed by George Irving. The plot concerns the activities and eventual discomfiture of a clever forger. A review appears elsewhere in this issue.

Miscellaneous

THE HUMAN ORCHID (Fields Features), July.—A review of this unpleasant picture, presenting the trials of a defenseless girl, may be found on another page of this issue. The story is morbid and unreal, but not uninteresting in an elementary way.

MACBETH (Big A Film Corp.).—An entirely inadequate production of Shakespeare's tragedy made in England several years ago. Arthur Bouchier, as Macbeth, and Violet VanBrugh, as Lady Macbeth, are unimpressive. The picture was cheaply staged and poorly photographed.

JULIAN TO DIRECT EXCLUSIVELY.

It has been arranged by Vice President and General Manager H. O. Davis of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, that hereafter Rupert Julian will no longer appear before the camera as an actor, but he is to devote his entire talent and experience to the direction of big features with other stars in the cast.

For some time Julian has been both acting and directing, but it was found to be too much of a strain and he has at last succeeded in having his burden lightened.

He has finished "L'Abbe Constantin" and his next production will be "The Clique of Gold" in which Elsie Jane Wilson will be featured and supported by Francelia Billington and Douglas Gerrard. The film play will be released in five reels when completed.

DEMAND FOR "WESTERNS" NOTED.

Exchange men and producers have been noting for some time an increasing demand from exhibitors for productions of the outdoors along the line of the old "westerns." The Kalem Company, taking its cue from hundreds of letters received from exhibitors, has for some time been taking steps to meet this demand. Announcement is now made of the release of the first of the westerns, "Notch Number Nine," on July 5.

This is a one reel drama, issued on the General Film program. Helen Gibson is among the stars seen in a strong story of the "two-gun man" of the old West. Benefiting by the improvements in production methods made in the past few years, "Notch Number Nine" also boasts, however, plenty of the daring riding and action that made the westerns so popular.

Vivian Reed, Selig star actress, is enjoying a visit from her mother who arrived in Los Angeles a few days ago from El Paso, Texas. This completes a most happy reunion, Miss Reed's brother having arrived several weeks ago.

"POWER" (Essanay).

Political plots are not infrequent, but "Power" hits off some exact conditions in the "graft" game in the larger cities with a verity that makes one take notice. Outside of this incentive the play is of unusual appeal because of the strong love story that runs through it. Nell Craig, as the lead, shows how the woman behind the throne can pull the political wires to manipulate matters to her own end. Her motives in this case, at least, are good, and in the end she upsets the man she throned because he got into the clutches of the "graft" element. There is some strong emotional acting accomplished by Miss Craig in a scene where she is torn by the necessity of choosing between her brother, on one side of the "ring," and her sweetheart on the other. The plot deals with the attempt to steal the water rights for the city, and incidentally there are numerous beautiful scenes introduced to bring out this fact. The leading players visited Arizona, where some of the scenes were laid around the Roosevelt dam, near Phoenix. The wonderful irrigation system also is shown in the play. Sydney Ainsworth, as the leading man, which is a heavy part, enacts his role with his customary villainous work, which makes every one hate him than which no better praise could be given.

VILLAGE BURNED AT NIGHT FOR LASKY.

To provide some interesting scenes which comprise the last part of the new Lasky photoplay "The Selfish Woman," in which Wallace Reid and Cleo Ridgely appear as co-stars, a railroad camp consisting of twenty frame buildings was constructed and destroyed at night by fire. The Lasky directors are among the first to hazard the making of motion pictures at night, but it is said that the burning of the railroad camp is the most spectacular thing of its kind ever made. To all intents and purposes the camp was a permanent affair and might easily have been converted into a useful part of the equipment on the big Lasky ranch near Los Angeles, not far from the studio.

The story of "The Selfish Woman," which will be released through Paramount on July 10, concludes with the strike of 700 railroad workers and the destruction of railroad property in the attempt of conspirators to undo the work of a young engineer, played by Wallace Reid.

While the frame buildings were burning the reddened sky was visible several miles. Thousands of persons in the streets of Los Angeles saw the reflection of the flames, but they were in a quandary as to its cause.

AMERICAN TO MAKE "THE BARGAIN."

"The Bargain" from an original scenario by William Parker, with Winnifred Greenwood and Franklin Ritchie essaying the chief roles, is a five act feature release, work on which was recently started at the American studio. This feature will be released as a Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe edition. It is a strong story with a strong appeal replete with big situations and a big surprise at the end.

"LA VIE DE BOHEME" BREAKS A RECORD.

"La Vie De Boheme," the current World picture release, established several kinds of records upon the occasion of its first run at Marcus Loew's New York theater on two days recently. The engagement of this picture for two days was the first instance of its kind in the history of the house under Marcus Loew's management. The customary run is one day. On the second day of the run the house record was broken, and for the first time since the New York Theater Roof became a film theater, standing room was sold at regular seat prices. The exploitation of "La Vie De Boheme" was unusual, also. A huge banner, 100 feet by 30 feet was stretched from the New York Theater across Broadway to the Hotel Astor and attracted great interest.

"LIZZIE'S LINGERING LOVE" (L-KO).

Another side-splitting comedy has just slipped out of the L-KO studios and promises to eclipse all past efforts. It has been christened "Lizzie's Lingering Love" and is one of the best comedies Pathe Lehrmann has invented in a long time, with that howl producer Alice Howell as the attraction.

The story centers around Lizzie, the jailbird; opium fiends, underworld dens and other cheerful things. Her term over, Lizzie stood on the outside of the prison grasping the few dollars the institution had provided against the day of her release.

She had determined to go straight, but the underworld folk to whom she had rendered service before her incarceration began wanted her back. Her day of release was heavily chalked by the boss of the den which had been her habitat, and his crooks were there to extend the glad hand. These worthies, posing as friends to the newly liberated, lifted the precious dollars needed for the new start, and the late jailbird found herself under their guidance among her old cronies. The straight notion wasn't entirely killed and they found she had lost her former congeniality. Overstrenuous efforts on the part of the boss to revive the old spirit drove her to attempt to end it all.

At this point the hero entered, saved her life, persuaded her to live a little longer and won her heart. She stepped blithely forth to start anew, but met up with the underworld folk again and strong-arm methods convinced her of the good policy of joining their operations. She served as an outpost to their burglar jobs with good success, until at a millionaire's home, where the haul of the season was expected to be made, she met up with a mouse. This drove her unceremoniously into the privacy of the home, where she found she was aiding in the sacking of the house of her hero. Gratitude welled—had he not saved her life? She turned on her pals, protected the sick mother, returned the family jewels, and then stepped out of his life forever—but, being the last one out ran straight into the lately aroused cops, her exit being badly marred by her efforts to gain headway on the flatfoot hot step of the protectors of peace.

"DUST" (American).

Winnifred Greenwood and her co-star, Franklin Ritchie, are to be presented shortly by the Mutual Film Corporation in a five-act Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe Edition, entitled "Dust," an American Film Company, Inc., production. This is a drama along sociological lines, having to do with a legislative expose of the factory evils as they exist throughout this country today. Miss Greenwood will be seen in the role of Marion Moore, the aristocratic daughter of a wealthy factory owner, who has neither love nor sympathy for the hundreds of workers employed by her father. Mr. Ritchie has been cast for the role of Frank Kenyon, author and social worker, whose investigations bring about the inquiry into the factory evils.

Harry Van Meter, Louise Lester, Nell Franzen and various other players recruited from the American-Mutual studios comprise the unusually powerful cast appearing in support of the stars.

Edward Sloman, director of the production, has worked in a number of thrilling situations, one of which, depicting the burning of a factory and the panic among the employes in their effort to escape, is certain to rank with the most realistic scenes ever filmed. More than 200 persons appear in this one scene. In point of action, this panic scene leaves nothing wanting in the way of realism.

The scenes showing the state legislative body in session are true to life in every respect, the set being an exact duplicate of the State Legislature at Sacramento, where Director Sloman spent several days looking things over before construction of the set was begun.

STATE TROOPS IN ESSANAY PICTURE.

The clash of saber and bayonet, the sound and smoke of fifty thousand cartridges, the gallop of horses and the shouts of fifteen hundred men, filled the air at Camp Logan, Ill., as a meager Sunday sun was finally and thoroughly obscuring itself for the day.

From his perch Director J. Charles Haydon waved a flag and eight tired camera men gave their cranks a final spin. The soldiers dropped to the ground a moment for rest. Then the first stillness of the day was broken by the clear notes of a bugle a mile away at headquarters sounding "boots and saddles," a prearranged signal. As one the regiment leaped up for a mighty cheer and all, horse and foot, charged toward the camp proper.

All day while working for "The Sting of Victory," Essanay's new five-act feature with Henry B. Walthall, the members of the First Regiment, Illinois crack guardsmen, had been awaiting the president's order to mobilize for Mexican duty. Director Haydon with five assistant directors and eight cameramen was sweating blood to finish all spectacular battle scenes before the soldiers could be ordered away. Oddly enough, the call to go to the front reached the boys just after the final scene had been taken.

"NATHAN HALE" FOR WORLD FILM.

One of the forthcoming productions of the World Film Corporation, under William A. Brady's direction, will be an elaborate visualization of the famous historical character, "Nathan Hale."

Mr. Brady designated Robert Warwick, Gail Kane, Alec Francis and Clara Whipple to handle the leading roles in this picture and the company is at work at present in Boston. Permission was granted them to work in the public square and on the Boston Common.

A number of the scenes are being made in the exact locale of the original Clyde Fitch story, which was produced as a stage play some years ago.

LINA CAVALIERI IN GOLD ROOSTER.

Lina Cavalieri, or "La Cavalieri," as she was known years ago when she sang in The Follies Bergere at Paris, and whose classic beauty is the marvel of men and the envy of women throughout the world, has been featured with her husband, Lucien Muratore, by the Pathe company, in a Gold Rooster play, "The Shadow of Her Past," for release in the week of July 7.

The feature is in five parts. It is a romantic tale of an American girl studying music in Italy, who loves and is loved by a promising young painter. The story breathes an old-world atmosphere, and was given every realistic advantage in the matter of sets, natural scenery, extras, etc., when Mr. Muratore, under whose supervision the film was made, took his company to Italy some months ago.

ANOTHER GOODRICH SUBJECT FOR MOROSCO.

Closely following the release of "The Making of Maddalena" on the Paramount program, the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company announces that Edna Goodrich, who portrays the chief role in that photoplay, has commenced work on her second vehicle under this banner. "Body or Soul," a stirring dramatic subject by L. V. Jefferson, is the title of the new Goodrich photoplay on which activities have already been started under the direction of William D. Taylor.

VETERAN GAUMONT CAMERAMAN ON DUTY.

The Gaumont slogan, "Follow the flag with the Mutual Weekly," is given force by the presence on the border of L. J. Burred, the Gaumont cameraman who will represent the Mutual Weekly, should intervention become necessary. Mr. Burred not only speaks Spanish fluently, but also has a wide acquaintance with the territory through which our troops would be forced to operate. He has seen active service with his camera during the Mexican Revolution, and is well acquainted with Carranza, Villa and other Mexican chieftains.

"THE SILENT BATTLE" (Bluebird).

Although this is by no means a picturized temperance lecture, the title of the film is derived from the long and successful struggle a billiant young attorney makes against the results of a hereditary appetite for the cup that cheers and frequently inebriates.

The inherent thirst leads the brilliant barrister through many disquieting episodes while pursuing his avocation by day and keeping up his reputation as a club member by night. And when he goes to the Canadian woods to be rid of temptation and old associates for a few weeks his permanent enemy leads him into the worst predictament of all.

The basis of this feature is a novel written by George Gibbs. F. McGrew Willis prepared the scenario and Jack Conway directed a cast headed by J. Warren Kerrigan, Lois Wilson, Maude George and other clever Bluebird players, including Harry Carter, Ray Hanford and J. F. Connolly.

Nature's settings provide most of the scenes, but there are a few interiors of size and magniture that seldom figure in a program feature. The Hunt Club Ball is one particularly massive and expensive scenic equipment, beautifully photographed with the moving vistas of colored lights and decorations, confetti and beautiful costuming of the guests.

Other scenes include some beautiful views in the woods, among giant trees, where the rugged hills are adorned with autumn verdure, and brooks dash down the valleys. The exteriors were located in Southern California, among the foothills, where nature has provided settings perfectly adapted to the vigorous nature of this feature and in scenic investiture, alone, would make the release remarkable for its basic beauties.

"GATES OF DIVORCE" (Gaumont).

Having scored such a pronounced success in the Mutual Masterpicture, "The Isle of Love," which was made by the Gaumont Company, Miss Gertrude McCoy has been engaged by the same company to star in "Gates of Divorce." This will be released as a Mutual picture July 20. The photoplay was specially written for Miss McCoy by the well-known novelizer of screen stories, Robert Burns. It fits Miss McCoy with the part of a petulant young wife who is wrapped up in frivolous society to the exclusion of her serious-minded husband.

How close the wife comes to losing her husband through her own foolish actions is entertainingly told in three reels of intense action. The plot is bound up with the efforts of a society crook to snare the husband when his disappointment in his wife causes him to turn elsewhere. A seemingly innocent young girl in whom he can take an interest is thrown in his way with results that make for remarkably dramatic situations.

Alexander Gaden has the role of the embittered husband. Miss Lucille Taft appears as the girl under the influence of the arch-plotter, a part played by John Reinhard. Others in the cast are Miss Iva Shepard, Charles W. Travis, Albert Macklin and Fritz Orlamond. The photoplay will be released July 20.

"FATHERS OF MEN" (Vitagraph Blue Ribbon).

"Fathers of Men" a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature in six parts, which is slated for release on July 10, comes from the pen of James Oliver Curwood, whose stories of the Northwest have been so successful filmed by Vitagraph.

Robert Edeson, in a dual role, has wonderful opportunities for displaying his talent. He is first seen as John Howland, a trapper, at the age of 35. Next as the same man, 20 years later and then, as Robert the 25-year-old son of John Howland. As John Howland, his life is embittered when Blake, a trader, runs away with his wife while he is at a nearby hospital.

He vows vengeance, but it is not until twenty years later that he next meets his enemy. This time it is under conditions favorable to his revenge, for he finds him by the body of a murdered man, and, though he knows that Blake did not commit the murder, he succeeds in having him convicted. Robert, Howland's son, implores his father to halt, but Howland remains firm. When in trying to escape Blake is shot and killed, his three sons avenge their father's death by killing Howland. Robert sets out after them to settle his score, but after many thrilling adventures, in which the Blakes prove themselves his friends, the feud is peacefully ended. William Humphrey directed the picture and portrayed the role of Blake, the villain. Others in the cast are Naomi Childers, Harry Northrup, Kalman Matus, Logan Paul, Robert Gaillord and Bobby Connelly.

THURLOW BERGEN IN UNITY FEATURE.

The latest photo-play acquired by the Unity Sales Corporation is the photo-drama version of "The Lottery Man," in which Thurlow Bergen is starred. "The Lottery Man" is a sprightly comedy-drama dealing with the adventures of a reckless newspaper man who puts himself up as a prize for the fairer sex. He is fairly swamped with matrimonial offers, but the winner of the lottery in which he is the reward appears to be his sweetheart's cook. The complications serious and amusing arising out of this situation affords the popular Thurlow Bergen and a strong supporting company an opportunity to provide a wonderful entertainment.

"THE TAMING OF WILD BILL" (Mustang).

Jack Richardson is one of the few men in the motion picture industry who has ever used bullets in revolvers, when many shots are fired for the effect reproduced on the screen. Mr. Richardson's early training as a cowboy, and later as sheriff, has enabled him to learn how to properly handle a gun, and those who work in the scenes with him have not a fear that some stray bullet may inflict injury.

In the two-reel "Mustang" drama entitled "The Taming of Wild Bill," in which Jack Richardson has the title role, with Nita Davis in the feminine lead, as the daughter of an itinerant preacher of the gospel, Jack does some spectacular riding and shooting, at one time actually entering a saloon on horseback, shooting up the place, demolishing liquor bottles, electric bulbs, and a mirror with well aimed revolver shots.

The staid horse, well educated to the noise of shooting, was entirely unaccustomed to the crash of breaking glass, and several times lunged and reared until those about the scene thought someone would certainly be hurt; but Richardson managed the animal with his customary nonchalance and precision and rode gracefully out between the typical swinging doors of the saloon.

"The Taming of Wild Bill" is to be released by the Mutual July 7.

CHARLOTTE WALKER IN "PARDNERS."

Charlotte Walker, the famous star of the legitimate stage, who has met with tremendous success in the few motion picture productions in which she has appeared, has been placed under contract by Thomas A. Edison, Inc., to appear in a dramatization of "Pardners," one of the famous stories of Rex Beach. Miss Walker already has started work in the Edison studios in Bedford Park, New York, and she will remain there for several weeks. She will be directed by George Wright. The members of the supporting company have not yet been announced, but it is said that Miss Walker will be surrounded by a stellar cast in the picture.

The great majority of people will best remember Miss Walker by her superb work in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," a play in which she has appeared with tremendous success. Previous to her appearance in this play she had won a splendid reputation by the work that she done in other productions.

ORRIN JOHNSON IN DIFFICULT ROLE.

Orrin Johnson, who has the lead in the Lubin Company's elaborate multiple-reel production of Anthony P. Kelly's sermon drama, "The Light at Dusk," requires full exercise of his conceded artistry in interpreting the unusual role of Vladimir Krestovsky. The character is that of a Russian peasant who takes the plunge into the melting pot of America and emerges a steel king. In this reincarnation he erases from his mind all memory of the faithful little wife he left in Russia, changes his name to Krest, indulges in social aspirations and, still forgetful of his wife, marries a society belle. Accurate delineation of the successive changes in this evolution of character calls for histrionic ability of the first order, and it is with this in view that Orrin Johnson was specially engaged by the Lubin Company for the part.

With the direction entrusted to Edgar Lewis, no technical requirement was left to chance.

"THE VALIANTS OF VIRGINIA" (Selig-V-L-S-E).

"The Valiants of Virginia" will be the Selig Red Seal-V-L-S-E release for Monday, June 26. The story is a film dramatization of Hallie Erminie Rives' famous novel and the play features Kathlyn Williams, supported by an all-star cast of players, including Guy Oliver, Arthur Shirley, James Bradbury, Frank Clark, Al W. Filson and others. Many true-to-life scenes of the South and Old Virginia are shown and no details have been overlooked in the making of a film production of romance and adventure. "The Valiants Of Virginia" will be released in five reels. The story teems with plot and counterplot. A strong love story is introduced early in the action and increases in interest as the drama develops. Film reviewers say that Kathlyn Williams has one of the strongest parts in her notable career as Shirley Dandridge, the Southern girl, whose love finally proved to be triumphant.

Nathan Hale

While the Boys of 1916 Are Off to War Echoes of '76, Brought by Players at Work on Historical Film, Give Tantalizing Suggestions to Passers Who See Nathan Hale and His Men in Revolutionary Uniforms.

By William M. Flynn, 80 Summer St., Boston, Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, Mass.—While Boston was resounding with the tramp of armed militiamen going off to the mobilization camp at South Framingham this week, visitors in the city were considerably startled to see two huge automobile sightseeing cars draw up in front of the Park theater and into them pile 50 or more soldiers dressed in Revolutionary War Army costumes. They wondered where and who was mobilizing the Continental army of 1775. It turned out that Mr. Sorrerio, manager of the Park theater, had requested his patrons, who wished to take part in the filming of the photo-play of Clyde Fitch's great drama of Revolutionary times, "Nathan Hale," to gather in the theater lobby and from there were transported to the various places at Marblehead and Bedford where real Colonial backgrounds of historic accuracy were needed for the filming of the production. The piece is to be known on the screen as "The Heart of a Hero" and will be in five acts. William A. Brady of the World Film Corporation is in personal charge of the making of this great film. The stars selected to play the leading parts are Robert Warwick, Gail Kane and Clara Whipple, with George McQuarrie, Alec Francis, Clifford Grey, Henry West, Mildred Havens, Charles Jackson and Larry Fisher in important parts. Emil Chautard, a French actor, is in personal charge of all the scenes, while John Tuerk, representing the William A. Brady interest, is making the film. Mr. Sorrerio's plan of having his patrons take part in the play proved a great success for scores of pretty girls and fine looking young men responded to the call and made up as Colonial dames and gentlemen.

UNIVERSAL'S NEW DEPARTMENT

Will Purvey Educational Films and Special Children's Shows.

Boston, Mass.—Through the medium of the social welfare department of the New England Universal exchange, which was recently established by H. J. Shepard, manager of the exchange, not only pictures covering educational, vocational and scientific fields, but also "better pictures for the kiddies," will be supplied weekly so that the demand for all types of pictures can be satisfied. The department has now undertaken to classify, catalogue, print and arrange into programs, these various subjects and they are now available to clubs, societies, institutions, churches and theaters all over the New England district.

VIRGINIA NEWS LETTER.

By Clarence L. Linz, 635 Tenth St., N. E., Washington, D. C., Special Corerspondent.

Jake Wells' Ice Fund Benefit.

RICHMOND, Va.—Jake Wells recently gave a complimentary matinee to the children of the city at the Strand, where he exhibited "The Wizard of Oz." While there was no admission charged, Mr. Wells expressed the hope that every child attending the performance would bring a penny to help swell the contents of a hamper, provided for that purpose, to be filled with money and then turned over to the summer ice fund. Needless to say, Mr. Wells was not disappointed, and quite a sum of money was obtained for this charity. It is contemplated that weekly matinees, especially suited to juveniles, will be given at the Strand.

Slides with Labor Union's Arguments.

Norfolk, Va.—Members of the Brotherhood of Train Employees here are arranging with local exhibitors for the display on July 4 and 5 of slides showing their side of the controversy with the railroads throughout the country involving a demand for higher wages and shorter hours. The slides are to bear various slogans.

Disregarded Board of Health Order.

Alexandria, Va.—A scarlet fever epidemic caused the closing recently of all places where the public congregated, including the places of amusement, public schools, etc. The city council has been more or less criticized for taking this action, both by the motion picture exhibitors and the general public, and it has even been hinted that the so-called epidemic was greatly over-estimated. Despite the order, however, the theaters opened several days later and large crowds of people attended. This caused the issuance of warrants requiring the presene of the picture men in the police court. Alexandria merchants are very angry over the whole matter as the city received a considerable amount of unfavorable advertising and people of the countryside hesitated entering the city because of the alleged epidemic. There naturally resulted a loss of a large amount of business and in this the motion picture theaters shared.

Colonial Beach, Va.—Charles E. Redhead opened his airdome here on June 15.

Amending Baltimore Code

City's Building Regulations Will Be Changed—Chief Engineer at Work on the Ordinance—Time for Suggestions Is Now.

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mt. Royal Ter., Baltimore, Special Correspondent.

BALTIMORE, Md.—The committee, of which W. Hendrick, chief engineer of the city, is chairman, which was appointed by Mayor Preston to consider ammendments and to submit recommendations for the revision of the building code, is working hard to complete the task and it is expected that the report will be ready sometime during the next month.

Many suggestions, it is stated, are being received through the mails, for proposed changes which seem to be desirable. We would suggest, if it has not already been done, that the exhibitors and theater owners immediately get busy and suggest, if any, the changes in the building code which would be of benefit to them.

If the findings which the committee submits to the Mayor are approved by him, a draft will be made of the necessary amendments by the law department for submission of same to the City Council.

If it is thought to be necessary that action be taken at once on the amendments suggested by this committe, before September, it has been intimated that a special session of the council would be called by Mayor Preston.

TAX REASSESSMENT HEARING.

Notice to Maryland Theater Owners—On July 6 State Tax Commission Will Confer.

It is understood that a conference prior to general reassessment of all property, in the counties and the state of Maryland, which the members of the last session of the legislature authorized, will be held on July 6th.

The Supreme Bench has loaned the State Tax Commission the room of the City Court on the first floor of the Courthouse for this conference and invitations were sent out on Saturday, June 10th, by the Commission to all the county commissioners of the various counties of the state, the supervisors of tax assessments and the tax officials of all cities, towns and villages to attend.

Broadway Advance Program.

Baltimore, Md.—The management of the Broadway theater, 509-13 South Broadway, is now issuing an advance program for the benefit of their patrons. It is entitled the Broadway Bulletin and is being edited by J. Louis Rome, the manager. The subjects included are: East Baltimore local news; synopses of the plays to be exhibited at this house and news items concerning them.

Ford's Opera House Loaned.

Baltimore, Md.—Through the generosity of John T. and Charles E. Ford, the Fresh Air Society was able to give an entertainment at Ford's opera house on the nights of June 26, 27 and 28, as this theater was turned over to the society by the management. The staff of employes and the orchestra agreed to donate their services to the cause and the performance was a success.

A. B. Price in Philadelphia.

Baltimore, Md.—It is understood that Arthur B. Price, manager of the Mt. Royal theater, 617 West North avenue, went to Philadelphia on Tuesday, June 13, on a mysterious mission. There is a rumor current that he was seen in the film district on Vine street and from the smile on his face it is assumed that he put across what he went after.

New Baltimore Theater.

Baltimore, Md.—The Southern Amusement Company, H. W. Webb, president, will ask for permission to construct a moving picture theater on the west side of Light street, south of Poultney street.

Premier of "God's Country."

Baltimore, Md.—Through the courtesy of Lewis A. DeHoff, manager of the New theater, 210 West Lexington street, a premier screening of "God's Country and the Woman," the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, which is a dramatization of James Oliver Curwood's book, was arranged for by Frank B. Spurrier, manager of the Washington, D. C., office of the V-L-S-E, Inc., and given on Tuesday night, June 13th after eleven P. M. A number of exhibitors were present and after the performance Mr. DeHoff stated that he would use it as part of his program for June 26, 27 and 28.

Pictures Aid Celebration.

Baltimore, Md.—Through the activity of J. Howard Bennett who formerly owned the New Pickwick theater, 115 North Howard street, and the help of the present owner, G. Horton Gaffney, and L. A. DeHoff, manager of the New theater, the program of moving pictures including the seven-reel feature "Salvation Joan" given with much success at the community celebration which was given by the Mount Washington Community Association on Tuesday night June 20.

Mr. Bennett had entire supervision of the installation of the projection machine, the erecting of the screen and the showing of the pictures. The machine was placed on the porch of the club house and the screen was erected on the ball grounds of the Mt. Washington Athletic Club. The projection machine, a spotlight and two operators were loaned by Mr. Gaffney while another spotlight was loaned by Mr. DeHoff.

E. M. Daly Manager of Strand.

Baltimore, Md.—Eugene M. Daly, a Baltimorean, who for many years successfully managed the Lyman Howe pictures, has been appointed by Harry Woods, to represent him as manager of the Strand theater, 404-6 North Howard street. Many improvements are now being contemplated by Mr. Woods for this house. The chief one among them is the installation of a cooling system for which plans are now being made. The Baltimore audiences are getting very fond of cool-air. Metro pictures will now predominate at this house.

NORTH CAROLINA NEWS LETTER

By Clarence L. Linz, 635 Tenth St., N. E., Washington, D. C., Special Correspondent.

Local Exhibitors Ask Relief from Tax.

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—The local motion picture exhibitors are endeavoring to have the board of aldermen take action looking to the reduction or the abolition of the tax assessed by the city upon the motion picture theaters, and they have retained Attorney A. F. Sams to represent them.

When Mr. Sams appeared before the board he told the members that the exhibitors are required to pay a county tax of $100, a state tax of $150, a city tax of $60, and in addition to all of these there is the Federal tax, based on the seating capacity of the theater, making the total average tax per house between $350 and $400.

It is the contention of the exhibitors that they should not be taxed any more than any other persons engaged in mercantile business. They say that motion picture shows are a clean and wholesome amusement for the people and are an asset to the city. It is further pointed out that the low price charged for admission and the average volume of business aggregates in net receipts far less than the average business which is not taxed so heavily.

They further state that the money now spent in exorbitant taxes could be expended to far better advantage in obtaining a higher grade of films, thus adding to the enjoyment of the people who patronize the shows. The exhibitors also believe that some concession should be made to them in view of the fact that they had to close their doors to children for some length of time during the winter on account of a scarlet fever scare.

Mr. Sams told the aldermen that while the motion picture houses were taxed by the state at $150 a year, and the county and city authorities were permitted to assess additional taxes at their discretion, the big opera houses were only taxed $100, half of which sum being retained by the state, and the balance going to the county.

Mayor Eaton replied that it was an unjust action of the state to so tax the motion picture theaters which are city institutions, operated in cities only, and receiving their patronage from the cities.

E. M. Ames Heads Local Detroit.

Detroit, Mich.—E. M. Ames has been appointed manager of the Detroit branch of the General Film Company, Congress and Griswold streets, succeeding A. J. Gillingham, whose resignation we noted last week. M. Ames has been with the General for the past five years, a part of the time being on the road and for the past several years assistant manager of the company's Twenty-third street exchange in New York City. Mr. Ames is enthusiastic about the progressive spirit of Detroit people—and says he has not once been lonesome for Broadway and Forty-second street—a favorite New York expression.

Helmer George Buys a Pontiac House.

Pontiac, Mich.—Helmer George, of Pontiac, Mich., writes our Detroit office that he has purchased the Central theater in that city, located at 20 North Saginaw street, and formerly operated by F. J. Stafford. Mr. George is a photographer by trade and has a flourishing photograph business in Pontiac. He will run both enterprises. Mr. George will make motion pictures of local events of interest and later show them on the screen of the Central theater—in this way he expects to make his house extremely popular.

Arnold Kornicker, representing Menger & Ring, Inc., manufacturers of theatrical lobby and display frames, was in Detroit June 14 and 15 on one of his regular visits. Mr. Kornicker never fails to send his house some nice orders from Detroit, where Menger & Ring products have a splendid reputation.

Camera for Naturalists

Philadelphia Scientist, Carl E. Akeley, Has Invented a New Moving Picture Camera of Much Promise—Says There Is Great Need for It in Filming Wild Life—A Rough Description of the Mechanism.

Special to Moving Picture World from Philadelphia News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Carl E. Ackeley, of the American Museum of Natural History, evolved a motion picture camera novel in constructional and operating features, that at least gives promise.

As a big game hunter in the wilds of Africa, Mr. Akeley has used the ordinary moving picture camera, only to find it awkward and in many instances useless. He has attempted on spur of the moment to photograph a herd of charging elephants, or an alligator stealing on its prey, or a trapped lion in its death throes, only to be disappointed in the finished film. He once had the rare opportunity to photograph a real battle between giant ants of the tropics, but before he could adjust the mechanism of the camera, it was too late. It was through disappointments like these that Mr. Akeley was led to devise the new machine and to concentrate his technical knowledge upon the perfection of his idea.

The instrument is a radical departure from the old machines. In form it is cylindrical. It rotates in a steel ring on ball bearings and is supported by a curved arm, which rises from a sub-base on which the panoramic base rests when in operation. The complete apparatus, camera and panoramic devices form a single compact unit to be used with or without a tripod.

The camera can be mounted for rapid picture taking. It can be trained in any direction as accurately and as quickly as a cowboy can draw his iron. If a tripod is not at hand a window-sill, a rock, a saddlehorn, a tree branch, a knee—in fact anything stationary may serve as a base for operations.

More Films in Wilkes-Barre.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—Krueger & Wood, proprietors of one of Wilkes-Barre's most popular theaters, have recently announced their summer policy. The playing of stock will be discontinued and vaudeville and moving pictures will be in order for the balance of the warm season. It will be the policy of the management to present only the best films obtainable and the patrons of the theater are guaranteed first class moving pictures and vaudeville of the same nature.

When Is Our Picnic?

Philadelphia, Pa.—The time is fast approaching for the annual excursion of the moving picture folks to Atlantic City and, as yet, there has been no definite action taken in this direction. Numerous inquiries have been received as to the data for this outing and, as the trip has always proven such a success in previous years, the occasion should not be overlooked. If the Philadelphia Moving Picture Exhibitors' League does not intend to run the excursion, why not let some one else?

Charles Thropp Pleased.

Germantown, Pa.—Charles Thropp, manager of the Colonial theater, Germantown's leading theater, reports business as being exceptionally good and declares that there is every indication of a continuance of such conditions. He recently purchased a new Simplex projecting machine and additional equipment from the Calehuff Supply Company, 1301 Race street.

Philadelphia Business Notes.

West Philadelphia, Pa.—The Locust theater, Fifty-second and Locust streets. West Philadelphia's model moving picture theater, continues to draw the crowds and Messrs. Felt & Felt have been compelled from time to time to add to the equipment of their establishment. The latest move along this line was the purchase of several Simplex projecting machines from the Calehuff Supply Company.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Lewis M. Swaab reports having recently installed a Halberg motor generator and switchboard in P. F. Joyce's Princess theater, Pittston, Pa. This theater is one of the largest in that section of the state and enjoys a large patronage.

"Lame Ducks" Play Ball

Washington, D. C., Film Men Led on and Incited by Tom Moore, Harry Crandall and Others Declare a Baseball War — Umpires Had to Be Frequently Changed—What Happened When Bats Were Once Crossed.

By Clarence L. Linz, 635 Tenth St. N. E., Washington, D. C., Special Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In times gone by the term "lame ducks" was applied only to members of Congress who were serving out the tail end of a term prior to retirement from public life upon their failure to secure a re-election. Today, "lame ducks" refers to Tom Moore, Harry Crandall, Joe Morgan, Bob Campbell and a host of others, but this has nothing at all to do with re-election unless it be to the various positions these brilliant stars held on the baseball diamond.

The story is that Tom Moore picked on Harry Crandall until in self defence the latter hastily gathered his cohorts together and challenged, or at least accepted the challenge of the former to a duel at baseball. The rest of it is a sad, sad story, one with which the writer had nothing to do.

In the very first inning something happened to Frank B. Spurrier. Some say he sprained his ankle, others say he strained his courage; anyway he was hustled home (?) in his automobile. Then everything went lovely until Abe Dresner got all twisted up and forgot to watch who had the ball. When the pill was thrown from third base to put out a home-running player, Dresner got his head in the way and the umpire counted ten, but Abe failed to respond. He was dead to the world for five minutes until someone said they wanted to book Metro pictures, whereupon he showed signs of life.

Tom Moore Exceeds Speed Limit.

Things were equally hilarious on the Moore team. Tom Moore was called out by the umpire because in running the bases he exceeded the speed limit; Plunkett tried to steal the bases and carried home plate around in his pocket after having made a hit, and the Webber and Fields stuff was very plentiful.

On several occasions it was found necessary to change umpires. This was accomplished by the throwing of empty pop bottles, spare bats and baseballs and sometimes bricks.

The lineup was as follows: Crandall, captain; Keenan, Campbell, Payette, Morgan, Davis, Jasper, Berger and Dresner. Moore, captain; Murphy, B. Moore, Plunkett, Harley, Gardello, Trudewind, Johnson and Flax. Mrs. Tom Moore and Mrs. Leon Trudewind were official scorekeepers. Both are friendly to the Garden team and declared it the winner with the score of 27 to 7. And Crandall wants revenge.

V. H. Bendell Now Representing General Film.

Washington, D. C.—Local film men were last week introduced to V. H. Bendell, special representative of the General Film Company, Inc., who formerly traveled out of the Rochester and Syracuse, N. Y., offices of that company, but who will now divide his time between the Baltimore and Washington offices. In speaking of his new assignment, Mr. Bendell stated that he found conditions in Washington very satisfactory and that he was beginning to like the city very much.

Film 'Bicycler" Scored.

Washington, D. C.—The World Film Corporation is reported to have thrown an awful scare into the ranks of the so-called film bicyclers when it had an exhibitor arrested for switching film from a theater to which it had legitimately been booked to one which was not entitled to its use without the consent of the exchanges.

There has been a considerable amount of such "switching," or "bicycling" of film going on for some time without the consent of the exchanges, and an effort has been made to break up this practice. Where it has heretofore been ascertained that an exhibitor was doing this sort of thing, the exchange merely demanded payment for the use of the film at the second house. It has even been reported that exhibitors have held out films, renting them to other exhibitors in the same or adjoining towns.

In the case in question the exhibitor was charged with larceny in that in switching the film he was stealing the use thereof at the second theater. Had the case been carried through to a decision it would have been decidedly interesting. However, the charge was withdrawn by the exchange when the exhibitor paid for the extra use to which the film was put. It is now rumored that an effort will be made to get a conviction in the courts of some exhibitor who practices switching, as a lesson to others. It is a safe bet, the exchange manager who contemplates this action says, that the damages will be so heavy because of the disagreeable advertising that would be given to such a case, that it would not be repeated and others will take heed.

Airdomes Begin.

Washington, D. C.—A large number of motion picture parks were opened during the second week in June, but none were able to do any great amount of business because of continued rains. At Takoma park there is a new airdome operated by McPherson & Heins. Standard park has been reopened by the Standard Park Amusement Company with Thomas E. Franklin as manager. Peerless park, under the management of William Gaines, and the Maycroft has been opened by the Crandall interests.

J. I. Buck on Road for United.

J. I. Buck is a new road man representing the United Film Service, of which Sidney B. Lust is the proprietor. Mr. Buck is traveling in North Carolina and is said to be meeting with very good results.

Unicorn's Headquarters Busy.

The Unicorn Film Service Corporation is running full swing in the quarters recently opened at 434 Ninth street, Northwest, by General Manager A. G. Steen. This place was at one time occupied by the Greater New York Film Rental Exchange. It has been thoroughly overhauled, repainted and repapered and presents quite an attractive appearance in its new dress.

Warren A. Kline, who has had quite an extensive experience in the film business, is to be manager of the local exchange. He started in with George W. Bennethum for whom he managed theaters in Maryland and Pennsylvania. He then traveled for the Fairmount Film Exchange, handling Universal releases, alternating his employment with service under Mr. Bennethum, who was also connected with that exchange. For about a year he operated the Interstate Feature Film Company in Baltimore and upon giving that up he again handled the Universal releases. He left that concern to join the Unicorn.

The new exchange will be represented in Baltimore by Arthur Gans, who will travel out of the Washington office, and Will Mack, well known as a film man in this territory, will go on the road for the company.

NEWARK NEWS LETTER.

By Jacob J. Kalter, 51 Strand Theater Bldg., Newark, N. J.

Guenther New Manager.

NEWARK, N. J.—Olympic Park, a large open-air resort in the Irvington section, is now under the direction of Anthony J. Guenther and Henry A. Guenther. A. J. Guenther has already assumed the managerial reins, succeeding Hollis E. Cooley, who was manager under Mr. Kurz.

Regent Loses Help.

Kearney, N. J.—The Regent theater, opposite the Town Hall here, is minus two employees because of the mobilization of the New Jersey militia. William Hunter, ticket collector, and George Helm, pianist, are the two who have been called to the colors.

Another Poster Man.

Newark, N. J.—Harry H. Stahl, who comes here from the Twenty-third street, New York, branch of the Universal Film, is a new addition to the poster department of the local office, at 286 Market street.

Bluebird Soaring High.

Newark, N. J.—Henry Siegel, manager of the local Bluebird exchange, reports exceptional bookings on the latest releases. Mr. Siegel has just returned from a trip through the coast cities, and reports many airdromes opening for business. Weather conditions have thus far hampered the open-air places.

Special Universal.

Newark, N. J.—A special "edition" was put out by the Universal June 21 when the Newark soldiers left for Sea Girt. The pictures were taken by special contract with Frank A. Keeney, who exhibited them the next day at his local house, managed by John McNally.

Airdome Opens at Resort.

Long Branch, N. J.—The Ocean Pier Airdome, owned by Mr. Cross of the Grand theater, this place, is in the course of extensive alterations and renovation. The new airdome will be ready for opening about the fifteenth of June.

MID-NEW YORK LETTER.

By E. O. Weinberg, Plaza Theater, Troy, N. Y. Special Correspondent.

James Molan Buys Powers Opera House

TROY, N. Y.—Powers Opera House, North Troy, has been purchased by James Molan, 646 Clinton avenue, Albany, N. Y. He will remodel the house and operate the theater on a picture policy. This house is almost 100 years old and was first used as a church.

Fred G. Sliter Traveling for Mutual.

Schenectady, N. Y.—Fred G. Sliter, proprietor of the New Broadway theater, Schenectady, N. Y., is also traveling man for Mutual Film Corporation, covering part of New York, Vermont and Massachusetts.

F. Broymier Back at Orpheum.

Schenectady, N. Y.—F. Broymier has been reinstated as manager of the Orpheum theater here.

Frank J. Leonard With Bluebird.

Albany, N. Y.—Frank Leonard, formerly with V-L-S-E, is now engaged as roadman for Bluebird Photoplays.

E. J. Schmidt Goes to Ohio.

E. J. Schmidt, friend of all exhibitors, has left Bluebird Photoplays and is now managing "Where Are My Children?" company in Ohio.

SUNDAY SHOW PROGRESS IN TENNESSEE.

Some Exhibitors Find Ways to Keep Open Sabbaths.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., Special Correspondent.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.—Sunday moving pictures are not yet possible in Chattannoga without interference by the sheriff, even if operated by a plan which would make them free to the public, according to a local exhibitor. Reports have been heard on the streets to the effect that Sunday shows might shortly be resumed; but the exhibitor was discouraged. One claimed that labor leaders had insisted that some plan be worked out for opening the show houses on Sunday afternoons, and had even gone so far as to suggest that they would pay the defense cost in case of arrests. He pointed out that Nashville and Memphis have Sunday shows, which are not classed as "nuisances" and subject to the special nuisance act. He called attention to the fact that swimming pools, baseball games, etc., which were far noisier, were free of such legislation.

A prominent Chattanooga lawyer discussed the proposition and cited portions of the old blue laws and their bearing on moving pictures, baseball, amusements, etc., and in his remarks said:

"Now as to picture shows: They are running full tilt in Memphis and in Nashville they are being operated in the public parks, free to the public, and the reports are to the effect that the parks are crowded as never before, and that the patrons are highly pleased. The exhibitors secure their revenue through running advertising slides between the shows. This same plan has been suggested in Chattanooga and has met with instant and almost unanimous approval, but there are enough who are affected with "ousterphobia," locally to scare the constabularly into threatening to arrest any who shall undertake any such delectable enterprise. The chief characteristic of one who is affected or suffering from 'ousterphobia' is that a fit is thrown every time anything indicates that there is an opportunity about to be offered to those who cannot otherwise entertain themselves to have an enjoyable occasion to see a moving picture show on Sunday, either free or for pay.

"But in spite of all of this, a light is breaking, and it is probably not far distant when all can enjoy Sunday according to the dictates of their own consciences. Everybody believes in keeping the Sabbath, but some persist that all should observe it according to certain restrictions and established alleged proprieties. All the people wish is to be permitted to enjoy the Sabbath so that it will work a diversion and entertain according to their respective ideas, always in such a manner as not to work an annoyance, harm, inconvenience or damage to the community generally. This desire is reasonable and should be accorded. Vital Christianity is evolving a sane Sabbath."

It is possible that the exhibitors may evolve a plan whereby they may run free pictures, and secure their revenue through charging for advertising slides.

Lincoln Theater Opens.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—The Lincoln theater, a new moving picture theater for colored people exclusively, at Ninth and A streets, was recently opened for business. The building is fireproof throughout, and is the first in the city to be erected exclusively for moving pictures. The new house was erected by T. S. Wilcox upon a long-time lease with a concern backed by Atlanta capital. With the exception of rail posts and seats there is no wood in the building according to Mr. Wilcox.

Going After Patrons

Small City Exhibitors May Get Valuable Help from the Experiences of a Live-wire Middleboro, Ky., Showman—Made a House-to-House Canvass to Find Why Patrons Did Not Come—Good Arguments.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., 1404 Starks Bldg., Louisville, Ky. Special Correspondent.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—While it is often thought that all of the good ideas in almost any industry are dug up in the larger cities, the smaller towns often come to the front with a suggestion of great interest. The following very interesting discussion was recently forwarded to the writer, by Charles O. Brown, of the Brown Amusement Company, of Middleboro, Ky. He used it in a house organ:

"We are using something every day—peculiar, but nevertheless true. Last week we had occasion to visit almost every home in the city, thanks to a special little book of tickets, and in many instances we would stop and talk matters over with the lady of the house. It was discovered that many people hadn't been in a picture theater in months, and in some cases in years. We have always believed that there was something seriously wrong with our patronage—now we know it. Of course we took the time to find out why they had neglected such a worthy institution, and nine times out of ten the answer was something like this:

"From the lady of the house:

"'Well, I'd like to go, but I'm so busy I can't get away in the afternoons. Then when night comes I'm just simply tired out and don't feel like going.'

"From the business man:

"'Oh, I haven't got time to fool with the picture show. They're all right, I reckon, for young folks, but the hay for me at night.'

"We haven't yet had time to see the results of the heart-to-heart talks we had with these people. We only wish it were possible to get around every week or two and talk the matter over with them again. We are interested in knowing just what effect our advice will have upon them as well as the box office.

Broad Need of Recreation.

"If there is any one thing in the world that will shorten life it is work without recreation. So many of us make the mistake of putting our whole lives and souls into our business and thinking of absolutely nothing else. We work ten or twelve hours a day and then go home at night and think about it until bed time; then we go to bed and dream about—work. The same old thing over and over every day and night. This not only applies to the business man; just as many women are guilty of the same kind of suicide. Many women are forced into it, though, by the husband who has given his 'business' the position in his heart that his affection for his wife should occupy. His business crowds out all consideration for his family's pleasure.

"This sounds like an arraignment. It isn't—it's a warning. A man who never takes any kind of exercise shortens his stay on earth accordingly. Look about you and see for yourself; almost once a week you will be vividly reminded of it right in your own city. Mind recreation is just as essential as physical recreation.

"Make up your mind right now to give a part of your time every day to mind recreating. The motion picture is the most delightful form of diversion in existence. Bring your family to the theater in the evening and forget your business worries for an hour or so. You will be surprised at the results—your work will be more pleasant the next day because your mind will have been relieved before retiring and you will awake feeling refreshed and energetic. Don't be afraid to bring your children along; we present nothing that is unfit for them to see. On the other hand our photoplays are of great educational value. This fact is proven in that motion pictures are finding their way into churches and schools the country over."

Mr. Brown has undertaken personally to find out what is the matter with his business, and after finding out will endeavor to improve it. Copies of this article were sent to all of the residents of the city, and undoubtedly will set many thinking.

LIVE WIRE IN SMALL TOWN.

Exhibitor A. N. Miles of the Eminence Makes a Success with Features.

Louisville, Ky.—"Eminence makes a very small dot on the map, but there is a real live photoplay house here in 'The Eminence,'" according to an interesting letter received by the Louisville correspondent of the Moving Picture World, from A. N. Miles, of Eminence.

Mr. Miles said: "We are the Paramount house, making Paramount pictures our main attractions. We also run V-L-S-E, World and Pathe Gold Rooster productions occasionally. We have been running features now for nearly a year and find the local demand is for good, high-class, clean comedies. The V-L-S-E production of the "Misleading Lady" and the John Barrymore comedies on the Paramount program have been our biggest successes. Eminence has not been a 'show town' at all, but is gradually waking up to the merits of good photoplays, well put on.

"I am writing this in answer to the request of the Moving Picture World, for news items from the exhibitors, and I hope that you may be able to use it. I read the Moving Picture World from cover to cover each week. The reviews of the productions are an invaluable aid to the exhibitor, and the 'Advertising for Exhibitors' department is just splendid. I've used several hints from it to advantage."

Louisville Business Notes.

Louisville, Ky.—The Owl Film Company reports that it recently secured 3,000 old reels of feature material, most of which were old Warner pictures.

Louisville, Ky.—Henry Peltier, H. B. Strube, Fred Dolle, L. J. Dittmar and several other members of the state and local moving picture organizations are planning to attend the national meeting in Chicago.

Louisville, Ky.—George Maurer, representing the Pathe Film Company, out of the Cincinnati office, was recently in Louisville.

The Eagle Film Company has closed its offices in the Starks building at Louisville. The Southern company recently opened these offices to sell stock in the state.

Louisville, Ky.—The Idlehour Amusement Company of Louisville, with a capital of $1,800,000, has been incorporated to operate picture shows. The incorporators are Floyd Whitehead, Henry T. Kraft and F. L. Wilhoit.

Pineville, Ky.—William Low, president of the Pineville Amusement Company, under orders from the board of directors has issued notice to the effect that the company is dissolving its corporation, and has asked that all claims be presented at once.

Louisville, Ky.—The Alamo theater recently secured the new Goldberg Cartoon pictures, which will be shown on Sundays, Mondays and Tuesdays in the future.

Paducah, Ky.—Under the direction of the management of the Kozy theater, free moving pictures are shown at Wallace Park along with band concerts, boating, bathing, etc.

Trying to Close in July

Cleveland Exhibitors Would Like to Close for One Month, but None Wants to Be the Only One in His Locality to Do So—Different Referendum Cards with Three Propositions Sent Out to All Theaters.

By Hubert Persons, Standard Theater Bldg., Cleveland, Special Correspondent.

CLEVELAND, O.—A score of Cleveland exhibitors have expressed a willingness to close their houses for a period during July to stimulate business later in the summer. Cards for a referendum vote on a summer-closing plan devised by Sam Bullock have been sent out from the headquarters of the Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. Of the first twenty-seven responses, only seven made flat refusals to consider the closing plan. A majority of the twenty favorable replies indicated that the theater owners would close if their near competitors would do likewise.

The referendum cards ask a vote on three plans, one to close for eleven days starting July 5, another for eighteen days and a third for twenty-five days.

The moving picture theaters the owners of which have expressed a willingness to close under either plans, are as follows:

Gordon Park, Colonial, Lincoln, Manhattan, Fulton, Funland, Columbia, Boulevard, Marquis, Randall, Park View, Edison, Delmar, Virginia, Castle, Nixon, Fountain, Globe, Chic and Crescent.

A special committee of three, headed by Sam Bullock, is hard at work to secure replies from every picture theater owner in Cleveland regardless of whether he is affiliated with the league.

Invite World Man to Speak.

Cleveland, O.—W. Stephen Bush, of the Moving Picture World, has been asked to address Cleveland exhibitors on any subject he chooses, if he stops off in Cleveland on his way to the Chicago convention. Members of the Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League unanimously voted to extend an invitation to Mr. Bush to address them, at a meeting held this week.

Baby Fund Got More Than $2,500.

Cleveland, O.—Every regular moving picture house in Cleveland having shown the film "The Babies' Fight for Life," made for the benefit of a fund campaign for the Babies' Dispensary and Hospital, Cleveland exhibitors are now seeking to have the film shown in the big theaters which show pictures in the summer. More than $2,500 was raised for the hospital through the efforts of the Cleveland exhibitors.

Cleveland, O.—The film denunciation of race suicide, "Where Are My Children?" with Tyrone Power in the lead, will be shown for another week at the Opera House. It has been drawing capacity houses and has furnished the subject for many sermons by Cleveland pastors.

CINCINNATI NEWS LETTER.

By Kenneth C. Crain, Cincinnati Correspondent, 610 1st Nat. Bk. Bldg.

"Where Are My Children?" in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, O.—One of the most successful runs of a high-priced attraction yet experienced in Cincinnati was that of the "problem" film, "Where Are My Children?" at the Grand, under the management of I. Libson. With four performances a day, two in the afternoon and two in the evening, 25 cents was charged for all seats at the matinees and 25 and 50 cents in the evening, but full houses prevailed, largely, of course, on account of the wide discussion caused by the unusual subject and frankness of the picture.

I. Libson's Expanding Interests.

Cincinnati, O.—The Grand opera house is running its summer season under the auspices of the Family Theater Amusement Co. and the Lyric, the other leading "legitimate" house, in connection with the Strand Amusement Co., which means that these four big houses, as well as the Walnut, are all under the management of I. Libson. This makes a string of large theaters, all closely grouped in the down town district, quite without parallel in Cincinnati, and probably not equalled in any other city. The arrangement seems to be working out well for all of the houses mentioned, however, as large audiences are handled regularly. Except where special attractions are shown a uniform admission price of 10 cents prevails at all for the features shown.

Dimmers Make Fire Scene More Realistic.

Cincinnati, O.—Manager Joseph Hennegan, of the Lubin, gives more than ordinary attention to little things, one touch illustrated recently in the running of a Vitagraph feature, being the use of special dimmers on all lights in the house during a fire scene. This threw into vivid relief the smoke and flame effects seen in the pictures, and made them extremely realistic. The Lubin has been showing to large houses on its five-cent policy, inaugurated some time ago, and is also maintaining a high quality in its programs.

New Company to Build Theater.

Lima, O.—The De Luxe Theater Co. has been incorporated here by local interests with a capital stock of $10,000, and will probably construct a handsome and up-to-date house. A. Ritzler and others are interested.

Hamilton, O.—The famous Essanay film, Charles Chaplin's "Carmen" Burlesque, was shown at the Jewel recently with pronounced success, the management reporting large crowds to see the production.

ATLANTA NEWS LETTER.

By A. M. Beatty, 43 Copenhill Ave., Atlanta, Special Correspondent.

E. J. Sparks Will Run the Georgian.

ATLANTA GA.—E. J. Sparks, who has been road man and theater manager of the S. A. Lynch interests for many years, well known and well liked all over the southern territory, is now manager of the Georgian theater, Atlanta, in place of Hank Cassidy, who has resigned and is on the road for a feature film service.

Mr. Sparks' experience in the film business is wide and with the excellent stand of the Georgian, it is believed his showing will be gratifying.

J. B. Lively Buys Regent Theater.

Atlanta, Ga.—Joseph B. Lively, an old newspaper man, has purchased the Regent theater, in Peachtree street, one of the neighborhood theaters built last year by Montgomery, and plans to devote his entire time to putting the best to be had in it. He will use Triangle and Paramount service, and will cater especially to children and ladies.

N. I. Ehrlich Takes Charge at Triangle Office.

Atlanta, Ga.—A. C. Bomberg, popular Atlanta film man, has severed his connection with the Triangle company, as their southern manager, and will leave shortly on a vacation. N. I. Ehrlich, manager of the Triangle exchange in New Orleans, will come to Atlanta to take charge of the company's local offices. Mr. Bomberg's plans for the future are undecided.

Censor of Films in Savannah, Ga.

Savannah, Ga.—The library and playground commissioners in Savannah have voted to establish a board of censors in that city. Members of both boards have expressed themselves as being in favor of the establishment of such a board. The recommendation will go to council at its next meeting.

Atlanta Personal Notes.

C. E. Buchanan, Atlanta Metro exchange manager, will spend July at the Wrightsville, N. C., seashore.

John G. Evins, formerly owner of the Vaudette theater left Atlanta this week for Wrightsville Beach, N. C., where he will spend several weeks.

IN IOWA.

By Midwest News Service.

Council Bluffs Theater Burned.

Council Bluffs, Ia.—A mysterious fire gutted the Dohaney theater, which has been undergoing remodeling at Sixth street and Broadway. The loss is about $7,000. Little credence is given the theory of incendiarism as there is no known reason for enmity. Barney Gilinsky of Omaha was having the theater, one of the land-marks of the city, made thoroughly modern.

Iowa Theater Notes.

Dubuque, Ia.—The vaudeville and moving picture shows have been transferred from the Majestic theater to the Union Park theater for the summer.

Prescott, Ia.—Free moving picture shows will be given every other Wednesday afternoon and night by the business men.

Wapello, Ia.—L. C. Wittman has purchased the Gem theater.

Mason City, Ia.—The new picture policy of the Cecil theater under the direction of V. B. Vallean, Inc. was started with "God's Country and the Woman." Two new projectors have been installed.

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—Feature pictures on Sunday, Monday, Friday and Saturday and "Gloria's Romance" on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday is the policy of the Strand theater until the interesting Kleine serial has been finished.

BUFFALO NEWS LETTER.

By Joseph A. McGuire, 5 Lewis Block, Telephone Seneca 568, Buffalo.

Screen Club Elects Officers.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Enthusiasm marked the annual election of officers of the Buffalo Screen Club Monday evening. There was a full attendance at the club rooms of the organization. Refreshments were served to relieve the tension of casting the ballots. The following officers were elected: President, George H. Christoffers, Mutual; vice president, Howard Brink, Paramount; secretary, Al Becker; permanent house committee of one, Harry Marsey; sergeant at arms, Peter Hofmeister; board of governors representing the exhibitors, Ira Mosher, Palace theater, and Charles Johnson, Ellen Terry theater; board of governors representing the exchanges, Charles A. Taylor, Metro; Benn Brandon, Mutual; John M. Sitterly, Popular Feature Film; Jacob Mulhauser, Exclusive.

The installation of officers will take place on Monday, July 10. Messrs. Mack, Mosher and Willats were appointed a committee to arrange for a spread and entertainment for the members on that date. James K. Morgan, Pathe, and Louis Green, Exclusive, were appointed a committee to interview the exhibitors and their employes to join the Screen Club in the preparedness parade in this city.

As soon as the rainy weather is over the club will have an outing at some Lake Erie or Niagara River resort.

Not Guilty on Sunday Charge.

Jamestown, N. Y.—A verdict of not guilty has been returned by the jury in the case of George Blakesley, charged with selling tickets at the Mozart theater, Jamestown, N. Y., in violation of the Sunday labor law and section No. 2143 of the code of criminal procedure. This was the first of the moving picture cases to be tried in that city.

Sattler Theater Up on Foreclosure Sale.

The fireproof Sattler moving picture theater at 512-516 Broadway, Buffalo, will be offered at a foreclosure sale. The building was completed in 1915 and has a seating capacity of 1,200. The house was built at a heavy expense and was modern in every respect. However, it was handicapped by an unsatisfactory location, having to face strong competition from the William street and downtown theaters.

Watching for Unaccompanied Children.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Children's Aid Society of Buffalo has announced that it will proceed vigorously against theater managers who permit children, unaccompanied by parents or guardians, to frequent showhouses. Officers of the society recently procured the conviction of the proprietor of an Elk street moving picture theater. He was fined $50 for admitting children.

Crusade Against Rowdies.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Judge Hager of Buffalo has begun a crusade against rowdies in moving picture and other theaters of this city. One man who was taken out of the Lyric theater on complaint of the management was fined $10. Another rowdy, arrested on complaint of Louis Eisenberg, manager of the Columbia in Genesee street, was fined $10. The court has decided to deal out strenuous punishment on future prisoners who make life miserable for theater patrons.

Frank Leonard With Bluebird.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Frank Leonard, who handled the Mary Page series in this territory for some time, is now representing the Bluebird features.

William Leyser a Mutual Representative.

Buffalo, N. Y.—G. W. Christoffers, manager of the local Mutual, has appointed William Leyser a road representative. Mr. Leyser was formerly manager of the Marlowe moving picture theater of this city. Dave Cohen, manager of the Symphony theater, Binghamton, called on Mr. Christoffers.

J. R. Stevens Road Manager.

Buffalo, N. Y.—J. R. Stevens of Buffalo has been appointed road manager and Mrs. F. Fraleigh lecturer of the "Twilight Sleep" production in this territory. The Popular Film exchange is handling this film on the percentage basis with various theaters at an admission price of twenty-five cents.

J. Feinen at Marlowe Theater Helm.

Buffalo, N. Y.—J. Feinen is the new manager of the Marlowe moving picture theater, 261 Virginia street, Buffalo.

"We have made many improvements at the Marlowe and are advertising it as 'the house of quality,'" said Mr. Feinen. "Our price of admission is ten cents and we are giving our patrons better features than they ever had before. We have also added vaudeville, with amateur performances Tuesday evenings. We are buying the best pictures obtainable and the people are appreciating our programs."

Ball Paid Its Way

Detroit Screen Club's Brilliant Dance Given Last May Proved a Financial Success —Sale of Tickets Meets all Expenses — Get-together Meeting with Chicken, Frog and Fish Dinner Coming Later in Summer.

By Jacob Smith, 503 Free Press Bldg., Detroit, Special Correspondent.

DETROIT, Mich.—The Detroit Screen Club held a meeting Friday evening, June 16, at the Empire theater building, 189 Woodward avenue, for the purpose of finally adjusting finances in connection with the screen ball given in May. Among those present were A. J. Gilligham, Harry Garson, John Kent, George Weeks and M. S. Bailey. The reports of the various exchanges, theaters and others on the sale of tickets to the screen dance together with the number of paid admissions at the door showed that more money had been taken in than was expected. And despite the elaborate functions, both at the Arcadia and the Hotel Pontchartrain, there was enough to pay for everything from the money for tickets sold. After the adjustment of the screen dance affairs, a regular meeting was held and a vote of thanks was tendered to the special committee appointed to arrange the program and to Harry Garson for his efforts in bringing the stars to Detroit for the functions.

Later in the summer there will be a get-together of the members of the club at one of the nearby roadhouses for a chicken, frog and fish dinner.

Grand Circus Theater Asking 25 Cents.

Detroit, Mich.—Art W. Blankmeyer, proprietor of the Grand Circus theater, 301 Woodward avenue, Detroit, is having good success with the new policy recently adopted. Heretofore the Grand Circus has been a ten cent house, playing second or third run on big features. Sometime ago Mr. Blankmeyer decided to try something new, so he put in a big feature and charged 25 cents. He found he had no trouble in packing his theater at that price, so he put in another big feature and charged 25 cents. He has kept up this policy ever since and has decided to retain that policy just as long as big features are available. Early in June he completed a five weeks' run of "The Little Girl Next Door," at 25 cents, and for the weeks of June 18 and 25 he is running the great Vitagraph feature "God's Country and the Woman" at 25 cents. "Just as long as I can get big features I will play them," he told the World correspondent. "As far as the price is concerned, it is just as easy to get a quarter as it is 15 cents or a dime, providing the picture is good. We have found no trouble in getting the increased price; we play to just as many people, if not more, and the 25 cent price enables us to make more money."

Mr. Blankmeyer is leasing theaters throughout Michigan to play the "Little Girl Next Door" feature for one to three days. Anyone desiring to play this feature should address Mr. Blankmeyer at 301 Woodward avenue, Detroit.

Open Meetings for Operators.

Detroit, Mich.—The Detroit Motion Picture Operators Union will hold open meetings every second Wednesday night opposite to their regular meetings at 84 Macomb street, to which all motion picture machine operators in Detroit and vicinity are invited to attend. There will be speakers and light refreshments and an endeavor will be made to impress upon all men the need of organization.

Max Ruben, for five years operator at the Empire theater, Detroit, has resigned. Max is considered one of the best operators in Michigan, if not in the country.

Business Agent Jack Edwards of the local union was recently presented with a bouncing baby boy. Congratulations.

The Rialto Film Officers.

Detroit, Mich.—Two prominent Detroit cigar manufacturers, Messrs. Sam T. Goldberg and Isaac Goldberg of the Lillies Cigar Company, are the financial backers of the Rialto Film Corporation, with headquarters in New York City. The stockholders recently held a meeting in Detroit and elected Isaac Goldberg, president; Jesse Goldberg, vice-president and general manager; and S. T. Goldberg, secretary and treasurer. Mr. S. T. Goldberg told the World correspondent that the first picture to be released would be titled "House of Mirrors" in six reels. The Rialto will release all features on the states right basis.

Rushing Work on the Oakland.

Pontiac, Mich.—Efforts are being made to rush to completion the new Oakland theater in Pontiac, Mich., a short distance from Detroit, so as to open it about the first of October. The Frank Farrington Co. is building the house and he is pushing things as fast as possible. White terra cotta is being used on the front, with brick on the sides and back. A long lobby will lead to the amphitheatre auditorium of the theater proper. Following the design of the Majestic, Detroit, the seats will all be on one floor, which will slope gradually from the orchestra pit up to the booth. Accommodations will be provided for 1,800 people. There will be no steps—runways being used after the most approved idea for theater construction. The foyer and lobby will be large enough to accommodate the entire audience. The Adams style of architecture will be carried out. Considerable attention will be paid to decorations, the number of exits, and everything will mean a better theater. The Oakland is a Detroit enterprise being erected by Detroit capital. The officers are A. I. Marentette, president; James H. O'Donnell and Harry Goldstein, vice-presidents, and Frank C. Cook, secretary and treasurer.

Interesting Personal and Business Notes.

A. J. Gilligham, who recently organized the National Film Co., 189 Woodward avenue, left June 21 on a ten-day business trip to Toronto, Montreal and New York City.

J. C. Ritter, of the Rialto theater, and C. M. Orth, of the proposed new De Luxe theater, have returned from a trip to New York and other eastern cities, their object being to get new ideas in theater construction. The Rialto theater at Mt. Elliott and Gratiot avenues will be one of the finest houses in the middle west, being amphitheater in style and having a large seating capacity. Mr. Orth is not ready to announce when work will start on the De Luxe at Parkview and Kercheval avenues.

Contracts will be awarded by July 1st for the construction of a theater at St. Clair and Mack avenues, for the St. Clair Theater Company. The building will have a terra cotta trimmed front with marble and the lobby will be finished in marble. The theater auditorium will be 45 by 161 feet and will seat 1,400 persons. The cost of the building will be $85,000. The St. Clair will be a motion picture house.

The writer has it upon the very best authority that another moving picture theater will be erected in the Grand Circus park section of Detroit, full announcement of which will appear first in the Moving Picture World.

Rolling Palace Shows

Springfield, Illinois, Exhibitor Has Had Big Pullman Car Fitted Up as Show Palace and Will Travel Over Three States—Cost $8,000 for Fittings—Is an Interesting New Departure in the Film Business.

By Frank H. Madison, 6749 Emerald Ave., Chicago, Special Correspondent.

SPRINGFIELD Ill.—"Rolling Palace Picture Shows" is the inscription on a big white Pullman car which E. B. Jones, 1000 North Fifth street of this city, has remodeled into what is believed to be the first railroad show. He plans to tour Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan, playing three-day stands in small towns.

The car is equipped with 150 opera chairs. It has its own electric light plant which in addition to supplying current for projection and the ventilating system supplies a 4,000 candle power searchlight on top of the car. Plenty of exterior colored lights for display have been provided. The equipment includes a big electric piano. Entrance and egress have been safeguarded by removable steps to the observatory platform of the car.

For service Jones purchased outright 30,000 feet of film and will rent the surplus to other shows.

An outlay of $8,000 was required to fit up the car in accordance with Jones' plans upon which he holds patent rights.

If the first season is successful he may put out another show next year.

It was planned to give the first show in the city free to children from the Home for the Friendless.

Open Sundays in Danville.

Danville, Ill.—Moving picture theaters in Danville opened on Sunday for the first time June 18. The ordinance permitting this became a law despite the fact that the mayor failed to sign it.

Two New Incorporations.

Springfield, Ill.—Certificate of incorporation has been issued to the Universal Film Exchange, Chicago, capital $50,000. Incorporators, John J. Laine, Paul J. Dubois, Edwin H. Collins.

MICHIGAN NEWS LETTER.

Special to Moving Picture World from Midwest News Service.

Local Men Finance Theater.

CENTERVILLE, Mich.—Farmers near Centerville are so eager to see moving pictures that fifty of them have associated with local business men and are erecting a theater seating 500 and costing $10,000.

Want a Blue Law Sunday.

Constantine, Mich.—Churches of Constantine are working to prevent Sunday moving picture shows. Petitions are in circulation asking that the Sabbath performances, recently inaugurated, be discontinued.

Local Cartoon Film Popular.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—Everett True, a cartoon character, is a great favorite with readers of the Kalamazoo Gazette as well as other papers which use the Newspaper Enterprise Association service. When the first showing of the Everett True films was made at the Elite theater they drew 4,800 persons in the afternoon and evening, smashing week-day patronage records.

These films will also be shown at the Lyric theater one day after the Elite has them.

New Theaters and Changes.

Richmond, Mich.—Carl Duncan has sold the Family theater to Mr. Wagner of Sandusky, Mich.

Owosso, Mich.—Film masterpieces are scheduled for the opening of the new Strand theater which is planned for early in July. The screen will be in a palace setting.

Ishpeming, Mich.—The Butler theater, Ed. J. Butler, manager, has jumped from twice-a-week shows to an every-night schedule. Five-cent matinees will be given daily except Saturdays and holidays.

Calumet, Mich.—The remodeled Star theater opened with the Fox feature "The Witch." The house now seats 425.

INDIANA NEWS LETTER.

Special to the Moving Picture World from the Indiana Trade News Service.

Receiver for People's Amusement Co.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—A receiver for the affairs of the People's Amustment Company, owners of the Talbott, Empress and the Victoria theaters of this city, has been appointed by a circuit judge. The suit was brought against the company by Daniel C. Scheible, who alleges that the amusement company has contracted unsecured debts amounting to $50,000.

Jonas Jennings to Get the Royal.

Vevay, Ind.—Clemans Deman, owner of the Royal theater, announced recently that negotiations were under way for the sale of the theater to Jonas Jennings, veteran theater man of Cincinnati. It was said that the deal was to all intents and purposes closed. The consideration was not announced.

Orpheum's Summer Arrangements.

Evansville, Ind.—With the ventilating system and cooling devices recently installed in perfect operation the Orpheum, one of Evansville's "big theaters," is ready for the summer run.

Lincoln Theater Sold.

Elkhart, Ind.—O. M. Snellen of Jefferson, O., recently purchased the Lincoln theater in South Main street of this city. Snellen announced a change in the program but did not say what service would be featured, since he has not yet closed. The Lincoln is one of the better houses of Elkhart.

Back to the Old Home Town.

Sullivan, Ind.—Clarence Hill, formerly one of the "boys about town," returned to take over the management of the Sherman theater beautiful. Love of the old home town brought Hill back to Sullivan, he says, after he had been away several years playing the motion picture game in various parts of the country.

NEW ST. LOUIS THEATER.

The Ivory Theater Opens With Smashing Big Program.

By A. H. Giebler, 236 Vanole Bldg., St. Louis, Mo., Special Correspondent.

ST LOUIS, Mo.—The Ivory theater, which has just opened its doors to the public at 7712 Ivory street, gave a smashing big program of pictures on opening night, and had an excellent orchestra to accompany the pictures. The Ivory is a new house operated under the management of the Ivory Amusement Company, with E. J. Paule at the head of the enterprise. Mr. Paule was formerly a councilman of St. Louis, and on opening day the lobby of the theater was filled to overflowing with floral offerings from his many friends and business associates.

The Ivory is a model and up-to-date theater in every respect. The seating capacity is 850 and the two new Power's 6-A machines and other furnishings of the house are of the most modern and approved designs. The Ivory has been playing to good audiences ever since opening day, and is a very attractive addition to the neighborhood.

Chaplin Films Only at Police Benefit.

St. Louis, Mo.—Moving pictures were again one of the most prominent features of the annual Police benefit which was held at Mannion's park beginning June 18, to last several days. Besides the other attractions, which included foot races, ball games, drilling contests and other athletic maneuvers, a number of Chaplin films were booked for the entertainment, and were shown in the evening at the theater in the park, with the accompaniment of a good orchestra. A cabaret performance after the picture show wound up the day's frolic.

The American Closes.

St. Louis, Mo.—The American theater, which has been showing first run Triangle pictures in St. Louis for several months, has closed for the summer season, and the program has been transferred to the Columbia, a leading vaudeville house during the theatrical season, at 6th and St. Charles street. The change has probably been made on account of the better location of the Columbia to the busy retail district. Both the American and the Columbia are under the control of the same theatrical enterprise.

Local Mutual Drops Accessories.

St. Louis, Mo.—The local branch of the Mutual Film Corporation, under the management of Fred A. Kellar, had decided to drop the carrying of motion picture theater supplies and accessories, and devote all its time and endeavors to the placing of Mutual pictures. Mr. Kellar expresses himself as being well pleased with the arrangement, as it will give the opportunity of specializing on one line of work instead of trying to handle several lines, and he expects to show a radical increase of business under this stystem.

A Happy Airdome Man.

Sam Lears, of the Lears Theater Supply Co., says that he has done the greatest airdome business this season than ever before since the beginning of the industry, and this in spite of the remarkably unfavorable weather for outdoor shows.

Local Business Notes.

George W. Fuller, manager of the local World Film exchange, started an innovation in the Sunday Globe Democrat of June 18, when he headed the list of theaters advertising under the head of "Movie Directory," with a comprehensive list of World Film features to be seen in St. Louis theaters for that week. The name of each theater showing World Film features was given, with the dates and names of the features to be seen at that house. The advertisement was very pleasing and attractive.

The Princess theater, on Grand and Olive, is to be the home of a convention, beginning June 22, to be held by the International Bible Students Association,

KANSAS CITY NOTES.

New Theaters and Changes in Kansas.

Hutchinson, Kans.—Fred Savage, who has three theaters, the Rex, the Iris and the De Luxe, is about to close the Rex for remodeling; he will give it 600 seats, and equip the stage to show vaudeville occasionally. The city has now no vaudeville facilities.

Pleasanton, Kans.—W. H. Cummins, proprietor of the Star theater, will open a new house soon, with the V-L-S-E "Rosary." The Kansas City office has sent letters to a list furnished by him, telling of the theater, of Mr. Cummins' enterprising activity, and of the picture.

Kansas City, Kans.—H. S. Balmer has leased the Idle Hour, Seventh street and Quindaro Boulevard, from W. S. Brown, and will open it with Metro. Mr. and Mrs. Balmer live in the neighborhood, have never been in the picture business—but believe they know what they and their neighbors want in the way of entertainment.

Concordia, Kans.—The Iris, Concordia's newest and finest moving picture theater, has been formally opened. George Beach is manager.

New Theaters and Changes in Missouri.

Springfield, Mo.—The Gruhel's Bros. new house here has been delayed by a strike of laborers on the construction. The steel received was non-union, and local unions insisted on reordering before they would work.

St. Joseph, Mo.—The wife of Nate Block, president of the Center Amusement Co., owning the Orpheum and the Crystal, died recently.

Webb City, Mo.—Manager Wineherd of the Nystic, Webb City, Mo., is having a moving picture theater fitted for him at Joplin, to open about September 1.

Chillicothe, Mo.—A new theater is being built here for James Boyle, operator of the Star; it will seat 850, and be opened August 1, as the Empire.

Wheeling, Mo.—This town of 300 population now has a moving picture show; it is operated by Smiley & Lowe.

Chillicothe, Mo.—J. M. Leinger has sold the Trio.

Bucklin, Mo.—C. S. Hess has sold the Iris to H. J. Hamil.

Sumner, Mo.—Strobaugh & Barnett have opened a new show here.

Hale, Mo.—Lester & Barr have opened a show in the opera house. They are giving high class features to this town of 500.

Columbia, Mo.—The Hall theater, capacity 1,300, modern, built for $60,000, will be opened in July. H. G. Woods, formerly manager of the Star, will handle it.

Kirksville, Mo.—The Colonial theater will be closed soon, and the equipment will be sold. This will leave three theaters in Kirksville; two of them, the Star and the Princess, had made arrangements with V. A. Klingberg, manager of the Colonial, for the elimination of that excessive competition.

Joplin, Mo.—The Empress theater will reopen July 1, with pictures and road show entertainments. The theater has been leased by J. W. Holmes, who will now make his residence in Joplin. He probably will get high class musical attractions, which he is familiar with—he owned the Boston Opera Company, playing at $1 and $2, for several years. The theater building is now being remodeled and decorated.

Wichita Sabbath Contest

Kansas Exhibitors Lose First Skirmish for Open Sunday Shows—Judge Wilson Denies Injunction to Keep City Commissioners and Police From Enforcing Regulation—Real Fight to Come Later.

Special to Moving Picture World from Kansas City News Service.

WICHITA, Kan.—The exhibitors of Kansas lost their first rounds in the fight for Sunday opening. The city commissioners rejected, June 15, their petition for the repeal of the Sunday closing ordinance. On June 17 the hearing was had before Judge Thomas C. Wilson, of their application for an injunction. They sought to restrain the city commissioners and the police from enforcing the ordinance, Judge Wilson ruled that the ordinance was legal, and refused the order. Attorneys representing the exhibitors argued that the ordinance was plainly class legislation, and moreover that it was plainly illegal because it was too broad. Judge Wilson admitted the defect of the ordinance that it was too broad, but held that the courts probably would not construe it to cover all the ground it pretended to cover, but would construe it to do as the commissioner really intended—prevent the showing of moving pictures on Sunday.

The exhibitors have not really begun to fight yet. They had not, in fact, been thoroughly in harmony on the seeking of the injunction. And now they will probably turn to some other recourse, and get together in a concerted effort to overthrow the measure.

AS CITIZEN SOLDIERS.

Film Men Going to the Front—Like Scenes All Over Land.

Kansas City, Mo.—Richard Robertson, manager of the World office at Kansas City, is thanking his lucky stars for his policy of training understudies for every job in the office. There are substitutes available for every job "down to the manager," as he says. And they certainly did come in handy when the "call to arms" sounded in Kansas City June 19. For three men from the World exchange were summoned! J. J. Crandall, assistant shipper, is a member of the signal corps, and was the first called. Mr. Robertson, loyal to his country, surrendered Crandall without a murmur. Half an hour later Mr. Robertson lost another of his men. Louis Klar, who is lieutenant in the Battery B. Scarcely had his footsteps died away, when another call struck closer home. For it demanded Howard Robertson, head shipper, who is the manager's brother, and who is a high private in Battery C, of Independence, Mo.

The war cry hit no other office so hard. From the Mutual there had gone the previous Saturday Don Hannaford, who went to the border to reenlist in the company in which he had previously seen service. Among others who have served Uncle Sam is C. H. McCann of the Metro office, who served his time as engineer in the navy and is possibly to be classed as a naval reserve.

C. S. Edwards is perhaps the luckiest man with reference to army service, under the circumstances of his heavy duties as manager of the Pathe exchange. Mr. Edwards has just finished his service in the militia. He is not crowing over the fact but anyway it obviates the necessity of making hasty arrangements to get away.

Ruth Wright Buys Cosy Theater.

Topeka, Kans.—Lew Nathanson, one of the best known exhibitors in the state, has sold his Cozy theater to Miss Ruth Wright, who is quite as widely known as Mr. Nathanson. Miss Wright has the good fortune to be one of the loveliest women in the state, and her photograph won her the title of most beautiful from a committee of the Panama Exposition. She has been cashier of the Cozy several years. Mr. Nathanson is devoting his time to submitting features to the censors, representing exchanges, including the Triangle and the Universal.

Little Mary Irene McCann New Arrival.

Kansas City, Mo.—C. H. McCann of the Metro office has received an addition to his family, a girl named Mary Irene, whose brother says she must train as a nurse for the war, or become a moving picture actress, he is not particular which.

W. S. O'Keefe Is Kleine Office Manager.

Kansas City, Mo.—W. S. O'Keefe, formerly with the Universal at Kansas City is now office manager for the George Kleine headquarters at Kansas City.

L. B. Douglas Will Steer Wichita Mutual.

Wichita, Kans.—Law is a fine study to sharpen the wits, and it also gives excellent equipment for use in any sort of business. This is the theory of L. B. Douglas, who recently graduated at the Kansas City School of Law. Immediately afterwards he went to Wichita to take charge of the Mutual branch there.

Geo. F. Perry Goes to Metro.

Kansas City, Mo.—Geo. F. Perry, formerly of St. Joseph, Mo., has been added to the traveling force of Metro. He will visit Missouri exhibitors.

R. G. Abbey Boosting V-L-S-E Superfeatures.

Kansas City, Mo.—R. G. Abbey, for several years traveling with Paramount, is now specializing in Kansas City territory with the super-features of the V-L-S-E.

At International Local Offices.

Kansas City, Mo.—Chas. E. Raymond, formerly with the Universal at Kansas City, is working in the city, and F. L. Welch, formerly manager of the Subway theater, is traveling the territory, for the International Film Service, Inc. Booking offices are on Tenth street near Main; at present the shipping is done for the Kansas City district from the St. Louis office.

Frank Owens Now With Mutual.

Kansas City, Mo.—Frank S. Owens, for the past year with the Kansas City Feature Film Co., is now traveling Kansas and Missouri for the Mutual.

Two New Kansas City Airdomes.

W. B. Tuteur, proprietor of the Empire, Fifteenth and Fremont; Troost, Fifteenth and Troost, and New Palace, Fifteenth and Cherry, Kansas City, Mo., has added another to this string of Fifteenth street theaters. He has built and put into service an airdome at Fifteenth and Forest, a block from his Troost theater. He calls it the "Kuloff," and it seats 1,500.

Joe Silverman has built an open air theater across the street from his Emerald, Thirty-sixth street and Prospect avenue, Kansas City, Mo. He has three machines in the Emerald, and is going to use one of them in the open air. This summer theater will accommodate 1,000 persons, with bench seats. The admission will be as for the Emerald, 10 cents, and will run exactly as the theater, which will be closed except during inclement weather.

Do Screen Ads Pay?

New Orleans Exhibitors in Several Instances Are Using a Good Deal of Animated Advertising Matter on Their Screens—Some Notable Exceptions—Local Film Men Are Beginning to Wonder Whether It Pays.

By George M. Cheney, New Orleans Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

NEW ORLEANS.—Not so many moons ago an exhibitor who secured a "still" advertisement from every butcher, baker and candlestick maker in his immediate neighborhood—not to mention the garage man—patted himself on the back and thought himself a pretty wise guy to discover a profitable by-product in his business. But when busy people walked out on him—couldn't stand a nightly repetition of junky, undignified advertising—he saw his mistake. Then along came animated advertising which in New Orleans replaced to a very large extent the other kind. Now there has been discovered a very serious menace in this very animated advertising.

When it first came out, it was a novelty, and it is yet, when an exhibitor conducts it properly. But in New Orleans there are exhibitors who are running it into the ground as they did the still slides. The average advertising film lasts from ten to twenty minutes, and, when repeated night after night at certain showhouses, becomes exceedingly boresome to an audience used to a daily change of program.

One of the biggest exhibitors in New Orleans in opening a new playhouse announced his screen would be free from all advertising matter. He kept it just that way, for a while, but the temptation was too strong for him. New he runs advertising, and it is noted that he was much better off before he began. The question of long advertising films naturally leads to the arguments for shorter programs. In this connection it is noted that Josiah Pearce and Sons, veteran motion picture magnates, make it an invariable rule to show but one film—on rare occasions, one other shorter film, at each of their New Orleans playhouses. The Pearces also keep their screens entirely free from advertising of any kind. Only on rare occasions, when a big civic movement is on, is this rule broken. And everybody down South know that the Pearces are the men who have been among the most successful exhibitors of the country.

Buys People's Theater Here.

New Orleans, La.—W. R. Cushman, formerly of Mobile, Ala., where he operated the Star theater, has purchased the People's theater, here, and will open it shortly, after remodelling.

New Southern Amusement Company.

Lake Charles, La.—Capitalized at $100,000, the Southern Amusement Company has been incorporated here by Miller and Wachsen, owners of three moving picture theaters recently purchased from the Pearces at New Orleans, and J. J. DePreslin, owner of the Princess theater. The company will control four theaters in Lake Charles, the Bijou Dream, Dreamland, Arcade and Princess.

K. A. Bugbee Finds Prosperity.

New Orleans, La.—"I've never seen better indications for a prosperous season," said K. A. Bugbee, manager of the New Orleans Metro office, just returned from a trip over Louisiana and the Delta. "The farmers report that there will be a bumper crop in the Fall and this means big things for the motion picture men in the territory, who are dependent upon the crops for their very existence. Money is circulating more freely than I've ever seen it circulate. If present signs are any sort of indication, this section of the South will see good times this winter."

Ventilating Co. Opens Offices Here.

New Orleans, La.—In charge of Sam Cohn, the Metropolitan Ventilating and Cooling Company has opened an office in New Orleans, in the Nola Building, 407 Carondelet street. This company is handling the well-known Typhoon systems, and Mr. Cohn has placed a number of Typhoons in theaters in New Orleans and Mississippi. The office is only a few weeks old, but has become one of the most hustling supply houses in the Crescent City.

"Where Are My Children?" Shown Privately.

New Orleans, La.—In order that its mission could be better understood, a private review of the Universal film "Where Are My Children?" was arranged in advance of its public showing in New Orleans by Maurice F. Barr, publicity manager for the picture. These prominent Orleanians attended the showing: presidents of cooperative mother's clubs, Dr. C. J. Wilkins, superintendent of Charity Hospital; Miss Mary C. Gillespie, president of the state nurses' organization; Dr. L. R. Montz, director of the New Orleans College of Midwifery; the staff of the Southern Medical Journal; and a number of Protestant ministers, rabbis and priests. The picture, at the Dreamworld theater for a month, has had phenomenal patronage the first week of its showing.

Resolutions of Condolence to J. C. Ragland.

The Associated Film Managers of New Orleans held a special meeting last week when they were advised of the death of Emmett Ragland, father of J. C. Ragland of the George Kleine office in the Nola Building. Resolutions of condolence were passed and ordered sent to Mr. Ragland.

Leo Salkin Handling "Gloria."

New Orleans, La.—Leo Salkin is the new traveling representative for the George Kleine offices. Mr. Salkin succeeds Elmer Smith in handling "Gloria's Romance," out of New Orleans. Mr. Salkin formerly was special representative for George Kleine out of the New York office.

New Dryades Street Theater.

New Orleans, La.—Mesa and Weitkam will be owners of a large suburban house in Dryades street, near Melpomene, ground for which was broken a week ago. This new house will seat at least 1,000 persons. It is located in an exceedingly prosperous and populous neighborhood.

Renfax Films Seen Here.

New Orleans, La.—Renfax "talking moving pictures" were introduced to New Orleans for the first time Sunday night, June 18, at the Triangle theater, in connection with the regular Triangle and Keystone program. The innovation received flattering press comment.

Notes from Film Row.

Jackson, Miss.—J. C. Landen, owner of the Istrione theater, Jackson, Miss., was a New Orleans visitor this week.

New Orleans, La.—John Woods, of the Strand theater, Meridian, Miss., and E. W. Illing, of the Airdome theater, Ocean Springs, were on the Row this week a'purchasing.

Meridian, Miss.—Sol M. Sugarman, owner of the Princess theater, Meridian, Miss., paid one of his periodical visits to New Orleans exchange managers this week.

New Orleans, La.—Arthur Lucas, superintendent of exchanges for the Triangle, is in temporary charge of New Orleans headquarters, Nat Ehrlich having been temporarily transferred to the Atlanta office of Triangle.

New Orleans, La.—R. King Evans, manager of the V-L-S-E exchange, was host to a number of newspapermen and exchange managers at the Portola theater, Friday night the 16th, at 11 0'clock, when he ran off the Southern premiere of "Salvation Joan."

New Orleans, La.—Two prints of Charlie Chaplin are booked solidly until September 17, S. T. Stephens, manager of Mutual, reported to the World correspondent this week. Charlie Chaplin specials are going so big in this territory that the New Orleans office of Mutual has been forced to increase its office force in all departments.

New Orleans, La.—J. Eugene Pearce, of Josiah Pearce and Sons, is absent from the city on another little yachting party. This time he has with him Arthur Lucas, superintendent of exchanges for the Triangle Film, as the guest of honor. There are also a few New Orleans exchange managers on board.

New Orleans, La.—George J. Glover has been awarded the contract for the erection of the Globe theater, Herman Fichtenberg's newest theater in Canal street.

NOTES FROM MINNEAPOLIS.

Hobart Hanley Visits Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Hobart Hanley the Laemmle star was a recent visitor in this city and during his short stay here appeared at many of the theaters to permit the screen fans to see the man they had watched in so many film stories in the flesh. He was the guest of Fred S. Meyer, local manager for Laemmle Film Service.

Supreme Feature Gets "Civilization."

Minneapolis, Minn.—The state rights for Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin and Iowa for the Thomas Ince film, "Civilization," have been procured by the Supreme Feature Film Company here, according to word received from Harry Rathner, representative of the Supreme who is in New York City. It is thought the first showing of the film in the Northwest will be in Minneapolis some time next month.

Bans "The Evil Thereof"

Minneapolis Mayor, With Advice of His Committee, Several of Whom Admit That They Never Attend Picture Shows, Have Forbidden a Paramount Film in City—Local Exhibitors Are Dissatisfied.

By Perry S. Williams, Special Correspondent, Address Minneapolis Tribune.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—The Paramount film, "The Evil Thereof," has fallen under the ban of the Minneapolis board of censors who have been backed up in their objections by an official edict from Mayor Wallace M. Nye. The film was to have been put on at the New Garrick here, and since, the Paramount management assert, no other film put out by this service ever has been ruled off the screens by any local or national censorship the private showing before the mayor's committee was given with all the confidence of being merely preliminary to a clean bill of health.

The plot of the play dealing with the experiences of Marie a country girl, who becomes a manicurist in the city and falls victim to a wealthy clubman, who is one of her customers, is familiar enough to those who follow the moving picture news carefully. However, the censors here seemed to see in it much that did not actually take place in the picture but which they felt was sufficiently intimated to make its showing undesirable.

The censors and the Mayor in backing up their findings with an official proclamation barring the film from Minneapolis motion picture houses, took a decided stand against the plot which they held to be built around something immoral without the saving grace of being a warning or necessary in any way.

The entire fabric of the play was torn down by the censors as dealing with a demoralizing subject. According to the verdict the film "is absolutely unfit for presentation before the Minneapolis public."

Many of the picture men of the city are becoming disturbed over the frequent barring of films here which have been passed by similar censorship boards in other cities. It is claimed that several members of the Minneapolis board recently admitted that neither they nor their families ever attended picture shows. Such men the theater owners assert, are absolutely unfit to judge between a good film and bad. They take the stand also that if the picture shows must be submitted to the censors' board, the plays which come to the regular theaters should be passed on similarly before they are allowed to be given to the public of the city.

NEW LOCHREN FILM COMPANY.

Has a Million Capitalization—Officers of the Corporation.

Minneapolis Minn.—Further proof of the big strides the film business is making in this part of the country is evidenced in a remarkable manner by the formation of the Lochren Film Corporation incorporated for $1,000,000, which is the outgrown Northwest Weekly. The Weekly entered the moving picture field about a year ago, a small company headed by William Lochren, who also is president of the new company. Other officers of the corporation are E. F. Seavolt, vice-president; W. P. Mason, treasurer; S. B. Houck, secretary, and E. C. Davies, general manager. F. H. Camp will assist Mr. Davies and J. E. Stanley has been made head camera man. Seavolt, who was one of the earliest takers of moving pictures in the Northwest, will have direct charge of the laboratory work.

The new company occupies the entire seventh floor of the new Film Exchange block—and recently installed new equipment from one end of the establishment to the other. The corporation also will handle large releases and announces the acquisition of state rights in five states for "The Yellow Menace."

READY FOR THE CONVENTION.

Hope to Secure a Special Car for Twin Cities—Some Who are Going.

Minneapolis, Minn.—In order to make a strong showing for the Northwest should it be found advisable to advance the name of Thomas Furniss of Duluth for president of the National Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America everything possible is being done by the film men of the Twin Cities to have a large attendance from here at the Chicago convention of the organization July 10 to 18. It is hoped enough men can be induced to go to enable the managers of the delegation to retain a special car. Those who already have signified their intention of attending the gathering are T. J. Hamlin, G. M. Tyler, Al Steffes, H. H. Green, Otto Stelzner and H. C. Endress of Minneapolis, J. L. Johnston, J. G. Gilosky, Henry Breilein and Charles Campbell of St. Paul and Mr. Furniss.

New Theater in Sanborn.

Sanborn, Minn.—It became known here that W. E. Thielvoldt of Jordan, Minn., will construct a new moving picture house when the transfer of the site was made public.

Work Begun on the New Rex.

Currie, Minn.—Work has been begun here on a new picture house. It will be known as the Rex Theater.

New Waltham Home Ready.

Waltham, Minn.—A new moving picture theater will be opened here soon, according to an announcement made by E. E. Dennis, who will be in charge of the house.

Martin Sorenson Has Charge of New House.

Willman, Minn.—The new theater opened in this city recently is under the management of Martin Sorenson, already a well established exhibitor of this state. Mr. Sorenson will continue his interest in his theater at Milaca, Minn., where his daughter will be in control.

Choose Site for New House in Helena.

Helena, Mont.—The site for the new huge moving picture and vaudeville theater which is to be constructed in this city has been selected although no definite announcements have been made. Seating capacity for 1,200 will be installed and a large stage will be part of the equipment of the place. It is rumored that Twin City capital is floating the venture.

Other New Picture Theaters.

Milton, N. D.—A new moving picture house is being constructed in this town. C. W. Plain is behind the venture.

Esmond, N. D.—It is probable that this town will have an addition to its moving picture facilities in a short time. J. P. Kincaid is the man who has been seriously considering coming into the field here and it is thought he will construct a new theater.

Vernon Center, Minn.—This place is to have a new photoplay theater soon. Announcement of a plan to open up a house here has been made by James Neal.

Winner, S. D.—A new theater is to be erected here soon by J. O. Lakin and W. R. Fulwilder. The men have formed a partnership under the agreements of which their moving picture ventures will be made.

Judge Scores Censors

San Francisco Board of Censorship Had Manager of the Edison Theater and Press Agent of "Twilight Sleep" Arrested—Police Judge Dismissed the Case After View of the Film, With Rebuke to the Board.

By T. A. Church, 1507 North St., Berkeley, Calif., Special Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—The first signs of activity that have been shown by the Moving Picture Board of Censorship in many months were exhibited recently when the "Twilight Sleep" film was booked for the Edison theater on Powell street, near Market. This film had been shown at special performances for women only at the Market Street theater for a week, but when it was booked by the management of the Edison theater for men exclusively Police Corporal Peter Peshon called a halt. As the plans for exhibiting the film did not stop, other members of the Board of Censors were consulted and it was finally decided to allow one performance to see the class of patrons it attracted. Although the exhibition was scheduled for a late hour, following the regular evening shows, the street was packed when the time arrived and even the street car service was stopped. Two ticket sellers were employed and within nine minutes the house was sold out. Two exhibitions were given the opening evening and on the three following evenings, despite the orders of the Board of Censors, and then warrents were secured for the arrest of H. J. Gosliner, manager of the theater, and Miss Maizie Robison, press agent for the film.

Police Count Film Educational.

When the case came up before Police Judge John J. Sullivan he expressed a desire to see the production and asked that Police Judge T. I. Fitzpatrick also be allowed to view it. A special showing of the film was made in the exhibiting room of the Golden Gate exchange and following this the Judge dismissed the case with a stinging rebuke to the Board of Censorship. In discussing the film he said: "This film can be ranked as an educational film. There is nothing about it indecent, suggestive or immoral. People who want to know the conditions of the Freiberg 'twilight sleep' have a right to know them. It interests great numbers of men and women, parents and prospective parents. As to the merits of the method, that is not for this court to determine. We are concerned only with the ordinance regulating moving pictures, and there is certainly nothing in this film that brings the ordinance into operation." In response to a question by the district attorney as to whether it could be shown to mixed audiences under his decision, the Judge replied that that was a matter for the judgment of the manager of the moving picture house. Manager H. J. Gosliner of the Edison theater decided, however, not to take advantage of this feature of the Court's ruling and will show the production either only to men or only to women at his house.

The California rights to this production have since been taken over by Mr. Gosliner and Henry Hughes and a number of bookings have already been arranged in the San Francisco Bay territory. M. Zar and Mr. Hughes will handle the film in this field and will start out on the road at an early date.

Sun Photo-Play Company Moves.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Sun Photo-Play Company, Inc., which has been occupying large quarters for several months in an office building at Sixth and Market streets, has moved to Film row and is now sharing space at 100 Golden Gate avenue with the Picture Playhouse company and the Peerless Film. The change was made for the purpose of getting in closer touch with exhibitors than was possible in the former location.

Fine Commercial Plant Opened.

San Francisco, Cal.—Ralph Radnor Earle, for five years the Pathe news representative on the Pacific Coast, with a territory covering nine states, has settled permanently in this city and has just opened a large commercial developing and printing plant at 451 Eddy street, in the film exchange district. In addition to doing commercial work Mr. Earle is engaging in news work and expects to do considerable in this line. The recently opened plant, which consists of sixteen rooms, has been fitted up along original lines and is proving very sucessful in its operation. Here is installed a complete printing plant for the setting up of titles and the title department, which is in charge of Guy W. McElwain, is being strongly featured. A projection room has been installed, a work room fitted up and within a short time a reception and meeting room for camera men will be completed. Mr. Earle and his charming wife made the trip into the Yosemite valley this year with the automobile making the first trip into that wonderland for the season and secured some wonderful show pictures.

World Film Manager Visits Exhibitors.

San Francisco, Cal.—M. E. Cory, manager of the local branch of the World Film, recently made a trip along the Coast territory as far south as Kings City and secured contracts in practically every city in which World Film service had not been placed before. He is planning to cover the entire territory to make the personal acquaintance of exhibitors and to make a study of their particular needs and problems. Division Manager W. W. Drum left a short time ago to visit the branch at Salt Lake City.

Change Name of Poster Exchange.

San Francisco, Cal.—Lichtenstein & Morris, who recently took over the poster exchange of Davis Bros. on Eddy street, have changed the name of the concern to that of the Western Poster Exchange. Efforts are now being made to secure a suitable location on Film Row.

Exchange Men Visit Southland.

San Francisco, Cal.—Marion H. Kohn of the Apex Feature Service left recently on an automobile trip to Los Angeles and will visit exhibitors while on the way. Upon his return his partner, Morris Levison, will leave for Los Angeles and San Diego, where he will spend his vacation.

New Company Being Organized.

San Francisco, Cal.—J. L. Warner, formerly manager of the local interests of the New Film Corporation, which have been taken over by the Nat A. Magner Company, is organizing the J. L. Warner Film Attractions Company and is planning to handle one release a month.

Machine Business Active.

San Francisco, Cal.—Walter A. Preddey, who conducts a large machine and supply business at 158 Eddy street, has been quite busy in the machine department since the commencement of summer. Two Powers machines have been installed in the Star theater at Pinole, Cal., one has been sold to R. E. Creque of Shasta Retreat, while still another Powers has been disposed of to Mr. Killingsworth of St. Helena.

T. & D. Books "Where Are My Children?"

San Francisco, Cal.—The Universal production, "Where Are My Children?" has proved to be such an attraction at the Tivoli that the management of the Turner & Dahnken circuit has booked it for all of its houses. The film has been shown for two weeks at the local house and former records for attendance have been shattered.

Bosworth Studio for San Mateo.

San Mateo, Cal.—The lure of ideal scenic and climatic conditions has at last been harkened to and the announcement is made that Hobert Bosworth has closed a contract for the erection of a moving picture studio here. Local people are interested in the project in connection with Mr. Bosworth and the use of the corporation yard will be given without charge. It is the plan to commence work in September and the first production to receive attention will be that of "The Gray Dawn," Stewart Edward White's story of San Francisco. In speaking of the new studio, Mr. Bosworth recently said: "I consider San Mateo and this part of the state just as good as Los Angeles, and we expect to have less trouble here with the authorities. The scenic conditions are surely ideal and the climatic conditions are also desirable.

Superior California News Briefs.

Sacramento, Cal.—Mr. Nathan has disposed of his interests in the Actograph theater to his former partner, Mr. Brown, and has left for New York.

Fowler, Cal.—The Sunset airdome has been opened by H. H. Nutting of the Sunset theater and the outlook is for a good summer season. The airdome has been enlarged this year and now has a seating capacity of 350. A new plaster screen thirteen and a half feet by eighteen feet in size has been installed and a late model Edison machine added to the projection equipment.

Redding, Cal.—A theater to cost $25,000 is to be erected here during the summer by M. Lonardini, owner of the Paragon block on California street.

Denver Screen Club Admits Bankers

Some Members Consider Change in By-Laws a Doubtful Expedient—Move Will Give Political Prestige to Organization.

By E. C. Day, Denver Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

DENVER, Colo.—New strength and greater prestige was added to the Rocky Mountain Screen Club this week when the members voted to admit as members one hundred of the wealthiest, most prominent and most influential Colorado business men. The action was taken at a meeting following the weekly luncheon held at the Albany hotel.

The move was not sanctioned without opposition, or rather an expression of apprehension, by some members of the club. There could be no objection to the proposed new members personally because they represent the best in the community. Those who hesitated to jump at the opportunity expressed only a fear that by admitting persons not directly associated with the moving picture industry the objects of the organization might be defeated. There was danger, they believed, that the Screen club might be unconsciously changed into a purely social organization with interest divided to such an extent as to rob the film industry of the good that an exclusive moving picture organization would do it.

However, it was cited that the men whom it was proposed be admitted to membership would lend distinction, dignity and prestige to the club through their names alone; that their influence would be sufficient to get any legislation that might be beneficial to the moving picture industry; and that their association with the business could but elevate its standard.

This viewpoint removed the apprehension of the doubtful ones and it was unanimously agreed that the so-called outsiders be taken in as members. The number for the present will be limited to 100, which insures the exchange men and exhibitors of retaining control of the club.

The applications of the new members will be acted on at the next meeting of the club. Several of the city's leading bankers and merchant princes will be included in the first list.

Social Gathering of Exchange Men.

Denver, Colo.—Managers of the leading local film exchanges held a get-together luncheon at the Edelweiss cafe last week, at which J. J. Unger, special representative of the Metro company, was the honored guest. The affair was strictly a social one and shop was forgotten for the moment. Preliminary plans were discussed for the holding of a picnic by the exchange managers and their wives. No definite date was decided upon but it probably will take place some time in July. Those among the managers who have motor cars agreed to donate their autos to take the families of the managers who are motorless and the party probably will drive to some nearby resort in the mountains for a Sunday's outing.

Those who attended the luncheon are: Milton H. Cohn, Paramount; Ward E. Scott, Mutual; W. S. Rand, Triangle; J. J. Unger, Metro; Eddie Dowling, Metro; Frank Harris, V. L. S. E.; E. H. Goldstein, Universal; J. S. Applegate, Pathe; W. T. Henry, General; Denham Palmer, World; Albert W. Eden, Fox, and W. T. Binford, Metro.

W. P. Moran Weds.

Denver, Colo.—W. P. Moran, who within the last month has been manager of the Salt Lake Mutual office, the Denver Universal office and now the Salt Lake Kleine office, slipped one over on his friends when he claimed Miss Nellie Fishbach for his bride and quietly left town for the West without any of his many friends being any the wiser.

Max M. Kravetz Engaged.

Denver, Colo.—The other Denver couple who figure in a real romance of "Reel Life" are Max M. Kravetz, manager of the Capitol Film Exchange, and Miss Rina Barnett, stenographer in the office of the General Film. Their marriage has not taken place but their engagement was announced this week. News of the coming wedding became known when the bride-to-be gave up her position in the General Exchange to prepare for the event.

At the Universal Office.

Denver, Colo.—E. H. Goldstein, general manager of exchanges for the Universal Film Company, announces two important appointments this week.

One was the naming of F. C. Langtry as manager of the local Universal exchange and the other the selection of W. A. Calkins as manager of the Bluebird office in this city.

Langtry, until assuming his new duties, was road man for the Metro in this territory. It was with the Universal that Mr. Langtry first entered the moving picture business in New York. Later he was associated with the General Film in the Metropolis and afterward joined the Metro forces.

"Calks," the new Bluebird manager, has been with Universal for years. In recent months he has been the company's road man in the Denver territory.

Our Notorious Censors

Portland, Oregon, Pre-Publicity Inspectors Famous to the Four Corners of the Map, Says D. J. Chatkin, of Chicago—Portland's Beauty and Resources Are Admired—Its Censorship Is Deplored by the Whole Industry.

By Abraham Nelson, 601 Journal Bldg., Portland, Ore., Special Correspondent.

PORTLAND, Ore.—D. J. Chatkin, vice-president of the United Film Service Corporation, passed through Portland from San Francisco, and when interviewed on the attitude of Eastern film manufacturers and distributors on the censorship situation in Portland, stated as follows:

"I find conditions west of Chicago excellent and exhibitors are getting their share of the business. I am surprised, however, to find the vice-like grip that unreasonable censorship has on the industry in your city. In my opinion censorship, the way it is tolerated here, is the greatest obstacle to the successful conduct of the motion picture theater business. My surprise at the censorship conditions here is not due to a previous ignorance of the situation, for Portland's fame as a city of overly rigid censorship is a matter of common knowledge with Eastern film manufacturers and distributors. My surprise is due to the fact that after being a few days in your city and interviewing your exhibitors, I am convinced that the reports received in the East from manufacturers representatives in the west are not exaggerated.

"I do not oppose a liberal, reasonable and broadminded censorship of moving pictures. It is the petty and captious methods of censoring pictures, such as are credited to the Portland board, that harms the industry and incidentally is a detriment to the city that tolerates it. Censorship in Chicago is now working on a liberal basis. It is nevertheless bad enough. But in Portland it seems to me that exhibitors are tied to a mast. Portland is not an immoral city notwithstanding the cry among the so-called reformers that many pictures are passed that should be barred. And neither can I say that the other cities I have visited are immoral because they have liberal censor boards or no censor board at all.

"I notice that several features now showing in Portland are pictures of old release date, a condition which I attribute to the manufacturers' hesitancy to send new subjects to be promiscuously butchered by the Portland censors. Portland, with its ideal location and climate, its beautiful theaters and enterprising exhibitors and citizens is undoubtedly permitting the photoplay art and its moneymaking possibilities to suffer at the hands of captious censors."

Mr. Chatkin is making his western trip one of pleasure as well as business. He is on his honeymoon. On July 2, F. M. Simonton, of the Standard Feature Film Company, took over the agency for the United product to distribute in this territory. Mr. Chatkin stated that regular releases of single and double reel subjects and big productions, the first of which is "Virtue" with May Ward, will be added to the program.

Actress in Wreck.

Portland, Ore.—Word was recently received here that Hazel Hansen, formerly with the Continental Photoplayers, had some hazardous experiences en route to Los Angeles where she is now employed by the L-KO Company when the steamship "Bear" on which she was travelling was wrecked on the California coast, and the 210 people aboard were compelled to seek safety in the life boats. The "Bear," bound for Los Angeles from Portland, ran ashore in the night time in a fog and five people lost their lives due to life boats capsizing. The life boat in which Miss Hansen was riding was one of the two to reach Cape Town through the breakers and its occupants buried themselves in the sand to keep warm until searching parties found them in the morning. Miss Hansen eventually reached Los Angeles by train and is now at work under the guidance of Eddie Nolan at the L-KO studio. She is the wife of O. R. Hansen, booker at the Mutual.

"Kirk" With Mutual.

Portland, Ore.—A. S. Kirkpatrick, manager of the Portland Metro, until that concern withdrew their office from Portland and later resident representative for Metro until he was offered a better position, has gone to the employ of the Mutual as travelling representative and efficiency expert, and will cover all of Oregon and parts of Washington and Idaho for the company. Mr. Kirkpatrick is remembered as "The Man With A Message," who did a lot of different things while in the employ of the Mutual about a year ago when C. J. Kerr had charge of the Portland office.

Baum Goes to World.

Portland, Ore.—Joe Baum, well known film salesman in the Pacific Northwest, has been employed by the World Film, as road man with headquarters in Seattle. Mr. Baum held a similar position with the General Film out of Portland, until recently when he handled "The Escape" and other features on the road for Coulter's features, Seattle.

New Silverton House.

Silverton Ore.—M. G. Cooley, who now operates the Gem has opened a new house. A new American Standard machine supplied by the Service Film Company, will furnish the projection.

An Enthusiastic Road Man.

Portland, Ore.—Al Gordon, road man for the World Film, was in Portland recently en route from Seattle to San Francisco. While here he stated that World service has been placed in the T. & D., Portland's largest photoplay theater. Mr. Gordon is the most enthusiastic road man who has made these parts in months and he is a booster for World service from the first word.

He stated he thought the vaudeville scare in the Pacific Northwest was a mere passing fancy and said he observed that the vaudeville concerns that have invaded the territory have not made their enterprises stick.

Heard on Film Row.

Hubbard, Ore.—A. C. Kreiger, whose theater was recently destroyed by fire, is assembling equipment for another house.

Portland, Ore.—Sidney Schubach, formerly shipper for Universal, has been promoted to publicity manager for the same company and booker for Bluebirds. This position was formerly occupied by Al Krause.

Everett, Wash.—Chas. Glaze, formerly of Portland, recently purchased the Princess theater.

Seattle, Wash.—Roy Madden, road man for Mutual and formerly employed out of Portland, will handle the Seattle territory.

Portland, Ore.—Gus Metzger, northwest manager for Universal, signed the Hippodrome for the regular Universal blended program.

Portland, Ore.—F. M. Simonton recently returned from a successful trip into Washington, booking E. & R. Jungle comedies. He visited Seattle, Tacoma, Olympia, Bellingham and Everett.

For All-Canada Censors

Toronto Film Men Are Preparing to Launch Vigorous Campaign to Get Federal Censorship for All Canada—Reasons Why Present Provincial Boards Are Big Hindrance—What Toronto Film Men Are Doing About It.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard St., E. Toronto, Special Correspondent.

TORONTO, Ontario—The plan of action for a Canada-wide campaign to secure Federal Censorship for the Dominion has been revealed to the Toronto representative of Moving Picture World. Considerable data on the vital subject have been secured and a conference of Toronto film exchange managers has already been held for the purpose of preparing details for the launching of the proposed drive.

Approximately thirty days are lost to film exchanges before one film release has been dealt with by every Provincial censor board in Canada. Moreover the censoring charges for a single reel from coast to coast aggregate $9.50. At the start it is conceded that the Canadian film interests would be willing to pay a censorship fee of $10 per reel in the case of federal censorship, for then the film exchanges would save, however, the loss of one month's time.

With federal censorship, the release date for a film feature could be made the same for the whole of Canada as for New York. This feature of this situation has a number of advantages from a business standpoint. One of these is the advertising co-operation which frequently cannot be enjoyed under present systems.

The revenue from censoring film would probably be greater because of the proposed flat rate of $10 per reel. At present every reel is not offered for censoring in every province in Canada, either through lack of distributing arrangements or doubt on the part of an exchange manager that a photo-play might not be acceptable to the censors of certain provinces. With the censoring arrangment for the whole of the Dominion, however, a film would be accepted or rejected for the country and a film exchange manager would know exactly where he stood from the start with regard to any release.

Canadian film exchanges are in doubt, now, as to the earning power of a photoplay until it has been submitted to every censor board in the country. At present, too, the exchanges become confused occasionally over the various censor tags which must accompany a reel on its rounds of theaters. A further instance of present confusion is seen in the arrangements necessary for the release of subjects in Ottawa by a Montreal exchange. Ottawa is only some 120 miles from Montreal, yet a film for Ottawa must be sent 333 miles to Toronto for censoring and then back.

Federal Censorship, according to Toronto film men, is something that has got to come sometime.

One of the prime movers in the campaign is Mr. Travis, Toronto Pathe manager. Mr. William Bach of the Canadian Universal has long been interested in a move for federal censorship. Out in Winnipeg, Frank Kerr, for six years chairman of the Winnipeg picture censor bureau, believes that, ultimately, a Federal bureau will be established for the whole of Canada and he favors the move.

Do Exhibitors Read Their Mail?

Toronto, Ontario—R. C. Newman, in charge of the Moving Picture Branch of the Provincial Treasurer's Department for Ontario, declares that the exhibitors of Ontario do not read their mail and that if they did so, many of them would undoubtedly be in better circumstances than they are to-day. To the Toronto representative of Moving Picture World, Mr. Newman explained that he had sent out a circular letter to all moving picture theater owners and managers explaining various details for the renewal of Provincial licenses for the year 1916-1917, starting June 1st. According to Mr. Newman, nobody read the instructions because the exhibitors, in many instances, did exactly opposite to what they had been told to do. Some partially followed the special orders and a very few responded properly. As a result of this looseness, Mr. Newman had to send out another sheaf of letters and the work of making out new licenses was practically doubled for the department.

"I do not understand how the exhibitors do business," said Mr. Newman.

David Stewart Distributes Tax Tickets.

Hamilton, Ontario—Moving picture exhibitors and other amusement promoters of this locality, will be interested to know that David Stewart, proprietor of the Red Mill theater, Hamilton, has been appointed distributor for amusement tax tickets for that city and vicinity.

Two Toronto Theaters Change Hands.

Toronto, Ontario—Important deals affecting the ownership of two prominent picture theaters of Toronto have been announced.

Kennedy Hill has sold his Colonial theater, a first-run house opposite the City Hall, to Sam McMillan, a former hotelkeeper of Winnipeg. Mr. McMillan took immediate possession of the theater but no change in policy has been made. Universal releases are shown here almost exclusively. The house is about eight years old.

The Sunnyside theater, a pretty house on Roncesvalles avenue in Parkdale, has been acquired by Harry Reedor of the Toronto Stationery Company, 205 Yonge street, Toronto, who already controls the Milwaukee, Wis.—Fire visited the neighborhood of the Alhambra theater but did not stop the shows.

Censorship Referendum in Spokane

Attorney Harry Cohn Will Conduct Campaign Against Censorship for the Picture Men—What the Commissioners Say.

By S. Clark Patchin, Spokane Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

SPOKANE. Wash.—The moving picture and amusement censorship ordinance mentioned in this column recently has been adopted by the city commissioners of Spokane, including the Agral amendment giving power to prohibit the exhibition of pictures inciting race hatred. Some of the moving picture men have employed Attorney Harry Cohn to conduct a referendum campaign in the city under the state initiative and referendum law to overrule the ordinance. A hot campaign is promised.

Commissioner McBroom has selected as advisors under the ordinance the following: W. S. McCrea, president of the chamber of commerce; Mrs. J. R. Roberson, author and chautauqua lecturer; J. W. Wentworth, a clothing man; T. B. Ware, expert fisher and hunter; Wilbur W. Hindley and Will Holden, dramatic critics of the Spokesman-Review and Spokane Chronicle, respectively,

Speaking the referendum campaign Attorney Cohn said: "My client is a man interested in the theatrical business here, but I am not at liberty to disclose his name."

Will T. Reed, manager of the Casino, said: "Yes, the matter has been taken up." Maurice Oppenheimer is reported to be interested.

Cleanliness and decency in motion picture exhibitions and vaudeville shows in the city will be enforced by the city council—referendum or no referendum—the commissioners agreed, after considering the effect of the petitions gotten out by some show managers in an effort to suspend Commissioner McBroom's recently passed censorship measure.

Commissioner McBroom declares that only managers who desire to put on "smutty" shows are opposed to the censorship. He said, "The city council has licensing power over motion picture and vaudeville shows and some of these fellows who may think that they are able to put over 'off-color' pictures or acts may wake up some morning and find that they haven't the right to show anything at all.

"I think the ordinance is popular with a large majority of the people, and I know that the managers of the better class show support it. The men who pull off smutty shows are for the measure. Only the man who tries to show indecent pictures is against the ordinance."

Commissioner Funk says he will support Mr. McBroom to the limit.

"I shall certainly back up Mr. McBroom in his efforts to clean up Spokane shows," said Commissioner Argall.

Mayor Fleming also intimated that the censorship of public affairs would meet with his support and said, "I guess we've got the power to regulate these shows under the old ordinance, and I, for one, shall certainly approve of any efforts Mr. McBroom may make to keep the local shows decent."

Among Spokane Exchanges.

George Buzzell, proprietor of the Grand theater, Moscow, Idaho, has sold his place to Mrs. Jeddes, formerly of Spokane and for some months employed in another Moscow house. Reports are that Mr. Buzzell, who was formerly a minister, intends to return to preaching.

P. L. Carroll, manager of the Pathe exchange in Spokane, has just returned from a trip over part of his territory. He reports booking as follows: "Iron Claw" at Arcade, Walla Walla; Nettle Grand, Pomeroy; and at LaCrosse; "Who's Guilty?" at Nettle Grand, Pomeroy; the Empire, Waitsburg; the LaCrosse theater and at the Empire, Waithburg, and the American, Dayton. He also reported that the regular feature program was booked by the Empire, Waithburg, and the American. Dayton.

IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Ticket Tax in British Columbia.

North Vancouver, B. C.—An unseconded resolution was introduced by Mayor Haines at a recent meeting of the Returned Soldiers' Aid Commission, suggesting that a tax should be placed on amusement tickets as a means of raising funds to assist in meeting the obligations which will be created when the soldiers begin to arrive home from the front in larger numbers than at present. Reeve Bridgman supported the mayor's views, but would not second the motion without further consideration.

Censor Board's Profits.

Winnipeg, Man.—An announcement just issued by Hon. Edward Brown states that during the month of May the proceeds from the work of the censor board amounted to $1,300. As the new interprovincial board was not ready to take over the work until June 1, the censoring for May was done by the old city board, which made a charge of $450 for the work. The net surplus of $850 will be divided equally between the Manitoba and Saskatchewan governments.

Ask for Higher Express Rates.

Vancouver, B. C.—The Express Traffic Association of Canada has made application to the board of railway commissioners for approval of increases in express rates ranging as high as 100 per cent. on some articles, and providing for certain changes in the handling of films. The World correspondent has just received a communication from W. H. Burr, chairman of the Traffic Association, stating that the Classification has been amended so as to allow the Pathescope Company to ship their non-inflammable films in metal cases when enclosed in fibreboard boxes, and an addition has also been made to the item to permit advertising matter to be shipped in the same containers with films.

Items of Special Interest.

Vancouver, B. C.—The official film of the 102d Overseas Battalion has just been made by Cameraman A. D. Kean, who spent several days at the 102d's camp at Comox just before their recent departure for England. A full thousand feet of pictures were made, and the exhibition rights for the British Isles have been purchased by the battalion. On completion of the first print it will be sent immediately to the military post office in London.

Vancouver, B. C.—Manager J. R. Muir of the Dominion ran "The Eternal Grind" for a full week to good business, with general admission raised to 25 cents.

Vancouver, B. C.—The Strand theater, which is to be demolished to make way for the new Pantages house, has been closed.

Vanoouver, B. C.—Ladies attending matinee performances of "The Eternal Grind" at the Dominion theater were presented with beautiful photogravures of Mary Pickford, each picture being enclosed in a large special envelope.

Vancouver Union Men Out

Scheduled Elimination of Union Operators in Vancouver Came on June 12—The Colonial Was Compelled to Take Back Old Men Because New Operators Proved Unqualified—Union Says It Is Not Worrying.

By E. C. Thomas, 821 Rogers Bldg., Vancouver, B. C., Special Correspondent.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—The scheduled elimination of union operators in the moving picture theaters of this city was carried out on June 12 according to the plans which had been made by the exhibitors, and the number of houses still retaining union men has been reduced to two. The local theaters playing vaudeville and pictures—the Pantages and the Columbia—were not included in the arrangement, as it was realized that such a move would bring about trouble with the stage hands and operators extending possibly over the entire circuits on which these houses are operated, but with the exception of the Orpheum and the Colonial theaters, none of the Vancouver houses are now using union men in the projection room.

Union Men at the Colonial.

Manager Hector Quagliotti of the Colonial had been a party to the agreement shutting out the union, but states that he was practically forced to keep his old men, as the substitute operators furnished by the combined exhibitors were not competent to handle the machines at the Colonial. These pull a very high amperage, to which the new men were unaccustomed, and after a trial on the Sunday preceding the scheduled change they informed Mr. Quagliotti that they did not feel justified in accepting positions which they were not thoroughly qualified to fill. He therefore recalled his union men, who returned to work on Monday, and during the evening the following slide was thrown on the screen: "Safety first—Safety assured; This machine operated by union operator affiliated with the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada."

At the Labor Temple headquarters of the operators' union, Vancouver Local No. 348, I. A. T. S. E., the men commented on the fact that the substitute operators at the Colonial could not do the work required of them, even though they had had considerable experience in operating. This, say the union members, effectively establishes that an apprenticeship of a few weeks, as advocated by some of the exhibitors, is quite insufficient to make a man a qualified operator. It was also stated that the union men are not worrying about the outcome of the present trouble, and that it is thought that matters will adjust themselves in a short time. They point out that only the Globe, Princess and Bijou theaters, operated by the National Amusement Company, have been affected by the recent change, involving the dismissal of six men, whose places are now being filled by only three non-union men. Manager Douglas Creighton of the Globe theater stated to the World correspondent, however, that while some of the exhibitors will be short handed for a little while, it is the intention to provide relief operators. With the exception of the five houses enumerated, the moving picture theaters have for some time been operating with non-union men, and these exhibitors have subscribed to the agreement to continue under this policy.

APPEAL BOARD INAUGURATED.

Considers Appeal on a Centaur Picture and Sustains Censors.

Winnipeg, Man.—The appeal board to review films rejected by the new interprovincial board of censors has just been appointed, and were immediately called upon to consider the first picture on which an appeal was taken. This was a Centaur Mutual Masterpicture de Luxe, "A Law Unto Himself," and had been rejected by the censors because it dealt a little too frankly with the methods and practices of criminals. The appeal board upheld the action of the censors, so that the production is banned forever in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

The members of this appeal board just appointed are Frank Kerr, chairman; Rev. Dean Combes and Mrs. W. F. Osborne. Mr. Kerr was chairman of the former Winnipeg city board, which passed on pictures intended for exhibition in these two provinces.

In this connection it might be pertinent to ask who is the representative of the exhibitors on the board of appeal, or who is there as the representative of that portion of the public who are prone to judge theatrical or moving picture productions from a purely theological standpoint. A narrow board of censors is bad enough, but a narrow board of appeal is infinitely worse.

FOX ENTERS WESTERN CANADA.

Distribution of Fox Features Secured by Dominion Exclusives, Ltd., Just Incorporated.

Vancouver, B. C.—An important announcement has just been made here regarding the distribution of Fox feature films in Western Canada, which has been secured after negotiations extending over several months by the Dominion Exclusives, Limited, an exchange incorporated a short time ago with E. R. Fauser as managing director and R. A. Scott as secretary and general representative. A number of well known local business men are also interested in the enterprise. The territory involved includes the four western provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, and general headquarters will be maintained in Vancouver. An office will also be opened in Winnipeg, and Mr. Scott, who has just returned from New York after closing the deal, will attend to this matter during a trip he is about to take for the purpose of giving trade showings at various points in Western Canada.

Mr. Fauser states that considerable interest has been aroused among local exhibitors by the announcement of the inauguration of Fox service here, as heretofore none of these pictures have been shown in this territory. The Royal Victoria theater at Victoria, B. C., was the first house to contract for the Fox productions, and starts off on June 19 with "The Two Orphans," which was awarded the Gold Medal at the San Diego Exposition in competititon with manufacturers of other brands. Negotiations are now under way with other houses in Western Canada, and it is stated that in Vancouver one of the Granville street houses will shortly enter the Fox ranks.

Both Mr. Fauser and Mr. Scott, though comparatively young in years, have for a long time been connected with the film industry. Mr. Fauser came to Winnipeg from Detroit, Mich., as manager for the Gaumont Company of Canada, and later opened the Calgary office of the Mutual Film Corporation. He was afterward placed in charge of the Vancouver office of the same company, and left to accept a position as general manager of the Pathe Film Syndicate of Western Canada. He next became manager of the Dominion Film Exchange, Ltd., which has been succeeded by the new organization.

Mr. Scott was for six years associated with the Sullivan & Considine people at the Bijou and Empress theaters in Winnipeg, and was later manager of the Winnipeg office of the Pathe Film Syndicate.

KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURE.

THE CROOKED ROAD (Three Parts—July 7).—The cast: Dave Fenton (Henry King); Nellie (Katherine Burke); Blanche (Jimsy Maye); Slinky Joe (Charles Dudley); Nellie's Mother (Mollie McConnell); Clancy (Don Bailey); Baker (Jim Warner). Directed by H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer.

Blind to the finer things of life, Dave Fenton holds sway as the leader of the gang. His companion, Blanche, a shop girl, chafes under Dave's inability to make a big haul. She urges him into a further life of degradation. Nellie, an invalid, confined to a wheel chair, sells newspapers to add to the fund she and her mother are saving for the day when they can go to the country. Dave does her a slight service from which springs an intimate friendship.

One night Slinky Joe, one of Dave's gangsters, hears Nell and her mother counting over their little horde of money. He reports to the gang and they plan a raid. Led hy Dave they find the hidden savings, but when Dave discovers that it is Nell he is robbing he turns against his companions and after a fight, drives them from the place. Nell makes him see to what end his present mode of life is leading to and he leaves the gang and finds honest work.

Blanche, realizing that through Nell she has lost Dave, plans to get even. Slinky tells her of the saving and this Blanche steals. Nell is prostrated over the loss and Dave, believing that some of the gang are responsible, assures Nell that he will get her savings for her. From Slinky he forces a confession that Blanche is the guilty one. He goes to Blanche's room and finds her gone, she having left town after her theft. Dave is ashamed to admit to Nell that he has failed and when Clancy, a ward heeler, offers him a chance to make some easy money, he takes it, sending the money to Nell as if it were her money that he recovered.

Nell learns of his intended sacrifice for her. Knowing that should he be allowed to go through with his plans for Clancy he will be lost to her, Nell returns the money to Clancy. Dave's regeneration is complete through the discovery of Nell's great love. So great has it proved, in fact, that the moment Nell thought Dave was in danger her love triumphed over her weakness and she walked unaided. Blanche repents of her act and returns the stolen money. She is forgiven and finds her regeneration in the arms of her country lover. With murk of the city far behind Nell and Dave work midst the flowers whither Nell's dream has led them.

EDISON.

THE SOUTHERNERS (Three Parts—Reissue—June 27).—The cast: Mary Annan (Mabel Trunnelle); Beverly, her brother (Julius A. Mood, Jr.); General Peyton, C. S. A. (Bigelow Cooper); Mrs. Peyton (Anne Leonard); Boyd Peyton, U. S. N. (Richard Tucker); Willis Peyton, C. S. A. (Allen Crolius); Robert Darrow (Herbert Piror); David Glasgow Farragut, Admiral, U. S. N. (Duncan McRae); the chaplain (Harry Linson); Captain Johnson, of the C. S. S. Tennessee (Augustus Phillips). Written by Cyrus Townsend Brady. Directed by Richard Ridgely.

It was early in the spring of 1861 that Boyd Peyton came home to Mobile after his first cruise as an officer of the United States navy. Coming home to Mobile meant a great deal to Boyd. It meant coming back to his father, to his mother, and to his brother. But, above all, it meant coming back to Mary Annan. Mary was divided in her affections between Boyd Peyton and Robert Darrow. But before Boyd had been long in Mobile, a love for a new idol sprang up in Mary's heart—a love which overshadowed her feelings for both men. The name of this new cause of the transfer of her affection from men was the Civil War.

At a birthday party, given shortly after the opening of hostilities, Mary Annan, rising in answer to a toast, bade none to drink to her who did not love her and forbade any to love her who did not love the South. Boyd, despite his connection with the navy of the Republic, loved the South devoutly, and Mary more than all the world. So he drank the toast, and Mary, seeing him do this, expected that he would renounce his allegiance to the government and support the cause of the Confederacy. So believing that his hand would defend the land that his heart loved, she promised to marry him.

That night the young officer suffered tortures of indecision. On the one side was Mary; on the other, duty. If he chose the latter he would lose Mary, and with her the love and respect of his family and friends. But in the face of all temptation, when Boyd arose the next morning, he firmly was resolved to follow the bitter road of duty and honor. When the local company of militia came to the house before breakfast and announced Boyd that it had elected him its captain, he told them that he was, and always would be, loyal to the government to which he had sworn allegiance. In the face of the horrified remonstrance of his family and Mary, Boyd remained steadfast in his decision.

While he was being cast forth from his father's house, Mary threw herself into Darrow's arms and promised to marry him when he returned from war. But Mary regretted her decision, for in the days that followed, love for Boyd grew and grew in her heart. At last, when she felt that she no longer honorably could keep silence, she wrote to Darrow, breaking their engagement. Darrow got Mary's letter on the eve of the battle of Chickamaugua. He opened it, read it, and went forth to die.

As the cruel years dragged on, Mary learned to repent bitterly of her girlish desire for war and its attendant deeds of glory and bravery. Besides Darrow, her father had fallen fighting for the cause, and Beverly, her young brother, the last of the Annan line, was stationed in Fort Morgan in imminent peril from the guns of the Union fleet which was threatening Mobile Bay.

In the terrible battle which resulted from the successful attempt of Farragut to pass the forts and attack the Confederate fleet, Beverly Annan was killed. Boyd Peyton, on Farragut's flagship, the "Hartford," performed a miracle of valor in saving men from the dynamited "Tecumseh," beneath the guns of the fort and the eyes of his father who was defendlng it. Desperately wounded by a shell, Peyton was removed to shore, and nursed and brought back to health and strength by Mary Annan. Through her intercession, the outcast was taken hack into the family that had disowned him. Then peace came upon the stricken land, and a far greater peace to the hearts of Mary and Boyd.

LUBIN

OTTO THE TRAFFIC COP (July 3).—The cast: Otto (Davy Don); His Sweetheart (Patsye DeForest); The Butler (George Egan); The Old Maid (Eleanor Blanchard). Adapted and directed by Edwin McKim.

On account of so many strong men leaving for the war, the police force ls running short. They are compelled to take a few undersized fellows for a while, Otto, a short man, ls engaged as a traffic cop. He ls rather lgnored hy his fellow cops. However, he is given one of the husiest corners in town. Otto ls husy dodging all the autos that just miss him. He is extremely pollte to the girls, escorting them from one side to the other while the homely old maids are a bit mistreated. An old maid is seen in the middle of the road excited and frightened by the passing autos. She is about to faint when Otto runs to her rescue. He carries her across and when she comes to she throws her arms around him and forces Otto to go home with her. When he gets to the door he is surprised to see the wonderful mansion she lives in.

The maid proposes and shows him her bank account. He decides to marry her. Otto has a sweetheart who hears of his engagement. He refuses to discuss the matter when she comes to the street where he is on duty. She decides to follow him. Soon he leaves his duty and goes to the old maid's house. His sweetheart enters by the back way. A hutler greets her, she tells him her trouble. He laughs, explains to her that there must be some mistake for the woman in the house is only one of the maids that has lost her mind and that his mistress was notified about it.

Otto's sweetheart is now a bit relieved. Smiling she suggests they go in the drawing room and watch the poor maid's actions. There sits Otto listening to the maid's talk regarding her immense fortune. Otto, in his nervousness, picks up an album which is on the table. He opens it, starts looking at it when the maid starts sadly explaining that all the five men on the front page were her husbands. Otto looks frightened and more so when she explains that none of them lived over five months.

In the meantime Otto's real sweetheart and the butler are having a laugh. The old maid starts explaniing how each husband died a horrible death. She said, "My first hushand was an undertaker, poor fellow, he buried himself. My second one died with a cramp in his arm while signing his entire fortune to me. My third man died of starvation, poor fellow, the sight of a chicken would almost make him sick." By this time Otto could stand it no longer and while the maid was sobbing, he sneaks out. In the meantime his sweetheart also leaves by the back way. When she turns the corner, Otto walks right into her. She pretends to be very much hurt at the way in which he treated her. Otto pleads for forgiveness. She finally looks at him, smiles and holds out her arms to him.

THE STOLEN MASTER (Three Parts—July 6).—The cast: Thomas Martin (Samuel Curtis); Mary Martin (Evelyn Page); Arthur Travis (Alan Forrest); Valerie Deschamps (Adda Gleason); Emile Deschamps (George Routh); William Merrivale (Bird Hopkins). Written and directed by Jack Byrne.

Old Thomas Martin is a dealer in old paintings. His daughter, Mary, assists him in the store. The old man is in league with a band of foreign crooks who steal old Masters from which fake copies are made which he sells to unsuspecting American buyers. In an attic room in the same building where Martin has his store lives a young artist. Mary is fond of him.

Arthur Travis, the artist, is poor but a man of high ideals and has the ambition to paint a masterpicture, which will make him famous. Old Martin receives a letter from two crooks, Valerie Deschamp and her brother, to the effect that they are bringing with them a painting which they have stolen from a foreign art gallery. He assists them to smuggle it in and they ask Arthur Travis to make the copies. He refuses indignantly, but Valerie decides to further tempt him with her beauty and by means of absinthe to accede to her wishes. In this she succeeds, for Arthur soon hegins to like the drug and makes a copy of the picture which is sold to a wealthy man as the real thing.

Arthur feels remorse, but although Mary tries to persuade him to give up drinking he drinks deeper. Mary, heing devout, goes to church and says a prayer asking that Arthur may be cured of his terrible habit and of his infatuation for Valerie. As she finishes her prayer she imagines that the Virgin comes to life and tells her that if she will offer herself in marriage to Arthur she will cure him. The buyer of the picture has asked in some friends to admire it and one of them heing an expert proves to him that it is a fake. Exasperated, he phones the police who at his request arrest Thomas Martin, give him the third degree and throw him into jail. He turns state's evidence on the two crooks who are arrested and turned over to a foreign detective who has been on their trail.

Mary comes to Arthur's studio and she offers her love if he will give up his vice. After a mental struggle, he regains control of himself and dashing the glass to the ground he takes Mary in his arms. They go to the owner of the painting and make a clean breast of the matter and buy back the fake picture. The millionalre takes a liking to Arthur and promises Mary that he will not prosecute. Mary and Arthur become betrothed and the millionaire gives him a commission to paint a plcture using Mary as a model.

A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY (July 8).—The cast: Emile Scribbler (Jerold T. Hevener); Markoff, the leader (Babe Hardy); Professor Foddletop (Bill Bowers); Zola (Lellie Farrln). Written by C. Doty Hobart. Directed by Jerold T. Hevener.

Emile Scribbler, a reporter, is assigned to the job of reporting the hiding place of some Nihilists. He accidentally runs down Zola, the Chief's daughter, with his auto and discovers their rendezvous.

He is spotted and an effort is made to put him to death, but he is freed by Zola, who has fallen in love with him. He is pursued, overpowered by the Chief, and placed in a huge box. Professor Foddletop, a collector of mummies, who lives in the room above Emile, is preparing to ship the Queen of Sheba to a museum. He goes for a dray and when he returns he is horrified to find that the box has disappeared, it having been taken by the Nihilist thinking it the one containing Emile. The Professor hurries down to tell Emile of his misfortune and finds the box in which Emile is nailed fast. Hearing strange noises, he tears off the lid and Emile is released. The Professor tells him of the missing mummy and they give chase.

Arriving at the secret place Markoff, the chief, selects a firing squad. He sets the box upright and tells the men to fire into it five times as the spy is in the box. The first round fills the box full of holes. Zola, thinking her lover is in the box rushes in just in time to receive the second volley. She dies. The chief seeing his daughter fall rushes in to get the third round. He dies. Emile and the Professor get the fourth and fifth round. The gunners seeing their mistakes, turn the guns on themselves and all drop dead.

THE RIVAL QUEENS (On Same Reel as Foregoing).—The cast: Boma, a young Zulu Prince (John Edwards); Kata, his mate (Mattie Edwards); Orga, the younger brother (Jos Brigbt). Written by Epes W. Sargent. Directed by Will Louis.

Boma and Orga are sons of the King. The King dies and the brothers are summoned to his side. While Boma wails beside his father, Orga, the younger brother, with Mayma, his mate, usurps the throne. Boma makes an appeal but Mayma flirts with the witch doctor, and the decision goes to Orga. Boma is driven from the village with Kata, his consort. Orga does not make a popular ruler, but Mayma jollies the people and they tolerate her. After a storm, Boma and Kata discover a trunk washed ashore, the property of a soubrette. They take it to their hut, and Kata finds that the costumes fit her. They start for the village and on the way fall in with a body of Zulus who have been banished. They think Kata is a goddess until Boma explains. With their support, Boma and Kata take the throne and Orga and his spouse are led off to execution.

THE SACRIFICE (Three Parts—June 26).—The cast: Mrs. Warrington (Eugenie Besserer); Mr. Warrington (Harry De Vere); John Archer (Guy Oliver); Jerry Warrington (Harry Mestayer); Mercy Archer (Anna Luther). Scenario, Gilson Willets. Directed by Frank Beal.

Archer and Warrington answer their country's call and go to war. Warrington leaves behind his wife and their little son, Jerry. After grim warfare, during which Mrs. Warrington hears nothing of her husband, John Archer is invalided home. He brings with him the sad information that Warrington has lost his life fighting against the enemy. Mrs. Warrington, thereafter, lives only for her little son, whom she resolves to keep with her always, and she endeavors to foster within him a horror for war.

Jerry Warrington grows to manhood, and is in love with John Archer's daughter, Mercy. Again after the years comes the news that invaders have reached the shores of our country. Mrs. Warrington uses every possible endeavor to keep the news from her son, but of course this proves impossible. However, Jerry knows of the horror his mother has for war, and when he resolves to enlist to fight for his country, he is loath to tell her of his determination. However, Mrs. Warrington soon learns the truth from Jerry's lips and she is almost prostrated.

Torn betwixt mother love and duty, Jerry Warrington answers his country's call, and marches to battle. Later, Mercy Archer, his sweetheart, enrolls as a Red Cross nurse. While leading a desperate charge against the enemy, Jerry is shot. Dying, he is carried to a field hospital where he is ministered to by Mercy, and he breathes his last in her arms.

Mercy Archer comes home, and again with her father, they call upon Mrs. Warrington. Once more the messenger of death enters Mrs. Warrington's home. She is told that her son has been killed. There is a lesson that warfare is not all on the battlefield, but that mothers, wives and sweethearts, left behind, must also suffer.

THE GIRL OF GOLD GULCH (July 1).—The cast: Jack Wallace (Tom Mix); Irene Bolton (Victoria Forde); Ned Wilson (Joe Ryan); Dick Mullen (Ed Jones). Written by Cornelius Shea. Directed by Tom Mix.

Jack Wallace, who drives the stage coach, is in love with Irene Bolton, daughter of the storekeeper. Ned Wilson, a schemer, also is in love with Irene. Wilson knows that Bolton has paid a deposit on Dick Mullen's mining claim and secretly sends his henchmen to investigate the value of the mine. They return with the report that the mine is very valuable.

Wilson sends Mullen a note stating that if Bolton does not show up with the money at the appointed time, he will buy the mine, and Mullen agrees.

Irene Bolton leaves with the money for the claim. Wilson has tampered with the stage coach and there is a breakdown. Jack Wallace discovers Wilson's plot, sends Irene on ahead, who defeats Wilson in a race to Mullen's home, where Irene receives the deed to the claim.

THE RETURN (Three Parts—July 3).—The cast: Ione (Kathlyn Williams); Rutley (Guy Oliver); Pascho (Wellington Playter); Maritana (Vivian Reed); Bela (Sidney Smith); Vaughn (Harry Lonsdale). Written by W. E. Wing. Directed by T. N. Heffron.

Ione, society favorite, inherits a strain of barbarism. She is wooed by Rutley, a leader in business affairs but she tells Rutley that he can ill afford to marry a woman who is really half savage.

With friends, Ione and Rutley visit a cabaret to see Pascho, a man of iron muscle, known as the "God of the Tenements." When Ione and Pascho meet, it is a case of mutual magnetism. The woman forgets Rutley for the moment, and has only eyes for the muscular giant. Maritana, in love with Pascho, sees the love interest prevalent between Ione and Pascho.

Finally Ione throws caution to the wind and agrees to elope with Pascho. At the appointed hour, her better judgment returns, and she tells Rutley, who confronts her, that he can win her if he will kill Pascho. Ione is informed by Rutley that the men of today do not kill, but win through the power of Love alone.

Pascho, at the trysting place, impatient because Ione does not appear, goes to her home. There he attempts to persuade her to flee with him, picturing the delights of sunny Italy, and she is almost persuaded.

Maritana, Pascho's former sweetheart, with Bela, who loves the girl, follow Pascho into the home of Ione. Through her urgency, Bela shoots at Pascho with a determination to slay him, but the bullet goes wild and strikes Rutley, who sinks to the floor in a dying condition.

Then it is that Ione comes again to better understanding. Her love for the stricken man grows strong, and she nurses him back to health, while Pascho returns to Maritana, and together they sail for the sunny land of Italy.

SOME DUEL (July 8).—The cast: Tom (Tom Mix); Grace (Victoria Forde); Centiped Pete (Joe Ryan); Jordan (Sid Jordan). Written and produced by Tom Mix.

Grace, daughter of Jim Jordan, a ranch owner, has just returned from school, and Tom, leader of the Lazy S cowboy outfit, and Centiped Pete, leader of a rival cowboy outfit, fall in love with the girl. They both attire themselves in their best bib and tucker, and head for Grace's home.

Enroute, they stop to settle a strenuous argument, and before the argument is ended, the cowboys of the rival ranches become involved in a free-for-all. Centiped Pete, subdued by Tom, challenges him to fight a duel. Before the duel, the rivals practice plain and fancy shooting.

Grace plots with Tom to fool and frighten Pete, which they do by trick marksmanship. On the day of the duel blank cartridges are placed in the guns unknown to the principals. When the undertaker arrives, it is too much for Pete, who takes to his heels. Grace then tells Tom how brave he was to stick to his ground, and he appreciates that he has won her love.

VIM.

A DAY AT SCHOOL (July 6).—The cast: Plump (Babe Hardy); Runt (Billy Ruge); Father (Joe Cohan); Daughter (Ray Godfrey); Janitor (Bert Tracy); Principal (Anna Mingus).

Ray is sent to boarding school. With the connivance of her maid, her lover is apprised of her destination and he goes to rescue his lady love. He succeeds in entering her room, but is seen by the inquisitive janitor, who informs the principal. A grand sortie is made by the whole school, but on bursting into Ray's room, nothing is seen but a man's hat and glove. This is conclusive evidence and the father is sent for.

Meanwhile, scared but undismayed, Plump dresses as a girl, is admitted as a pupil and plans an elopement. Once more the ever busy janitor intervenes and again the alarm is raised. Fortunately for the two an enterprising burglar chooses this moment for an entrance and he, alarmed by the commotion, hides in a closet. Their escape cut off, Plump and Ray dash into their room, and our hero takes refuge in the burglar's closet, from which he forces the crook.

Rushing through the assembled pupils the prowler dives through the window and meeting the father downs him, after stealing his clothes. This leaves open the way of escape and the lovers, jumping into the father's auto, wave a kiss as the crook climbs on behind, leaving dad now mistaken for the burglar to be almost annihilated by the excited girls.

FURNISHED ROOMS (July 7).—The cast: Pokes (Robt. Burns); Jabbs (Walter Stull); Professor (Frank Hanson); His Wife (Edna Reynolds); His Daughter (Ethel Burton); Her Sweetheart (Robin Williamson).

When a person rents a furnished room he should be careful to find first out something about his fellow roomers. However, Jabbs, a stranded actor, failed to take this precaution. Therefore when he receives from a theatrical agent a part in a drama, he rushes back to his room where he expected to study in quiet. To his consternation, however, Pokes, a one-man orchestra who occupies the opposite room, selects the same time to practice some new music. Driven desperate by the awful bedlam in Pokes' room and finding that all his appeals to the noisy musician to keep quiet are useless, Jabbs packs his belongings and vacates his room.

He rents a room in the home of Prof. Wisem who is working on a wondeful rain-making bomb. The Professor's daughter Ethel is in love with Robin and the Professor has promised the young couple that he will give his consent to their marriage when his bomb is proven a success. In the Prof.'s home, Jabbs believes he has found the quietude he needs to study his part, but to his dismay he finds that Pokes, who has been ordered out of his former room, has rented the same room of which Jabbs has already taken possession.

In the fight that follows for possession of the room, both Jabbs and Pokes are badly mussed up and in the end agree to be friends and share the room together. That night Robin and Ethel, after having witnessed several futile attempts of the Prof. to produce rain, decide to take matters in their own hands. They rig up a fire hose and arrange that when the bomb explodes, the water shall be turned on and in this way hope that the Prof. shall be deceived into giving his consent to their marriage. The plan proves a great success as far as the young couple are concerned, but not so with Pokes and Jabbs. These two worthies, who happen to be in bed asleep, have the misfortune to have their bed placed directly beneath a broken skylight upon which the hose is turned. The water pours into the room drenching the pair of them and before they can escape from their predicament the rising waters flood the entire room.

VIM FEATURE COMEDY.

HOUSEKEEPING (July 5).—The young married couple have a few pieces of home-made furniture in their flat. The bride's uncle sends her all his old heirlooms, which fill the flat to overflowing. Hubby buys a rocking chair and brings it home. He thinks he is in the wrong flat until the janitor reassures him. He has to use great care in navigating and gets stuck while trying to get into the kitchen. The bride and the janitor release him. He determines to sell the heirlooms and buy some real furniture. No sooner is the flat furnished with modern pieces when uncle comes to visit the couple. They dare not face him and escape to the roof. The scuttle is closed, and they are left in a rainstorm without shelter.

ESSANAY.

THE FABLE OF THE FEARSOME FEUD BETWEEN THE FIRST FAMILIES (Two Parts—July 4).—One of the many diversions of the Finger-Bowl Set was amateur theatricals. Every season the club gave a show at which the net proceeds, sometimes 18 bucks, went to charity. "Romeo and Juliet" was the coming dramatic treat. For the part of Juliet there were two candidates—Mrs. Skilllgan and Mrs. Winkle. The club elected Mrs. Winkle by a majority of one and some were mean enough to say she voted for herself. Mrs. Skilligan and her dinner party came in late and upset chairs in a genteel manner. Mrs. Winkle lasted, but she was too pink for words. She took 8 curtain calls, or two more than Melba's record. Next thing anyone knew there were no Skilllgans at the Winkle affairs and no Winkles at the Skilligan functions. They vied with each other in expensive entertainment. Then two men met in bankruptcy court. "It's a dead heat," said Skilligan to Winkle.

MORAL—The men are always the first to quit.

BIOGRAPH.

THE BLUE OR THE GRAY (Reissue—July 3).—The cast: The Southern boy (Robert Harron); The Northern girl (Irene Howley); Her uncle (W. Chrystie Miller); The rivals (Donald Crisp and Robert Burns).

It was Christmas Eve in the South, but the spirit of peace and love did not pervade the Northern girl's heart. The gallantry of the young Southern swains, however, was more than manifest, when a drunken band of Unionists entered the house—among them her sweetheart. From him was protection needed most. His rival, a Confederate soldier, showed her character is far above political principle, and true love came into its own.

---

HIS TRUST AND HIS TRUST FULFILLED (Reissue—Two Parts—July 4).—The cast: Colored servant (Wilfred Lucas); The Confederate officer (Dell Henderson); His wife (Claire McDowell); Their daughter (grown up) (Dorothy West); Her sweetheart (Harry Hyde); Slavey (Jack Pickford).

The master, leaving home at the opening of the war to join the Confederate Army, tells his body-servant to take good care of his wife and child. The master is killed in battle; the home is sacked and burned, leaving the woman and child homeless, and the old negro, faithful to his trust, gives up his little cabin for their comfort. The only thing saved from the wreckage was the master's sword.

Four years afterward, the war has closed, and the negroes leave to enjoy their emancipation, but George remains true to his trust. He has all these years cared for the widow and her child. The poor woman, worn with worry and heartaches, is stricken and dies. The care of the child devolves upon George, who takes her to the lawyer, with whom he arranges for a home for her, paying for her support out of his savings, enjoining absolute secrecy on the part of the lawyer.

For several years things go along uneventfully until the child now grown desires to go to the seminary to procure an advanced education. To the lawyer this seems impossible, but George when he sees the girl break down and weep, insists that he take the last of his savings and appropriate it for the purpose. This is an awful ordeal which old George goes through, denying himself even the positive necessities of life in order to keep her in school for the full term. However, at the end of the first term there is nothing left of George's savings and the lawyer is forced to inform the girl that a return to school is impossible.

To witness the child's disappointment is more than old faithful George can stand, and going to the lawyer's office, he finds a cousin from Europe there inquiring as to the condition and whereabouts of Miss Frazier. George entering the office surreptitiously espies a fat wallet in the Englishman's coat pocket. His love for the child and his desire to grant her every wish leads him into temptation so he takes the pocketbook. However, he has hardly secured it when his better self asserts itself and he puts it back, but not before he is detected.

The lawyer knowing the negro's worth realizes what prompted his action and sends him off. The English cousin later meets the girl and they are betrothed and a happy wedding follows shortly after. Old George at a distance views the festivities with tears in his eyes, and after they depart for their new home, he goes back to his cabin, takes down his master's saber and fondles it, happy in the realization that he has fulfilled his trust.

POWERS.

THE JANITOR (July 6).—The cast: John (Wallace Beery); John (Gilmore Hammond); the Stenographer (Ruby Cox).

John, the janitor, has a pet monkey that accompanies him on his different jobs. Because of the monkey's wonderful ability, John is given a post of janitor in one of the large hotels. He becomes acquainted with the stenographer in the place and admires her very much. Her affections are bestowed upon John, the clerk of the hotel, and John, the janitor, is unable to get her interested in himself. One day he finds a flower and places it upon her desk. John, the clerk, also sends a flower of the same kind, with a note, begging the girl to meet him that night. She answers the note, thanking him for the flower and promising to meet him that night. She lays the note on the clerk's desk.

While John, the janitor, is cleaning up, he finds the note, addressed to John and thinks it is for himself. He reads it and is pleased that the girl thinks so much of him. He receives a rude jolt, however, when the girl tells him that he is "off his nut" and does not care for him at all. He goes to his room and dozes off.

He is sadly cleaning a room on the thirteenth floor when he detects a crook robbing a room. He takes him in charge and gets a substantial reward. The hotel management praises him for his good work and the girl, regretting her harsh action, forgives him. He is kissing her with relish, when the owner of the house awakens him and he finds that he has been kissing the monkey. The owner tells him to get busy or he will get fired, and poor John goes back to his drudgery.

IMPERIAL INDIA (Part 1—"Sports of the Rajahs"—July 8).—This is the first installment of the Dorsey travel pictures and shows scenes in little-known parts of India. Beautiful buildings in Delhi and other cities are shown, including the highest tower in India, and the "Friday Mosque," the largest in the country. Extraordinary contests between animals at the court of one of the Rajahs are presented. A fight to a finish between two elephants, another between wild boars and a leopard and hyena, in which it is proved that no animal will stand up to the charge of the boar.

The Nizam of Hyderabad entertains his guests with a cheetah hunt, and we go with them. The Maharajah of Udaipoor gives a tiger hunt, the pictures of which were taken from the swaying howdah on an elephant's back. Fights between rams are depicted, and then we are taken to the old fortress of Goleonda, its fabulous wealth long since scattered, and shown the tombs of the "Rockefeller" dynasty of India.

NESTOR.

DOUBLE-CROSSING THE DEAN (Two parts—July 7).—The cast: The Dean (Stella Adams); Soda Clerk (Eddie Lyons); Drug Clerk (Lee Moran); the Girls (Corinne Lesser and Jane Waller). Produced by Al. E. Christie.

The dean of Fudgely Hall was an inveterate hater of men. The two drug demons, Soda Sam and Lee the Peach-Picker, held down the corner drug store across from the Hall, also the honors as village Lotharios. On a tip from a friend they spot Corinne and Jane. The girls have to contend with the Hall monitor in getting romance under way, but are finally partially successful.

The boys decide as they cannot get the girls as model moral men, they will then get them as habitual users of Baruna. The dean likes the stuff. It is her one weakness, and she buys many bottles at the store. When a dance is given at the opening of a new garage, they inveigle the girls into attending it in overalls. The dears are smuggled out into the night through the window, so that the dean can have ample opportunity to see them.

Of course, the dean and the monitor, who learned of the clandestine affair, are shrewd enough to nab some extra clothing of the janitor's, and they are admitted to the dance, too. But the boys had prepared for them. The janitor was informed, so was the town reporter; also the town policeman. And when, full of the contents of the merry-makers' punch-bowl, the dean and monitor are pinched for the larceny of the janitor's wearing apparel, they have to take off their masks, confess their identity and pray for mercy. The punch had been loaded with Baruna by the wicked boys and the dean and monitor had fallen prey to the old harpy's only weakness. In exchange for the promise of the newspaper man to withhold the story and of the cop not to tell, romance is given immunity on the campus thereafter.

THE COMMITTEE ON CREDENTIALS (Three Parts—July 8).—The cast: Ballarat Bob (Harry Carey); Doc Bleeker (George Berrell); Chuck Walla Bill (Neal Hart); Clem (Joe Rickson); Josephine (Olive Fuller Golden); Peter Boy (Elizabeth James). Scenario by Harvey Gates. Produced by Harry Carey.

The Camp of Pinon had sprung into existence over night. A prospector seeking the elusive metal had overturned something that glittered and the news spread fast and the population came in over night. Ballarat Bob is the owner of a gambling establishment. Bob's reputation for fair dealing is known throughout the country.

Clem Hardy, a victim of the gold fever, arrives in the mining camp, accompanied by his wife, Josephine, and their child, Peter Boy. They stake a claim near the camp of Dr. Bleeker, Chuck Walla Bill and Bob, who are palling together. Clem's first visit, after staking bis claim, is to the gambling hall. As Bill and Doc approach their home they see the new neighbors. The child's crying gets on their nerves and when Bob arrives Bill is in a towering rage. They decide that the noise is unbearable and Bill, as a committee of one, goes to the tent to remonstrate. Bill enters in anger, but one glance at Josephine calms him. Clem, angry at the intrusion, hits Bill and knocks him out. Bill starts to retaliate, but, seeing Josephine, retreats in fierce anger. He returns to his friends and tells them of the incident; they decide that there is nothing to be done.

The next day, as Bob is returning from the hall, Peter Boy is playing in the road. Bob snatches the child from death underneath the oncoming stage, but the child receives a minor injury to his hand. Doc is nearby and hurries out with his medicine case. Bob is especially thanked by the woman, and immediately the two find interest in each other. Josephine then confides to the friends her ambition for the youngster to become a doctor.

Clem at last makes a rich strike of gold and at once starts on a career of gambling and drinking. At first Bob bars Clem from his tables on account of his family, but realizes if he does not take his money someone else will. Bob revokes his rule in Clem's favor. Josephine has come to look upon Bob as partly responsible for Clem's condition, and she believes that Bob encourages the latter to play. Clem loses everything and when he has left Bob takes Clem's money from the safe, goes to Josephine and gives it to her. He then meets Hardy and threatens him with an awful death if he does not brace up and treat his wife and child decently. Bob then leaves and returns to the hall.

Later on Clem finds that Josephine has received the money and accuses her of playing with Bob on the side. He strikes her down and leaves for the hall to find Bob. He picks a quarrel with Bob, but for the wife's sake the latter holds his band. Clem shoots him through the hat. Peter Boy is ill and Dr. Bleeker goes to visit him. Clem sees their shadows on the wall and thinks that Bob is there with his wife. He shoots through the tent and Doc falls. Bob comes running to the spot and Clem wounds him in the shoulder. Then he jumps into his wagon and drives furiously away. The whole town rides after him. On the edge of a cliff be is lassoed and wagon and all fall headlong down the side of the steep incline and Hardy is killed. Bob is left to comfort Josephine, and tells her that some day, when he has made something more than a gambler of himself, he will come and claim her.

THE HEAD OF THE FAMILY (July 4).—The cast: Hugh Van Schuiyer (Ben Wilson); Rutb, his wife (Edna Hunter); The Guide (Charles Ogle). Written by William Addison Lathrop. Produced by Ben Wilson.

Hugh Van Schuyler, a wealthy man, realizes that Ruth, his wife, cares little for her home life. Ruth, elegantly gowned, appears and tells her husband that she is going to the Galesworthy dance. Charley Martinex is ushered in and Ruth leaves with him. On her return home at 3 A. M. Ruth is reminded that she has not spent an evening home in a month. Losing her temper, she asks Hugh why he thinks she married him, if not for money and social position. Hugh makes no answer and she retires for the night.

The next morning, however, he announces abruptly, "We are leaving town today. Pack some heavy clothes and be ready at 4 o'clock this afternoon." Ruth protests that she will do nothing of the sort. Finally Ruth tries tears, when Hugh turns on her with great severity and says: "Do you intend to do as I bid you or not?" Later we see a queer group of travelers coming down the trail of a wild and rugged country. As they come nearer we recognize Hugh and Ruth, accompanied by a guide, who is leading a pack mule. In due time they arrive at a camping place, where money and social position count for little. Ruth sits down in anger and despair. The guide unloads the pack mule and carries their luggage into a rough shack, provided with a single bunk.

Hugh dismisses the guide after paying him, and Ruth follows her husband as he ushers her into the shack. He tells her that he brought her there to make her love him. That night Ruth sleeps in the bunk, while Hugh makes himself as comfortable as possible on the floor. Sudenly Ruth hears the howl of a wolf. She creeps out to Hugh, who is fast asleep on the floor, but hesitates about waking him, until another howl from the wolf makes her fully realize her dependence on him. Hugh kills the wolf at the first shot.

Six months later we see Ruth standing on a high craig, apparently enjoying her life in the open. Shortly afterwards she enters the shack with her arms full of ferns and is arranging them around the room when her husband enters. Hugh lays aside his gun and begins to busy himself at the fire. Ruth takes the frying pan away from him and insists on doing the cooking herself. The next day the old guide comes down the trail to take Hugh and his wife back to civilization. Ruth runs into the shack and begins to pack. On meeting Hugh outside she is astonished to find that he has no intention of accompanying her, as he holds out his hand and bids her good-by. His masterfulness has conquered her, and won her heart as well. She returns to the shack and when he enters she tells him that she wants to live in the shack—with him. In a moment they are in each other's arms.

THE CLEVER MRS. CARTER (July 4).—The cast: Helen Carter (Edith Roberts); Owen Carter (Harry Benham); Mazie Mabelle (Finita De Soria). Written by Catherine Carr. Produced by George Ridgwell.

Helen Carter, a young society matron, is in love with her husband, but her devotion begins to pall upon him. He finds various excuses to remain in town over night away from his country home. Mrs. Carter investigates and discovers one Mazie Mabelle, a dancer, to be the object of his interest. By chance, Mazie and Mrs. Carter both patronize the same dressmaker. Through the voluable fitter, Mrs. Carter learns that Mazie is socially ambitious, and she arranges to meet Mazie. She explains the situation to Mazie and offers not only to pay her a large sum of money, but to introduce her socially if she will help her in a scheme to cure her husband of his infatuation.

Mazie, who considers Carter only as a stage-door Johnny, assents, and Mrs. Carter arranges a house party at her country place to meet the well-known dancer. Carter is delighted at first. Mrs. Carter is seemingly blind to his infatuation, and to his amazement, becomes the center of interest herself to all the male guests of the house-party.

By pre-arrangement, Mazie pretends to sprain her ankle, and it is impossible for her to leave the house. Mrs. Carter, who has arranged an outing for the house-party, explains to Carter that, as hostess, she must continue to entertain her guests, but he, as host, must remain with Mazie. Carter, who has become desperately bored with Mazie, begins to realize the difference between a beautiful woman of mentality and culture, and a beautiful woman dependent entirely upon her physical attractions. His enforced attendance upon the dancer becomes a torture, and he finally collapses, proclaiming his devotion to his wife, and insisting that his friendship for Mazie is purely platonic.

Mrs. Carter realizes that the cure is genuine. Secretly she pays Mazie, who returns to the white lights delightedly, after the boredom of the country, leaving Carter a chastened husband, and Mrs. Carter a satisfied wife.

THE MAN ACROSS THE STREET (Two Parts—July 6).—The cast: John Warren (King Baggot); Mrs. Warren, his wife (Edna Hunter); Dr. Carl (King Baggot); The New Maid (Neilie Slattery). Scenario and production arranged by Henry Otto.

John Warren, a traveling salesman, arrives home unexpectedly. Upon entering his wife's bedroom he finds a beautiful evening dress which he has never seen before. Presently Mrs. Warren returns in a taxi. She is surprised, as she did not expect him for a week. She tells him that she will be economical in order to keep the maid whom she has just hired. The phone rings and Mrs. Warren answers it. In answer to his question Mrs. Warren tells John that it was her mother. In reality it was Dr. Carl.

Warren's suspicions aroused, he sets a trap for his wife. A week later he announces that he is compelled to start on a business trip unexpectedly, and that he will be away two weeks at least. Immediately after her husband's departure, Mrs. Warren calls up Dr. Carl, who tells her over the phone that he will get ready at once to take her for their usual drive. Instead of leaving town, Warren rents a room commanding a view of his house from across the street. Dr. Carl enters his house, and soon afterward Warren sees his wife, handsomely gowned, drive off with him in an automobile. Warren is now convinced that Dr. Carl is his wife's lover. That night, Warren observes the doctor and his wife return and enter the house. The maid, who has been asleep on the couch in the dining-room, peeps through the keyhole and sees them enter the reception room, where Mrs. Warren removes her wraps. The maid shrugs her shoulders significantly, and lies down again on the couch.

Soon afterwards, the doctor takes leave of Mrs. Warren. Warren makes up as the doctor, and after stealing the doctor's hat, coat and gloves from his office, goes to his own home. His wife, who is in her night dress, believes him to be the physician, and embraces him. Suddenly Warren removes his false mustache and his wife recognizes him. Her screams are heard by the maid in the dining-room. We see Warren with his fingers at his wife's throat. The maid looks through the keyhole of the dining-room door, and sees Warren come out of the bedroom and leave the house. The maid finds Mrs. Warren dead on the floor and telephones to the police station. Warren again returns to the doctor's house and, after replacing the coat and cap, he leaves.

Meanwhile, a detective accompanied by policemen, arrive at Warren's house. The detective picks up the doctor's gloves that Warren has purposely left behind him, and the maid declares that they belong to Dr. Carl, being positive that it was he who killed her mistress. Dr. Carl is tried for the murder of Mrs. Warren and is pronounced "guilty" on the maid's testimony. The picture now fades into the next scene where we see King Baggot seated with a manuscript in his hand. Seated alongside of him is his director, Henry Otto, also holding a manuscript. Mr. Baggot tells his diretcor that he thinks the story he has just read from the manuscript will make a wonderful photoplay, and the company seated about them, are equally enthusiastic.

THE RIVER GODDESS (July 7).—The cast: James Courtney (Matt. Moore); Jane Haven (Jane Gail); Daniel Emmett (Tom Lehmann). Written by Franz May. Produced by Matt. Moore.

Night hangs over the river. The River Goddess beckons and a tortured soul, James Courtney, heeds the call of the silent black waters. Another tortured soul, Daniel Emmett, approaches him. Courtney tells his companion that be is a poor artist and that he loved a girl who seemed to return his love, but her parents objected to his suit. As his story is visualized, we see the girl telling him that she must obey her parents. He folds her in a fond embrace and she agrees to elope with him. We next see Courtney waiting for the girl at the trysting place. A newspaper flutters to his feet. He picks it up and runs across a paragraph stating that Jane Haven has eloped with her chauffeur. Life holds nothing more for Courtney and he seeks surcease of sorrow in the river.

Dan tells his story. He had wealth and position, but loved the green woods better than society. In the visualization of the story we see him out hunting. Meanwhile, Jane Haven, who is driving with her mother in a car through the forest road, spies a deer. She jumps out of the car and runs towards it, just as Dan raises his gun to take aim. The shot hits the girl instead of the deer and both Dan and her mother run toward her as she falls to the ground. They carry her to Dan's hunting lodge, where she is tenderly cared for. Dan believes he has found his ideal and the girl promises to marry him. After her recovery he receives a letter stating that she has gone with the man she really loves. Life has no further interest for Dan, and he, too, seeks the river.

Courtney now takes a picture out of his pocket and hands it to Dan. Dan stares at it in wonder, and produces another picture from his own pocket. The pictures are identical. Presently they are approached by two policemen, who announce that they are under arrest. In the police station they are charged with being suspicious characters. A car stands in front of the station, which is recognized by Courtney. The officer tells him that it is Jane Haven's car and adds: "You are both under suspicion of being the chauffeur who ran away with her.

Both Courtney and Emmett hand their cards to the officer at the desk, who orders them to be released. The two men look at each other as they reach the sidewalk, and Courtney says: "So the girl ran away with the chauffeur. It is not worth while sacrificing one's life to the River Goddess for a girl like that. Let's drown our sorrows at the shrine of Bacchus."

THE WISHING LAMP (July 6).—Produced by H. C. Mathews.

Gordon Griffith (played by himself) is the spoiled son of a wealthy woman. He has tired of all his toys and wishes that he were poor and then he would not have to learn so many lessons, but could play all the time with Skinny's gang. His mother's old gardener receives a letter from his former sweetheart recommending her boy to his care. The boy arrives and the gardener takes him in. The boy soon wishes he were rich, so that he would not have to work so hard. A few days later the Mrs. Griffith sees Gordon throw his book, "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp," impatiently to the floor. She says that she shall take it to a boy who will appreciate it, and gives it to the gardener's boy. Gordon meets the other boy and they express their wishes to each other. Mrs. Griffith overhears them and forms a plan. The gardener's boy suggests finding an Aladdin's lamp, so that they can wish on it.

Mrs. Griffith arranges so that they shall find an antique lamp. That night when they are both asleep she has them carried to each other's houses, and when they wake in the morning they think that their wishes have come true. But, of course, they are not satisfied long. Gordon finds the other boy's work monotonous and is homesick for his mother, while the other longs for the gardener and the comfort of his old clothes. When they have learned their lesson, Mrs. Griffith has them changed back again, and everybody is happy once more.

A GAMBLER'S GAMBOL (July 5).—The cast: The wife (Fatty Voss); the husband (Harry Coleman).

Hubby was a gambler and was in the habit of making a gambling den out of his home. Wife objected to this and tried to get hubby interested in other things more important in life. But just at the time she thought she had him away he pulled a phony suicide on her and hied himself home where he was joined by his old pals, and the game started. Wifey discovered his clothes on the bank of the lake and thought hubby was gone for good, so she prepared herself with a new mourning bonnet and clothes suitable for the occasion and returned home a broken-hearted widow.

But to her consternation, she discovered hubby and his pals playing the game. Wife, to teach them a good lesson, appropriated the kitty and none dared to take it from her. The pals were considerably upset over this action and fled the house after an attempt to have the money restored. Hubby was given his dose of discipline, but it was so strong that he decided to end it all by drowning. He was deterred from this action, for when on the bank of the lake and ready to plunge in, a large alligator was seen waiting to receive him with open mouth. That night the pals returned to the house with a professional house-breaker to get their money, but wifey darling received them with open arms. Instead of getting the money, they all landed in the place where had men go. Hubby returned about this time and after a few words she received him with open arms.

GETTING THE GOODS ON GERTIE (July 9).—The cast: The husband (Reggie Morris); the wife (Gertie Selby); the detective (Dave Morris).

Reggie was a jealous husband and made life miserable for himself and his pretty little wife, who was not allowed to speak to a gentleman. In his desperation he sought the services of a famous detective to get the goods on his wife. The famous detective was taken to the house and Reg introduced him to Gertie as his father, who, thinking to make father feel at home, gave a great deal of attention to him. This angered Reg very much, but when he called the detective to account he secured very little satisfaction from him.

During the first night in Reg's home the famous detective, though, showed his real colors, for he was nothing more than a porch climber. Hardly had the house become quiet before he sought his able assistant and together they started to secure the silverware and other valuables. The assistant, however, muddled things up a bit by trying to shower his attentions on the maid, who resisted so strongly that she attracted the attention of a sleeping cop and aroused Reg from his peaceful slumbers, thereby landing himself and his boss in the hands of the law.

AN ALL AROUND CURE (July 8).—The case: Mr. Fussy (Charles Conklin); Mrs. Fussy (Lillian Peacock); Mrs. Nagg (Gale Henry); Mr. Nagg (William Franey); Dr. Takslifeasy (M. Moranti). Written by W. Farmer. Produced by Allen Curtis.

Mrs. Fussy, wife of a chronic grumbler, decides to test the truth of the saying, "Absence makes the heart grow fonder." She engages passage on a steamer bound for London. Mr. Fussy is broken-hearted and, after writing a farewell note to his wife, goes to commit suicide in the ocean, but on the way he meets with an accident. At the hospital he is told that he will lose his memory. Mrs. Fussy learns of the sinking of a steamer by a submarine and decides to return home. She finds the note and is led to think she is a widow. She puts out a sign of rooms for rent and goes into mourning.

Mr. Nagg, who suffers torments from a cruel wife's tongue, decides to teach his wife a lesson. He places a farewell note and a bundle of his clothes on the beach and goes off in search of a furnished room. By accident he obtains a room at Mrs. Fussy's. Meanwhile Mrs. Nagg becomes involved in an unfortunate incident with Dr. Takslifeasy, the inventor of Biff, a sure cure-all. She falls for his proposition and the doctor hustles off to get his testimonial published. An accident occurs in the editorial rooms of the Daily News and Mrs. Nagg's picture appears as the principal in a suicide instead of in a medical testimonial. Mr. Nagg thereby learns with sorrow of the death of his wife. Mrs. Nagg is furnished with the proof of her husband's death and she obtains a position as nurse in the hospital. Under the careful nursing of Mrs. Nagg, Fussy is on the road to recovery of everything except his memory.

Seven days and nights of mourning and Mrs. Fussy falls for the wiles of Mr. Nagg, who falls violently in love with her, while Mr. Fussy is fascinated with his nurse. Mr. Fussy suggests that he purchase a set of costumes and that the nurse accompany him to the Fifth Ward masque ball. She agrees, and Fussy sets out to visit a bargain store, where he finds a big sale on cowboy and cowgirl outfits. Mr. Nagg obtains the consent of Mrs. Fussy to forget her mourning long enough to accompany him to the big ball. She agrees and Nagg buys an outfit exactly like the ones purchased by Mr. Fussy. Dr. Takslifeasy decides to advertise Biff in front of the dance hall. Nagg and Mrs. Fussy, in their masques and costumes, recognize the doctor, who has a room with Mrs. Fussy, and they decide to play a trick on him. In a ludicrous series of scenes the doctor proves a tartar and poor Nagg is given a dose of Biff without the removal of the cork. Mr. Fussy and Mrs. Nagg arrive on the scene and they are attired in the same outfit as Nagg and Mrs. Fussy.

The masques are the cause of a ludicrous mixup. Nagg and Fussy both get a novel dose of Biff and are carted home by their escorts. When the unmasking comes Mrs. Nagg discovers her partner is none other than Nagg himself. Mr. Fussy, who is mentally afflicted, does not recognize his wife. Nagg and his wife arrive at Fussy's in search of explanations and new complications set in. In a novel manner Dr. Takslifeasy furnishes the remedy for a chaotic mind and Fussy is restored to reason, but no one gives the poor doctor credit and he bows his head in anguish at the way a cruel world had rewarded a genius.

GOLD SEAL.

THEY WOULDN'T TAKE HIM SERIOUSLY (Two Parts—July 4).—The cast: Jimmie O'Day (Herbert Rawlinson); Lucille (Agnes Vernon); Her Mother (Jean Hathaway); Her Cousin (Charles Gunn); Vera (Betty Schade). Written by Ben Cohn. Produced by William Worthington.

Jimmie O'Day was born with a smile which stuck to him throughout his boyhood days. Jimmie, although a wealthy young man, was not an idler. Much of the business sense that had made the elder O'Day a power was possessed by Jimmie. As a consequence of his genial disposition, Jimmie was a favorite with both men and women, but his friends refused to take him seriously. It had become an expected thing for Jimmie to propose to every girl he met. Vera Langley had been the victim of more proposals than any other girl in the crowd, and she earnestly pleaded with Jimmie to pick out some new model.

Jimmie and Lucille, Vera's friend, who has arrived from the city with her mother, become interested from the start and soon the usual proposal pops out, but it is serious this time. They are interrupted, however, by Vera, who tells Lucille of Jimmie's proposals. Lucille is hurt, but manages to laugh the matter off. Jimmie insists that he is serious. Finally they have a break and for the first time in many days Jimmie's smile is absent. He absently picks up a photograph of his father, across the face of which is written, "never be a quitter." Jimmie takes courage from this message from the dead and decides to pursue his case with vigor. Lucille refuses to see him, but Jimmie writes Lucille a long letter every day telling her of the hungalow he has selected for their new home and asking her advice about decorating it. Lucille at first tears the letters up unread, but her curiosity finally gets the better of her. Enclosed within one is the diagram of her new home and she can't resist the desire to go over and look at it.

In order to convince Jimmie that she believes he is playing with her affections, Lucille calls to her assistance her cousin Frank. She arranges things so that Jimmie will see her and Frank apparently in a lover's embrace, but Jimmie decides that he will have her in spite of fate. The next day he calls at the house to win or lose on one last effort. Lucille and Frank are in the room when he forces his way in, and they quickly hide. The mother is in on the plot and she tells Jimmie that Lucille and Frank are out looking for a house. Lucille sees how hard Jimmie is taking his defeat, and decides that he has learned his lesson.

The next day Lucille and Frank decide to look over the bungalow, and while they are inside Jimmie drives up. Lucille sees him and hides. As Jimmie stands dejectedly in the room, he hears a smothered sneeze and hastily pulling the curtains aside, he discovers Lucille. He begins an ardent proposal and Lucille laughingly tells him if he had only proposed like that in the first place they both would have saved a lot of heart-ache.

RED FEATHER.

IT HAPPENED IN HONOLULU (Five Parts—June 26).—The cast: Mr. Wyland (George Hernandez); Mrs. Wyland (Lule Warrenton); Mabel Wyland (Myrtle Gonzalez); Jim Crane (C. Norman Hammond); Larry Crane (Val Paul); Clarence Velie (Fred Church); Lord Percy (Bertram Grassby); Detective Boggs (Jack Curtis). Written and produced by Lynn Reynolds.

Larry Crane is the junior partner in the firm of Crane & Son, wholesale fish dealers. Larry will not take his work seriously, and arrives at work nearer noon than morning. In his spare time Larry finds much pleasure in the company of Mabel Wyland. The two are only waiting until Larry becomes settled before they marry. Mabel's father has risen from the bottom, and is now the proud possessor of a shoe factory. Mrs. Wyland carried the family affairs with a high hand, and her husband is a henpecked individual. Mother has definitely decided that Mabel shall be married to Percy Weatherfield, a fortune hunter with an attractive title. Mabel, being typically American, prefers the careless, happy-go-lucky young fish merchant. Father, being henpecked, is afraid to come out with his own opinions.

Larry and his father have a quarrel and the old man proceeds to give him some advice, the substance of which is that he must display more interest in the business. The Wylands are giving a week-end party in their mountain home to celebrate the Fourth of July, and Mother Wyland has it all arranged so that Lord Percy and Mabel shall have a clear field. Larry, however, securing an invitation to the house party, succeeds in side-tracking Lord Percy. Larry enlists the assistance of young Bobby Wyland, who is persuaded to throw a bunch of small fire crackers beneath the bench on which Lord Percy is sitting, but in addition to the small ones given him by Larry, he puts in several large crackers of his own. The explosion is a great one, and Lord Percy is rendered unfit for duty for some time.

Bobby is reprimanded, and laying the blame for his punishment to Larry and Mabel, he determines upon revenge. This opportunity comes while he is scouting about with a camera and is enabled to catch Larry and his sister in a very lover-like embrace. This picture is developed and reaches the hands of Mother Wyland. She immediately has a fit, and nothing but an ocean voyage will help her. Clarence Velie is the head clerk in the Cranes' establishment, and, unknown to the firm, has been secretly taking money from them. Mabel notifies Larry of their departure and he implores his father for a vacation to accompany them. His father refuses to allow him to leave. There is a sad parting between the two sweethearts, but on the pleasant journey Lord Percy is given every assistance. He and Mother Wyland come to an agreement by which they agree to pay him a dowry of $50,000 in return for marrying the girl.

A big consignment of money is received for Crane & Son and Larry is sent to the office to get it. Clarence hears the arrangement and his cupidity is aroused by the large sum. Larry secures the money but reaches the bank too late to deposit it. He is forced to bring the money to the office and put it in their safe. Larry receives a telegram from Mabel telling him that her parents insist that she marry Lord Percy on the third of July, and she begs him to meet her in Honolulu so that she may marry him instead. When Larry brings the money to his father he tells him of this latest development and again pleads to get off. Father refuses again and tells him he can take $5,000 of the money he has as his share in the business and go. Larry thinks the matter over and decides to take his father's offer. He takes $5,000 of the money, leaves a note to his father and places the balance of the money in the safe. He then hurries to catch a boat for Honolulu. The boat doesn't sail until morning and Larry spends the night there in order to be sure to get off.

Clarence sees Larry place the money in the safe for the night. He erases the word five and makes it fifteen thousand, taking the additional ten thousand himself. The shortage is discovered next morning and father, believing Larry to blame, decides to give him a lesson. A detective is put on the track, who catches the same boat on which Larry sails. The detective's orders are to make a quiet arrest and bring the prisoner home without publicity, and he decides to wait until they reach Honolulu before acting. Upon their arrival at Honolulu, Larry is arrested. The detective finds the $5,000, but no sign of the additional $10,000. Larry asserts his innocence and claims there is a mistake. He eludes the detective and joins Mabel at their hotel. Father is told of their scheme and agrees to witness the ceremony, and they set out for the church. Detective Boggs pursues, but doesn't succeed in locating them until after the ceremony. He takes Larry in charge.

Larry is thrown into the native prison and Mabel and her father, returning to the hotel, break the news to mother. Larry wires his father that there has evidently been a mistake, that he only took the $5,000. Jim Crane orders an investigation. Velie's dishonesty is discovered and the forged check is traced to him. Meanwhile Larry languishes in a Hawaiian prison. The Fourth of July approaches and Larry is taken out with the other prisoners. He refuses to work and has a fight with the guards. It would not be a holiday without appropriate celebration and Larry decides to have one of his own. He lights the fuse that is connected with a big store of dynamite and yells for the prisoners to run for their lives. Mabel and her mother have returned to the prison and meet the fleeing prisoners. Just as Larry is about to be taken back, Detective Boggs receives a cable from Larry's father stating that there has been a mistake and Larry, realizing that he is forgiven, makes plans for a happy honeymoon with Mabel.

THE WAY OF THE WORLD (Five Parts—July 3).—The cast: John Nevill (Hobart Bosworth); Beatrice Farley (Dorothy Davenport); Walter Croyden (Emery Johnston); Mrs. Nevill (Gretchen Lederer); Peter Sturton (Jack Curtis); Mr. Lake (C. Norman Hammond); Mrs. Lake (Adele Farrington); Mr. Van Norman (Herbert Barrington). Scenario by F. McGrew Willis. Produced by L. B. Carleton.

Peter Sturton, a politician and head of the machine, decides to support Walter Croydon, a rising young attorney, for the position of Governor of the State. Croyden is in love with Beatrice Farley, a young society belle, but they have not been formally engaged. Croyden, on the evening that he is to take Beatrice to a society affair, meets Sturton at the club, and becomes slightly intoxicated. He is in this condition when he calls upon Beatrice, and she refuses to accompany him. The next morning Croyden comes back and apologizes for his condition of the night before, and begs Beatrice to forgive him and promise to marry him. She tells him that she is leaving for Europe and that she will give him an answer when she returns.

John Nevill, a man about town is a personal friend of Sturton's. Nevill is unhappy married, but he and his wife still continue to live together. Nevill decides to go abroad. As the boat is ready to sail, Nevill sees Beatrice bid Croyden goodby and come on board. He is attracted by her beauty, makes her acquaintance on the ship, and becomes infatuated with her. He begins paying her attention without telling her that he is married. Beatrice comes to Monte Carlo where Nevill is staying, and finds that she loves him in return. Nevill proposes that they go to Paris to be married, and Beatrice consents; but, friends of Nevill's, who have arrived from the States, betray the fact that he is already married.

Beatrice, heartbroken, begins packing to return home. Nevill pleads with her to no avail. After Beatrice leaves, Nevill takes to drink, and Mrs. Nevill persuades him to return home with her. In the meantime, Croyden has married Beatrice, and has become Governor. Sturton calls upon the Nevills and asks them to attend the inaugural ball to meet the Governor and his bride. Nevill discovers that the Governor's wife is no other than Beatrice, and he becomes crafty in an attempt to win her away from Croyden. Beatrice sees the ravages of dissipation in Nevill, and listening to his plea, promises to become his friend. They are seen much together, but Croyden is of an unsuspicious nature, and Beatrice believes that there is nothing wrong in her friendship for Nevill.

Time elapses and Croyden is running for re-election. Sturton has a falling-out with the Governor and is opposing him. The Croydens now have a child—a boy a few months old. A friend goes to Croyden and tells him that the people are beginning to talk of Nevill's being seen so much with Mrs. Croyden, but the Governor refuses to believe it is more than idle gossip. To turn the people against Croyden, Sturton causes an article to be published saying that while the Governor has been away on a tour of the State to secure votes, his wife has been seen continually in the company of a certain man whom the paper does not mention. When Croyden sees this, Nevill tells bim that surely he can trust his wife, and Croyden dismisses the matter from his mind.

Nevill decides upon a plan to turn Croyden from his wife, believing that Beatrice will then come to him. He gives Sturton a paragraph to put in the papers on the day before election. This is the day that Croyden's baby is to be christened. As the guests are gathered for the christening and Croyden is preparing to leave his office, he sees a copy of the newspaper hinting that the child's father is not Croyden but the man who Beatrice has been seen with so much of late. Overcome Croyden drinks heavily and returns when the christening is in progress, quite intoxicated. He breaks in upon the affair, denouncing Beatrice and forbidding her to name the child after him and accuses Nevill of being the father of the child. This Nevill refuses to deny. Locking himself in his room, Croyden refuses to see Beatrice or let her explain.

Beatrice, in terror over her husband's action, and realizing that Nevill alone can clear her name, decides to make him right her. She arrives at Nevill's and is admitted to see him alone. Nevill believes that he has won and tells her that he will give her a letter clearing her name, but that she must pay the price. He writes the note and then locks the door and confronts her. In the meantime Croyden has learned where she has gone, and follows. Beatrice struggles with Nevill to preserve her honor, and finally, in desperation, catches up a sharp paper cutter and stabs him, dropping the weapon to the floor. Croyden enters, accompanied by Mrs. Nevill, and finds Nevill dying. Realizing that he is on the verge of death, the good in Nevill comes to the surface. He picks up the knife and tells them that for love of Beatrice, and because she has repulsed him he has attempted suicide. He takes the note clearing Beatrice's name from his pocket and gives it to Croyden. Croyden realizes that this will clear him in the eye of the people. He begs forgiveness of Beatrice and as she grants him this, they glance down at Nevill, who falls back dead.

VICTOR.

BEHIND THE VEIL (Two Parts—July 5).—The cast: Diana Terrace and Harriet Terrace (Mary Fuller); Mrs. Terrace (mother) (Inez Marcel); Wilbur Steele (Niles Welsh); Perry Jarvis (Johnnie Walker). Adapted for the screen by Elizabeth R. Carpenter. Produced by Lucius J. Henderson.

Diana and Harriet Terrace bear the remarkable physical resemblance that usually marks twins, but their natures differ. Diana is self-willed and turbulent. Harriet is considerate and reserved. Wilbur Steele, a wealthy young author, blind from overwork, and anxious for quiet and seclusion, is to board with Mrs. Terrace. On the day of Wilbur's arrival, Diana catches a glimpse of him as she is on her way to boarding school. Harriet frankly welcomes Wilbur, who takes her hand says, "Although I cannot see you, to hear your voice is a pleasure." Harriet helps Wilbur with a book he is writing, which is to be called "Behind the Veil."

Diana, during a tennis game, scrapes an acquaintance with Perry Jarvis, a lively young college chap, and goes motoring with him. Wilbur announces to Harriet that the doctor has given hope that an operation on his eyes may prove successful. He then tells her of his love for her, which the girl reciprocates. The mother notes the progress of their love affair, and is overjoyed at Harriet's prospect of happiness. Some months later, Mrs. Terrace suffers from an attack of appendicitis, and is taken to the nearest city for an operation. As Harriet is starting with her mother for the railroad station, the rural postman sees her and hands her a letter from Wilbur, in which he tells her that he is about to undergo the operation on his eyes and hopes that she will be the one he will see first of all.

At the boarding school, Diana defies the principal, and is ordered to leave for her home. Meanwhile, Wilbur has had his eyesight restored, and returns during the absence of Mrs. Terrace and Harriet. Diana returns from boarding school on the same day. Wilbur mistakes her for her twin sister, and Diana plays the deception to the limit. A country curate alights from a buggy and makes a request for a glass of water, and Diana suggests to Wilbur that they surprise her mother by getting married. Wilbur assents, and the curate makes them man and wife. In order to keep up the deception, Diana writes to her mother, still in the hospital, telling her that when Wilbur mistook her for Harriet, some evil genius prompted her to keep up the deception, and that she has married him, and the only thing to do now, is to let him think that she is Harriet. Mrs. Terrace, on reading the letter, tries to conceal it, but Harriet gets possession of it, and is brokenhearted.

Five years pass without the deception being discovered. Diana neglects her little boy, David, so that the care of the child falls largely to her sister. Wilbur has lost interest in his work. He says, "While blind, Harriet was my inspiration, since my marriage to her, I have experienced a blindness of soul." Diana meets her former college friend, Perry, who makes ardent love to her, and she leaves home, after writing a note stating that she is going away with Perry, adding that Harriet will look out for the boy.

Mrs. Terrace becomes ill and on her deathbed, hands Wilbur a letter, telling him to read it after she is gone. In this letter, Mrs. Terrace reveals to Wilbur that during his blindness he had loved Harriet, but that Diana had deceived him and she urges Wilbur to bear his sorrow courageously. Wilbur endeavors to persuade Harriet that, rightfully, she ought to be his wife, but the girl tells him that society is merciless, and that she can no longer remain under his roof to care for his boy. With heavy heart she seeks the solitude of her desolate home. We now see Diana in a quaint Spanish cafe, where she engages in a desperate flirtation with a young Spaniard, who has been dancing with a pretty brunette. The Spanish girl notes the young Spaniard's attentions to Diana, and in a frenzy of hate and jealousy stabs her to death.

Wilbur is shocked on hearing the news of Diana's death, but the barrier that separated him from Harriet is now rolled away. He seeks Harriet and assures her that David needs her, but that he needs her even more than the boy.

ANY YOUTH (July 7).—The cast: Any Youth (Allen Holuhar); Circe and Faith (Dorothy Phillips); Temptation (Hector V. Sarno). Written and produced by Allen Holuhar.

This story is an allegorical fantasy dealing with the eternal conflict between the better and baser self of the average human being.

Any Youth has made a moderate success in the city and writes to his sweetheart, Faith, begging her to come to him. Faith is happy in her parents' home, but she is willing to try the difficulties of a new home with the man she loves.

Temptation, the ever-present good-fellow who is always on hand, visits Any Youth. He tells him of the good times in store for a young man and pleads with Any Youth to go out with him and make a night of it. There is a battle between the better and baser self of Any Youth. He is torn between the two, but finally the baser self prevails and the better self is driven into hiding. The baser self takes him in charge and they make the rounds of the gay White Way. Although this better self is driven out he is not discouraged, and patiently awaits the return of Any Youth.

Temptation is at the elbow of Any Youth and leads him from one thing to another. His better self feels the call to duty and again enters the contest with his baser self. This time Any Youth heeds the counsel of his better self and returns to his apartment.

The next day Faith arrives at the home of Any Youth. While Any Youth is waiting to welcome her, Temptation slips into the room and uses his arts. Any Youth's baser self, angry at his defeat of the night before, pleads with Any Youth not to marry the girl; he shows him that if he marries her, he will be tied for life. He tells him that women are like flowers, to gather and throw away. His better self enters the contest and the two have a bitter struggle. Fearing he is losing the fight, the better self tells the youth that he should remember Faith is a woman, as his own mother. The selves fight, but finally the better self crushes the baser self and Youth goes to meet Faith. The better self, smiling, accompanies the two to the minister's and afterwards proves a faithful guardian in the home of Any Youth and Faith.

GAUMONT

SEE AMERICA FIRST, NO. 39, "Montgomery, Ala." (June 7)—This release is comprised of an interesting trip through the historic Southern city of Montgomery, Ala. The Civil War has been over for more than half a century, but to millions of Americans it still looms so large that pictures of Montgomery, the city that was the first seat of government of the confederacy, still have a sentimental as well as historical value. The Alabama State Capitol building is perhaps of greatest interest in this release. It was originally erected in 1847, and rebuilt three years later after having been destroyed by fire. Here the Confederate Government was organized. From its steps Jefferson Davis delivered his inaugural address. There are views of the Davis home, the MacMonies Memorial Fountain, and other places of interest.

REEL LIFE, NO. 6 (June 11).—Construction of the great steel and concrete $1,000,000 bridge stretching across the Tennessee river from Chattanooga is one of the main features of this subject. Caisson workers, with the "sand hogs," the daredevil steel men, hanging to girders as they swing hundreds of feet in the air, and various other interesting views in connection with bridge construction work are shown.

Another of the subjects treated in this release shows one of the Gaumont-Mutual photoplay directors handling 2,000 "extras" in a production screened at the Gaumont studios in Jacksonville. These pictures were taken in conjunction with the filming of "The Idol of the Stage," a Gaumont-Mutual Masterpicture.

Further pictures of the Gaumont animal studios, taken under the direction of Elwin R. Sanborn, photographer of Bronx Park, New York, where one of the greatest collections of wild animals in the world are housed, are contained in this issue of Reel Life.

SEE AMERICA FIRST NO. 41, "Birmingham, Ala." (June 21).—This important Southern city, frequently referred to as the "Pittsburgh of the South," is the subject of this exceptionally popular Mutual release. Situated in the heart of the coal, iron and limestone district of the country, it affords an exceptionally interesting subject. The city itself, built partly on the slopes of Red Mountain, named from its outcrop of hematite iron ore, which extends many miles in every direction, has been pictured in all its magnificence. In addition, the cameraman takes the spectator on a tour of the blast furnaces, quarries, and the rolling mills, the huge coal fields, aggregating over 9,000 square miles and to other points of interest in and about the city.

REEL LIFE, NO. 8, "How a Big City is Kept Clean" (June 25).—The methods followed by the administration of New York in keeping the largest city on the American continent free from dirt, are shown in this release. These pictures were photographed under the personal direction of the Commissioner of Street Cleaning, and bring into play the many novel inventions used in the cleaning up of a big city.

One of the most interesting features of this release shows the methods in which the thousands of tons of garbage collected each day from New York streets, are disposed of as well as the great incinerating plants used in its destruction.

Other pictures show the flushing of the streets with millions of gallons of water, a daily occurrence, and a number of interesting subjects in connection with this all important work of keeping the city clean.

In addition this issue of Reel Life presents a continuation of the new celebrated Gaumont animal subjects, this particular release treating with the snail, its growth, habits, etc. How gasoline can be handled without fear of explosion is also depicted. These pictures were taken under the auspices of a noted New York chemist and afford a wealth of instruction to the unexperienced in the handling of this explosive.

THE HIDDEN FACE (Three Parts—July 6).—The cast: Francis Claude (Henry W. Pemberton); Grace Goodman, afterward Mrs. Royal (Iva Shepard); May, her daughter (Mabel E. Trinneer); Tom Carroll (John Reinhart); Martin Preston (Alexander Gaden); Helen Claude (Lucille Taft); Judge Green (James Levering);

Jerry Drake (Myles McCarthy); Dr. Jordan (Fritz Orlamond); Middleton (Charles W. Travis); Harris (James Davis); Joe Trimmer (Albert Macklin). Directed by Edwin Middleton.

Little does Rev. Martin Preston know when he falls in love with pretty Helen Claude that he must ask her hand of her uncle, Francis Claude, the candidate for congress. Preston is a foundling, and upon that fact Claude bases his refusal when he visits the village where Helen has been visiting. The whole village is talking of the affair, as it even divides attention with the great murder mystery. Judge Green has been murdered. Joe Trimmer, the miller, has been accused and convicted on circumstantial evidence.

Mrs. Royal, keeper of the village inn, is extremely friendly with the young minister, and tells him that she will see that Francis Claude gives his consent. She reveals herself to the politician as Grace Goodman, the girl he had deserted in his youth. Mrs. Royal has a daughter about to marry Tom Carroll, a quick tempered young man of the village.

To secure Claude's consent, Mrs. Royal reveals to him that Martin Preston is their child, born after he had left her promising to return and marry her. Claude is overcome by this confession. Not only does he write a note to his niece, who has returned to the city, giving his consent, but he also indicates in it that he wishes Preston to inherit his property. He also secretly gives a sum of money to Tom Carroll, since he is about to marry Mrs. Royal's daughter.

That very night Claude is murdered in the same manner that Judge Green met his death, being stabbed by an assailant with his face hidden who reaches through the curtains at the window. Mrs. Royal enters the room at this moment, rushes to the window, and sees the minister on the lawn. Immediately she thinks of him as the murderer, seeking vengeance upon his recreant father. She determines to keep the secret, but the struggle is doubly hard since the man her daughter is to marry is accused. The circumstancial evidence is the money Claude gave him secretly just before his death.

Even the new residents in the village are wrought up over the affair. Led by Jerry Drake, a pleasing fellow who spends his time at the inn, indignation runs high. Finally suspicion even points toward the minister as a party to the crime. Preston is arrested. His mother watches the detectives who have invaded Preston's home. While doing so she sees a muffled figure visiting a dry well and concealing a package. The man is extremely like her son, whom she thinks guilty of murder. She accosts him, and the man grapples with her. Screaming for help, detectives run from the minister's home upon hearing her cries. They seize the man whom they find is Jerry Drake. Evidence of the several murders is found upon him. He is led off to prison. The innocent men are released, and soon wedding bells ring for the two happy pairs.

MUSTANG.

THE DEMON OF FEAR (Two Parts—June 30).—The cast: Thomas Marsh (Frank Borzage); Anna (Anna Little); James Oliver (Jack Richardson); Rebecca Oliver (Queenie Rosson).

James Oliver, has a delicate little wife about to become a mother. Their family doctor advises Oliver that he must not become engaged in any physical encounter or get hurt in any way or it would kill her.

Soon thereafter Oliver is at the bar when a rough patron of the place invites him to drink. Oliver declines and on insistence by the rough, asks for soda water, which the rough throws in Oliver's face in disgust. Forced to fight or acknowledge himself a coward, Oliver admits cowardice. They all jeer him, when an old man, a quiet spectator of the scene, tells the following story visioned in and out in pictures. He takes for his text the statement that "No man who will admit that he is a coward for a principal is one."

He depicts the story of a young man, Thomas Marsh by name, who had a feeling of fear born in his physical being. He met a girl Anna, with whom he fell in love. One day he recoiled like a child from the sight of a snake which his sweetheart bravely killed. Another occasion, he shook off her timid grasp and ran for safety from a threatening bull, leaving Anna to faint dead away in the path of the animal. Anna thought she never could forgive this, but seeing in it the fear of a child, she overlooked it and married him.

Later, living by the sea, a dreadful storm arises. She looked out and saw two fishermen wrecked and clinging to rocks. She urged Marsh to go to their rescue but he hung back afraid. She launched the boat herself while he buried his affrighted face in the sand.

Suddenly the boat capsized and Anna was cast helpless into the waves. With superhuman courage Marsh plunged in, rescued her, placed her on the sand, and burning with the mad desire to earn her praise, plunged in again and brought back the men.

Free at last to go to Anna's side, he found her dead. God had given him back his birthright of courage but had taken the love of his life forever.

As the old man finishes his story with tears in every word and a sob of loneliness and pain at the end, the loafers interpreting its meaning, file out one by one. Oliver takes the old man's hand, presses it and departs. The stranger had told his own heart story to prove his point.

THE GOOD FOR NOTHING BRAT (Two Parts—July 8).—The cast: Daisy Crane (Margaret Gibson); Robert Manning (William Clifford); Silas Hodges (Frederick Montague); Mary Hodges (Marguerite Foss); Miss Phillis (Janet Sully); Mrs. Gray (Myra Davis Dowling). Directed by Charles Swickard.

Daisy Crane, the village good-for nothin' and town charge, is farmed out for her keep to Mrs. Gray. Mischievous, and eternally at war with the rest of the children, Daisy is a burden to the town's people and particularly to the school mam. After a stormy episode at school, the board decides to employ a male teacher and engages Robert Manning, a man of deep understanding. He is instructed not to spare the rod, and special attention is directed to Daisy. His handling of the good-for-nothin' seems to awaken a new spirit in the girl and soon she realizes that Manning is a friend.

In his determination to develop what good there is in the girl, he gives her his undivided attention outside of school hours, all of which affords the busy-bodies of the community food for scandal. The gradual taming of Daisy becomes obvious and a deep friendship springs up between the child and the school master.

One day Daisy sees Manning walking with two other girl pupils of the class and she becomes jealous. Her childish attitude at viewing the situation causes her to run away and brood. In the meantime, Mrs. Gray institutes a search for her and the scandal mongers of the town and the school board suggest that Daisy might be found at Manning's home.

At last Daisy decides that she will return a little book of poems to the school master which had been given her as a present, she being unable to control her jealousy. She goes to his home and as she is about to enter she sees the school board coming toward the house. Fearing them she secludes herself close by.

Manning receives the members of the school board and invites them to enter his home. While they are inside, Daisy gains an entrance to the place and hides in a closet in another room. The board members tell of Daisy's disappearance and almost openly accuse the school master of having her in hiding in his place. He therefore invites them to make a search. This startles Daisy and she runs for the window to escape, but in doing so attracts attention by the noise she makes.

Manning is astonished. The deductions are inevitable. Manning cannot explain and Daisy will not. Realizing he must act quick, Manning announces Daisy as his future wife stating he will marry her on the morrow. The members of the board leave the house and stand gossiping outside, one urging that Manning be informed of the origin of the child. Manning escorts Daisy to her home and as he arrives he is confronted by Silas Hodges and others who tell him of the Brat's life. Daisy steals away and Manning finds only traces of her at the lake.

Jerry approves of the proposition. He is taken to a tailoring establishment and togged out in great style. He then goes to his new friend's home and there meets his proxy wife. Jerry almost forgets that it isn't really his own wife and arouses the jealousy of the young husband, but things are smoothed over.

The trio go to the uncle's home. Jerry and the girl are introduced as man and wife to the uncle and his daughter Violet. Jerry is very attentive to Violet and this shocks the uncle. Throughout the day the young husband is on pins-and-needles because of the affectionate actions of Jerry toward his wife but he is unable to interfere, fearing his uncle might suspect something.

The climax is almost reached when the uncle announces that he is desirous of having Jerry and his wife remain overnight as guests. The wife is vexed but Jerry is is very much pleased. Retiring time arrives but when Jerry attempts to enter the room of his proxy wife, the door is slammed in his face, so he takes refuge in another room, which proves to be that of Violet.

The uncle detects his nephew entering the guest's room and he is furious. He is next bewildered when he hears Jerry's voice coming from Violet's room. While the uncle and butler attempt to gain an entrance to the guest room. Jerry comes sprawling out of Violet's room and there is a merry-mix-up. Violet faints and as she falls, the young husband catches her. His wife arrives on the scene and sees her husband in an attitude of embracing Violet. A hair pulling match follows.

Unable to stand it any longer, the husband confesses that he is to blame for everything. The uncle, happy to restore order and quiet, forgives his nephew and all join in a happy celebration, as Jerry transfers his affection to Violet.

THE SECRET OF THE SUBMARINE (Episode No. 7—Two Parts—July 3).—The cast: Cleo Burke (Juanita Hansen); Lieut. Jarvis Hope U. S. N. (Thomas Chatterton); Olga Ivanoff (Hylda Hollis); Gerald Morton (Lamar Johnstone); Hook Barnacle (George Clancy); Satsuma (William Tedmarsh); Calvin Montgomery (Joseph Beaudry); Sextus (Harry Edmondson); Mahlin (George Webb).

The launch with Lieut. Hope and Cleo Burke drifts until daylight, when a landing is made on Santa Cruz island. Olga Ivanhoff, the Russian spy and Gerald Morton, who fears Cleo will inherit his uncle's estate, float ashore on the island after a night of terror. Hook Barnacle, Hope's friend, comes ashore on the locker, Mahlin and Satsuma, also seeking the submarine secret, reach the island in a boat they have stolen from the lighthouse keeper.

Mahlin sees Hope hastening to Fitzmaurice's cabin. Hope in turn discovers Mahlin on the same mission. A race starts between Mahlin and Hope to see who first will reach the cabin. Olga and Morton are witnesses to this race. They also attempt to reach the cabin in advance of the others. Fitzmaurice leaves the treasured volume in his cabin and goes out for a stroll. Satsuma reaches the cabin first and runs out with the book just as Hope arrives.

Hope pursues Satsuma. Satsuma runs to a sheer cliff. He and Hope fight a revolver duel, each being hidden behind rocks. Satsuma exhausts his ammunition in a desparate attempt to escape with the book, he jumps over the cliff into the ocean. Hope runs down to his launch. Satsuma almost successful in his hazardous method of escape until he is pursued by a shark. He puts the book on a piece of wreckage and starts out for shore. Hope gets the book. Returning to the landing place the propeller of Hope's launch is damaged by sea weed.

Hope and Cleo arrange to remain all night with Fitzmaurice, so that Hope can make repairs to his launch the following day. Hook is to sleep in the launch. Mahlin and Satsuma steal dynamite from a construction camp and plant it under Fitzmaurice's cabin. Satsuma lights the fuse and peers into the window. Cleo sees him. She screams in fright. The cabin is blown up, the heavy walls falling over the cliff to the jagged rocks below. How do Lieut. Hope and Cleo Burke escape death?

BEAUTY

WHEN ADAM HAD 'EM (June 28).—The cast: O. Graidy (Joseph Sheehan); Mrs. O. Graidy (Carol Halloway); Sirius Roma (John Steppling); Mrs. Marle (Mary Talbot); Mlle. Parisienne (Al. Santell).

Mr. O. Graidy was wont to spend his evenings at the club. His wife rather liked him to stay at home and his little jaunts were the cause of much worry on her part.

One evening when O. Graidy was at the club, Mrs. Marle called on Mrs. O. Graidy and when she found that her hubby was a fly-by-night she offered some unusual advice. She suggested that Mrs. O. Graidy join the "Serpen-Cult," a mysterious clan ruled by one Sirius Roma, a man from the Far East, who had evolved the theory that "so as a serpent can charm its prey, so shall man charm his fellow man." The idea sounded good to Mrs. O. Graidy, so she told Mrs. Marle to lead her to it.

Sirius was there waiting for them and gave Mrs. O. Graidy a demonstration of crystal-globe-gazing that quite surprised her, especially when the crystal spoke and told her that the man she could best charm was her husband. Then Sirius charmed a snake by way of further proof, so Mrs. O. Graidy paid her fee and took her booklet, a snake to practice on, and departed homeward to wait for hubby's coming.

But hubby was in with a "real" bunch at the club, and fun was promised when one of the boys entered with a note from a certain Mlle. Parisienne, who wanted to meet a "leetle" fellow who frequented the club by the name of O. Graidy. O. Graidy couldn't see the joke, but the boys got the chic Mlle. on the phone and O. Graidy was forced to talk to her. Her voice charmed him and he promised to meet her at Rectaire's at midnight.

But hubby got mixed up in the time and when he awakened to a realization he discovered that it was long past the witching hour. Then while wifey was having a time with the snake, who had escaped from his urn, hubby wended his weary way homeward. When he did arrive home, wifey was napping in her boudoir while the snake snoozed in his urn-house on the mantel where she had placed him.

Hubby threw himself into the divan before the fire and recounted the day's deeds. He was a "charmer" because the snake just naturally poked his head from the urn and capered about to O. Graidy's surprise. His commands to the snake, which obeyed him, awakened Mrs. O. Graidy and she set herself for the ordeal of charming her husband.

She came into the living room, wild and starey-eyed. Her husband thought she had gone insane until he saw the booklet which she held in her hand and like a flash the whole thing cleared. He pacified his wife into believing that he was "falling for her charms," but capped a climax when he reached and took a saber with which he decapitated the "serpent in his home." Wifey screamed and carried on, but hubby was firm. A compromise was finally effected and hubby agreed to give up a few of his evenings at the club if wifey would cease the "charming stuff" and leave serpents to their own wiles.

THE GINK FROM KANKIKEE (July 2).—The cast: The Gink from Kankikee (Orral Humphrey); Imknott Hepp (John Gough); Lichten Hepp (Lucille Ward); Hugo Tistick (Joe Massey).

The Gink from Kankikee steps forth from the coldness of a refrigerator car, decked for Eskimo weather, when the local freight train pulls into the station. The Gink discovers a brook and immediately goes there to perform his toilette. Imknott Hepp, a councilman aspiring to the mayoralty, awaits the coming of his constituents, who are about to discuss his nomination. His daughter, Lichten, awaits only one of them—Hugo Tistick, a ward boss, who affects affection for Lichten merely for political reasons. Tistick's arrival is followed by a conference, but before the ward boss will give his consent, he desires private conference with the prospective candidate.

The Gink from Kankikee finishes his ablutions, hides his traveling portfolio, and goes out in search of excitement. When he passes the home of Hepp and hears loud voices followed by gesticulating silhouettes on the window shade, he listens. So he learns that Tistick offers Hepp his support providing Hepp gives him a corner on the Ant-paste industry and guarantees his option by also giving him his daughter. The Gink is appalled and sees the quavering Hepp about "to sign the fatal papers." The Gink suddenly stepped through the window and told Hepp that he would see him elected even if Tistick didn't like it. Tistick leaves, swearing vengeance.

Thereafter the Gink enters the home life of Hepp. Lichten thinks him a mere "Butt-in" and will not favor him with a smile. The Gink goes into the forest to rest his troubled head on the hosom of Nature. The Gink overhears Tistick planting a "hole" for him between two famous landmarks. The Gink waits to hear the full plot and when the plotters leave he steals out and moves the landmarks. On his arrival home he receives a mysterious letter informing him that if he would come to the two landmarks he would receive information that would be exceedingly valuable to him. He merely smiles and awaits developments.

That eve the villain goes to the forest to see if he has snared his victim, and while looking for the landmarks falls into the grave he dug for another. Here he raves while the Gink informs Hepp that his only rival is safe in the hosom of Mother Earth. Lichten overhears the assertion and goes out to look for her supposed lover. She falls into the "hole." The councilmen's meeting is held without Tistick and Hepp is nominated for mayor. The Justice of the Peace goes to report the news to the local paper and while jogging through the forest he, too, falls into the pit.

Tistick forces the Justice to perform a hasty marriage ceremony, figuring that as a son-in-law he can force Hepp into any agreement. But at home Lichten is missed, and the Gink, fearing the truth, leads the mob through the forest to the "hole" where they are just in time to stop the ceremony. Hepp endeavors to make the rescued Lichten see the sacrifice that the Gink has made, but she snubs him and he leaves. He returns to his former manner of living.

THANHOUSER

THE WINDOW OF DREAMS (Three Parts—June 15).—The cast: May Cameron (Grace De Carlton); her fiance (Bert Delaney); newly-married couple (Clifford Gray, Betty Lawson); Martha (Carey L. Hastings).

May Cameron had intended to devote her life to becoming a great musician. But she met Jack and ambition was drowned by love. She was of a jealous disposition, and at first Jack laughed at her attitude. Then there were delightful lovers' quarrels and still more delightful peacemakings, but it hurt Jack more than he admitted that she did not trust him. "I'm afraid of losing my Joy," she said, "I wish I could imprison it, so I could be sure it would never escape!"

This saying of hers gave Jack an idea. He bought a golden canary that sang like Happiness, incarnated and, with the help of Martha, the janitress, he smuggled it into her apartment. Then he wrote a note, saying that the bird's name was "Joy," and May could always keep him safe in his cage. But he knocked the door of the cage open, and Joy escaped from his cage. They had quite a time catching him. Then Jack locked him up and hurried away to keep his appointment with May. She had been spending the afternoon walking in the woods and was waiting for him at their accustomed meeting place. When he was late, she became impatient and as the time passed, angry and suspicious.

When Jack arrived at last and refused to tell what kept him—for he wanted to keep "Joy" as a surprise—May became suspicious and a quarrel ensued. Jack, provoked, declared that if May really loved him she would trust him. May was hurt and would not speak to Jack, so he went tramping up the hill to walk off his ill temper. He never noticed men getting the fuses ready for the blast, and as he went on by them they did not warn him. But when they came down the hill to warn May she called to Jack, and she saw him up above the danger line, and gestured to him to stay there until after the explosion.

But to the lover the waving meant nothing more than that May was penitent and wanted him, and he hurried towards her—towards the place where the flame had just come to the end of the fuse. There was an explosion and when the smoke cleared away May crawled toward the still form and called Jack wildly. But it was no use in ever calling his name again, for he could not answer. May was crippled for life by the accident. She sat in a wheel chair, and all day long she stared across the court at the vacant window, where she used to see Jack, smiling over at her.

Then one day the apartment across the court became tenanted by Bob and Sue, a newly married couple. One day months later May saw Sue bending over some sewing and handling with reverent joy a half crocheted bootee. May then got out her wedding dress and Martha was delighted to see the invalid take such an interest in making a baby dress out of the dainty white gown she intended wearing as a bride. But troubles came to the little home across the court. Bob lost his position, and he did not want to tell Sue for fear of worrying her. So when she asked him for money to buy a wonderful christening robe, she had seen advertised, he had to refuse her, and he would not tell her why.

Bob looked in vain for work, and when he came home later and later every night and was more and more abstracted Sue began to wonder perhaps there was someone else? And then one day, when Bob was very late and Sue had retired to her bedroom in tears, May saw him come in and sit down at the window to read a letter. Sue saw, too, as she peeked through the crack of the bedroom door, and her suspicion became almost a certainty. She came out and demanded the letter. He refused, for it was about his position and would have told her the secret he was trying to keep from her. And across the court May grieved when she saw the quarrel.

Then a little gust of wind came and snatched the letter from Bob's hands and carried it across the court and deposited it in May's lap, just as Bob turned from the window and went away with bowed head. May looked at the letter and the light of understanding burst into her face. She called across the court to the young wife, and Sue went over. May showed her the letter, and in a moment Sue was a contrite wife who beckoned across the court for Bob to come over, too. Then May told them that they must allow her to lend them the money to tide them over their difficulties until the husband could get another position. At first he refused, but she had an unanswerable argument. She reached into her sewing basket and pulled out a beautiful christening robe, which she had been working on, and Sue received it with grateful eyes. They went away happily and May took up her violin with a great peace in her—the peace that comes in soothing the hearts of others—the Joy that is the aftermath of Sorrow.

(Rube Miller). Scenario written by Thomas Delmar. Produced by Rube Miller.

Arthur Tavares, a dishonest clerk, has heen taking money from the firm and making false entries on the books. The boss discovers a shortage, and calls Art in to find out where it has gone. Art manages to stall him for a while. The Boss's daughter comes to the office and makes her father take her to lunch. While he is away, a lady customer comes to the office. Art takes her money. Instead of putting it in the vault and entering the transaction on the books, he puts it into his pocket. The stenographer sees him. Rube, the janitor, also sees this. The stenographer demands her fifty per cent. and gets it. Art then proposes to her that they take it all and make a getaway. She is willing. They go in to trim the safe. The old office boy returns from lunch and interrupts them. They leave the money in the safe and return to the outer office. The old office boy thinks that the safe is not safe, so puts the money in the vault.

Art and the stenographer, thinking the money is in the tin box, knocks the office boy on the head, put him in the vault and make a getaway with the box. A crook comes in to see what he can steal and meets the janitor. They exchange the secret signs, for they are of the same lodge. They combine to steal the safe and tie it to an umbrella which they think will ease it to the ground. It is thrown out of the window. They run downstairs, scare Art who has stopped to break open the box and he runs away. The boss returns from lunch and discovers the loss of the safe. Rube and the crook arrive at the bottom of the air shaft and look for the safe. It is not there. Instead of the safe coming down it is flying around over the house tops. They start in pursuit of it. The office boy comes to, gets out of the vault in time to see the boss disappear out of the office. He follows him. The chase leads to the bank of the lake. The safe falls into the lake. Rube and the crook save it. Art and the stenographer, Madge and her father arrive. The safe is found to be empty, the tin box discovered to be the same. The old office boy arrives with the money and tries to hand it to the boss. Rube and the crook fall over into the lake. Art is thrown over by the boss. All three sink. The boss makes the money a present to the old office boy.

JUST FOR A KID (July 2).—The cast: Bungling Bill (Parry McQuire); Bloggie (Ben Turpin); Rena (Rena Rogers); Her Husband (Arthur Moon); Doctor (Ed. J. Laurie); Elliott (Jack Gaines).

Joshua Elliott, who loves the ladies, flirts with Rena, who is taking her baby to the park to see her father, who is the Park Commissioner. Elliott mistakes Rena's pleasantness for flirtatious inclinations, and he grabs and kisses her on the park bench. Her husband, Moon, discovers them. Snatching a camera from a child, he photographs the scene. He threatens to sue Elliott for alienation of his wife's affections. Desperate at having no money to offset the inevitable expose, should he be the defendant in a suit of this kind, Elliott schemes to find a way to obtain money enough to buy off Moon.

Bungling Bill and Bloggie, two rogues, read in the paper that a prize is offered by the leading newspaper in the city for the most perfect baby. As the prize is of no little magnitude, being $50,000 they decide to get a baby and try for the prize. They see Moon and his wife enter their home with their child. Bill schemes to kidnap the kid. He engages Moon in conversation at the front door while Bloggie enters the house through the rear. Entering the parlor, Bloggie arrives in time to find that Rena is struggling with a burglar.

The burglar floors Bloggie and makes his escape through the front door, bowling Moon and Bill over in doing so. These two then enter the house to find Bloggie with the fainting Rena in his arms. While Moon is flaying Bloggie for loving his wife, Bill steals the suitcase and the kid and safely makes his getaway to a field where he finds the contents of the suitcase are Rena's clothes. He puts them on to take the baby to the contest. Bloggie in the meanwhile flees from the ire of Moon and steals a baby carriage he finds in front of a house. He later discovers that the baby in the carriage is a pickinniny.

The police apprehend the kidnappers and they find Elliott with Moon's kid in his arms. He met Bill and paid him to loan him the child, thinking Bill in the woman's garb its mother and pursue him. Elliott arrives on the scene where Bill and Bloggie are changing clothes, Bill offering to do this if Bloggie would let him take the child he has, the pickinniny, to the contest. Bill has scarcely departed for the contest, when Elliott gives Bloggie Moon's child and runs off. Bloggie, who has stolen from Bill the money Elliott gave him for the loan of the child, runs off followed by the police. He meets Moon who is shooting mad, and beating him, arrives at the baby contest, while the unfortunate park employee and cops search the town for a trace of the kidnappers.

At the contest, Bloggie wins the prize with his son Oscar only to find the prize is offered to encourage the birth of babies in China, and for this reason the prize of $50,000 is paid in coin of that realm, equal in America to about ten cents. Bloggie shows to Bill the money he stole from him, but before the Bungling Man has time to wreak vengeance, he and his compatriot make a hasty retreat before the onslaught of the kidnapped children's parents.

AMERICAN.

THE FATE OF THE DOLPHIN (Two parts—June 26). The cast: John Grimes (Harry Von Meter); Steven (George Field); Will Dunbar (Edward Coxen); Doris (Lizette Thorne); Captain Ell (Perry Banks); Jansen (Clarence Burton).

In a seaport John Grimes is known as the most powerful man in the village. The owner of a fleet of fishing vessels, he is the employer of more than half the town folk. Grimes' one weakness is his love for Steven, his dissolute son. Doris Gray, a girl of the village, is engaged to Will Dunbar, a young fisherman. Steven Grimes meets Doris and is attracted by her. Afraid to offend the son of the biggest man in town, Doris tries to keep him at arm's length.

Captain Bill is in command of the Dolphin, one of the Grimes' fleet. He returns from a cruise and calls upon Grimes to warn him that the ship is unseaworthy and to ask him to allow him to make certain repairs. Grimes refuses and Captain Bill resigns. Grimes sends for another man who does not know the ship and turns the command over to him. Furthermore, he orders the vessel into dangerous waters and takes out all the insurance he can on her. Captain Bill says nothing but watches events. The new captain, Janson, has a hard time raising a crew.

Meanwhile, Steven has persisted in his attentions to Doris and an open break occurs between him and Will. Steven returns home more or less battered up and tells his father a story of assault. Grimes promises Steven that he will be avenged. Grimes, learning of the trouble Janson is having getting a crew, sends for him and intimates that he would not object to his shanghaing enough men to fill up. He mentions Will Dunbar, whom Janson does not know, as a type of man to man his boat. Janson goes to arrange for the work before him, dropping in at the village tavern to pick up some helpers. Captain Bill is there and overhears enough to realize that Grimes' men are after Will.

Captain Bill seeks Doris and tells her to warn Will that he will be attacked that night. Doris says she cannot warn Will as he is away with his boats. Then she has an idea. Doris writes a note to Steven that Will is away and she wants him to meet her at the landing that evening. Captain Bill delivers the letter to Steven. Steven sends back word that he will be there. Evening comes and Doris is at the landing. So are Janson and his men, though they keep concealed and wait for Doris' fellow to show up. Captain Bill, at a distance, waits for developments.

Steven arrives and Doris greets him warmly. Sure that this is the man, Janson and his gang carry Steven to the schooner and Captain Bill reports later that the vessel has sailed. Doris meets Will upon his return and tells him the story.

Morning comes and Grimes misses his son. Captain Bill meets him in the village when he inquires if Steven has been seen. Captain Bill says only that there was a man shanghaied the evening before and calls upon Will to tell what he knows. As soon as Grimes sees Will the mistake is plain.

Under the stress of emotion Grimes breaks down and pleads with the villagers to send out a rescue party—he admits the danger to the ship—confesses that it was but insurance bait, and sees the anger of the women whose men are aboard the Dolphin. They turn on him in fury despite his offer of a large reward for news of Steven.

Will, moved by the old man's grief, slips out to sea in his small boat and searches while Grimes retires to his home. Will returns with a note found tied to a floating spar—a note from Steven telling of the accident. Grimes rewards Will, who rushes to Doris with the glad news that at last they are able to marry. Back in Grimes' home he sees a vision of Steven clinging to a lonely bit of wreckage; the sea closes over him.

TANGLED SKEINS (Three Parts—June 29). —The cast: Randall Wellington (Al. Vosburgh); Laura Doone (Vivian Rich); Countess Isabel (Beverly Juneau); Mrs. Wellington (Louise Lester); Mrs. Rodney (Emma Kluge); Carl Curtis (George Periolat).

Randall Wellington, a world traveler, returns to his home in the West, after several years spent abroad, during which he has married the Countess Isabel. Coming back to his mother's home unexpectedly, he finds his mother, Mrs. Wellington, absent on a short trip. Randall meets Laura Doone, a young shepherdess of the nearby hills, and falls in love with her.

Later, upon receipt of a letter from an old friend announcing that the ship on which the Countess was reported to have sailed, was lost at sea, Randall secretly marries the shepherdess, Laura Doone. His mother, who in the meantime arrives home, accompanied by a wealthy suitor, Carl Curtis, scorns the shepherd maid and, afraid to acknowledge he has married her, Randall permits her to be banished by his mother.

The Countess sudenly appears, explaining that she missed the boat on which passage had been secured for her, and is rejoiced to rejoin her husband, Randall. Mrs. Wellington at once takes to the titled Countess, and Randall, and the latter take up their home at the mother's house. Subsequently the conduct of Carl and the Countess becomes so reprehensible that the mother orders the Countess from the house, and Randall goes with her.

Years pass. The little shepherdess places her baby in a home and goes to work in a laundry where the owner makes honorable love to her, but she declines his offers. Later, Mrs. Wellington, oppressed by the loneliness of her life, adopts a baby boy. He grows up. Randall loses his wife, the Countess, and starts a search for his lost love, the shepherdess. Failing to find her he turns to his mother and is surprised to find her rearing a little boy.

About this time Laura Doone, determined to see her child again, traces him through the home to Mrs. Wellington, appears on the scene and is rejoiced to find Randall there. There is a glad reunion, Mrs. Wellington being happy now in the possession of a reunited family.

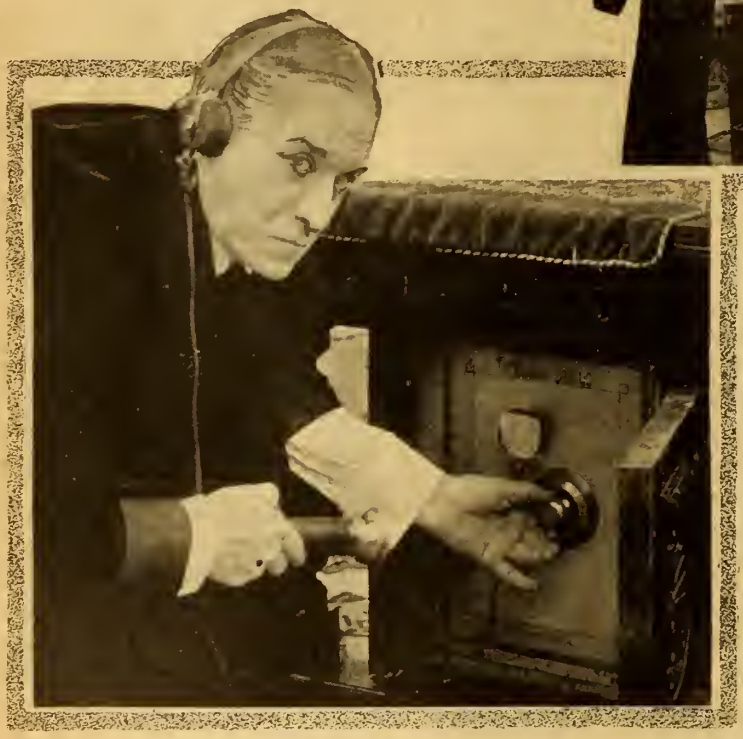
Frank Keenan and Enid Markey in THE PHANTOM

TRIANGLE PLAYS

Not since the days of the famous "Raffles" has there been a detective story so exciting, so full of adventure, so thoroughly absorbing as "The Phantom," the latest TRIANGLE PLAY with Frank Keenan and Enid Markey to be released July 2nd.

Chock full of surprises—abounding with quick action and tense moments— this TRIANGLE PLAY is different from any other in which Frank Keenan has appeared.



So cleverly is the story handled that the most enthusiastic fan won't be able to foretell the final ending. By the time Keenan has changed from Gentleman Thief to Central Office Detective and then to U. S. Secret Service Officer anything seems possible. And when the end is reached you are more surprised than ever at the outcome.

If your patrons enjoy detective plays they certainly will appreciate "The Phantom."

"The Phantom" was one of the first TRIANGLE PLAYS to be made at the new $1,000,000 studio in Culver City, Cal., shown in the illustration below.

Four modern steel and glass studios have already been erected at the new plant which occupies eleven acres while four more are being planned.

With the latest possible equipment—much of it ahead of the times—this TRIANGLE studio will continue to produce photo-plays like "The Phantom" for the benefit of TRIANGLE exhibitors. As before the policy will be to make the best possible pictures regardless of time or cost.

Other TRIANGLE Plays to be released at an early date are:—

July 9th—Charles Ray in "The Deserter."

July 16th—William H. Thompson in "The Eye of the Night."

Every exhibitor should carefully consider the question of presenting TRIANGLE PLAYS at his theatre. If YOU have not received information regarding the presentation of these motion pictures use the coupon below for information. There is no obligation.

HEARTS AND SPARKS (Two Parts—Keystone —June 4).—The cast: A Money-Lender (Hank Mann); An Ingenious Young Inventor (Bobbie Vernon); The Girl (Gloria Swanson); Her Father (Nick Cogley); A Stenographer (Billie Bennett); A Crook (Tom Kennedy).

Bobbie Vernon, an ingenious young inventor, has contrived a wireless spark-plug. He is in love with Gloria, whose father is Nick Cogley. Nick's business affairs are in a bad state. An up-state money-lender, Hank Mann, holds a mortgage on the old home and is threatening to foreclose. Mann suddenly sees Gloria, and proposes that he marry her, in which event he will cancel the mortgage. The father, having no alternative, consents to this arrangement. However, for Bobbie's sake, he determines to wait until he sees whether or not Bobbie wins his next auto race. If Bobbie wins, he will be able to marry Gloria and pay off the mortgage himself.

Bobbie's speed demonstration convinces Mann that Bobbie is a possible winner, so he hires two desperadoes to burn his car and garage. But the wireless plug saves the car by running it out of the garage automatically. On the day of the race, Mann ties Bobbie in the barn, but that is where the wireless outfit is located, so Bobbie directs his car with Gloria in it many times around the course, winning by several laps. It chances, however, that the crooks have connected a fuse to the speedometer of Bobbie's car so that at a certain velocity the gasoline tank will explode; and this situation brings about a dashing finish.

FLIRTING WITH FATE (Fine Arts—Five Parts—July 9).—The cast: "Augy Ainsworth (Douglas Fairbanks); Roland Dabney (Howard Gaye); Gladys Kingsley (Jewel Carmen); Augy's Friend (Wm E. Lawrence); Automatic Joe (George Beranger); Phyllis (Dorothy Haydel); Mrs. Kingsley (Lillian Langdon); Landlord (Wilbur Higby); Detective (J. P. McCarthy). Directed by Wm. Christy Cabanne.

"Augy" Ainsworth, a young artist, is long on art and short on funds. He sees Gladys Kingsley, a girl of wealth and social position, in the park one day and immediately falls in love with her. He manages to get an invitation to an affair at which Gladys is to be present and is introduced to her. An aunt of Gladys, however, learns that he is penniless and consequently frowns on his suit. Instead she urges her niece to become engaged to Roland Dabney, who has great wealth.

Despite her aunt's prohibition, Gladys falls in love with "Augy" and he is on the point of proposing marriage. He loses his courage, however, and when Gladys' friend Phyllis tries to help him by allowing him to practice his proposal on her, Gladys overhears the rehearsal, thinks "Augy" is faithless and promptly accepts Dabney.

"Augy" determines to commit suicide when he finds how things have turned out, but when he starts to inhale gas he discovers that the last bit of gas has run out of his quarter-in-the-slot meter and he has no quarter. He goes to a saloon to get change and meets "Automatic Joe," a notorious gunman who is supposed to do murder for pay. He arranges with Joe to shoot him at some unexpetced moment and then goes back to his room to await his fate.

Then a wonderful change takes place. Gladys learns the truth; breaks her engagement to Dabney and sends for "Augy." A relative also dies and leaves him a million dollars. His inheritance makes the aunt only too willing to accept "Augy." Then poor "Augy" remembers that Joe is to shoot him at some unexpected moment. He remembers Joe is given to wearing disguises—particularly disguises of beard effects, and he thinks every man with a beard is Joe. He takes to wearing a beard himself and finally goes to the police station. A detective assigned to the case disguises himself with a beard and "Augy" thinking him Joe has the run of his life trying to escape from the detective, who merely wants to consult with him.

In the meantime Joe has been converted by the Salvation Army. He is anxious to return the money "Augy" has paid for his own killing. He sees "Augy" just as he is returning from church with his bride and when he approaches to give him the money, scares the life out of the poor bridegroom, who leaves his bride and flees for his life.

Bing's Home Entertainer

Here's a little machine, simple in its construction, and easy of operation, for which there is a place in every home.

It projects motion picture film as perfectly in the home as is possible in the average theater.

Light is provided by a baby arc, supplied with current from the ordinary electric light socket, controlled through a special rheostat.

The baby arc develops 800 candle power, with about six amperes of current. The rheostat supplied is suitable for 110, 150 or 220 volts.

Pictures projected are about 6 x 8 feet in size and splendid results are possible with a throw up to twenty-five feet.

Standard size film is used, making every film exchange in the country a constant source of supply for subjects. Reel boxes are of 1,000 feet capacity.

Set up and ready for use, the machine measures 31 inches long, 31 inches high, and 10 inches broad. The lamphouse is 10 x 6. Weight of machine, complete with arc and rheostat is 24 pounds. Packed for shipment, the weight is 55 pounds.

There is absolutely no fire risk—"Safety First" has been the watchword in construction.

GEORGE KLEINE.

THE MISHAPS OF MUSTY SUFFER ("Blow Your Horn"—No. 1—Series 2—June 21).—Musty appropriates a bicycle but proves to be a poor rider, as far as the "safety first" principle is concerned. In attempting to avoid running down a lady intent upon tying her shoe laces in the middle of the sidewalk, Musty crashes through the door of a telegraph office, temporarily wrecking the establishment. Seeing his bicycle, and being in need of a messenger boy, the telegraph operator drafts Musty to fill the job. Our hero is magically provided with an A. D. T. uniform and put to work. To prove he is a real, genuine messenger boy, Musty promptly falls into a deep sleep on the bench.

The lady fair finds it necessary to have a lot of long poles taken away from her house and sends for a boy. Musty is awakened with considerable difficulty, and only after unique methods, savoring of the physical rather than the psychological, are applied. On his way to the residence of the lady fair, his bicycle breaks down and he is forced to "get out and get under." While he is lying prone on the roadway, an automobile backs over him and stops with one of the rear wheels resting on Musty's chest. Musty finds this very annoying indeed, and appeals to a passing cop. The cop, after examining the chauffeur's license and chatting with him for some time, orders him to proceed, and Musty is released from his predicament. Musty goes on to his destination and manages to get the poles through the door by widening the latter with a saw.

His next trip is to the home of another lady, and while waiting for her to give him the package he is to deliver, he is subjected to a terrible shock. The lady goes behind a screen, and immediately various bits of feminine wearing apparel are tossed over the screen, alighting at Musty's feet. Musty's face shows his mental agony, but pretty soon the screen falls and shows that the buxom lady of the house has merely been searching a trunk to find the box that Musty is to take away.

In the park, a pretty nurse maid persuades the ever-obliging Musty to mind the baby carriage while she talks politics to the park policeman. Musty tires of rocking the carriage and stops. Then he gets a terrible shock, for the infant, who wears long whiskers and weighs nearly two hundred pounds, raises up from the perambulator and commands: "Rock me, ya big bum, rock me." And Musty rocks him—with a rock.

Musty is provided with two lively assistants, Speedy Rush and Inna Hurry, who strangely resemble lay figures, but who work beautifully in harmony with the energetic Musty. The three get into trouble with the cop, who pursues them until they fall over a cliff. The audience is not long left in suspense as to their fate, however, for Musty and his pals calmly get up and walk away.

GLORIA'S ROMANCE (Chapter 3—"A Perilous Love"—Two Parts—June 5).—The cast: Gloria Stafford (Billie Burke); Dr. Stephen Royce (Henry Kolker); Richard Freneau (David Powell); David Stafford (William Roselie); Frank Mulry (Frank Belcher); Pierpont Stafford (William T. Carleton); Judge Freeman (Henry Weaver); Lois Freeman (Julie Power).

Gloria Stafford, daughter of Pierpont Stafford, millionaire banker, and sister of David Stafford, finds herself in love with Richard Freneau, after she thinks she has been rescued from a band of Seminole Indians in the Florida Everglades by him. In reality Doctor Royce saved Gloria, and is likewise in love with the fair haired daughter of the millionaire. When Pierpont tries to pay Freneau off with a check for a large sum, the young broker declares it is Gloria he wants.

To prevent the affair going farther, Pierpont bundles Gloria back to New York and later sends her to a fashionable girl's boarding school, it being understood that she is not to see or communicate with Freneau for five years, and if at that time they still love one another, they may marry. Gloria spends her five years dreaming of Dick and enjoying a girl's pranks at college, but Freneau goes into partnership with Frank Mulry on the stock exchange and finds business a losing gamble.

Lois Freeman has married David Stafford in the meanwhile, but flirts outrageously with Freneau.

On the night Lois and Freneau are to meet at the opera for a quiet chat, Gloria returns from school, and her father celebrates by a visit to the opera. She is amazed, on coming face to face with Freneau, to find her idol has even failed to recognize her, having completely forgotten her.

GLORIA'S ROMANCE (Chapter 4—"The Social Vortex"—Two Parts—June 12).—The cast: Gloria Stafford (Billie Burke); Dr. Stephen Royce (Henry Kolker); Richard Freneau (David Powell); David Stafford (William Roselle; Frank Mulry (Frank Belcher); Pierpont Stafford (William T. Carleton); Judge Freeman (Henry Weaver); Mrs. David Stafford (Jule Power).

Richard Freneau, upon realizing that he had made a serious error in failing to recognize Gloria Stafford, when she approached him at the Metropolitan Opera House, after a five years' absence, hastened to rectify his blunder. He called Gloria from her father's box and hastily explained that she had grown so beautiful since last he beheld her, that it was scarcely to be expected that she would be instantly recognized. After an opera glass flirtation at long range Gloria and Freneau seek the quiet of the supper room for a little tete-a-tete.

There Gloria is discovered by her father and hustled back to the opera box, in disgrace. Lois Stafford has noted the flirtation and getting Freneau in a quiet corner she proceeds to express her displeasure at his conduct. David, coming upon them suddenly, becomes suspicious that his wife is growing too familiar with Freneau. The following week, at the suggestion of her Aunt Hortensia, Gloria gives a coming-out party to which she manages to have Freneau invited. When the two are interrupted in the conservatory, Gloria asks Freneau to call the following day, promising him a sleigh ride behind her ponies if he will come. He consents just as the chapter ends, believing the sleigh ride must end in a proposal.

GLORIA'S ROMANCE (Chapter 5—"The Gathering Storm"—Two Parts—June 19).—The cast: Gloria Stafford (Billie Burke); Dr. Stephen Royce (Henry Kolker); Richard Freneau (David Powell); David Stafford (William Roselle); Frank Mulry (Frank Belcher); Pierpont Stafford (William T. Carleton); Judge Freeman (Henry Weaver); Mrs. David Stafford (Jule Power); Gideon Trask (Frank McGlynn); Dr. Wakefield (William Burton).

Mrs. David Stafford, who has been carrying on a serious flirtation with Richard Freneau, becomes insanely jealous when she notes Freneau's attentions to Gloria Stafford, at the latter's coming-out party and her agitation is noticed by her husband, as well as others. Freneau, departing from the Stafford mansion on Riverside Drive, is amazed to encounter Gideon Trask, whose daughter he has wronged years before. He strikes Trask with his cane and hurries into a waiting auto. As the car whirls away Trask sets out to follow, but is struck down by a speeding automobile.

Next day Freneau goes for a sleigh ride with Gloria and at a lonely country inn, proposes and is accepted. Gloria, as a result of her exposure to the elements, contracts pneumonia and is put to bed by command of Dr. Wakefield, the family physician. Later she grows feverish, and David, her brother, insists on summoning Dr. Stephen Royce to care for her. Dr. Royce objects to the treatment prescribed by Dr. Wakefield and the latter quits the case in disgust, while Royce sets out to do what he can for Gloria. During the night Gloria tosses about in delirium, thinking herself again in Florida and attacked by the Seminole Indians. Just as morning dawns Gloria imagines she has again been saved by Freneau and sinks into a natural slumber.

GLORIA'S ROMANCE (Chapter 6—"Hidden Fires"—Two Parts—June 26).—The cast: Gloria Stafford (Billie Burke); Dr. Stephen Royce (Henry Kolker); Richard Freneau (David Powell); David Stafford (William Roselle); Frank Mulry (Frank Belcher); Pierpont Stafford (William T. Carleton); The man from Madame's (Maxfield Moree); Gideon Trask (Frank McGlynn).

Gloria Stafford, after being ill for many days with pneumonia, begins to convalesce under the skillful treatment of Dr. Stephen Royce, an old friend of the family who dearly loves Gloria, though the latter is entirely infatuated with Richard Freneau, a thorough cad who has had affairs with a dozen different women. One of Freneau's old flames learns of his intrigue with Mrs. David Stafford, Gloria's sister-in-law, and writes an anonymous letter to Stafford, warning him to watch his wife.

David prepares a trap for his wife, by announcing that he is going South for a week or more, and she immediately plans to take a little trip with Freneau, during her husband's absence. Meanwhile, old Gideon Trask, whose daughter Freneau has wronged, rises from a sick bed in the hospital long enough to tell his daughter, Nell, the address of Freneau, and the girl appeals to him for aid, but is ordered out of the house. To escape the reproaches of Mrs. Stafford, with whom he is honestly trying to break off relations, and to avoid suspicion by Gloria, Freneau, at the suggestion of Mulry, his partner, prepares a lot of letters on the stationery of various hotels, tells Gloria he is called away on a business trip and arranges to have Mulry mail the letters from the various cities he is to visit while on a real trip through the middle west. Freneau then plans to join Lois Stafford for one last fling, trusting to luck that Gloria, who continues to convalesce, will never learn of his deception.

GLORIA'S ROMANCE (Chapter 7—"The Harvest of Sin"—Two Parts—July 3).—The cast: Gloria Stafford (Billie Burke); Dr. Stephen Royce (Henry Kolker); Richard Freneau (David Powell); David Stafford (William Roselle); Frank Mulry (Frank Belcher); Pierpont Stafford (William T. Carleton); Mrs. David Stafford (Jule Power); Judge Freeman (Henry Weaver); Gideon Trask (Frank McGlynn).

Gloria Stafford begs so hard to be allowed to see Richard Freneau, her fiance, that Dr. Royce, her physician, decides to permit her to do so, though she is still convalescing from a severe attack of pneumonia. Freneau, who has arranged to meet Mrs. David Stafford, a former flame of his, at the foot of the Soldiers' and Sailors' monument on Riverside Drive, that night and return her letters, hastens to see Gloria, whom he is preparing to marry for her money. He gives her a necklace and tells her of being called out of the city on business, intending to go away for one last fling with Mrs. Stafford.

Dr. Royce learns of Freneau's intended flight with the wife of his friend, David Stafford, and warns him that if he plays Gloria false he will expose him. David, who has been warned by an anonymous letter of his wife's falseness, pretends to leave town and then hastens back to spy upon her. Gideon Trask, father of a girl Freneau has wronged long before, is also on Freneau's trail, seeking revenge. At midnight, Gloria, restless and unable to sleep, goes to her window overlooking Riverside Drive and gazes out through a pair of binoculars. She is amazed to behold a man she believes to be Freneau—her lover, whom she thought speeding westward. A moment later she sees Freneau choked by a dark figure that emerges from the shadows that lie about the monument, and then she beholds the murderer flee. At that she faints away. Was it really Freneau she saw? Was he murdered? And if so, by whom and why?

SONNY BOY AT THE BAT (June).—Sonny Boy was the son of two baseball fans and, being a chip of the old block, was the home team's mascot. One evening after seeing a great game, Sonny Boy begs daddy to buy him a baseball suit like the one which Johnny, his playmate, has. Daddy tells him he is too young.

That night while Sonny is being put to bed he pleads with his mother to intercede. Sonny Boy sobs himself to sleep and this is what he dreams: His pal, John, who has a baseball suit, wins his sweetheart away. She no longer cares for him. He finds a pocketbook filled with money, restores it to the owner, and is rewarded with a two-dollar bill, with which he buys a baseball outfit.

While Ruth and his rival are enjoying a lolly-pop, Sonny Boy appears in his baseball suit, and Ruth and he make up and are happy. Then John, the rival, starts out for revenge by challenging Sonny to a game of ball in which the fellow who makes a home run first wins the girl. John is first at the bat and is struck out by Sonny Boy, the pitcher for his side. To Ruth's delight Sonny Boy bats the second ball over the right fielder's head and easily makes the home run.

Ruth is happy as the boys rush in; pick him up and toss him in the air. At that moment we see Toto, Sonny's pet dog, pulling the covers off the bed, while Sonny rolls out—looks around, then smiles as he realizes it was but a dream!

was a widower with a girl baby at a time when, for the purpose of robbery, he was attacked and killed by a Chinese bandit. Because her father had befriended a wealthy Chinese Mandarin, the little Mignon was adopted by the rich Chinaman and raised for several years as his own child. Her foster-father changed her name to Ming Ti and raised her in every sense as though she had been of Chinese parentage.

After a lapse of several years there came to China in search of goods and human chattels, a merchant from New York's Chinatown, who beguiled Ming Ti into going with him to America. Ming Ti, with a native Chinese slave girl, was taken to New York by Foo Shai and lived in the home of the Chinese merchant in the heart of New York's Chinatown, where she was held by the merchant at an exorbitant figure as the price of her possession.

Lawrence Demarest has been disowned by his wealthy father because the young man refused to give up his profession as an artist and join his father in commercial pursuits. Young Demarest has secured a commission to paint a picture and seeks a Chinese girl as his model. He learns of Ming Ti and arranges with Foo Shai to have her pose. Foo Shai takes her to the artist's studio and watches while Demarest paints her picture. There ensue many exciting scenes in the den of Foo Shai in Chinatown where the girl is held captive.

Chang is a young Chinaman who has befriended Ming Ti on various occasions and twice prevents an assault upon her by Foo Shai. During the progress of the second encounter, the young Chinaman stabs and kills Foo Shai. This clears the way for young Demarest to rescue Ming Ti and the marriage of Demarest and Ming Ti eventuates.

THE LOVE GIRL (Five Parts—June 10).—The cast: Ambrosia (Ella Hall); her aunt (Adele Farrington); her cousin (Betty Schade); the boy next door (Harry Depp); the maid (Grace Marvin); Swami (Wadsworth Harris). Written and directed by Robert Z. Leonard.

Ambrosia is a sweet little girl, of tender heart and of loving disposition, who lives near to nature in fancy and ideals. Her mother dies, and she is sent to an aunt in the city, whom Ambrosia calls "Aunt Grouchy," to be reared as her own child.

The aunt is of dignified and austere disposition, far different from Ambrosia's dead mother, and the atmosphere is a decided change from the freedom of country life and the tenderness of mother love. Ambrosia makes friends with the boy next door, and these two greatly enjoy their romps and play together.

Ambrosia's cousin is in love with a poor young man, and her mother objects to his attentions desiring for her daughter an advantageous marriage, regardless of the girl's wishes or thoughts of love. "Aunt Grouchy" is a disciple of Hindu mystics, and consults the "Swami," seeking his aid.

The "Swami" practices hypnotism upon the daughter of "Aunt Grouchy," influences her to send a note breaking off the affair with the young man, and finally kidnaps the girl and holds her for ransom. Ambrosia and the boy next door discover where the girl is held a prisoner, and inform the police.

While the den of the kidnappers is being raided, the "Swami" is at "Aunt Grouchy's" in the act of collecting the ransom money, under guise of a tribute to the Buddhist's god, but when the Secret Service men arrive and arrest him, his true character is exposed.

The raid is accomplished at a critical moment, the girl is saved from harm, and when "Aunt Grouchy's" eyes are opened she realizes her past shortcomings. Conquering her proud disposition, she gives her sanction to her daughter's marriage to the poor young man and Ambrosia lives happily ever after.

DIANA (Three Parts—May 29).—This picture is a photo dramatization of the Mythology story of the loves of Apollo and Diana. In the course of the picture, Diana and her nymphs are shown as discovered by Acteon while bathing. In revenge for Acteon's intrusion, Diana transforms him into the form of a stag. Acteon is pursued and ultimately killed by his own hunters and hounds. The picture then proceeds to depict the loves of Apollo and Diana and their homes in the sun and in the moon. With fidelity to the legend of Mt. Olympis their ultimate union is shown.

TWEEDLEDUM TORPEDOED BY CUPID (June 19).—Tweedledum, a farm hand, elopes with the daughter of his employer. He is pursued by a German Marine Inventor and an English Lord, who are both favored suitors for the girl's hand. Tweedledum and Tweedledee embark on board a steamer for their honeymoon, when the Marine Inventor launches a torpedo which blows up the steamer. After performing heroic rescues Tweedledum and Tweedledee are finally alone at last.

---

TWEEDLEDUM'S BUSY NIGHT (June 26).—Tweedledum is the victim of a night-mare. The plot deals with the adventures of a club man who has fallen in love with his neighbor's wife, which ends by Tweedledum waking up to find that it was only a dream.

---

TWEEDLEDUM'S SCRAMBLED HONEYMOON (July 3).—This picture depicts Tweedledum and Tweedledee as a perplexed bridegroom and bride. Tweedledum's mother-in-law tries to part the young couple immediately after their marriage and succeeds for a time. It is not until after she has been left in suspense at the end of a rope hanging from a lofty cliff in the Alps, that the mother-in-law is finally brought to reason.

THE AMERICAN BEAUTY (Pallas—Five Parts—June 29).—The cast: Ruth Cleave (Myrtle Stedman); Mrs. Ellsworth (Myrtle Stedman); Paul Keith (Elliott Dexter); Herbert Lorrimer (Howard Davies); Martin Ellsworth (Jack Livingston); Mrs. Cleave (Adelaide Woods); Cleave (Edward Ayers). Director, Wm. D. Taylor.

Martin Ellsworth, a wealthy American, and his young wife and baby are returning from a trip to Newfoundland. The liner catches fire and in the ensuing panic the Ellsworths become separated from their baby. The child is picked up at sea in an overturned boat by Cleave, a fisherman. Being told the child's parents are dead, the Cleaves adopt it. The adopted daughter grows up and, as Ruth Cleave, works in a sweat-shop. Mrs. Cleave, becoming a widow, is forced to scrub for a living. She is employed by Paul Keith, a wealthy young American painter.

An Itallan artist friend of Keith's gives a dinner to celebrate the sale of a painting. All his artist friends of many nationalities are invited, including Keith. At the dinner each painter toasts his country's type of beauty. A contest is decided upon. Each artist is to paint his national type of beauty, for a prize of $1,000 offered by Herbert Lorrimer, patron of arts and beautiful women. Lorrimer visits each studio in turn apparently watching the painting but in reality much more interested in the models. Keith tries several beautiful models but each lacks what he requires most—soul.

Mrs. Cleave, the scrub woman, falls sick and Ruth loses her job, also. To make ends meet Ruth goes to do the scrubbing at Keith's. There in a very dramatic scene Keith finds the beautiful woman with a soul in Ruth Cleave. She becomes his model and a wonderfully beautiful picture is painted. His painting is awarded the prize. "The American Beauty" has won. The nationality of Ruth is challenged and cannot be established. Keith's picture is disqualified. Lorrimer becomes infatuated by Ruth's beauty and entices her with the promise of employment to come to his wonderfully luxurious studio. There she is drugged but Keith hears of the appointment and rescues her from Lorrimer.

The realization then comes to Paul Keith that he loves Ruth Cleave. Ruth, because of her lowly station in life, refuses his offer of marriage. Ruth's own father, now an art patron through "The American Beauty" painting, finds her. In a series of very dramatic scenes Myrtle Stedman, the star, plays the roles of both mother and daughter at the same time. An example of phenomenal photography. Established in her new station of life, Ruth in a pretty ending, asks Paul Keith, "If he thinks she would make—a model—wife?"

WORLD-EQUITABLE.

WHAT HAPPENED AT 22 (Frohman—Five Parts—June 26).—The cast: Louise Lloyd (Frances Nelson); "Dave" Wilson (Arthur Ashley); Andrew Hart (Arthur Ashley); Frank Knowlton (Gladden James); Joseph Knowlton (Frank Burbeck). Written by Paul Wilstock. Directed by George Irving.

Louise Lloyd comes to New York to obtain a position and applies to the Hollister Employment Agency, which caters to high class trade, but which is run by a crook and forger named Wilson, with a Mr. Hollister as figurehead, who meets the people and sends applicants. Wilson falls in love with Louise, but she does not reciprocate. Wilson passes a forged check and decides to leave the city till the excitement blows over. Hollister gets him a position with a Mr. White, Toledo millionaire, as private secretary. When the New York job blows over, Wilson returns. While at the White home, he has noticed that Mr. White's New York representative resembles him and plans to cash a check on White's account, disguising himself as Mr. Hart, the New York representative. This he does by forging a check for $35,000 instead of $35.00, his salary. He divides the profits with his co-conspirator, Hollister.

The bank calls to its assistance a celebrated lawyer, Edward Knowlton, who, desiring to engage a companion for his elderly sister, stops with his son, Frank, at the Hollister Agency. There the Knowltons meet Louise and offer her the position, but Wilson wants to keep her out of the situation so that, in her poverty and distress, she will accept Wilson's proposal of marriage. Unable to get Louise, Knowlton leaves orders to send someone.

When Wilson learns that Knowlton has taken up the case, he says he must get in Knowlton's house as a servant of some kind to watch what clues Knowlton finds. He tells Hollister to send Louise, where she is installed in the house as companion. By her wonderful charm and sweetness, she captivates the entire family, including the son, Frank. Wilson soon finds a way to install himself as valet to Knowlton, just at the time when Knowlton's clues lead him to certain suspicions. As these suspicions point to him, he decides to put Knowlton out of the way.

Knowlton and bis son, Frank, after dinner, have a parley on the division of the Knowlton property. The will, as made, gives Frank the greater share of the property and Frank's sister the smaller part, whereas Frank believes his sister's share should be increased to equal his own. When the family has gone to bed, Wilson finds Knowlton alone in the library. Wilson strikes, there is a struggle, and he leaves Knowlton for dead, after having stolen and changed the will so that it goes back to the original unequal division of the estate.

The body is found and the police called. Wilson, who is supposed to have left for Brooklyn, enters. Questioned by the police, he says the only suspicious circumstances that he noticed was the quarrel over the will between the son and father. The police get the will, notice the change in the son's favor, and accuse the son of the murder. Louise, who has had her suspicions of Wilson, takes the will and says, "Whoever changed this will left a finger mark and blot on the paper." Wilson slyly looks at his hands and. as he does so, Louise calls the police's attention to his queer acting. She orders him arrested, and Wilson, frightened, says, "But I have no blot on my hand," and she holds out the will and says, "Nor is there such a blot on the paper." Wilson, reallzing that he is tricked, attempts to escape, but is caught and led away by the police. Louise is taken into Frank's arms as the doctor comes from the father's room saying that Mr. Knowlton will live.

ACCORDING TO THE CODE (Essanay—Five Parts—July 10).—The cast: Basil Breckenridge, formerly Capt. Knighton (Lewis S. Stone); Mrs. Knighton, at 20 years (Marguerite Clayton); Mrs. Andrews, formerly Mrs. Knighton, at 65 years (Florence Oberle); Judge Andrews (E. H. Calvert); John Andrews, his son (Sydney Ainsworth). Directed by E. H. Calvert.

Basil Breckenridge, a broken old man on the verge of starvation, but concealing it because of his proud southern ancestry, is set upon by young ruffians on the street. The old man becomes infuriated and gives the young leader a shaking. His father, Ald. Connors, the city's political boss, happens along and attacks the old man, who strikes at him with his cane. The sword blade inside falls out and the police arrest him on the charge of assualt with intent to kill.

Col. Wright, attorney for the friendless, takes his case. It comes up before Judge Andrews. John Andrews, protege of Boss Connors, has just been made assistant district attorney, and is there to prosecute. The aged defendant sees the scar on the judge's forehead and hears his name. He sees the two as rival captains in the Civil war, the Confederate picking up the wounded Union officer and taking him to his home. He recalls that when he was believed dead the Northerner took his young wife and baby home with him. Both are near him now, the first time he has seen either for decades. His wife sits behind him, his son is prosecuting him. The scar on the judge's forehead is the mark of their secret duel.

A sword, awarded Capt. Knighton for gallantry, and pawned by the aged defendant the day before, is introduced at the trial but the defendant disclaims ownership. Recognition comes on the part of Judge and Mrs. Andrews and in chambers they plead with Connors and their son, but to no avail. The prisoner's head sinks to his breast when the jury returns. He does not rise when bidden. "Your honor," says Col. Wright, after a pause, "The defendant has taken his case to a higher court." Reverently, Judge Andrews and his wife place the historic sword in the still hands of the late defendant as they are the only persons in the crowded courtroom knowing to whom it rightfully belonged.

The House of Quality

from the ceiling is the model of a human heart. As it swings back and forth the members open and close their hands so as to represent the beating of a heart and repeat the words, "Slower, slower, slower."

The Maynard household are worried about Myra's illness. The symptoms are such that the family physician is unable to diagnose the malady. Dr. Alden examines her and remarks that her illness is not altogether natural. He also tells her that he is testing a machine invented by a Dr. Abrams of San Francisco. At this point Varney calls and Alden departs. Varney registers anger and remarks to Myra, "You have promised to marry me and you are allowing Alden to come between us." Myra tears Varney's engagement ring from her finger and offers it to him. He refuses to take it and says that he, too, has delved into the occult and a fearful thing has happened to him. He describes to Myra how, one night, a bright star seemed to come from his forehead and float away. This, he says, was a part of his soul which only marriage with a woman like Myra could bring back. He says he is now what is known as an "elemental" and without Myra's love his soul must die when his body dies. Myra is sorry and replaces the ring. Varney departs.

Dr. Alden is in his laboratory testing Dr. Abrams' gyrograph for registering thought energy, but is interrupted by the entrance of a Miss Stowe, who comes with a letter of introduction from Professor Bert Reese. Dr. Alden tests her physical powers by means of the gyrograph and is pleased with the result. He receives a telephone message from the Maynard home which informs him that Myra has had another fainting spell. While his workmen hastily take the machine apart he calls a taxi and departs with his instruments and the young woman for the Maynard home. Meanwhile Varney again appeals to the Master for Myra's life to be spared in order that she may marry him. The Master answers, "Only if I fail, and in the end I never fail."

Arriving at the Maynard home, Dr. Alden introduces Miss Stowe to Myra and her mother and remarks that Miss Stowe may be able to relieve Myra of much psychic work. He proceeds to set up the gyrograph and seats Miss Stowe before the machine, telling her to try not to think of anything as he desires to obtain the thought influence of someone else. The mechanical arrangement of the machine makes several photographs. Alden remarks that these photographs represent words but that he is unable to interpret what they mean. Myra, meanwhile, is watching with growing jealousy the young woman whom Alden has brought with him. During this scene the workmen have been unpacking one of the other boxes and Myra catches sight of a planchette board, which she immediately wants to try. Alden is agreeable and the machine spells out the word S-L-O-W. Alden watches her closely as the planchette board starts anew and spells out the following sentence: "Your heart must beat slower-slower-slower." Myra falls back, exhausted. Alden crosses quickly to her, makes one or two hypnotic passes and says, "No, your heart must beat faster-faster-faster." This completed, he proceeds to set up an invention of his own for the condensation of thought waves. It is called the electroscope. He shows Myra the delicate electroscope with its gold leaves close together. He circles the room holding this instrument in his hand and at a certain spot the gold leaves suddenly dilate, showing that he has found the direction of the desired thought waves. He then explains that he is going to collect these waves. He shows them a Leyden jar and tells them they must take great care not to touch it.

During all this, the members of the Black Order are continuing their incantations before the swinging heart.

That evening Arthur Varney calls upon Myra, and she tells him of Alden's discovery that somebody willed that her heart beat slower and slower. Varney is startled, but controls himself. Myra says that Alden has invented a machine that will fix the person who is doing it. She takes him to her bed chamber in order to show him Alden's machine. Accidentally Varney touches the Leyden jar, and receives a terrific electric shock. Myra telephones to Alden and tells him Varney has received a shock from his instrument. Alden says he is coming right over.

Meanwhile Varney departs, goes directly to the Master and informs him that Alden has collected his thought energy and intends to hurl it back at him. Alden arrives at Myra's home and has her gaze into a crystal ball in hopes that she may see the person who is willing her destruction. She catches a glimpse of the Master, which disappears. The Master retires into his lead-lined chamber, where he is unable to find his Black Crystal and opens the door of his hiding place in order to look for it. Again Myra exclaims, "There he is!" At this point Alden touches the strange machine. There appears a bright light and electric sparks seem to fly out from the instrument.

The Master, just stepping out of the doorway of his hiding place, recoils as if from a blow, presses his hands over his heart and falls on the floor. Again Alden's science has outwitted the Black Arts.

THE MYSTERIES OF MYRA (Episode No. 10—"Levitation"—Two Parts—July 26).—Realizing that astral bodies of the Black Lodge members have lately disturbed Myra's sleep, Dr. Payson Alden arranges an astral alarm. In Myra's boudoir, he places a screen made of sulphite of calcium near her bed, which he connects by a system of wiring to a selenium cell. By its chemical properties this cell will not allow electricity to pass through it in the dark, but will in the light.

Mrs. Maynard asks Dr. Alden what it has to do with the screen. Alden places selenium cell on the floor close to the screen. He then brings two wires from the window and indicates that he is going to connect them with the cell. He explains that if an astral body, by its peculiar qualities, makes the screen glow its light will fall on the selenium and a bell will ring in his laboratory. Having completed the apparatus, Alden departs for his laboratory, where he connects the other ends of the wires to an electric bell and an electric torch which he has rigged on the wall over his bed. While these preparations are in progress the Master of the Black Order is instructing Varney and other members in the occult art of levitation in the secret chamber.

He commands one of the members to stretch full length on the floor while he hypnotizes four other members and compels their astrals to leave their natural forms. When everything is in readiness, the Master solemnly commands, "Place your astral hands on the brother's body and will that it be levitated into the air." This is done, and the body of the fifth member rises. As soon as the form is back upon the ground the Master snaps his fingers in front of the four hypnotized men, their astrals return to their real bodies and they awake. The Master then gives Varney instructions.

That night Myra gives a dance, and during the course of the evening Arthur Varney steals away and clogs the telephone bells in order that the Master's scheme might have a greater chance of success. Returning to the Black Lodge, he informs the Master that everything is in readiness. The Master, in turn, commands him to guard his body and proceeds to hypnotize himself, sending his astral body into Myra's room in order that he may see for himself how the land lays. Returning, he assumes his natural form. He then gives final instructions to Varney, who departs with two members. The Master had not taken into consideration Alden's science, for, during the time at which his astral body had been in Myra's room, he had stepped in front of the calcium screen. The presence of this astral body had caused the screen to glow, the selenium had caught the disturbance and Alden had been aroused by the bell and the light in his room. Realizing that something is wrong, Alden rushes from the house at the time when Varney and the two members are approaching their destination—the Maynard home.

In accordance with the Master's instructions Varney halts the machine in which he and the two members are driving a short distance from the house. He proceeds to hypnotize his companions, extracts their astral bodies and compels these spirits to go to Myra's bedroom and will that she be levitated out of the window. Varney, the chauffeur and another member sneak up to the house where they await the result. He commands the member to wait in a clump of bushes and tells him he will carry Myra's body to him.

A strange phenomena happens in Myra's room, the astrals of the two members slowly cause Myra's body to rise from the bed and in the stillness of the night to float out of the window, where it starts to descend slowly to the ground. Varney is waiting, and quickly gathers the girl into his arms. He hurries to the bush where he left his companion and turns the form of Myra over to his supposed accomplice. He then returns quickly to the awaiting automobile, where he proceeds to bring back the astrals to their natural forms. At this point he makes the discovery that his companion has not returned with Myra and feels that something is wrong. They hurry back towards the Maynard house. Alden was the person to whom Varney had unwittingly turned over the form of Myra. Alden carries her to the door of her home, where she awakens. In response to his ring the butler and Mrs. Maynard appear. Alden starts to explain but is interrupted by the shot of a revolver. He hastily pushes Myra into the house, slams the door and, hiding behind a pillar, starts firing in return. Varney and his companions retreat to the car and drive off. Alden starts to pursue, but his pistol is empty and the chase hopeless.

OUR FORESIGHT MEANT YOUR PROTECTION!!

Ten days after the outbreak of war we received the largest stock of French-made condensers ever shippedinto this country

That's why we are able to offer you now

THE KLEINE WHITE LABEL CONDENSER

at before-war-time prices. Foreign factories formerly engaged in the manufacture of optical goods for the entire world now devote their sole energies to war merchandise for their own countries, thus making possible the distribution of inferior, cheaply made and costly-in-the-long-run-domestic substitutes.

KLEINE WHITE LABEL CONDENSERS are ground from pure optical glass. They do not discolor—no green, pink or purple effects after a brief use. They are the only satisfactory condensers on the American market today. If you are not using them you are not obtaining maximum results from your projection equipment.

Fire destroyed everything but the J-M Asbestos Booth

Iron, sheet metal, wood—everything in the path of the flames was wiped out with the sole exception of the J-M Asbestos Booth which stood intact, in spite of the play of heat and cold water.

What a testimony for the positive fire protection these booths give—both from fire within or on the outside.

You can have this protection in the form of J-M Permanent, Semi-portable and Portable Booths.

J-M Permanent and Semi-portable Booths are strongly made of J-M Transite Asbestos Wood and angle iron, easily put up and quickly taken down. Especially adapted for permanent installation in theatres and large halls, schools and churches—highly fire resistant and insulators against electricity. Complete ventilating systems are supplied with these booths when so desired.

The Portable Booths are made of J-M Asbestos Cloth tented over an iron frame and resting on an asbestos mat. Can be set up in 20 minutes.

Made by the makers of the original J-M Asbestos Curtains.

RICHARDSON'S
MOTION PICTURE
HANDBOOK

Published by

THE CHALMERS
Publishing Co.

The third and latest edition of this valuable work has just come from the presses.

It is bigger, better, and more helpful than have been either of its predecessors by the same able author.

In daily touch with practical operators throughout the country by reason of his connection with THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, in which his PROJECTION DEPARTMENT is featured, Mr. Richardson is especially well qualified to deal with the problems which are constantly confronting the motion picture mechanics upon whose skill the industry depends so largely for its healthy growth.

RICHARDSON'S MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK is a carefully prepared guide to perfect projection.

It is an invaluable help to every single individual in the trade who has to do with the mechanical handling of motion picture film.

There are more than 400 Pages of Text and the illustrations—of which there are many—have been especially devised for this particular publication.

Substantially Bound in Red Cloth $4.00 the Copy.

Trade Papers

A trade paper is not a trade paper merely because it purports to deal with a certain class of trade. It is a trade paper in the true sense only when it most fully and competently represents that trade and is so conducted as to give the most perfect service to that trade. A trade paper is something more than a collection of advertisements and letter press. It is a paper that is so useful to the trade that it cannot be dispensed with. It is a paper so accurate in its statements and so well founded in its knowledge that its utterances are of value and authority. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD fully and completely covers the moving picture trade in all its angles. Its articles are written by men who work from knowledge and not from guess work. They have had the experience that represents the accumulated knowledge of hundreds of other practical men, and it is because of this accuracy of statement that The MOVING PICTURE WORLD is regarded as the authority wherever motion pictures are exhibited, be that Chicago or China. It is primarily devoted to the trade as a whole and it is precisely because it does, to the fullest, perform the proper functions of a trade paper that it is preferred by all and therefore offers the advertiser the fullest and most profitable service.. It takes the advertisement directly into the hands of the prospective purchaser, not merely to his desk.

Incidentally it is just because of the above facts that The Moving Picture World has been, and is still being, imitated, and is the standard for all similar publications.

There are reasons—Come and see them.

We invite you to personally visit and inspect our magnificent new laboratory and studio, and see for yourself how completely we are prepared to serve the motion picture trade.

We make moving pictures to order, and absolutely guarantee results.

We sell Eastman raw stock, and make shipment same day order is received.

We do developing and printing in any quantity —no order too large or too small for us to handle.

We make titles and animated cartoons—both of superior quality.

We are now taking reservations for our new multiple set studio, which you can have at reasonable rental rates.

UNIVERSAL

Chicago Convention July 10th to 18th

From Convention to Convention is a pretty good period by which to check up the standing of the established producers in the moving picture field. Of the "fly-by-nights" it is unnecessary to speak. They are "gone with the snows of yesteryear." Among established producers the UNIVERSAL leads in production volume; in increase of production facilities; in number and quality of players and directors; in steady, solid financial growth; in constant progress toward better pictures—in fact, in every element tending toward the advancement of the whole industry.

Not one of the established producer's efforts, aims or results can measure up to the actual accomplishments of The Universal Film Manufacturing Company. To enumerate all that the Universal has accomplished within its own organization is impossible here. In addition, however, the Universal has been in the lead in every movement for the betterment of conditions for the Exhibitor. The Universal has been in the forefront on the censorship question. It has fought and won the Exhibitor's battles against unfair machine royalty claims.

The Universal has simplified the distribution and the selection of program pictures. It has put on its regular program, expensive novelties, many of them bought outright from producers who had planned to market them at huge rentals. By producing the Red Feather features the Universal has made Exhibitors independent of feature makers whose slogan is "get the money." These statements are made without fear of successful contradiction. If you are not enjoying the benefits and the advantages of the mighty power of the superlative Universal Program Service, you should, as a good business proposition, get in touch with you nearest Universal Exchange immediately. Get full particulars regarding the Universal Program and Features and Policy, and learn what they mean to you as a matter of PROFIT. Universal Film Manufacturing Co., Carl Laemmle, President. # COMICAL CARTER'S CLEVER COMEDIES

CARTER DE HAVEN—The Inimitable—is working in a series of brilliant comedies, soon to be released by the Universal, that are so clean, wholesome and different—so far ahead of the cheap, the vulgar and the suggestive, as to be a genuine revelation.

Great comedy acting; screamingly funny, intensely human situations; lavish production and brilliant supporting cast give to the entire series a distinction never before attained in film comedies. Beat your competitors to it. Wire your nearest Universal Exchange NOW for full information.

IN REVIEW

REPUTATION has been built slowly and steadily for Frohman Amusement Corporation photo-productions. It has grown from just one cause—the dramatic interest and clean artistic merit of the photo-plays themselves.

Each new picture has upheld and added to the level of success, which public favor and press criticism has set so high.

Here Are the Facts for You

A service of one and two reel subjects — twenty-one reels a week — composed of Comedies that are really humorous — Dramas that have a punch — Westerns that are full of thrills.

The best one and two reel subjects ever produced — clean and clear new prints at prices much lower than you are now paying for poor subjects and worn out film.

Stars of national reputation in every cast —

Consider these facts — they are undeniable. Unicorn Film Service will bring you additional business.

Here is one of the list of unequalled subjects that will clearly show you the superior standard of Unicorn Film Service—

The Rise of A Nation

2 PART DRAMA

Full of thrills and intense situations — no padding.

A vivid history of the deeds of bravery of the American nation in three wars. Realistic in its truth and portrayal of the horrors of war, this film expresses the spirit of patriotism that has set the country aflame to-day. It revives the Revolutionary War with the War of the Rebellion in splendrous fashion and furnishes, in the third war, a sensational departure from pictures of battle. Without doubt, this film runs the gamut of human emotions in an unparelleled manner.
